C 070 N864.1 V.150

The North-China Herald

AND

SUPREME COURT & CONSULAR GAZETTE

A COMPLETE RECORD OF POLITICAL, FINANCIAL AND GENERAL NEWS IN CHINA

AND OF LAW CASES

IN THE

COURT OF CONSULS	U. S. COURT FOR CHINA
H.B.M. SUPREME COURT	THE CONSULAR COURTS
H.B.M. POLICE COURT	MIXED COURT, ETC.

Vol. 151

Old Series: Vol. CLXVII. New Series: Vol. CLI. Nos. 2956-2968

APRIL 1 TO JUNE 30, 1924

SHANGHAI

Printed and Published at the Office of the NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS & HERALD, LTD.

1924

CONTENTS OF VOL. CLXVII

OF

"THE NORTH-CHINA HERALD AND SUPREME COURT AND CONSULAR GAZETTE."

VOL. CLI NEW SERIES. APRIL-JUNE 1924

LEADING ARTICLES

Agreement, The Russo-Chinese 363
Air or Heavier? Lighter than... 364
Air, The Conquest of the ... 283
Alive or Dead 323
America, Japanese Exclusion in 163
Armed Robbers and Their Arms 444
Armed Robbery and Smuggled Arms 163
Arms Smuggling in China ... 244
Bankers' Lost Opportunity, The 163
Bankruptcy of Peking, The ... 123
Beavers and Rats 204
Birthday of Buddha, The ... 243
Blackmail, The North Szechuen Road 203
Bolshevist and Briton 243
Bolshevist Mentality 164
Bolshevist, The Liberty of the... 404
Breaking Point, The 283
Britain and the Indemnity ... 483
Britain, China's Leaders and ... 403
British Chamber of Commerce ... 124
Buddha, The Birthday of ... 243
Budget, Labour's First 164
Budget, The Housewife's ... 403
Budget, The Municipal 3
Cadets, The Kid-glove 204
Chamber of Commerce, British... 124
Character, Towns and Their ... 403
Chequers and the Ruhr, The ... 483
Children in China, Foreign ... 364
China and Famine Relief ... 44
China and Russian Refugees ... 363
China Full of Opium 323
China the False and the True ... 164
China's Leaders and Britain ... 403
China's Unwieldy Population ... 443
Chinese Sense of Grievance, The 484
Churches, The London City ... 364
Coinage, The Depreciation of ... 444 Conference, China Industries ... 324
Conference, The Tariff 404
Consulat, Rue du 44
Co-operation, The Value of ... 324
Co-operative Sales of Rubber ... 123
Control, State 363
Convention, The Republican ... 443
Council, Telephone Co. and ... 43
Council, Waterworks and ... 43
Crime, The Treatment of ... 363
Critics, The Missionary and His Cruise of the Hwah Jah, The ... 283
Dead? Alive or 323
Depreciation of Coinage, The ... 444
Disaster, The Redding Pit ... 43
Dominions, Cold Shoulder to the 444
Duty on China Tea, The... ... 3
Elections, The Coming German... 3
Elections, The French 244
Empire Day 284
Ends, The Rough-hewn 204
Exclusion in America, Japanese 163
Exhibitions : 1851-1924, Two ... 124
Famine Relief, China and ... 44
Fool or a Physician A ... 204
Foreign Children in China ... 364
Fowler's Report, General ... 484
France, The Revolution in ... 404
...French Elections, The 244
Gambling in Langkats, The ... 403
German Elections, The Coming 3
Grievance, The Chinese Sense of 484
Harbour Development, Shanghai 484
Health of Shanghai, The ... 284
Houses at Other People's Expense 443
Housewife's Budget, The... ... 403
Hwah Jah, The Cruise of the ... 283
Indemnity, Britain and the ... 483
Industries Conference, China ... 324
Insane, The Custody of the ... 243
Insane in China, The 244
Japanese Exclusion in America... 163
King George 363
Labour's First Budget 164
Labour Workers, International... 324
Langkats, The Gambling in ... 403
Lighter than Air or Heavier ... 364
London City Churches, The ... 364
Looking Backwards 284
MacDonald's Socialism, Mr. ... 124
Missionary and His Critics, The 83
Missionary Outlook, The ... 325
Municipal Budget, The 3
Mussolini's Triumph 44
Nonagenarians, With the ... 84
North, Storm-clouds in the ... 283
Officers' Piracy Insurance ... 165
Oil, World Scramble for... ... 123
Opium, China Full of 323
Outlook, The Trade 323
Peking, The Bankruptcy of ... 123
Physician? A Fool or a ... 204
Piracy Insurance, Officers' ... 165
Population, China's Unwieldy ... 443
Prohibition 203
Prunes and Prisms 404
Ratepayers Meeting, The... ... 83
Rats, Beavers and... 204
Redding Pit Disaster, The ... 43
Republican Convention, The ... 443
Revolution in France, The ... 404
Robbers and Their Arms, Armed 444
Robbery and Smuggled Arms, Armed 163
Rockefeller Foundation in China 444
Rough-hewn Ends, The 204
Rubber, Co-operative Sales of ... 123
Rue du Consulat 44
Ruhr, The Chequers and the ... 483
Russian Refugees, China and ... 363
Russo-Chinese Agreement, The... 363, 483
Scholor ind the New, The Old... 3
Shanghai Harbour Development 484
Shanghai, The Health of ... 284
Sheep Without Shepherds ... 4
Shepherds, Sheep Without ... 4
Smuggled Arms, Armed Robbery and 163
Smuggling in China, Arms ... 244
Socialism, Mr. Macdonald's ... 124
State Control 364
Storm-clouds in the North ... 283
Surtax, Dr. W. W. Yen and the 243
Tariiff Conference, The 404
Tea, The Duty on China... ... 3
Telephone Co. and Council ... 43
Towns and Their Character ... 403
Trademarks Law, The 83
Trade Outlook, The 323
Treaties, The Nibbling Away of 4
Visitors, Our 123
Waterworks and Council... ... 43
Yen and the Surtax, Dr. W. W. 243

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Act of Indemnity, An 165
Agriculture in China 206
Air, To the North Pole by ... 5
Akali Sikhs, The 125
Alive but Invisible 285
America's Mixed Population ... 165
Anti-British Agitators 285
Art, Labour and 445
Athletes, China's Girl 285
Avenue Road 325
Battle, A Chinnse 85
Barbarism, Two Views of ... 285
Bible in Commerce, The 485
Bolshevik Diplomacy 85
British Finance 5
Building, The Cost of 365
Building Tyranny, The 485
By-law, The Press... 5
Canton, Telegrams to 206
China, Critics of 5
China Defaulting 165
China, Pony Problem, The ... 325
China's Diplomats 245
Chinese at Wimbledon 485
Chinese Battler, A 85
Chinese Education 45
Chinese Hebrews 285
Cigarette Tax, The 5
Closing, Early 85
Commerce, The Bible in ... 485
Conference, The Farce of ... 485
Cost of Building, The 365
Currency, China's Chaotic ... 405
Cup that Cheers, The 405
Cribbing, Scientific 125
Critics of China 5
Death Ray, The 326
Deer, The Musk 445
Defaulting, China 165
"Deratization," 245
Dinner, Truth After 405
Diogenes Up to Date 206
Diplomacy, Bolshevik 85
Diplomats, China's 245
Dress, Our New 205
Dublin Horse Show 485
Early Closing 85
Education, Chinese 45
Electorate, A Restive 85
Exclusion Law, The 405
Exhibitions in Shanghai... 125, 285, 365
Ferry-biat Service, A Public ... 206
Finance, British 5
Foreign Protests 85
Flying Regulations, The ... 245
Francs, German Gamble in ... 485
Game, Protection of 206
German Gamble in Francs ... 485
Girl Athletes, China's 285
Hebrews, Chinese 285
Horse Show, Dublin 485
Housing Scandal, The 365
Hwah Jah Once More, The ... 325
Immigration Anomaly, U. S. ... 5
Indemnity, An Act of 165
Insurance of Sea Travellers ... 445
Invisible Ray, The 45
Jaundice," "Yellow 285
Japanese Killing of Chinese ... 206
"K. of K."... 365
Labour and Art 445
Legations "Fell," When the ... 206
Lest They Forget 405
Manchuria, The Need in ... 125
Man-Power 325
Mexican Rebellion, The 125
Missionaries in China ... 445, 485
Missionary, The 405
Mokanshan 285
Money, The Use of 245
"Morning Post," The 85
Munich Trial, The 5
Musk Deer, The 445
Nonsense, A Farrago of 245
North Pole by Air, To the ... 5
Opportunism, Up-to-date ... 405
Paper Roads, The... 85
Partners, Sleeping 285
Passport Visas 365
Piracy, More 45
Pigeons, Homing 85
"Plumbers is Plumbers" ... 206
Poincaré, M. 5
Politics, South African 45
Pony Problem, The China ... 325
Population, America's Mixed ... 165
Postal Delays 206
Press By-law, The... 5
Prohibition Results 45
Pronunciation, Matters of ... 85
Protection of Game 206
Protests, Foreign 85
Punjab, Unrest in the 245
Punjab Martyr, The 365
Queues Revival of 206
Ray, The Invisible 45
Rebellion, The Mexican 125
Revival of Queues 206
Road Agitation, The 205
Road Building 445
Roads, The Paper 85
Robbery, Highway 326
Rowarth Case, The 245
Russia, Claims on... 5
Russian Ships, The 445
Sea-Travellers, Insurance of ... 445
Sedition, Sikhs and 125
Scottish Snowstorm, A 85
Shanghai—the Wonder City ... 245
Shipbuilding, Far Eastern ... 445
Siberian Railway, The 325
Sikhs and Sedition 125
Sikhs, The Akali 125
Singapore Base, The 165
Sleeping Partners 285
Smoke 445
Smoke, Thou Shalt Not 245
Snakes is Snakes 245
Snowstorm, A Scottish 85
Songs, A People's 325
Soochow Creek, The 405
South African Politics 45
Sparks, Mr. 125
Stanford, Sir Charles 5
Stinnes, The Late Herr 85
Swaraj, "Truth" and 205
Tax, The Cigarette 5
Telegrams to Canton 206
Thief-catching by Wireless ... 445
Trademark Law, The ... 5, 45, 125
Trademarks 485
Trial, The Munich 5
Trotzky's Diplomacy 325
Truth After Dinner 405
"Truth" and Swaraj 205
Unrest in the Punjab 245
Unemployment Debate, The ... 365
Use of Money, The 245
U. S. Immigration Anomaly ... 5
Wells's New Heaven, Mr. H.G. 405
Wheelbarrows 326
Widler, Gen. Yang Sen and Mr. 485
Wimbledon, Chinese at 485
Wireless on Coasters 45
Wireless, Thief-catching by ... 445
Yang Sen and Mr. Widler, Gen. 485
...Zion, The Love of 326

CHINESE POLITICS

America and the Boxer Indemnity 204, 241, 282
Anking Mint Defies all Control 482
Bankers' Conference, Chinese ... 121, 162
Bolivia, China and 82
Bonds in Canton, New Issue of 482
Boxer Indemnity, America and the 202, 241, 282
Boxer Indemnity, Britain and the ... 241, 282, 322, 401, 482
Britain and the Boxer Indemnity ... 241, 282, 322, 401, 482
Cabinet Changes in Peking ... 81
Canton and Customs Surplus ... 1
Canton, New Issue of Bonds in 482
Canton, Northern Campaign Against 2, 481
Canton Waters, Foreign Gunboats in 162
Chang Hsun's Monarchy Move 282
Chang Tso-lin and the Soviet... 2
Chang Tso-lin, President Tsao and 281
C.-E. Railway, Japan and ... 482
Chêkiang, Kiangsu and ... 202, 401
Chile, Chinese Minister to ... 241
Chihli Provincial Assembly ... 82
China's Diplomatic Service 241, 242
Chinese-Eastern Railway, Russian Bank and ... 42, 121, 242, 282
Cigarette Tax, The 1, 201
Conference, Chinese Bankers'... 121, 162
Conference, Chinese Industrial 322
Consulate in Shanghai, Russian 482
Customs Surplus, Canton and... 1
Customs Surtax, The ... 81, 201, 241, 281, 402
Diplomatic Service, China's ... 242
Finance Minister's Resignation... 42, 81, 82, 162, 201
Finances, Peking's 122, 161, 202, 282, 322
Fukien, The Fighting in... 121, 162, 202
Germany, China's Negotiations with 242, 282, 362, 401, 442
House Tax in Peking ... 282, 322
Hunan, Wu Pei-fu's Grip on ... 122
Hunan, The Autonomy of 202, 321
Industrial Conference, Chinese... 322
Japan and C.-E. Railway ... 482
Kiangsi Tuli Impeached ... 162
Kiangsu and Chêkiang ... 202, 401
Kiao-Tsi Railway, The 202
Kirin, The Tuchunship of 161, 242
Koo, Attempt to Assassinate Dr. 281, 322
Kuangsi, The Civil Warfare in 482
Kuangtung, The Civil War in... 162
Kuomingtang, Wu Pei-fu and ... 281
Lama's Visit to Peking, Panchan 242
Liang Shih-yi in London, Mr.... 162
Likin Stations on the Railway, New 161
Lincheng Outrage, The ... 42, 81, 121, 281, 322, 402
Loan, Russian Issue of Chinese 1913 481
Marconi Contracts in China... 202, 242
Mint Defies all Control, Anking 482
Mixed Court. Rendition of the 81, 201, 242, 282, 322, 402, 482
Mixed Court, The Beginning of a 282
Mohammedans and Parliament, Chinese 81
Mongolia Arming 161
Mongolia, A Soviet Envoy to ... 362
Mongolian Conference 442
Mukden and the Sino-Russian Pact 482
Northern Campaign Against Canton 2, 481
Octroi Dues, Circulating Notes and 82
Peace Negotiations in Kuangtung 481
Peking's Finances ... 122, 161, 202, 282, 322
Premier and Finance Minister... 162
Premier Who May Not Resign, A 402
President Tsao and Chang-Tso-lin 282
Railway, Japan and C.-E. ... 482
Railway, Russian Bank and C.-E. 42
Russian Bank and C.-E. Railway 42, 121, 242, 282
Russian Consulate in Shanghai 482
Russian Issue of Chinese 1913 Loan 481
Russo-Chinese Negotiations, The 2, 41, 121, 202, 362, 402, 441, 482
Shensi, Wu Pei-fu and ... 2, 41
Sinkiang and Soviet 482
Sino-Sianese Treaty 362
Soviet, Chang Tso-lin and the... 2
Soviet Envoy to Mongolia, A ... 362
Soviet, Sinkiang and 482
Supreme Court of China, The... 281, 321
Surtax, The Customs, ... 81, 201, 241, 281, 402
Szechuan, The Warfare in ... 242
Taoyin, The Abolition of the... 481
Tax, The Cigarette ... 1, 201
Tibetan Border, Control of the... 482
Tibetan Problem, Peking and ... 122
Trade Marks Law, The ... 2, 41, 82, 121, 242, 322, 442
Trotsky's Insult to China ... 482
Tsingtao, Drastic Reforms in ... 41, 81, 82, 122, 202
Wang Ko-ming Impeached ... 2
Wang Ko-ming's Resignation, Mr. 482
War Peril in China 122
Weatherbe The Case of Mr. ... 202
Weihaiwei, The Rendition of ... 121, 322, 482
Wu Pei-fu and British Boxer Indemnity 401
Wu Pei-fu and Kuomingtang ... 281
Wu Pei-fu and Shensi ... 2, 41
Wu Pei-fu's Grip on Hunan ... 122
Wu Pei-fu, The Cabal Against... 321
Yang Sen Tuli of Szechuan 322, 481

OUTPORTS

Amoy 414
Anking 88, 132, 482
Bangkok 452
Canton 1, 6, 7, 47 87, 162, 167, 169, 212, 286, 287, 288, 327, 331, 367, 368, 449, 482
Changsha 7, 132, 411
Chefoo 211, 449
Chenchow 167
Chêngtu ... 11, 126, 170, 211, 292, 367, 414, 481, 482
Crinkiang 6
Chinwangtao 373
Chungking 368
Foochow ... 289, 326, 327, 403
Fukow 250
Haichow ... 128, 131, 210, 408
Hangchow ... 48, 128, 290, 367, 369, 401, 451
Hankow ... 49, 207, 361, 369, 406
Harbin 6, 8, 10, 53, 450
Hongkong ... 9, 50, 51, 86, 87, 90, 129, 167, 169, 210, 211, 212, 246, 286, 366, 368, 370, 373, 408, 414, 448, 449, 451, 452, 481
Hsuchowfu 53
Huaiking 128, 291
Huchow 411
Ichang ... 8, 9, 90, 129, 167, 208, 210, 250, 292, 327, 411
Kaieng 327, 371
Kanchow 6, 89, 410
Kiangchow 173, 370
Kiating 133, 448
Kienning 207
Kioto 130, 329
Kirin 213
Kiukiang 7, 89
Kueilin 406, 447
Kueiteh ... 127, 131, 212, 410
Kuling 414
Lanchowfu 52, 214, 413
Liuchow 49
London ... 11, 52, 53, 88, 91, 121, 162, 168, 212, 241, 246, 249, 282, 322, 332, 370, 408, 409, 410, 446, 450, 452, 481
Luchow ... 49, 53, 128, 329
Lungchow 247, 248
Macao 51
Manchester 322
Manila ... 10, 11, 88, 89, 129, 131, 167, 173, 211, 212, 247, 289, 291, 369, 372, 446, 449
Mienchow ... 7, 50, 90, 126, 127, 207, 248, 328, 369, 414, 448
Moscow ... 81, 202, 212, 282, 362, 373, 402, 454
Mukden 373, 409, 410
Nanking 126, 372, 373
New York ... 46, 91, 130, 169, 327, 454
Ningpo ... 9, 48, 50, 169, 171, 291, 331, 451
Osaka ... 130, 133, 167, 249, 327
Pakhoi 170, 448
Paris 172, 367
Peking ... 2, 8, 9, 10, 11, 41, 42, 46, 47, 51, 52, 81, 82, 86, 87, 89, 90, 121, 122, 126, 128, 129, 132, 161, 162, 166, 167, 170 171, 172, 201, 202, 211 212, 213, 214, 241, 242 246, 247, 249, 250, 281, 282, 286, 287, 288, 289 291, 292, 321, 322, 326 327, 328, 330, 361, 362, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372 373, 401, 402, 406, 407 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 441, 442, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 453, 454, 481, 482
Pochow 7, 170, 411
Rangoon 212
Riga 330
Seoul 172
Sianfu 248
Siangtan 171, 372
Sining 51, 52, 88
Shaohsing 90, 369
Soochow ... 7, 86, 248, 450
Suchien 10, 172, 286
Tachienlu 327, 413
Taichow 328, 450
Taiku ... 51, 128, 208, 209, 331
Tengyueh 451
Tientsin ... 9, 10, 48, 49, 50, 51, 88, 90, 127, 129, 131, 167, 169, 172, 207, 210, 212, 213, 247, 248, 282, 289, 290, 291, 330, 370, 450, 454
Tokio ... 7, 8, 10, 11, 46, 50, 51, 53, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 167, 168, 169, 173, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 247, 248, 249, 250, 289, 290, 291, 292, 328, 329, 330, 332, 371, 372, 373, 410, 412, 414, 415, 450, 452, 453, 454
Tsangchow 47
Tsinan 91, 170, 173
Tsingtao ... 9, 41, 48, 51, 52, 81, 86, 87, 89, 92, 122, 126, 132, 170, 202, 210, 246, 256, 288, 331, 332, 367, 370, 409, 412, 448, 451
Tsinkiangpu 49, 91, 288
Tsunyi 414
Tzelintsing 169, 289
Urga 415
Vancouver 370
Victoria, B.C. 449
Washington ... 91, 130, 168, 202, 290, 327, 454, 482
Weihaiwei 132, 369
Wenchow 248
Wuchang ... 6, 47, 89, 128, 129, 169, 210, 211, 211, 213, 247, 250, 289, 328, 329, 331, 369, 370, 373, 409, 413, 450, 451, 452
Wuchow 369
Wuhu 411
Wusih ... 50, 51, 128, 249, 326
Yachow 410
Yangchow 208, 213
Yatung 92
Yenchow 247
Yunnanfu 292

OUTPORTS LETTERS—SUBJECTS

Accident on Lunghai Railway ... 131
Aeroplane Fatality at Foochow... 327
Aeroplane Mishap in Manchuria 489
Air Flights, The Round-World... 46, 214, 371, 373, 410, 414, 452, 488
America and Boxer Indemnity... 202, 241, 282
America and Japanese Immigrants 91, 130, 168
American Ambassador in Tokio 290

American Arsenal in Canton ... 366, 414, 486
American Boycott in Japan ... 452
American Fleet at Chefoo ... 211
American Missions in Japan ... 452
American Outlay in China ... 86
American Patrol of Yangtze ... 46
American Round the World Flight ... 46, 214, 371, 414, 452
Anglo-American Association ... 330
Anglo-American Association, The 9
Anglo-Russian Negotiations ... 81
Anhui, Opium Cultivation in ... 213
Anhui, Opium Eradication in ... 11, 411, 449, 488
Anhui, Wintry Weather in ... 7
Anhui's Anti-smallpox Campaign 132
Anhui's Governor Publicly Snubbed 88
Anking Mint Defies Control ... 482
Anti-Foreignism in Wuchang ... 413
Anti-poison Bureau in Kiangsi... 126
Arbor Day in Peking 52
Armed Attack on Hankow Store 491
Arms Embargo in China, The... 450
Arms for China 249
Arms in Tientsin, Smuggling of 370, 454
Arms to China Sending... ... 53
Art, Chinese Ideas of Western... 409
Athletes of Wuchang, Chinese... 210
Athletic Meetings, Vast Chinese 329
Athletic Sports, Wu-Han ... 213
Assault, Peking City Wall ... 87, 126, 166, 370, 407
Assessment on Everything ... 131
Australia, Pen Pictures of ... 172
Automobile Club of Tientsin ... 48
Bandit Outrages in S. E. Hunan 167
Bandit Outrage in Szechuan, The 11
Bandits, A Province Free of ... 52
Bandits, Chinese Dug-outs to Escape 407
Bandits in South China... ... 167
Bandits, Mienchuh Cleared of... 369
Bank for Upper Yangtsze, New Commercial 449
Bankers' Conference, Chinese ... 121, 162
Banking Affairs in Manila ... 247
Barton's Capture by Bandits, Mr. 408
Bean Oill Mills of N. Kiangsu... 131
Bessel, The Assault on Mr. ... 128, 248, 327
Biographers, Chinese 371
Birthday Feast, Pains and Penalties of 47
Birthday Gifts, Hupeh Tuchun's 6
Boat, Alone in 23-ft. 131
Bolivia, China and 82
Bolshevik Youth, Chêngtu's ... 367
Bolsheviks Lost Their Korean Pupils, How the 47
Bombed, Governor of Indo-China 486
Bonds in Canton, New Issue of 482
Boxer Indemnity, America and... 202, 241, 282
Boxer Indemnity, Britain and... 241, 282, 322, 370, 401, 409, 446, 482
Boycott in Japan, American ... 452
Bridge over Yellow River, New 450
Brigand Outrage in Fukien ... 289, 326, 366, 408
Britain and Boxer Indemnity... 241, 282, 322, 370, 401, 409, 446, 482
Buddha, Death of the Living... 330, 370, 415
Cabinet Changes in Peking ... 81
Calendar, Nature Obedient to Chinese 89
Canada, Chinese in 449
Canton, American Arsenal in ... 366, 414, 486
Canton and Customs Surplus... 1, 162
Canton, Endless Taxation in ... 48, 87
Canton, Finance and Opium in... 6
Canton, May Day in 167
Canton Merchants on Strike ... 367
Canton, Military Activities in... 449
Canton, New Issue of Bonds in 482
Canton, New Taxation in ... 486
Canton, Northern Campaign Against 2
Canton Notes 89, 428
Canton, Reuter Correspondent Arrested in 286
Canton, Shipping Taxes at ... 212
Canton's Comedy of Errors ... 286
Captives in Kueilin, Missionary ... 326, 369, 406, 449, 490, 493
Carey and Ningpo, Mr. F. W.... 9, 291
C.-E. Railway, Russian Bank and 42, 121
C. E. Railway, Peking Government and ... 242, 282, 446, 454, 482
Centipede, Swallowed a Live ... 490
Chamber of Commerce, Peking British 10
Chang Hsun's Monarchy Move... 282
Changsha's Day of Shame ... 411
Changsha's New Y.M.C.A. ... 493
Chang Tso-lin and the Soviet ... 2
Chang Tso-lin and King's Birthday 409
Chang Tso-lin, Central Government and 52, 282
Chang Tso-lin's Army," "Joining Marshal 91
Chefoo, American Fleet at ... 211
Chefoo, Sensational Piracy at... 449
Chefoo-Weihsien Railway, The... 167
Chêkiang, A Beauty Spot at ... 247
Chêkiang, Kiangsi Troops in ... 401
Chêkiang, Kiangsu and 202
Chêkiang, Kidnapping Terror in 491
Chêkiang Prison, Visit to a ... 289
Chêkiang Shuts Out Southern Coins 369
Chêkiang, The Great Road in... 328
Chêngtu, Post-War 170
Chêngtu's Bolshevik Youth ... 367
Chihli, Great Drought in 291, 327
Chilean Consul in Shanghai, Status of 454
Chihli Provincial Assembly ... 52, 82
China and Bolivia... 82
China and Japan 86
China Delicacies Now Barred ... 370
China Pony? What Is a 167, 330
China, The Regeneration of ... 52
China's Reformation, Guides to 11
China's Judicial Atrocities ... 127
China's National Disgrace Again 328
Chinese-American Friendship ... 451
Chinese Bankers' Conference ... 121, 162
Chinese Biographers 371
Chinese in Canada 449
Chinese Loans, London Stock Exchange and 11
Chinkiang of Beggars, Ridding... 6
Chiping, The Stranded str. ... 9
Christians, Chinese 330
Christian College Commencements 490
Church in Japan, English ... 88
Cigarette Making in Tientsin ... 169
Cigarette Tax, The... 1, 89, 201
Civil Service, Peking's Overstaffed 82
Clan Fights Growing Fiercer ... 450
Coins, Chêkiang Shuts Out Southern 369
Coins from Yunnan, Gold ... 249
Coffins of Kiangsu, Ancient ... 10
Conservancy, Huai River 8, 46, 493
Conservancy, Kuangtung ... 8
Consulate at Tientsin, New British 127
Consulate Closed, Pakhoi British 170
Curio Collector of Tientsin ... 49
Customs Surplus, Canton and... 1, 162
Customs Surtax, The ... 81, 201, 241, 281, 402
Davies, Sir W. Rees 90
Demos, An Appeal to 7
Dirtiest Village, World's ... 92
Diplomatic Service, China's ... 241
Divorce in China 210
Doctor's Bown, The 50
Doisy's Flight, Capt. ... 53, 172, 373, 410
Drought in Chihli, Great... 291, 327
Earthquake Insurance Problems 247
Earthquake, Manila in Danger from 289
Earthquake, Murder of Koreans After Japanese 212
Education Enterprize in Hunan, New 132
Education in China, Christian... 329
Education in China on Foreign Lines 126
Education in Shanghai, Peking Grant for 9
Education Rally in N. Kiangsu 53
Education, The Advancement of 492
Electric Chair in the Orient ... 486
Electricity Spreads in China ... 208
Embassy in Moscow, A Chinese 454
Emperor, Wrestling with China's 408
Empire Day at Ningpo 331
Empire Day at Zahkou 331
Everest, Climbing Mount ... 208
Exclusion Act, Harakiri for ... 372
Exclusion Act, Japanese Church and 492
Exhibition, Chinese International 486
Ex-President of China, The ... 133
Famine, Insuring Shensi Against 493
Finances, Peking's 122, 161, 282, 322, 409, 446
Filipino Sabotage 11
Fireball Over Sage's Birthplace 91
Foochow, Bomb Outrage at ... 326
Franco-Japanese Entente ... 291
Frog that Terrified a Village ... 453
Fukien, Bandit Outrage in ... 289, 326, 366, 408
Fukien, Kiangsi's Fear of ... 89
Fukien, Killing the Golden Goose of 133
Fukien, The Fighting in... 10, 121, 162, 202, 250, 287
Fur Trade, North Manchuria's... 10
Germany China's Negotiations with ... 242, 282, 362, 373, 401, 442
Girls, Physical Examination for 90
Governor of Anhui Publicly beg 88
Governor of Indo-China Bombed 486
Governor, Tsingtao's New 41, 48
Gruesome Act, Daughter-in-law's 208
Haichow to Peking, From ... 287
Haiho, New Bridge over the... 210
Hangchow Hospital Extension... 451
Hangchow, Idol Procession in 367
Hangchow, Outlaws in 290
Hangchow, Quick and the Dead in 48
Hangchow, Tagore at 128
Hankow, Appalling Story from 207, 247
Hankow Harbour Master, Farewell to 49
Hantan, Rainmaking Tablet of 447
Harbin Press's Latest 53
Hawley, Murder of Mr. E. C.... 490
Hermit Schoolmaster, Hokkaido's 91
Highways in China 202
Hokkaido's Hermit Schoolmaster 91
Honan Magistrate's Improvements 128
Honan, Roadbuilders Busy in... 250
Honan, The Jewish Colony of 371
Honan's Taxation Scheme ... 410
Hongkong, Armed Burglary in 368
Hongkong, Collision Near ... 129
Hongkong Letters ... 370, 488
Hongkong, New Harbour Master for 368
Hongkong Sensation 86
Hospital at Huchow, New ... 411
Hospital in Shansi, Big New ... 128
Hospital Looted in Szechuan ... 7
Ho Tung in London, Sir Robert 410, 452
House Tax in Peking ... 282, 322
Huai River Conservancy... 8, 46, 493
Huchow, New Hospital at ... 411
Humiliation Day ... 247, 250, 289
Hunan, Bandit Outrages in S. E. 167
Hunan Coming Under Northern Sway 171
Hunan, New Education Enterprise in 132
Hunan, Northern Occupation of 414
Hunan Southern at Heart ... 372
Hunan, The Autonomy of ... 202, 321
Hunan, Wu Pei-fu's Grip on... 122
Hupeh Kidnappers' Barbarism... 450
Hupeh Tuchun's Birthday Gifts 6
India, Leprosy in 329
Industrial Conference in Peking 249, 322
Italy's Improved Finances ... 287
Jade Water Temple, The ... 328
Japan, American Missions in... 450
Japan and the Soviet ... 86, 87, 212, 292, 330, 371, 407, 452, 453
Japan and Labour Conference... 11
Japan and Russian Fisheries ... 87
Japan, China and 86
Japan, English Church in ... 88
Japan, Hidden Weapons in ... 213
Japan, New Prime Minister of 412
Japan Rising from the Sea ... 8
Japan, Silkworm Indstry in ... 412
Japan, Soldier Politicians of ... 88
Japan, Temper Runs High in... 249
Japan, Wireless Stations in ... 90, 133
Japanese Athletes in Hongkong 211
Japanese Cabinet Resigns ... 412
Japanese Church and Exclusion Act 492
Japanese Consuls in Conference 90
Japanese Election Comedy ... 129
Japanese Government's Defeat ...290
Japanese Immigrants, America and ... 91, 130, 168, 453, 492
Japanese Imperial Wedding Celebrations 210, 371
Japanese Labour Unrest ... 327
Japanese Loan from U. S. ... 454
Japanese Naval Estimates ... 89
Japanese Newspaper Editors ... 89, 170
Japanese, No Room in Java for 87
Japanese Peeress Shopkeeper ... 290
Japanese Politics ... 329, 332, 412, 453, 454
Japanese Premier Carries on ... 332
Japanese Seaplane Explodes ... 373
Japan's Adiption of Christianity 133
Japan's Army 7, 415
Japan's Civil Service, Axe in... 51
Japan's Expansion Abroad ... 88
Japan's Foreign Policy ... 453
Japan's Forest Lands 89
Japan's Intellectuals 7
Japan's Military Retrenhment 415
Japan's Prefectural Governors... 490
Japan's Surplus Population ... 414
Japan's Trade 291
Japan's Tax on Luxuries ... 415
Japan's Working Estimates ... 11
Jehol, Opium Cultivation in ... 129
Jewish Colony of Honan, The... 371
Junk Passengers Drowned ... 169
Kansu, A Rain of Silver in ... 214
Kansu, Perils of the Post in... 52
Kansu Wool, Famine Prices for 51
Katsu or Faith Healing ... 372
Kearney, Farewell to Rev. T.R. 327
Kiangsi, Anti-poison Bureau in 126, 250
Kiangsi Canals, Water Low in 450
Kiangsi, Growth of Opium in... 368
Kiangsi in Fear of Invasion ... 6
Kiangsi Tuli Impeached ... 162
Kiangsi Troops in Chêkiang ... 401
Kiangsi's Fear of Fukien ... 89
Kiangsu, Ancient Coffins of ... 10
Kiangsu and Chekiang 202
Kiangsu, Bean Oil Mills of N. 131
Kiangsu, Education Rally in N. 53
Kiangsu Fearing a Famine, N. 172
Kiaochou Electoral Jurisdiction at 82
Kiaochou, Improved Finance in 126
Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway ... 87, 202, 448
Kidnapping Terror in Chêkiang 491
Kienning, The Press Gang in... 207
Kirin, Anti-Soviet Movement in 82
Kirin, The Tuchunship of ... 161
Kirin, Wretched Refugees of... 213
Kiukiang as an Open Port, Extension of 286
Koo Back at Work, Dr. 82
Koo's Life, Attempt on Dr. ... 281, 322, 367
Koreans After Japanese Earthquake, Murder of 212
Korean Pupils, How the Bolsheviks Lost Their... 47
Korean Who Threw Bombs at Japanese Imperial Palace ... 209
Kowloon Dockyard, Strike at ... 9
Kuangsi, Armistice Proclaimed in 482
Kuangsi, Motoring in 247
Kuangsi, Opium in 247
Kuangsi, Rival Generals in ... 248
Kuangtung Conservancy ... 8
Kuangtung Held Up, Fighting in 288, 327
Kuangtung, Destruction of Trade in 162
Kuangtung, Internal Strife in... 132
Kuangtung, National University for 288
Kuangtung Peace Negotiations in 481
Kuangtung, Signs of War in ... 86
Kuangtung, Volunteer Movement in 488
Kueilin, The Great Fight For... 406, 447, 489
Kuling, Fatal Accident at ... 414
Kuling, Fairy Operetta at ... 489
Land Purchases, Embargo on... 49
Land Reclamation in Mongolia... 90
League of Nations, Asia and the 408
Leases, Tientsin Crown 9
Leprosy in India 329
Leprosy Work in the Philippines 211
Leveson, Dinner to Admiral ... 328
Liang Shi-yi in London, Mr. ... 52, 162, 246
Library, The Manchu 132
Likin Stations on the Railway, New 161
Lincheng Outrage, The ... 42, 81, 121, 281, 322, 402
Loan, Russian Issue of Chinese 1913 481
Loans, London Stock Exchange and Chinese 11
Looted, Two Market Towns ... 128
Lotteries in Kiangsu, Growth of 288
Lunghai Railway, Accident on... 131
Lunghai Railway Extension ... 167
Maclaren's World Flight ... 173
Manchu Emperor at Summer Palace 327
Manchuria, New Health Resort of 450
Manchurian Railway Problems... 6
Manchuria's Fur Trade, North... 10
Manila, Banking Affairs in ... 247
Marconi Agent's Claim 242
Marconi Contracts in China ... 202
Marks Crashed, When 170
Matsukata's Return to Life, Prince 10
May Day in Canton 167
Memorial in Szechuan, The ... 211, 248
Mercury, The Transit of ... 247
Merlin in Japan, M. 211
Mienchow, Tragedy at 90
Mill Workers, Hours of Chinese 209
Mine Accident, Tongshan ... 10
Mint Defies Control, Anking ... 482
Missionaries Captured, Five ... 326, 369, 406, 449, 490, 493
Missionaries Expelled from Mongolia 372
Missionaries of Szechuan, The Murdered 207
Missionary, Attack on 212
Missionary Association, Ningpo 48
Missions, Village Work by ... 451
Mixed Court, Rendition of ... 81, 201, 242, 282, 322, 402, 482
Mixed Court, The Beginnings of a 282
Mohammedans and Parliament, Chinese 81
Mongolia Arming 161
Mongolia, Land Reclamation in 90
Mongolia, Missionaries Expelled from 372
Mongolia, Soviet Envoy to ... 362
Mongolian Conference 442
Mongolia's Budget 487
Moscow Gives Itself Away, How 366
Motoring in Kuangsi 247
Motors in North China, Demand for 290
Moule Brothers, The Great ... 493
Mount Everest, Climbing ... 208
Mukden and the Sino-Russian Pact 482
Mukden, Explosion in 489
Murdered Missionaries of Szechuan, The 207
Murderer's Fearful Punishment 128
Mystery of the Yangtze, An Old 207
Nanking a Centre of New Learning 372
Nanking Tuchun's Birthday ... 126
Newchwang Races 489
Newspaper Editors, Japanese... 89, 170
Ningpo, Armed Robbers at ... 50
Ningpo, Bold Robbery at ... 169
Ningpo, Empire Day at ... 331
Ningpo Missionary Association... 48
Ningpo, Mr. F. W. Carey and... 9, 291
Ningpo, The Easter Season at... 171
Northern Move on Dr. Sun, New 481
"No-Soldier Blessing" 212
Nurses in Shansi, First Chinese 51
Obituary :—
Bolton, Mr. J. E. 169
Fei Chia-lu, Mr. 207
Hall, Dr. Stanley 169
Ijuin, Baron 169
Kwacho, Prince 7
Lowe, The Hon. A. R. ... 373
Murphy, Mr. C. F. 169
Pyke, Dr. J. H. 373
Rahn, Mr. Roger T. 370
Williams, Mrs. L. S. 450
Octroi and Bad Paper, Peking... 46, 82
Opium and Drugs, Traffic in ... 410
Opium Cultivation in Anhui ... 213
Opium Cultivation in Jehol ... 129
Opium Eradication in Anhui ... 11, 213, 411, 449
Opium in Canton, Finance and... 6
Opium in Kiangsi, Growth of... 368
Opium in Kuangsi 247
Opium, $500,000 Consignment of 410
Opium Stamp Taxes in Suiyuan 289
Opium Suppression, Anhui Farmers and 411, 449
Opium Traffic on the Yangtze... 210
Pakhoi British Consulate Closed 170
Pakhoi-Limchow Motor Road... 448
Panchan Lama's Visit to Peking ... 212, 242, 291, 413
Peasant Meanness 89
Peitaiho Conference 52
Peiyang University Students on Strike ... 9, 52, 88, 289
Peking British Chamber of Commerce 10
Peking, House Tax in ... 202, 282, 322
Peking Octroi and Bad Paper... 46, 82
Peking Wall Assault Case 87, 126, 166, 370, 407
Peking's Finances ... 122, 161, 282, 322, 409, 446
Perils of Country Life in China 369
Philippine Independence ... 327
Philippines, Labour Trouble in the 173
Philippines, Leprosy Work in the 211
Philippines, Primitive People of the 368
Philippines, Russian Refugees in the 10, 88
Philippines, U. S. Forces in the 289
Philippines, Volcanic Eruption in the 129
Philippines, Volcanic Eruption in the 369
Philippines' Wireless Equipment 291
Pirates' Hideos Crimes ... 91
Pirates, H.M.S. Robin's Brush with 449
Piracy at Chefoo, Sensational ... 449
Piracy, Hongkong Government and 449
Piracy in Chinese Waters 11, 87, 169, 212, 449, 491
Piracy in Hongkong Waters... 87, 169, 212, 449, 491
Pirate, Gunboat Turned 491
Pirate King," "For I am a ... 408
Pirates, West River ... 51, 210
Pochow in Anhui Very Dry ... 170
Policemen of Peking, The Poor... 408
Pony? What Is a China... 167, 330
Post in Kansu, Perils of the ... 52
Premier and Finance Minister ... 162, 201
Premier Not Intending to Resign 81
Premier Who May Not Resign, A 402
Province of N.-W. China, New... 88
Race Club of Tsingtao, New ... 131
Race Course, Sheeps and Goats on 51
Railway Accident, Tientsin-Pukou 367
Railway, Chefoo-Weihsien ... 167
Railway, Kiaochou-Tsinan 87, 202, 448
Railway, Peking Government and C.-E. ... 242, 282, 446,
Railway Problems, Manchurian 6
Railway Revival, Siberian ... 8
Railway, Russian Bank and C.-E. 42, 121
Railway, Taonanfu-Tsitsihar ... 454
Rainmaking Tablet of Hantan... 447
Religious Festival, A Great ... 7
Refugees of Kirin, Wretched ... 213
Road in Chêkiang, The Great... 328
Roadbuilders Busy in Honan ... 250 454, 482
Roads to be Improved, Peking's 249
Robbers Brought to the Block 291
Russian Bank and C.-E. Railway 42, 121
Russia, China's Recognition of 361, 402, 441
Russian Church Property ... 411
Russian Consulate in Shanghai 482
Russian Issue of Chinese 1913 Loan 481
Russian Legation, The 454
Russian Refugees in the Philippines 10, 88, 449
Russo-Chinese Agreement, Full Text of 441
Russo-Chinese Negotiations, The 2, 42, 46, 121, 202, 361, 373, 402, 441, 449, 482
Saghalien Oil and Japan's Recognition of Russia ... 407, 453
Seoul, Disastrous Fire in ... 172
Shanghai, Capt. Dollar's Tribute to 327
Shansi, Big New Hospital in... 128
Shansi, Everyone Visiting ... 368
Shansi for Shansi Men 331
Shansi, Terrible Crime in ... 331
Shansi Vineyards Frost-smitten 209
Shansi's "Foreign Sundries Stores" 487
Shansi's Newest Motor Road ... 370
Shansi's Water Supply, Drought and 173
Shantung, The Civil Governorship of 8
Shensi Against Famine, Insuring 493
Shensi, First Chinese Nurses in 51
Shensi Government Contracts Captured by Germans ... 248
Shensi, Wu Pei-fu about to Invade 2
Siam, Chinese Treaty with ... 362
Siberia, A Journey Home by ... 212
Siberian Agricultural Corporation 129
Siberian Railway Revival ... 8
Singapore Base is Essential, Why a 171
Sinkiang and Soviet 482
Smuggle Contraband, Motorcars to 129
Soldier Politicians of Japan ... 88
Soochow's City Wall 86
Southern Troops' Boredom ... 169
Soviet and Chinese Intellectuals 411
Soviet, Chang Tso-lin and the... 2
Soviet Envoy to Mongolia ... 362
Soviet, Japan and the ... 86, 87, 212, 292, 330, 371, 407, 452, 453
Soviet, Peking's Price from the 449
Soviet, Sinkiang and 482
Sports, All-China 331, 370
Student Leaders' Fate, Wuchang 369, 451
Students on Strike, Peiyang University 9, 52, 88, 289
Strike at Kowloon Dockyard ... 9
Strike in Tokio, Fish Dealers'... 8
Summer Institute for Science Teachers 249
Sun Lieh-chun, Illness of Gen. 51
Sun Lieh-chun, Posthumous Honours for Gen. 242
Sun, New Northern Move on Dr. 481
Sun Yat-sen, Reported Death of Dr. ... 246, 286, 287, 328, 368
Sun Yat-sen, The Truth about Dr. 331
Supreme Court of China, The... 281, 321
Szechuan, A New Organization in 127
Szechuan As It Is to-day ... 448
Szechuan, Defeated Generals of 414
Szechuan Ever Uneasy 170
Szechuan, Exeunt Southerners from 169
Szechuan, Going A-fairing in ... 50
Szechuan, Hospital Looted in... 7
Szechuan, Military Affairs in ... 212
Szechuan, The Civil War in ... 7, 49, 53, 126, 242, 246, 414, 448
Szechuan, The Memorial in ... 211, 248
Szechuan, The Murdered Missionaries of 207

Szechuan, Wanted a Bill of Rights for 329
Tagore at Hangchow 128
Tagore in Wuchang 373
Tagore in Tsinanfu 173
Tagore's Failure with Young China 452
Taonanfu-Taitsihar Railway ... 454
Taoyin, The Abolition of the ... 481
Tax, The Cigarette... 1, 89, 201
Taxation Scheme, Honan's ... 410
Telephone Problem, Tientsin's... 90
Telephones for Tokio, British ... 332
Tibetan Border Commissioner Going 410, 482
Tibetan Cruelty 327
Tibetan Frontier, China's Administration of the 413
Tibetan Problem, Peking and ... 122
Tibet, An Early Mission to ... 209
Tibet, Mongolia and Eastern ... 172
Tientsin, Automobile Club of ... 48
Tientsin, Big Fire in 169
Tientsin, Building Operations in 207
Tientsin Crown Leases 9
Tientsin, Curio Collector of ... 49
Tientsin, Hidden Weapons in ... 213
Tientsin Municipal Finances ... 131
Tientsin, New Bridge for ... 450
Tientsin, New British Consulate at 127
Tientsin, Pawnshop Fire in ... 289
Tientsin-Pukou Railway Accident 367
Tientsin, Smuggling of Arms in 370, 454
Tientsin Women's Club 50
Tientsin's Hands Out to the Sea 127
Tientsin's Plague Spot 172
Tientsin's Telephone Problem ... 90
Tsoh, Honorary Degree for Dr. M. 211
Tokio, British Telephones for ... 332
Tokio Hotel, Disorderly Scene in 415, 491
Tokio, The Night Shops of ... 490
Tokio's "Nightless City," Visit to 50
Trade Marks Law, The ... 2, 41, 82, 121, 242, 322, 442
Trotsky's Insult to China ... 482
Tsingtao, A Cleaning-up in ... 332
Tsingtao as Educational Centre... 492
Tsingtao, Cargo Congestion at... 92
Tsingtao, Chase of Crooks Out of 367
Tsingtao, Ex-Director of ... 81
Tsingtao Golf Club 331
Tsingtao, Government Bank in... 288
Tsingtao Harpies, Retribution for 170
Tsingtao, Harbour Needs of ... 246
Tsingtao, Labour Reforms in ... 412
Tsingtao, Missing Millions of ... 51
Tsingtao Officials, Bombshell for 409
Tsingtao, Railway Funds at ... 202, 211
Tsingtao, Robbery and Murder in 210
Tsingtao, Unaccounted Funds of 52
Tsingtao's Business Government 86
Tsingtao's Latest 12
Tsingtao's New Governor... 41, 48
Tsingtao's New Race Club ... 132
Tsinanfu, Music and Dramatics at 170
Tuchunship of Kirin ... 167, 171
Typhoons in the Babuyans ... 89
Tzeliutsing Notes 289
U. S. Embassy in Japan ... 373
U. S. 15th Regt., Organization Day of 248
Vaccine in Shanghai 372
Vice-President, Selection of a ... 81
Village Work by Missions ... 451
Volunteer Movement in Kuangtung 488
Wu-Han Athletic Sports ... 213
War in China, Spring Threats of 41, 47, 122
Warm in China, How to Keep... 409
Wenchow Mission, Thefts in ... 248
Wang Ko-ming Impeached ... 2
Wang Ko-ming, Resignation of Mr. ... 42, 81, 82, 201, 482
Wars, Better and Bigger ... 213
Weatherbe Case, The ... 202, 326, 487
Wedding at Weihaiwei, Naval... 132
Wedding Celebrations, Japanese Imperial 210, 371
Wedding: Clark Jelvakova ... 411
Weihaiwei Murder Trial ... 369
Weihaiwei, Naval Wedding at 132
Weihaiwei, The Rendition of... 121, 322, 482
"Wen Li" Restored, Classic ... 492
West China, Peace Restored in... 133
West River, Perils of Life on... 49
Widler, "Confiscated" Property of Mr. Elly 92
Wireless Stations in Japan 90, 133
Women's Club, Tientsin 50
Woods, Resignation of Mr. Cyrus 329, 373
Wool, Famine Prices for Kansu 51
Wu, 15,000 More Troops for Marshal 128
Wu Pei-fu and British Boxed Indemnity 401
Wu Pei-fu and Shensi 2
Wu Pei-fu's Move on Kuomingtang 281
Wu Pei-fu, The Cabal Against... 321, 446
Wu Pei-fu's Grip on Hunan ... 122
Wu's Birthday Marshal... ... 52
Wuchang Athletic Meeting 331, 370
Wuchang a Centre of Learning 169
Wuchang, Chinese Athletes of... 210
Wuchang Chamber of Horrors... 211
Wuchang Student Leaders' Fate
Wusih Church Work 128
Wusih, Double Tragedy in ... 249
Wusih Silk Harvest 326
Yang Sen on "Clean Sport," Gen. 292
Yang Sen's Command in Szechuan 171, 322
Yang Sen's New Appointment, Gen. 322, 481
Yang Tsen's Ideals and Hopes 448
Yangchow, New Church at ... 213
Yangtze American Patrol of ... 46
Yangtze, Navigation in the Upper 167, 298, 368, 411
Yangtze, Opium Traffic on the ... 210
Yangtze Valley Notes, Lower... 368
Yangtze Went Down, When the 368
Yihyang Maru Captives, The ... 47, 126, 172, 212 287, 411
Y.M.C.A., Changsha's New ... 493
Yunnan Border, Night of Fear on 451
Yunnan, Gold Coins from ... 249
Yunnanfu, Disastrous Fire in... 491

SHANGHAI NEWS

A.D.C. in "Fanny's First Play" 58
Advertisement Hoardings Round Shanghai 333
Air Force Reunion, Royal ... 13
American Aviators' World Flight 55, 375 423
American Charity Ball 377
American Fliers' Aid to Mac laren 423
American Memorial Day ... 376
American Woman's Club... 14, 253, 297
Amnesty, Russian Refugees' ... 457
Anglo-American Rule in Law ... 456
Anking, Bad Dollars from ... 426
Apostolic Delegate at St. Xavier's 456
Armed Robbers, Bank Held up by 376
Armed Villains at Work ... 135
Arms Runners, Suspected ... 134
Arms, How to Check the Smuggling of 457
Arms on the Amboise, Seizure of 297
Arms on the André Lebon, Seizure of 216, 251
Arms on the Paul Lecat, Seizure of 176
Arms on the River, Smart Discovery of... 58
Arms Runners, Another Arrest of Suspected 296
Art Exhibition, Shanghai 252, 298
Author in Shanghai, American... 13
Authors in Shanghai, Lady ... 13
Aviators' World Flight, American 55, 375, 423
Bank Held Up by Armed Robbers 376
Bank, Run on Chinese Merchants' 426
Birney Returning to Shanghai, Bishop 374
Birthday-Celebration, King's ... 374
Bowling Club's Alley Sold ... 134
British Gaol, The... 14
British Women's Association ... 177, 374
Burglar in the Hongkong Bank 55
Cabinet, Shanghai's Unofficial... 376
Cadastral Lot, That 336
Catholic General Council of China 297, 334, 422
Catholic Prelates, Chinese ... 334
C. E. M. S., Archdeacon Moule at the 175
Chapei Volunteers Prohibited ... 335
Chamber of Commerce, Chinese 457
Charity Ball, American 377
Charity Fair at the Carlton ... 177
Child Labour in China... ... 455
Chilean Subjects in Shanghai ... 494
China Merchants General Manager, New 374
China Society of Science and Arts 177
Christian Council, National ... 253, 296
Church in Shantung Road, New 135
Church Missionary Society ... 294
Cigarettes, Chinese Attack on... 458
Cigarette Tax, The 54
Circulation of the "North-China Daily News" 176
Clarke's 80th Birthday, Mr. Brodie A. 252
Collision, Goods Trains in ... 335
Collision in the Huangpu ... 134
Community Church Meeting ... 217
Community Church's New Building 424
Consulate and Soviet, Russian... 422
Craftsmen, Shanghai's Youthful 495
Crimes, Mysterious Series of ... 176
Customs Clock Lying in State... 58
Dog Show, Second Shanghai ... 458
Doisy in Shanghai, Capt. ... 293. 335
Dollar Line Round-World Service 298
Easter in Shanghai, Russian ... 174
Educational Assn., Chinese Christian 57
Empire Day Celebrations ... 333
Empress of Canada in Port ... 134
Engineering, Marvels of Modern 426
Engineering Society of China ... 175
Ermans Carlotto, Flag of ... 93
Estate, Big Prices for Zih ... 252
Exhibition for Shanghai, World 134, 295, 334, 374
"Fanny's First Play" 58
Ferry Service, The Proposed ... 252
Fire in President Madison 175, 216
Fire in Ship's Hold 94
Fire, "Shanghai Times" Building 14
Flag of Ermanno Carlotto ... 93
Flats for Western District ... 455
Floods in Hongkew 494
Flower Show, Spring 376
Fraser, Memorial Tablet to Sir E. 334
French Municipal Loan ... 57
Gande, Price & Co.'s New Home 376
Gaol, The British... 14
Glenamoy Ashore in a Fog, The 251, 297
Hai Hsing, Launch of the ... 135
Heughan's Song Recitals, Wm. 295
Hill, Jockeys' Farewell to Billy 217
Hongkew Creek, The Noisome... 424
Hongkong Bank, A Burglar in the 55
Horticultural Society, Shanghai 297, 376
Hospital, Summer Diseases ... 497
Hwah Jah, The Cruise of the Training-ship 217, 295
Japanese Regent's Wedding Celebrations 375
Kiangwan, Attack on Racing at 336
King's Birthday Celebration ... 374
King's Daughters' Fête ... 176
"Ku Klux Klan," Chinese 457, 494
Labour in China, Child 455
Launch of the Hai Hsing ... 135
Lecture by Mr. A. de C. Sowerly 177
Lecture by Mr. E. Kilner ... 217
Lecture by Mr. Verne Dyson ... 253
Lecture by Professor W. M. Porterfield 177
Libelled, Shanghai 494
Likin Stations on S.-N. Railway 216
Loan, French Municipal ... 57
Lobingier's Retirement, Judge... 12, 134
Lottery Tickets Again 252
Lungtan Cement Works ... 13
Maclaren, American Fliers' Aid to 423
Macleod, Memorial Tablet to Dr. 494
Medals, Police Long Service ... 175
Memorial Day, American ... 376
Memorial, Gen. Fredk. Ward ... 336
Memorial Tablet to Dr. Macleod 494
Memorial Tablet to Sir E. Fraser 334
Mercantile Training in Shanghai 425
Merlin, Interview with M. ... 424
Milk, Pure 495
Mission Buildings Now Occupied 424
Model Homes for China, Making 458
Money, Depreciation of Small... 455
Money, New 174
Motor-car Accident, Serious ... 458
Motor-car Hotel Scheme ... 57
Moule at the C.E.M.S., Archdeacon 175
Munz, Mieczyslaw ... 54, 93
Murder and Robbery, Factory... 422
Netherlands Trading Society, Centenary of 12
"North-China Daily News" Circulation 176
North Szechuen Road, Riot in... 174, 215
Nurses Decorated, Local ... 458
Obituary :—
Buck, Major M. W. ... 58, 93
Chun Fai-ting, Mr. 336
Claxton, Mr. A. A. 336
Faithfull, Mr. R. C. 295
Frisenette, Mr. A. C. Z. ... 58
Ellis, Mrs. 425
Hayes, Mrs L. N. 216
Hilborne, Mr. P. H. 425
Hillier, C.M.G., Mr. E. G. ... 93
Lane, M.C., Capt. J. C. H. ... 425
Moore, Mr. James H. ... 495
Pichon, Dr. Louis 253
Poate, Mrs. W. H. 58
Shepherd, Mr. E. Bruce ... 217
Utz, Mr. R. 336
"Old Lady 31" 14
Opium Raid by the Police, Big 457
Oxford and Cambridge Society Dinner 56
Pigeons Slaughtered, Homing ... 94
Pilgrim Ship's Gallant Captain 94
Police Constable Shot, Foreign 56
Police Long Service Medals ... 175
Post Office, The New Shanghai... 456
Press By-laws, Opposition to ... 57
Press in China, The 495
Purdy of the U.S. Court, Judge, 55, 94, 134
Race Club's Charity Grants, The 375
Racing at Kiangwan, Attack on 336
Racing at Yangtszepoo 295
Railway Magnate in Shanghai... 12
Raven, Luncheon to Mr. F. J.... 94
Recreation Club Dinner, Shanghai 177
Revenue Stamps Scandal ... 458
Riot in N. Szechuen Road ... 174, 215
Road Again, That Encroachment 376
Road Round the Settlement, A 175
Roads Movement, The Paper ... 58
Rose Show, The 297
Rotary Club Tiffins ... 94, 217
Russian Consulate and Soviet... 422
Russian Easter in Shanghai ... 174
Russian Refugees' Amnesty ... 457
Russian Ships at Woosung, The 422, 455
Settlement, June 495
Siccawei College (1850-1924) ... 377
Silk Workers' Strike 497
Shanghai Libelled 494
Shanghai, The Cruise of the Yacht 217
Shanghai, The Story of 333
"Shanghai Times" Building Fire 14
Shooting Affray, Bubbling Well Road 455
Smuggling of Arms, How to Check the 457
Snakes and Turtles, Foreshore Invaded by 251
Snake Story, Another 336
Soochow Creek, The Dredging of the 422
Spiritualism in the Chinese City 494
Stamps Scandal, Revenue ... 458
St. George's Day Celebration... 136
St. Joseph's Institute, Prize Day at 495
Story of Shanghai, The 333
Strike of Silk Workers 497
Summer Diseases Hospital ... 497
S.V.C. Annual Inspection ... 296
S.V.C. Church Parade 296
Tagore, Rabindranath 93
Tax, The Cigarette 54
Telephones in Shanghai, Automatic 14
Thunderstorm, The Early Morning 216
Tibet, A Traveller to 56
Toch in Shanghai, Dr. M. ... 56
Traveller to Tibet, A 56
Tung Chih College, Woosung ... 494
Union Church Dinner 252
Union Club in its New Home... 297
Union Jack Club, Opening of the 251
Viennese Singers, The 374
Volunteers Prohibited, Chapei... 335
Ward Memorial, Gen. Fredk.... 336
Warren, The Sunken Transport 55
Washington, M. Wilden and Admi. 174
Wedding Celebrations, Japanese Regent's 375
Weddings :—
Bachrach—Ware 136
Byrne—Kelly 55
Clarke—Paice 174
Cooper—White 253
Dumbarton—Trueman 12
Duncan—Findlay 422
Eustace—Hickson 335
Fennell—Bellamy 294
Forde—Hutchison 377
Furer—Leeds 12
How—Ng Quinn 12
Huang—How 94
Mackinnon—Sweet 12
Martin—Camacho 55
McGillivray—Campbell ... 174
Meyer—Schroeder 377
Moore—Benson 55
Roberts—Puncheon 12
Roger—Lauritsen 216
White—Cooper 495
Tyrrell—Chapin 12
Wharves in the Huangpu, Deepdraft 175
Wilden and Admi. Washington, M. 174
Widler, Gen. Yang Sen and Mr. Elly 496
Widler, Prisoner of Chungking, Mr. Elly 54
Yacht Shanghai, The Cruise of the 217
Y. W. C. A. Building Enterprise 136, 374
Zih Estate, Big Prices for ... 252

CORRESPONDENCE

Arms, Smuggling of 184
Avenue Road 305
Aviators, China's Rules for Foreign 254
Ball, St. George's... 138
Bankers' Lost Opportunity, The 184
Bank Notes, Chinese 464
Banque Industrielle, The ... 27
Bread Upon the Waters ... 254
British Unemployed 417
Buddhist Symbols, Some ... 222
Cafés Chantants, Cocaine and... 418
Caliphate, The 26
Card Game, A Three-handed ... 254
Chimney Sweeping 254
Chinese Bank Notes 464
Chinese Children, Education and 26, 64, 95
Chinese Hebrews 305
Chinese Place Names 498
Christ, A Proclamation of the Days of 304
Cigarettes, The Three 184
Cocaine and Cafés Chantants... 418
Coin Collectors, For 184
Cotton in China 254
Creek to the Hills, The ... 138
Crime, Religious Teaching v. ... 137
Danger, A Public... 417
Dress at Henli 378, 416
Dust, The 138
Earthquake, A Hero of the ... 218
Education and Chinese Children 26, 64, 95
Elver—O 254
Fish Somnambulistic? Are ... 337
Flour in Food, The Value of... 184
France," "The Taint of ... 497
Garden City, The... 498
German Pointers 338
Hebrews, Chinese 305
Henli, Dress at 378, 416
Hills, The Creek to the 138
Hives? What Are 498
Honan, Taxation in 254
Hongkong University, Discipline in 498
Hwah Jah, The Training Ship... 304, 378
Jewish Scouts, The 378
Jewish Teaching on Work ... 417
Katsu 27
Kuangtung, An Appeal from ... 223
Ku Klux Klan 497
Kuling Coolies 65
Leeches and Lappers 304
Lest We Forget 253
Liberal Party, The 254
Lincheng Affair, The 304
Lincheng Memorial, A 223
Literature, Mosaic ... 218, 304
Manchuria, The Refugees in ... 138
Min River, The 65
Miracle (N.T.), The First ... 137
Mirage in China 337
Missionaries in China ... 417, 463, 498
Mixed Court Home, The ... 218
Mosaic Literature 218, 304
Municipal Councillors and Vested Interests 95
Municipal Investment Bank ... 418
Names, Chinese Place 498
National Debt Reduction, The... 223
Piracy 305
Playing the Game... 337
Population of Shanghai ... 338
Prohibition ... 64, 95, 137, 183, 222, 254, 304
Public Policy and Retrenchment 96
Racing Questions, Two 337
Refugees in Manchuria, The ... 138
Religious Discussion 96
Religious Teaching v. Crime ... 137
Research in China, Scientific ... 218
Retrenchment, Public Policy and 96
Rigged Ship, A Full ... 185, 222
Roads in China, National ... 95
Roads, S.M.C. and New ... 497
Russian Refugees 417
Russian Ships at Woosung ... 464
Russian Soldiers and the Soviet 464
Rubber Companies 138
Scientific Research in China ... 218
Scouts, The Jewish 378
Seditious Pamphlets 218
Shanghai's Population 338
Ship, A Full Rigged ... 185, 222
Singapore Base 184
Sinologues, Questions for ... 498
Smuggling of Arms 184
Spiritual and Commercial Prospects 463
St. George's Ball... 138
St. Dunstan's 337
Stock Exchange Reform... ... 418
Stride, A Sprinter's 137
Sun and the Warfare in China, Dr. 27
Taint of France," "The ... 497
Taxation in Honan 254
Tokio Hotel, Recent Invasion of a 497
Traffic and Crawlers 223
Tramway Returns... 27
Trees, Unknown 463
Truth after Dinner, A Little ... 463
Unemployed, British 417
Vested Interests, Municipal Councillors and 95
Widler, Gen. Yang Sen and ... 497
Wuchang, The Junk Accident ot 223
Y.M.C.A. and Anti-Foreignism 222, 254
Y.W.C.A., The 223

NAMES AND NOMS DE PLUME OF WRITERS

Allen, E. L. 223
Amity 184
Amused 254
Ancient and Modern 378
Anti 26
Appreciation 218
Apted 137
Atkinson, E. F. 222
Australind 184
Bangsa Orang Cheena 493
Barbarian 223
Barlow, C. H. 183
Belated 95
Berthel, E. M. 305
B. E. V. 184
Bickerton, H. 137
Bitten 27, 184
Blue Water 378
Bonzo 378
Bowern, T. W. 185
Bradley, J. B. 498
Brutus 463
Bubbly 183
Business Man, A 463
Cadets, The 304
Canis 338
Carmichael, W. V. 218
C. C. H. 26, 64
C. H. 498
Chatley, Herbert 337
Cheerful Cynic 184
Chen, P. C. 254
Cione 215, 305
Cocktail 184
Combardello 138
Common Sense 463
Concerned 498
Correspondent, An Old 378
Clennell, Walter J., ... 65
Clogs 254
Creature, A 416
Curious 95, 418
Darroch, J. 137
Dent, R. V.... 27
D. J. W. 138
Engineer 378
Englishman 337
E. K. M. 95
Ezra, N. E. B. 417
Fairplay 95, 418
Fearn, J. B. 137
Ferro 418
Fish, Fisher T. 337
Fraternity 222, 254
Fraternity, A Brother of the ... 222
Frère 64
Fundamentalist 463
Fulstow, Wm. T. 497
Gargi Devi 416
Gleboff, Gen. 464
Godfrey, Chas. H. 184
Goldring, Philip W. 337
Graeme, Betty 378
Grass Widower 378
Grundy, Mr. 416
Grundy, Mrs. 416
Gull, B. M. 337
Ho, P. C. 304
Horne, A. 65
Horne, A 498
Hsin Mei 64
Humpty Dumpty 26
I. M. 184, 498
Innocence Abroad... 417
Inose, Comdr. 223
Inquirer 498
Interested 337
Inverclyde 222
Irishman 416
Jacob, J. R. 137
Jacobs, M. 337
James ... ...
J. D. ... ...
Jew, A Young 337
Jonathan ... ...
Kaestli, F. 493
K. C. K. 26, 95
Kliene, H. 27, 95
Ku Klux Klan 497
Landlubber, A Mere ... 185, 222
Lapper, A 304
Lee Fore Brace 185
Lee, Wm. Yinson... 64
Leventis 26
Little, Edward S. 223
Lockhart, W. Bruce ... 96, 137
Lockwood, W. W. 222
Mainsail Haul 185
Man Who Knows, A 137
Maruhodo 497
M. E. 304
M. E. L. 417
Mentor 218
Meynard, V. 184
Millington, F. C. 378
Moderate 65
Moral Welfare League Committee 218
Mullah Nawan Chun 26
Myers, M. 337, 418
Nary, Miss I. O. 417
Nautic 305
N. C. 65
Nimmo, Jnr., Robert 183
Oarsman 378, 416
Observer 254
Oldhand, J.... 254
Old Nick 498
P. H. H. 338
Picard, Rosslyn 96
Polk, M. H. 254

F. O. Q. ... 417, 463, 498
Forest Garden 96
[illegible] 138
Prohibition, One Who Practises 357
[illegible] 463
[illegible] A 427
[illegible] 498
[illegible] 379
Russia, A Friend of 464
Russia, A Lover of 417
Russian Officer, A... 464
Rowland, A. N. 416
Schlobohm, F. W. 416
Shade of Carnegie... 417
Sheppard, G. W. 24
Ship's Bell Boy 146
[illegible] 354
[illegible] 464
Single Standard 319
S. M. D. 354
[illegible] 463
Sowerby, Arthur de C. 314
[illegible] 304
Squeers 64
Terra Incognita 222
Total Abstainer, A ... 65, 96
Truthseeker 96
[illegible] 64
[illegible] 304
[illegible] 376
Vidi 465
Vi et Armis 216
Venable, Dr. W. H. 304
W 136
Watney, Charles 264
Wu [illegible] 95
X. O. X. 336
X. Y. Z. 27
Y. W. C. A., Miss 223
[illegible] 136

MEETINGS

American Chamber of Commerce 23
American Red Cross of China... 288
American University Women's [illegible] 342
Anglo-Java Estates 97
Assurance Franco-Asiatique ... 304
Automobile Club of China ... 16
Baseball Club, Shanghai... ... 63
Batu Anam Estates 97
British Chamber of Commerce... 146
Bute Plantations, Ld. 96
Canadian Association of Shanghai 186
Cercle Sportif Francais 64
Chamber of Commerce, American 96
Chamber of Commerce, British... 146
China Association 256
Clay Pigeon Club, Shanghai ... 96
Consolidated Rubber Estates ... 64
Cricket Club, Shanghai ... 256
Dominion Rubber Co. 64
Far Eastern Insurance Co. ... 342
Gas Co., Shanghai 64
Gordon & Co., Ld. 96
Java Consolidated Estates ... 142
Kapayang Rubber Estates ... 62
Klebang Rubber Estates, Shanghai 62
[illegible] 304
Lane, Crawford & Co., Ld. ... 302
Lawn Bowls Club 142
[illegible] & Co., Ld. 256
[illegible] ... ... & [illegible] 302
Medical Society, Shanghai ... 22
Missions to Seamen in Shanghai 62
Mourie & Co., Ld., S. 336
[illegible] 63
Photographic Society, Shanghai 304
Polo Club, Shanghai 142
Recreation Club, Shanghai ... 142
Science and Arts, Society of ... 182
Semambu Rubber Estates ... 142
Senawang Rubber Estate ... 182
Shanghai Cricket Club 256
Shanghai Exploration and Development Co. 502
Shanghai Gas Co. 63
Shanghai Horse Bazaar ... 98
Shanghai Malay Rubber Estates 97
Sua Manggis Rubber Co. ... 142
Swimming Bath Club 303
Taiping Rubber Estates ... 63
Telephone Co., Shanghai Mutual 302
Total Abstinence League, Shanghai 302
Weeks & Co., Ld. 302
Yacht Club, Shanghai ... 182
Yangtsze Insurance Assn. ... 342

SPECIAL ARTICLES

Asia the Cradle of Man, Northern 77
Ballet Dancers and Wise Men. of 356
Bandits, Brush with Chinese ... 476
Bowling Club, Recollections of [illegible] 196
Chesterton, Mr. G. K. 76
China: an Interpretation ... 236
China, Impressions of ... 237, 315, 356, 397, 516
China to Help Herself, Helping 397
China's Skies for April 36
China's Skies for May 195
China's Skies for June 396
China's Youth and Her Future 237
Chinese Bandits, Brush with ... 476
Chinese Government and Opium 397
Depression, A Cure for... ... 476
Divine "Power" of Jesus Christ, The 234
Exhibition, A Shanghai World 195
Faculties and the Fact of Religion, Our 116
Gold Standard, The 517
Golf, Lessons in ... 117, 156, 197, 234
Great Decision, The 356
Hollywood and Shanghai ... 274
Holmes in Search of the K.K.K. 516
Hongkong: a Few Impressions 277
Immortality, The Conditions of 274
Impressions of China ... 237, 315, 356, 397, 516
Impressions, Peking 116
Juggler, The Vagabond 517
Khalifs? How Many 274
K.K.K., Holmes in Search of the 516
Lincheng Outrage, Anniversary of the 235
Man with Two Talents, The ... 156
Northern Asia the Cradle of Man 77
Old Evil, An 436
O-Ma-Ni-Pad-Me-Hum ... 476
Opium, Chinese Government and 397
Papini and His Book 315
Peking Impressions 116
Poultry Raising in China ... 156
Pozzoni, The Late Bishop ... 317 Pulpit, From the:—
Chesterton, Mr. G. K. ... 76
Depression, A Cure for ... 476
Divine "Power" of Jesus Christ, The 234
Faculties and the Fact of Religion, Our 116
Great Decision, The 356
Immortality, The Conditions of 274
Man with Two Talents, The 156
Old Evil, An 436
Papini and His Book 315
Religion and Our Mental Power 36
Spring Sermon, A ... 396
Trinity in Terms of Energy, The 516
Word of Life, The 195
Races, Hermione Goes to the... 237
Religion and Our Mental Power 36
Reminiscences of a Traveller ... 357
Shanghai, Holywood and ... 274
Shanghai—the Wonder City ... 275, 316, 357
Shanghai World Exhibition, A... 195
Skies for April, China's ... 36
Skies for May, China's 195
Skies for June, China's 396
Snakes Identified, The Bund ... 275
Soviet Delegates in London ... 276
Spring Sermon, A 396
Sun Yat-sen, An American Sketch of Dr. 235
Tagore's Mission, Rabindrath ... 477
Trademark Bureau at Work, The 37
Trinity in Terms of Eenergy, The 516
Vagabond Juggler, The 517
Wireless, The World of... ... 76
Word of Life, The 195

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

Athletic Sports ... 15, 66, 178, 225, 262, 303, 383, 430, 465
Billiards ... 15, 144, 178, 225, 262
Boxing ... 15, 66, 144, 178, 384, 430, 506
Chess ... 15, 66, 105, 144, 178
Cricket ... 144, 225, 263, 303, 343, 383, 384, 430, 465, 506
Football, Association ... 66, 105, 178, 225, 263, 343
Football, Rugby ... 15, 144
Golf ... 15, 66, 105, 178, 262, 303, 343, 383, 430, 506
Harriers, Shanghai 105
Lawn Tennis ... 66, 105, 144, 178, 225, 262, 303, 343, 384, 430, 465, 506
Polo 506
Racing ... 15, 66, 178, 224, 225, 262, 305, 343, 384, 430
Shooting 384
Rowing 15, 66
Yachting 303

COMMERCE AND FINANCE

19, 59, 99, 139, 179, 219, 259, 299, 339, 379, 419, 459, 499

BOOK PAGE, THE

38, 78, 118, 158, 198, 238, 278, 318, 358, 398, 438, 476, 518

MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS

25, 67, 102, 145, 177, 255, 302, 342, 385, 430, 470, 507

WOMAN'S PAGE, THE

39, 79, 119, 159, 199, 239, 279, 319, 359, 399, 439, 479, 519

FOUR WINDS, FROM THE

Australian Letters ... 115, 155, 313, 352, 434, 512
British Columbia Letters 74, 194, 311
London Letters ... 34, 35, 113, 114, 154, 311, 351, 394, 475, 512
Manchester Letters ... 36, 113, 153, 233, 272, 393, 474, 515
Paris Letters ... 75, 193, 233, 314, 354, 395, 435, 474, 513
San Francisco Letters ... 34, 74, 192, 231
Scottish Letters ... 114, 154, 194, 273, 312, 353, 394, 514
Miscellaneous ... 34, 75, 113, 153, 193, 231, 272, 313, 351, 393, 434, 474, 512

TELEGRAMS, FOREIGN

30, 70, 110, 150, 188, 228, 268, 308, 346, 390, 431, 471, 508

H. M. SUPREME COURT

Akyar & Co. v. H. E. Whiddett 503
Bickel, Mrs. F. B. v. Oriental Commercial Bank, Ld. ... 106
Brook, Mrs. Lena v. E. Brook... 386, 466
Cheng Rubber Estates, In re... 27
China Navigation Co. v. China Merchants S. N. Co. 106
Great Light Electric Co. v. Imperial Hotel ... 68, 306, 503
Gaya Deen v. Dabe Pudun Das 467, 503
Kao Siao-yen v. W. E. Field... 186
Lane, Crawford & Co. v. R. F. Wrench 428
Moller (in Bankruptcy), In re E. 466
Ouralskaya, Olga v. E. Lloyd... 185
Probst, Hanbury & Co. v. Central Garage Co. 264
Polish Chinese Trading Co. v. A. J. Ross 466
Rex v. W. H. Goulborn... ... 108
Rex v. Abdul Nagi and others 146
Rex v. Sucha Singh and Amar Singh 185
Rex v. Judith Rowarth and Margaret Davis ... 226, 263
Rizaief, H. M. D. v. Arts & Craft, Ld. 107
Sikh Police v. Sucha Singh and Amar Singh 386
Shih Sen-sun v. Pung Wo Manufacturing Co. 146
S.M.C. v. Sucha Singh 107
Stanley Trading Co., Ld., In re 264
Yangtsze Insurance Assn. v. E. Moller 185

HIGH COURT AT WEIHAIWEI

Rex v. Eugene Feodorova ... 343

H. M. POLICE COURT

Rex v. Camelia Mason 28
Rex v. C. S. Maitland 467
Rex v. Harbak Singh 146
Rex v. John Snell 108
Rex v. Leslie Haynes 264
Rex v. Mrs. Judith Rowarth and Mrs. M. Davis ... 107, 147
Rex v. Massa Singh and others 226
Rex v. New Engineering & Shipbuilding Works 504
Rex v. William Best 386
Rex v. W. N. Lester ... 467, 503
S.M.C. v. C. P. Rakusen ... 264
S.M.C. v. D. C. Burn 4
S.M.C. v. F. C. Raeburn ... 1
S.M.C. v. T. C. Leach 2

U. S. COURT FOR CHINA

Adoption of a Chinese Child... 4
Dowdall, Read & Tulasne v. Shanghai Building Co.... 344, 5
Fur & Wool Trading Co. v. Andersen, Meyer & Co. ... 2
Guignard, M. v. American Drug Co. 186, 306, 3
Husar, L. G. v. U. S. Shipping Board and P. M. S. Co. ... 148, 1
Lafuente, A. v. A. B. Rosenfeld 1
Richter, Mrs. V. v. Theodore Tapia 4
Russo-Asiatic Bank v. Max Wulfsohn & Co. 2
Shmakova, P. and Martinson, M. v. L. E. Brown ... 265, 3
Tong Jack-hing v. A. Teodoro... 3
U. S. v. Capt. M. M. Jensen... 1
U. S. v. Capt. Lustie 2
U. S. v. H. D. Roberts and others 1
U. S. v. James Kelly 3
U. S. v. John Craig 4
Webb, C. H. v. "China Press" 387, 426, 4
Wing, L. S. v. Asia Banking Corporation 3
Wong Chen-tai v. Marion L. Gregg 3

INQUESTS

McGillivrey, Re the death of M. A. 3
Rigby, Re the death of J. A.... 3

FRENCH MIXED COURT

Arson Charge Out of Revenge... 4

MIXED COURT

Armed Robbers Sentenced ... 3
Baikal Road Murder 3
Bank Burglar Sentenced ... 1
Bogus Lotteries 1
Burglar Sentenced 4
Chefoo Merchant, Charge Against 3
Chilean's Bad Luck, A 2
"China Press" v. "Evening News" 266, 3
Chinese Judicial Procedure ... 3
Confessed After Being Beaten 3
Dangerous Gang, A 3
Dairy Keeper Fined 3
Disastrous Night Ashore, A ... 2
Drugs, Big Seizure of 3
Drugs, Illicit Trading in ... 3
Forged Order on Chinese Bank 3
Imitation of Trademarks, Alleged 3
Intoxicated, but not Drunk ... 2
Labour Intimidation 1
Lawyer Critic of the Gaol ... 344, 3
"Long Life Pills" 6
Manslaughter Charge 2
North Szechuen Road Trouble, The 2
Perjury Charge, A 3
Printer's Label Samples, A ... 3
Robbers, Long Sentences for... 3
Saved from Prison by Employers 5
Status of Visitors of Kiangwan 1
Stock Exchange Case, Another 3
Wallace Convicted of Fraud, Mr. W. 28, 6

The North-China Herald

AND SUPREME COURT AND CONSULAR GAZETTE

WEEKLY EDITION OF THE NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS

Registered at the Chinese P. O. for transmission as mail matter under Class B.

(Tsz-ling-sing-chi-chow-kan 祠週期星林字)

VOL. CLI. No. 2956. SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1924. TAELS 12 PER ANNUM.

CONTENTS

CHINESE POLITICS—
Cigarette Tax and Shanghai Shopkeepers' Resistance ... 1
Canton and Customs Surplus ... 1
Russo-Chinese Negotiations ... 2
Chang Tso-lin and the Soviet ... 2
Wu Pei-fu about to Invade Shensi 2
Northern Campaign against Canton 2
Trade Marks Bureau 2

LEADING ARTICLES—
Old Scholar and the New, The... 3
Municipal Budget, The 3
Duty on China Tea, The 3
Coming German Elections... ... 3
Sheep Without Shepherds... ... 4
Nibbling Away of Treaties ... 4

NOTES AND COMMENTS 5

NEWS FROM THE OUTPORTS—
Finance and Opium in Canton ... 6
Kiangsi in Fear of Invasion ... 6
Hupeh Tuchun's Birthday Gifts... 6
Ridding Chinkiang of Its Beggars 6
Manchurian Railway Problems ... 6
Hospital Looted in Szechuan ... 7
Appeal to Demos, The 7
Civil War in Szechuan 7
Great Religious Festival, A ... 7
Japan's Intellectuals 7
Japan's Army 7
Wintry Weather in Anhui ... 7
Trans-Siberian Railway Revival 8
Kwangtung Conservancy 8
Opium Traffic on Upper Yangtze 8
Japan Rising from the Sea ... 8
Hsiung Ping-chi Standing for Civil Governorship of Shantung 8
Peiyang University Students on Strike for "Selective" Courses 9
Stranded Chiping, The 9
Anglo-American Association ... 9
Strike at Kowloon Dockyard ... 9
Tientsin Crown Leases 9
Mr. F. W. Carey and Ningpo ... 9
Prince Matsukata's Return to Life 10
Fall of Changchowfu 10
North Manchuria's Fur Trade ... 10
Russian Refugees in the Filippines 10
Ancient Coffins of Kiangsu ... 10
Guides to China's Reformation... 11
Opium Eradication in Anhui ... 11
Japan and Labour Conference... 11
Bandit Outrage in Szechuan ... 11
Japan's Working Estimates ... 11
London Stock Exchange and Chinese Loans 11
Piracy in Chinese Waters ... 11

SHANGHAI NEWS—
Merchant King's Venture ... 12
Weddings 12
Judge Lobingier's Retirement ... 12
Railway Magnate in Shanghai... 12
Royal Air Force Reunion ... 13
Lungtan Cement Works 13
Lady Authors in Shanghai ... 13
An American Author in Shanghai 13
"Old Lady 31" 14
"Shanghai Times" Building Fire 14
Automatic Phones in Shanghai 14
British Gaol, The 14

SPORTS AND PASTIMES 15

COMPANY MEETINGS—
Seremban Rubber Estates, Ld... 16
Langkat Oil Co. 16
Anglo-Dutch (Java) Plantations 16
Chemor United Rubber Co. ... 17
Shanghai Waterworks 17
Anglo French Land Investment Co., Ld. 18

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES—
Automobile Club 18
Shanghai and Its Merchant Seamen 22
Shanghai Medical Society ... 22
American Chamber of Commerce 23
Shanghai Clay Pigeon Club ... 25

MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS... ... 25

CORRESPONDENCE—
Education and Chinese Children 26
Caliphate, The 26
Tramway Returns 27
Katsu 27
Banque Industrielle 27

LAW REPORTS—
H. M. Supreme Court—
Cheng Rubber Estates ... 27
An Unusual Claim 27
H. M. Police Court—
"For Purpose of His Evil Spite" 28
Mixed Court—
Miscellaneous Cases 28

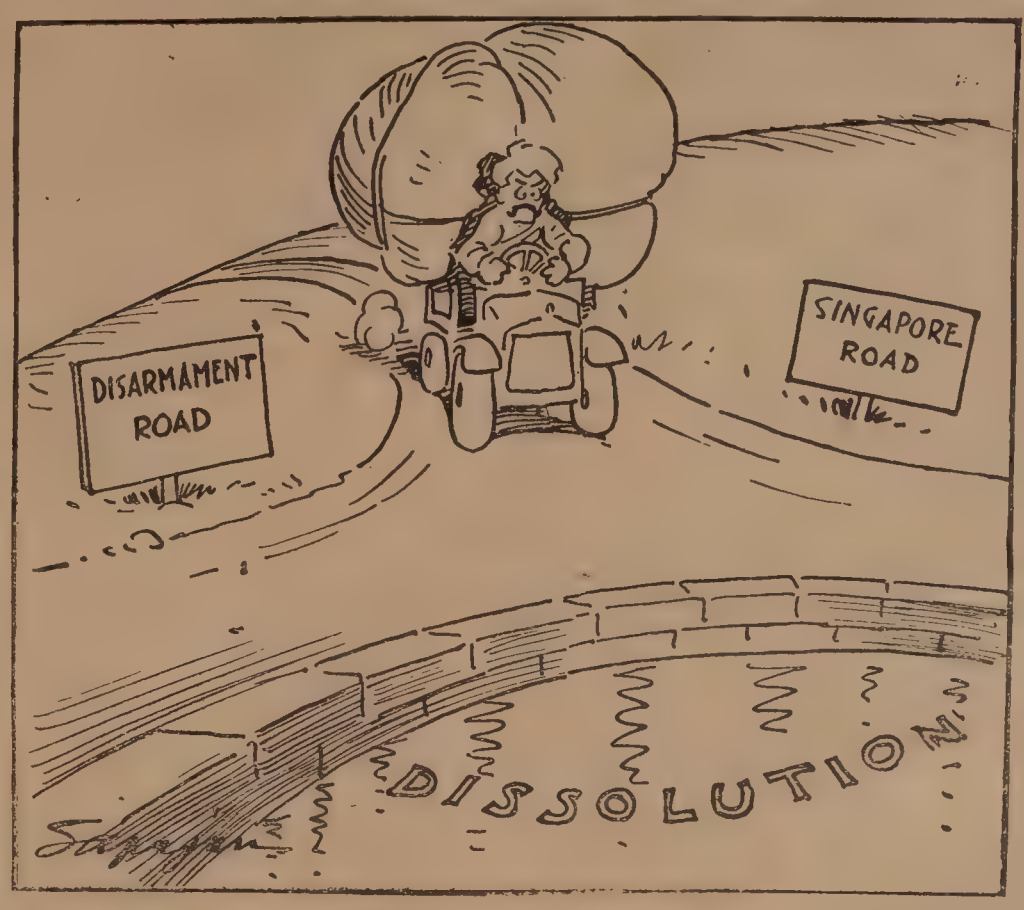
FOREIGN TELEGRAMS 30–33

FROM THE FOUR WINDS ... 34—35

SPECIAL ARTICLES—
Religion and Our Mental Power 36
China's Skies for April 36
Trademark Bureau at Work ... 37
Alphabet of the East 37

BOOK PAGE 38

WOMAN'S PAGE 39



Safety first! Turn to the left

THE CIGARETTE TAX AND SHANGHAI SHOPKEEPERS' RESISTANCE

The Facts of the Case: Shopkeepers Solidly Opposed to What is Nothing but Official Squeeze: Tax Equally Illegal and Against Treaties

The following illuminating account of the failure of the 20 per cent. cigarette tax, not only in Shanghai district but in other provinces is written by a Chinese.

Not only foreigners but also the Chinese are at a loss to know whether or not the 20 per cent. cigarette tax has actually been enforced in Shanghai. The tax office and those people who have received good promises claim that it has been enforced and is very successful, while the tobacco companies and all those people whose interests have been seriously affected say that it has not been, and can never be, enforced. Let the following facts in connexion with the tax answer the above question and prove which side is right.

Seeing that a special tax on cigarettes had been enforced in Chêkiang, and thinking that lots of money had been made by that province, the authorities of Kiangsu, in the spring of last year, decided to introduce a similar tax into this province. In June, the tax was approved by the Provincial Assembly. After that, despite the opposition of various classes of people, the authorities began to make all preliminary arrangements to put the tax into force. They divided the province into 29 sections, and received tenders from applying tax-farmers three times. The law governing the submitting of tenders provides that all bidders must be tobacco merchants of their respective sections. But a great number of the successful bidders are not only not tobacco merchants, but are members of the Provincial Assembly. Disputes over their qualification have not yet been settled.

SOLID RESISTANCE.

Shanghai is not only the greatest cigarette market in China but is a leader in everything. If Shanghai accepts the tax, it can be enforced in all other parts of the province. As no one had made any offer to farm the tax for Shanghai, the authorities at Nanking appointed Mr. Chang Tsing-ching as Tax Chief, and sent him to Shanghai last January to establish an office for collecting the tax directly. Since his arrival the cigarette dealers in the native territory of Shanghai and its neighbourhood have been fighting more vigorously than ever. Twice they have suspended their business and almost all of them are still on strike. Threats, promises, negotiations, and various means have been employed by the local tax office and the Nanking authorities to make the cigarette dealers pay the tax, but the latter have not been moved; and there is no reason to expect that they will be, because conditions in Shanghai are different from those of any other place in this province.

In Shanghai the Settlements are closely connected with the extra-settlement territory. If the tax, which can only become effective in the extra-settlement area, is enforced there, all cigarette stores in that area will be compelled to close up sooner or later, because smokers will naturally go to the Settlements to get their cigarettes, which will be sold there at a cheaper price. In speaking about something which can never succeed, the Chinese usually say, "You are asking the tiger to give you his hide." But the authorities are doing exactly the same thing in asking the cigarette dealers in the districts around the Shanghai Settlements to pay the tax. One gives away everything but one's means of living.

EDUCATION A MERE BLIND.

The authorities claim that the money collected will be used for educational purposes, so those people who resist the tax have been accused of being unwilling to promote the education of their own province. In February the cigarette dealers addressed a petition to the Civil Governor, requesting him to stop the tax, and offering to contribute a certain sum each month toward the maintenance of the educational work of this province. The petition would have been carefully considered if the object of collecting that tax had been really to subsidize education. But the Governor rejected the offer and refused the request. That is evidence to show whether or not the revenue will be actually used for educational purposes. The Chinese have already paid enough money to enrich their officials and to feed the ever-increasing army of their country.

The local tax chief has bribed some uninfluential cigarette dealers, and has been using them as tools to break the formidable union of the opponents of the tax. A few days ago he submitted a report to the Civil Governor and published it in newspapers, saying that, of the 1,997 cigarette stores in and around Shanghai, 1,200 had applied for licences, and that the dispute over the tax would soon end. Investigation shows that only a few hundred stores in Nantao have received licences, and that in an unnatural way. They did not apply for the licences but were forced to accept them. They were also induced by artful means to keep some tax stamps in their stores. In order to show that a store had received stamps, they were requested to put a chop on to a book. The tax office went another step further by exaggerating the number of chops and announcing that almost all cigarette shops in and around Shanghai had applied for licences and recognized the tax.

NUISANCE AND FAILURE.

The special cigarette tax has been tried by various provinces, and it has failed and is a nuisance at each place. In Chêkiang the peace of the cigarette dealers is always in danger of being disturbed by rascals in uniform, who are employed as tax inspectors. In Anhui the authorities cannot help keeping the tax in force because, if they give it up, they will have to return to the farmers their cash deposit, which has already been spent by the Provincial Government for purposes unknown to the public. The tax farmers in Hupeh are no longer willing to take charge of the collection because they have already lost $80,000 since they took over the monopoly. Evidence of the resistance offered by cigarette dealers in Kiangsu Province appears in every day's newspapers. Their confrères in Shanghai are holding anti-tax meetings every afternoon. So the tax is bound to fail in Kiangsu also and can never be enforced in this peculiarly-situated port of Shanghai.

The imposition of the 20 per cent. tax on cigarettes is one of the worst things the Chinese officials have done in late years. The rate of tax on cigarettes has already been fixed by Treaties, and agreed upon between the Chinese Government and various tobacco companies. The constitution of the Republic (Articles 23 and 27) also forbids "double taxes," of which the provincial cigarette tax is a notorious example; and it provides that the tobacco tax shall be one of the national revenues at the sole disposal of the Central Government. So the imposition of this double tax not only violates the Constitution of the Republic and Treaties and Agreements, but also embarrasses the Central Government and exposes our weakness to the world.

CANTON AND CUSTOMS SURPLUS

An Appeal to British Prime Minister by Students for his Good Services

FUNDS WANTED FOR THE UNIVERSITY

The "Canton Gazette" gives prominence to a letter which has been written by the students of Canton to the British Prime Minister asking for his intervention in the matter of Canton and the Customs funds. The letter is in the following terms:—

MR. RAMSAY MACDONALD,
LONDON, ENGLAND.

SIR,—We, the Committee of the National Kuangtung University Endowment Fund Movement organized by the student body of the Teachers' College, National Kuangtung University, extend our congratulations upon your assumption of the high office of Prime Minister of England. Conscious of your lofty principle and honourable sense of justice for all, we now approach you to ask your aid in the matter of the return of the proportionate share of the Customs surplus to the Southern Chinese Government for use in defraying the expenses for education in South China.

As there has been no Government university in existence in South China, Dr. Sun Yat-sen has ordered the Normal College, the Law College and the Agricultural College, all of Canton, to combine and form themselves into a university called the National Kuangtung University. Large funds are needed for this new undertaking. It is hoped that the funds from the Customs surplus may be available for this laudable and worthy cause. Our Committee is entrusted with the task of securing funds and endowments for the needs of the newly established National Kuangtung University. We, therefore confidently await your favourable response and sympathetic co-operation.

We are, etc.,

The Committee of the National Kuangtung University Endowment Fund Movement.

PEKING, Mar. 28.—Admiral Wen Shou-teh, Commander of the new Pehhai Squadron, will leave Peking for Chefoo on Wednesday next.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE RUSSO-CHINESE NEGOTIATIONS

M. Karakhan's Plea of Illness: Statement by Chinese Foreign Minister

Peking, Mar. 30.

In response to Dr. Wellington Koo's invitation for a personal talk, M. Karakhan on Friday evening pleaded illness and sent his secretary to call on Dr. Koo. Two exchanges of messages occurred on Friday and one on Saturday morning.

Dr. Koo said that he was impressed by two points in M. Karakhan's memorandum of March 24: (1) that M. Karakhan admitted that the initialled agreements, one covering general matters and the other relating to the Chinese Eastern Railway, were preliminary texts subject to approval or rejection by the Chinese Government; and (2) that the three days' time-limit was not intended to obstruct but to expedite a settlement.

The Chinese Foreign Minister proposed modification of two Articles of the original draft concerning Mongolia, contending that Article 4 could not conform with the principle of reciprocity for, whereas China was asked to renounce all treaties and agreements made with a third party affecting Russian interests, Russia was only to renounce the Tsarist treaties and agreements with a third country affecting Chinese interests. The agreement should provide reciprocal renunciations.

THE EVACUATION OF MONGOLIA.

With regard to withdrawal of Russian troops from Mongolia, Dr. Wellington Koo proposed that the principle of inviolability of territorial sovereignty should be decognized.

Concerning the settlement of Russian church property, which was to be arranged by exchange of Notes, Dr. Koo proposed that it should remain in abeyance after the estalishment of normal relations, because the Chinese Government was not yet in possession of all the facts concerning such properties.

Dr. Koo hoped that M. Karakhan would see the reasonableness of these proposals, adding that it was quite in conformity with international practice for one of the contracting parties to propose changes. He was not opposed to immediate restoration of relations with Russia, but he thought that such a step could not be considered an end in itself and that there must be some basis to regulate such relations. Dr. Koo pointed out that the negotiations between the Chinese and Russian delegates were brought to a sudden stop on March 14 without the previous knowledge of the Chinese Government. He argued, therefore, that no party should take advantage of that mishap.

It seems to be the view of the Chinese Government that M. Karakhan does not appreciate the sincerity of the Chinese in trying to meet him half way and find a satisfactory basis for the conduct of peaceful relations between the two countries.—Reuter's Pacifid Service.

Peking, Mar. 26.

A bill has been placed on the agenda for Friday's meeting of the House of Representatives in the name of Mr. Huang Kung-su, calling upon the Government to recognize the Russian Soviet Government. It is expected that the bill will meet with considerable opposition.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Government's Objection to Provincial Authorities Interfering

Peking, Mar. 20.

Mr. Liu Chen and a number of other senators sent a telegram to Marshal Wu Pei-fu urging that the Sino-Russian negotiations should be left in the hands of the Central Government without interference from Provincial authorities. In reviewing the present state of Sino-Russian affairs the Senators say that as Mr. Karakhan refuses to negotiate further with the Chinese Government, the Chinese Government should ask the Moscow authorities to recall him and send another delegate to Peking.

The tone of this telegram is in direct opposition to the views of a majority in the House of Representatives.

The police guards are still stationed at the Government University and it is reported that the police are paying special attention to the residence of Dr. Koo, fearing that the students may attempt to make a demonstration there.

Mr. Ho Shou-jen, Member of the Board of Directors of the Chinese Eastern Railway, who came to Peking to watch the Sino-Russian negoiations, has left here for Harbin to report to Dr. C. C. Wang regarding the deadlock.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

HARBIN PAPER'S FALSE REPORT.

Harbin, Mar. 27.

The Chinese authorities have threatened to suppress the newspaper "Rupor" owing to the publication of a sensational story that Marshal Chang Tso-lin had invited all the chief officials of the Three Eastern Provinces to a conference at Mukden on March 27 in connexion with Sino-Russian affairs, at which Dr. Sun Yat-sen would be represented by Dr. C. C. Wu. The newspaper has been warned that it will be closed if any further rumours of such a nature are published.

The Chinese administration states that it has no knowledge of any conference to take place at Mukden on that date.

Gen. Chu, with Dr. C. C. Wang, President of the Chinese Eastern Railway, left Harbin on March 25 in response to a summons from Gen. Chang Tso-lin, but the subject to be discussed has not been made public.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Peking, Mar. 31.

That Moscow does not look upon the Sino-Russian negotiations as finally concluded is the inference drawn by many Chinese in view of the fact that the unofficial agencies are continuing their duties. China's unofficial agent at Chita is being replaced by Mr. Chang Wei, whose passports are being agrranged with the Soviet Mission in Peking. This is thought to be significant in view of the drastic action taken towards the Japanese Consul at Vladivostok recently.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Peking's Reply to M. Karakhan

Peking, Apr. 2.

It is semi-officially reported that the Waichiaopu last night forwarded to M. Karakhan China's reply to the Note from the Russian Envoy dated March 25. In the reply, the Chinese Government still insists upon the three points at issue which are alleged to have brought the Sino-Russian negotiations to a standstill, but it is reported that the Chinese Government in reality makes every possible concession. It is said that if Soviet Russia complies with the proposition set forth in the above reply, the Chinese Government is ready to restore the diplomatic relations of the two countries without delay. It is also rumoured, however, that owing to the indisposition of Premier Sun Pao-chi and Dr. Wellington Koo the reply has not yet been delivered.—Eastern News Agency.

Peking, Apr. 2.

Replying to M. Karakhan's memorandum of March 24, the Waichiaopu, in a lengthy Note presented to the Soviet Envoy last night, reiterates most of the points brought out by Dr. Wellingon Koo in the exchange of messages with M. Karakhan on Friday and Saturday through the latter's secretary.

The Note adds that the Chinese Government must decline to discuss with M. Karakhan China's relations with other Powers. It must suffice to reiterate that the Chinese Government would not permit their policy vis-à-vis of the Sino-Russian negotiations to be interfered with by outside influence. The Ministry points out that the Chinese Government have not disavowed any agreement formally concluded. If M. Karakhan refuses to discuss the modifications with a view to completion of the proposed agreement and insists on returning to the position at the beginning of his conversations with Dr. C. T. Wang, it would merely be another proof that responsibility for the delay rests with the Soviet and not the Chinese Government.

As regards the proposed agreements, the Chinese Government are ready to approve and sign them provided modifications are effected in the preliminary text, as follows:—

(1) Regarding treaties, the Note contending that the agreement should provide for reciprocal renunciation of treaties and agreements made with a third party affecting the interests of the other;

(2) Regarding the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Mongolia, which, the Note contends, should be made a more definite undertaking on the part of Russia. It should not be conditional, though the necessary details for the withdrawal may be arranged later;

(3) Concerning Russian Church property, the settlement of which the Foreign Minister proposes shall remain in abeyance until after the establishment of normal relations because the Chinese Government are not yet in possession of all the facts concerning such properties.

DESIRE FOR OFFICIAL RELATIONS.

The Chinese Government wish to discuss these three points, on which they cannot believe that M. Karakhan, if he really wishes to re-establish friendly relations with China, can have any objection to negotiate. Should M. Karakhan, however, see insurmountable difficulties in the way of modifying the preliminary text, the Chinese Government, animated by a spirit of conciliation and an earnest desire for official relations between China and Russia, are prepared to agree to having these modifications effected through a supplementary exchange of notes to be signed with the agreements.

The Note, in conclusion, remarks that the texts of the proposed agreements can serve as the basis of understanding if the three points, to which the Chinese Government attach great importance, can be given adequate consideration and suitable changes effected by a revision of the texts or through an exchange of notes.—Reuter.

REPLY ALSO SENT TO MOSCOW.

Peking, Apr. 2.

The Waichiaopu, after forwarding its reply last night to M. Karakhan's second Note, wired to Mr. Li Chia-ao, Chinese Envoy in Moscow, instructing him to convey the same reply to the Moscow Government. It is reported that the Waichiaopu contemplates collecting the views of the Chinese populace throughout the country with a view to coming to terms with all parties concerned. The Waichiaopu at the same time wired to Marshal Wu Pei-fu, sending to him the full text of China's reply to Soviet Russia.

M. KARAKHAN DISSATISFIED.

Apr. 3.

M. Karakhan, upon receiving China's second reply, immediately wired to the Moscow Government, asking it for instructions. He is expressing his dissatisfaction with the reservation by China of the settlement of the three points at issue, but it is observed that his attitude will not necessarily influence the attitude of the Soviet Government towards the proposals. — Eastern News Agency.

WANG KO-MING IMPEACHED

Peking, Mar. 28.

Three hundred and nineteen members were present in the House of Representatives this afternoon, when the most important question on the agenda was the discussion of Sino-Russian affairs. The agenda was changed, however, in order to permit discussion of the impeachment of Mr. Wang Ko-ming, the Minister of Finance, in connexion with the gold franc question and the issue of Treasury Bonds.

After a long discussion, the impeachment was voted on, 227 votes being cast, but as only 223 name-cards had been deposited in the name-card box the vote was invalid. The result of the actual voting was 204 in favour of and 21 against impeachment, while two votes were informal.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

CHANG TSO-LIN AND THE SOVIET

Conflicting Rumours as to His Views of the Present Situation

Peking, Mar. 25.

It has been evident that the attitude of Marshal Chang Tso-lin has been watched very keenly by both sides during the Sino-Russian negotiations at Peking, and, since the deadlock was reached, his attitude has become even more important. Various conflicting rumours have reached the capital regarding Marshal Chang's views. To-day it is reported that Mr. Chi Kung-liang, head of the Manchurian delegation, which was to have watched the progress of formal negotiations between China and Russia, left here yesterday for Mukden to report to Marshal Chang concerning the Sino-Russian situation. Mr. Chi is said to have been given the full confidence of the Government and to be, therefore, thoroughly familiar with the incidents that led to the impasse. Consequently it is expected that his visit to Mukden will dispel any misunderstanding on the part of Marshal Chang. That such misunderstandings exist is feared owing to recent reports from Manchuria. Marshal Chang, however, does not seem to have been satisfied with the information he has received, for it is reported that he is sending Gen. Chang Chiao-ching to Peking to investigate the actual position of affairs between the Soviet mission and the Central Government.

WU PEI-FU'S ATTITUDE.

Marshal Wu Pei-fu also seems to have been giving the Sino-Russian negotiations quite a lot of attention. He is said to be a strong supporter of Dr. C. T. Wang, and to have favoured accepting the vague settlement offered by Mr. Karakhan without any additional assurances. In this connexion it is reported that President Tsao has telegraphed to Marshal Wu stating that it was necessary for the Government to handle the matter with extreme care, and suggesting that Marshal Wu should quietly await the outcome of further negotiations.

The "Chingpao," which is sympathetic towards the Russians, says that Marshals Chi Hsieh-yuan and Hsiao Yao-nan and Dr. C. C. Wang have telegraphed to Dr. C. T. Wang urging him not to be downhearted over the outcome of the negotiations.

Semi-officially it is reported that Premier Sun will entertain members of both Houses of Parliament this afternoon, when he will give them a lengthy explanation of the Government's attitude towards Russia and the proposed agreement.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

WU PEI-FU ABOUT TO INVADE SHENSI

Rival Tuchun Secretly Plotting Against Him and Must Be Removed

From Rodney Gilbert.

Peking, Apr. 2.

It is reported here, on reliable official authority, that Marshal Wu Pei-fu is concentrating troops on the Honan-Shensi border at Tungkuan under the commander of the 20th Division, with the object of invading Shensi and ejecting Tuchun Liu Chen-hua.

According to the gossip in Honan Marshal Wu Pei-fu has discovered that the Shensi Tuchun is secretly negotiating with his, Wu Pei-fu's, enemies against Loyang; accordingly, upon Loyang's report, Peking has prepared a mandate removing the present Tuchun and appointing a successor, while Wu Pei-fu, anticipating resistance from the Shensi man, is preparing for an invasion.

Peking, Mar. 30.—A mandate was issued last night appointing Gen. Yuan Tsu-ming Tupan of Frontier Defence on the Szechuan-Kueichow border.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

NORTHERN CAMPAIGN AGAINST CANTON

Expedition Indefinitely Postponed: Changing Conditions in Fukien

Peking, Mar. 28.

According to unofficial Chinese reports the proposed expedition to Canton has been indefinitely postponed.

Gen. Ma Chi, who recently made a visit to the Hunan-Kuangsi border, has returned and is now at Loyang. Gen. Lu Yung-ting is said to have sent a second telegram to the Government declining the post of Tuli of Kuangsi. It is believed that the attitude of Gen. Lu Yung-ting contributed to weaken the adherence of Gen. Shen Hung-ying to the North. Foreign telegrams from Fukien also indicate changing conditions. Gen. Tsang Chi-ping's forces have occupied Tunganhsien and negotiations are in progress between Gen. Tsang and Gen. Wang Yi at Chuanchow with the object of their reaching an understanding. Gen. Chou Yin-jen's troops have reached Hsinhua in pursuit of Gen. Wang Yung-chuan, who recently fled from Foochow. Gen. Wang, however, got away before the arrival of the hostile troops and fled to Shanghai, where he is endeavouring to get into touch with Little Hsu with a view to concerted action between Generals Tsang, Lu Yung-hsiang and himself.

In Szechuan the position of the Northern forces is reported to be improving. Gen. Lai Hsin-huai, former follower of Gen. Hsiong Keh-wu, has come over to the northern side by joining Gen. Yang San. This has weakened Gen. Hsiong and Tan Mao-hsin to such an extent that their counter-attack is not likely to be carried out.

Gen. Yuan Tsu-ming, the Kueichow leader who was requested to remain in Szechuan owing to the growing strength of the Szechuanese, has replied with a request for funds and ammunition. He reports that he has now 25,000 men and desires to recruit an additional 5,000 in order to form three complete divisions.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

TRADE MARKS BUREAU

Private Agency's Advertisement Repudiated by Ministry of Commerce

Peking, March 28.

The Trademarks Bureau requests Reuter's Agency to circulate the following:—

"Notice is hereby given that the establishment of an agency for the registration of trademarks as advertised by one Hsiung Chai has not been approved by the Ministry of Commerce. As such false advertisement might lead to deception and fraud and produce mischievous consequences, the public, both foreigners and Chinese, are hereby notified that the Ministry of Commerce has never approved such an establishment as the one described above."—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Peking, Mar. 28.—A Chihling Mandate issued to-day appoints Dr. W. W. Yen to represent the President at the tree-planting ceremony inside the Temple of Heaven grounds on April 5.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Hankow, April 1.—Advices from Chungking report that the troops under the command of Hsiong Keh-wu and Tao Mo-hsin have advanced to a point 40 li from Chungking and that Chungking is now in a dangerous position.—Eastern News Agency.

Peking, Mar. 28.—Gen. Chow Hung-ti, Commander-in-chief in Hunan, whose temporizing policy seems likely to get him into trouble with Marshal Wu Pei-fu has sent another delegate (Gen. Tsou Ti) to Peking to explain the difficulties connected with cancellation of Hunan's autonomy.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

LEADING ARTICLES

The North-China Herald
Published every Saturday evening.
PREPAID SUBSCRIPTION
(INCLUDING DELIVERY):
Shanghai ... ... Tls. 12 per annum
Other parts of China „ 13 „

All communications should be addressed to the Secretary, NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS & HERALD LD., to whom all remittances should be made payable.

THE OLD SCHOLAR & THE NEW

Mar. 31.

MANY of our readers must have read with much pleasure the delightful article on the True Scholar by Dr. Ku Hung-ming which we published in a recent number. In it the Chinese scholar of the old type, with his love of learning for learning's sake and his dislike of the glare of publicity, was contrasted, much to the latter's disadvantage, with his successor of the present generation who loves parades and slogans and noisy tea meetings. Dr. Ku quoted Confucius as his authority for his ideal, but the phraseology of the English Bible peeped out now and then in his rhythmic prose, proving that the ideal scholar—and his opposing type—is a universal and not a national character. Dr. Ku would surely approve Austin Dobson's description of the beau idéal English gentleman of leisure and of letters:—

It may be that he could not count
The sires and sons to Jesse's fount
He liked the Sermon on the Mount
And more, he read it.

For the struggle between the new and the old is as ancient as the world itself. It is Yin and Yang, Ormuzd and Abriman, Light and Darkness, hoary age and debonair youth: it is always a drawn battle and is renewed in every clime with every new generation. For more than two thousand years the victory lay with the old in the unchanging East. China was an old man's paradise, but now youth is clamorously asserting itself and Dr. Ku sings the swan song of the dignified literati who are fading into forgetfulness.

It is true that those old scholars of China were wonderful men. They were men of letters to their finger tips, often pedants and sometimes learned fools, but on occasion they came forth from their retirement and proved themselves men of war as well as students. It is now sixty years since the Taiping army spread terror and desolation throughout the larger part of the Chinese Empire, but there are still old men living who recall the extremity of distress the country was in when the Emperor Hsien Feng summoned Tseng Kuo-fan from his study to lead the Imperial troops. Tseng and his lieutenants, Tso Chung-tang and Li Hung-chang, were as remarkable a trio as any nation can show. They were first of all scholars but, just as Cromwell turned his Generals into Admirals, so the Emperor turned his best scholars into Generals and they justified his belief in their powers. Tseng Kuo-fan was a scholar, a philosopher, the author of more than a hundred volumes of literature and a great soldier. Tso Chung-tang fought first in the Yangtze valley against the Taipings. He was then sent to put down the Mohammedan rebellion in Shensi and Kansu and finally reconquered Chinese Turkestan; a feat scarcely surpassed by the exploits of Clive in India. Li Hung-chang won his spurs as a soldier and his fame as a diplomat is too recent to bear recounting here. The kind of literature which produced men of action of this type does not require an apology. It has passed away but it well deserved the panegyric which Dr. Ku sings in its praise.

And yet we shall have to admit that, taken as a whole, the old learning failed and failed utterly. It made scholars and gentlemen of its devotees, but it also made them bigots and conservatives. The outstanding examples of success which we have given above only succeeded because they were matched against enemies more backward than they were themselves. When they came into conflict with modern nations they were invariably worsted in the field though they often regained in the council chamber what had been lost in battle. The truth is, the world had moved since the days of Confucius and the old scholar was a survival of the unfit. Unable to adjust himself to the new environment there was nothing left for him but to vanish away. We may regret his picturesque robe and his old world courtesy, but we must recollect too that the land suffered from flood and famine under his régime. That disease swept the country and the many toiled in ignorance and poverty to make the few cultured and happy. The True Scholar lived in his ideals, but this is a world of realities and the most beautiful ideals are not helpful but hurtful unless they are to be translated into the facts of life. The new scholar may sometimes be an objectionable person, but there is no necessity why he should be so. At any rate he looks forward to a better future and not backward to a vanished past. His outlook is world wide and is not bounded by the well built by Tsin Shih Hwang-ti. It would surely be the negation of civilization if we had to admit that all that modern education has done for the Chinese has been to turn them into prigs. There is abundance of froth on the surface, but there is also an under stratum of real progress. The apparent retrograde movement is merely the illusion of a stationary observer who watches a moving body and transfers the sensation of motion to his own person.

THE MUNICIPAL BUDGET

Apr. 1.

IN accordance with the policy founded last year, of getting the estimates into ratepayers' hands as far in advance of the annual meeting as possible, the Budget was issued yesterday. It contemplates an ordinary income for the coming year of Tls. 8,224,720, not quite a million taels more than in 1923, and an ordinary expenditure less than revenue by Tls. 295,420, which is to be carried to extraordinary income. It is proposed to raise Tls. 5,000,000 by borrowing (one million less than last year) and, with the addition of debentures issued between January 1 and February 5 this year and miscellaneous receipts, the extraordinary income amounts to Tls. 5,450,200. Of this the Electricity Department gets a million taels (as against three millions last year) and the deficit brought forward from 1923 eats up no less than Tls. 712,590. The estimated deficit was Tls. 142,450. We must wait for the report on last year's expenditure to see how this considerable discrepancy between estimates and facts is made up. So large as the interests and occupations of Shanghai have become it is difficult to foresee exactly how much money will be needed. But an excess of nearly six lakhs over expenditure authorized tends to make the vote of the ratepayers' meeting slightly ridiculous and calls for attention.

Under the heading of extraordinary expenditure this year we find a trifle of Tls. 8,200 to pay for the completion of the reconstruction of Thibet Road bridge and Tls. 115,000 to finish off that at Honan Road, which should be open for traffic next August. The appropriation for drainage, at Tls. 139,200 is some fifty-four thousand taels less than the figure proposed by the Commissioner of Public Works who "regarded it as highly important that the programme of work should allow for the provision of proper drainage at a much earlier stage of property and road development than had been the practice in the past, with a view to the prevention of unsanitary conditions and to minimizing the interruption to thoroughfares." As regards the last mentioned consideration we are in hearty agreement with the Commissioner. At the present time, North Szechuen Road Extension is "up" for tramway repairs and we think we are right in saying that Dixwell Road is "up" too, thus badly hampering communication with the Hongkew Park end. Now the Public Works Department is often unfairly blamed for the digging up of roads, when the real cause is to be found in the perpetual difficulty of making budget appropriations square with necessities not to be ignored. But the resulting inconvenience to the public is the same, and we cannot but think that by looking farther ahead, in respect of financial provision, the continual disturbance of main thoroughfares, which is noted with so much general irritation, might be avoided. By such a policy too, it would be possible to give due notice to public utility companies and the Electricity Department that such and such a road would be shut to traffic at a certain time and no further interference with it would be permitted for, say, two years.

The estimates of ordinary expenditure are in some respects more interesting than those for extraordinary. The Health Department this year will require Tls. 122,170 more than in 1923, owing to the appointment of a radiologist and an additional pharmacist and an increase in the numbers of sanitary inspectors and overseers. The Police Force estimates are increased by Tls. 220,470: it is proposed to bring out 35 more recruits from Home and to increase locally engaged Russian constables to twenty. Considering the increasing needs of both these departments, the addition to their strength cannot be considered unreasonable. Traffic control alone must absorb a very large number of constables and it is to be remembered that the Health Department does a great deal, gratis, for ratepayers, in the way of analysis, etc., for which elsewhere they would have to pay private laboratories. On the other hand, the allusions to "increases of pay automatically due under the fixed scales" will probably attract criticism—though not of one department more than another. The subject is one rather delicate to touch upon, inasmuch as the labourer is certainly worthy of his hire. But it is also one on which ratepayers are sensitive, not finding that, in their own case, there is any automatic increase on a fixed scale. What they cannot help thinking is that a certain amount should be allotted for salaries and that promotions or increases in lower ranks should be balanced by retirements in the upper, so that the total expenditure year by year should show no marked alteration. Two years ago the ratepayers threw out the Salaries Commission's report: since then the Council's revenue has increased by nearly two millions, and we seem to hear critics saying that it looks rather as if the Commission's recommendations, although rejected by ratepayers, had none the less been met out of the additional revenue.

THE DUTY ON CHINA TEA

Apr. 2.

Now that the House of Commons is shortly to discuss the first Budget of the Labour Government an opportunity presents itself to draw attention to and press for the abolition of a serious anomaly in the fiscal system of the United Kingdom. We refer to the preferential duty in favour of Ceylon and Indian teas imported into the United Kingdom. During the war, for revenue purposes, the duty on tea was raised from five pence to one shilling a pound. Later at a conference of the Allies and the Dominions in Paris the so-called Paris resolutions were passed and the principal of Imperial preference was affirmed. The Government found it was one thing to affirm the principle of Imperial preference, but quite another thing to carry it out effectively. We do not propose to discuss this thorny question but simply to point out that rightly or wrongly the electorate has since decided that Imperial preference is not a practical possibility. After the Paris resolutions, however, the Government were committed to it. It was manifestly impossible to introduce a highly contentious measure carrying out the spirit of the resolutions so they decided to save their face by carrying out in some small measure the letter of the resolutions. In looking round for some corpus vile on which to experiment, they unfortunately hit upon tea as being an article on which a preference could be established with the least contention and the least disorganization to the trade of the country. In point of fact they could hardly have chosen anything which required a preference less. Nevertheless the duty on British-grown tea was reduced from one shilling to ten pence per pound and later, when the general duty on tea was reduced to eight pence, British-grown tea was admitted at six pence per pound, at which figure it now stands.

It is difficult to see what good has resulted from this measure. A preference has been established on an article so firmly rooted in the public taste as not to need it, in favour of a country whose whole fiscal policy in recent years has been increasingly directed towards imposing import duties to protect its industries from imported English manufactures, while imports into England from China, a country into which the manufactures of all nations enter on equal terms, are penalized to the extent of a penny-three-farthings per pound. The strictest Protectionist now admits that a country's imports can only be paid for by its exports and it seems a pity to handicap China's purchasing powers in England by legislation against her produce.

There is another aspect to the case, which is very important. The preference in favour of British-grown tea has had a very serious effect on the re-export trade in London. Before the preference was imposed, most of Europe's tea buying was done in London, because, broadly speaking, being a free market, it was the cheapest one. The imposition of the preference has undoubtedly caused the other consuming countries to obtain more and more of their requirements direct and London is rapidly losing a very valuable trade. Teas were shipped in quantity from China to London to meet the re-export demand, the merchant well knowing that, if he missed this relatively small and fluctuating market, his cargo could be sold for home consumption in free competition with British-grown tea. Now such consignments are getting smaller and smaller, and London and British merchants in China are losing all the profit on handling them.

In view of the present favourable circumstances for securing the abolition of this preference, which nobody really wants, it would appear excellent policy for the Chinese through their Minister in London to press for its abolition and our British Chamber of Commerce should also make its views known to the Home Government. We understand that a fund is being raised in London by a leading broker there, ninety per cent. of whose business is in British-grown tea, for the purpose of propaganda in favour of abolition of the preference, and with combined action on the part of everybody interested it should be possible to create a favourable atmosphere in the House for its removal.

THE COMING GERMAN ELECTIONS

Apr. 3.

THE news that the People's Party has placed in the forefront of its programme the establishment of a democratic monarchy invests the forthcoming German elections with a special importance. The monarchical movement has never died out in Germany although sections of the country have gone Communist and the ex-Kaiser and his son have alienated the sympathy of a large part of the people. Among the officer caste it has remained as strong as ever, and the same appears to aristocratic circles, and it has long been known that only a favourable opportunity was awaited to create anew a German Kaiser. This must not be confused with monarchical movements in Bavaria, which are not connected with the restoration of the Wittelsbach family to the throne of Bavaria and have nothing to do with the German Reich as a whole. The German monarchists centred themselves in the National Party which may be described as the extreme Right wing of the German political structure. Next in order to them come the People's Party which under Herr Stresemann has now for the first time declared itself in favour of a monarchy, and it is this fact that gives such a great significance to the approaching contest. It indicates a strengthening of the royalist sentiment throughout the country and gives a clear issue to the electorate on a subject which, although it has been in the background during the post-war years, was recognized as bound to be an inevitable feature of German politics sooner or later.

We have noted that the two parties on the Right are the National and People's Parties, and in studying this present development due heed must be paid to the position of the other groups. Next comes the Centre—the Catholic Party—and then in order to the Left are the Democrats, Socialists and Communists. When, as in the present case, a matter of great national importance has to be decided, a political machine having so many component parts is not the best suited for arriving at a decision. Owing, however, to the trend of events in [illegible] not so disadvantageous as might at first sight appear, for there is a steady movement away from the parties closest to the Centre and the electors are gravitating towards the wings. In the circumstances it is not improbable that the People's Party may find itself greatly strengthened at the election, and if so we may be on the eve of certain interesting if not exciting events. For the purpose of arriving at a democratic monarchy nothing seems more natural than an alliance between the People's and National Parties, for although composed of the military and aristocratic sections the National Party's aim to-day is all in the direction of a constitutional monarchy. There is no desire to create a monarch possessing the powers of the former Kaisers—that is realized as being altogether too dangerous while probably impossible in Germany to-day—and it is believed that the British throne is the model which has been adopted.

As yet there is no information whether the democratic monarchy is an immediate or only tentative proposal of the People's Party, but at any rate it is of some interest to consider how certain people in Germany would stand in the event of its succeeding. There were four kings in Germany up to 1918, these being of Prussia, Bavaria, Wurtemburg and Saxony. The King of Prussia was also the German Kaiser and held a host of other offices as well. He is now in Holland. Ludwig of Bavaria is dead, while the other two have retired to their estates and are apparently living the lives of private individuals, keeping up little if any claim to royalty. So apparently is the ex-Kaiser's heir, the Crown Prince as we used to know him, who has kept remarkably quiet since leaving Holland and rejoining his family in Silesia. Ludwig of Bavaria's heir, Prince Rupprecht, seems to be an outstanding one among the representatives of these four houses in that he still prefers to be known as "His Highness." The impression is that if the monarchical movement succeeds it will be used in favour of a Hohenzollern, but that the ex-Crown Prince will be passed over in favour of one of his sons, and none of the others will come into the picture at all. Even so, the question then comes up whether they will once more assume the dignity of a throne. It may be so, and if such proves to be the case, it will possibly be on a larger scale than before. Formerly the German Reich was composed of something like twenty-five different states, but to-day there is a movement to eliminate the smaller divisions, and we might see the Reich split up into no more than half a dozen different compartments, such as Prussia, Bavaria, Saxony, Baden, Mecklenburg and Thuringia. For these, where no king exists a grand-duke would always be found.

SHEEP WITHOUT SHEPHERDS

Apr. 4.

The Chinese religious processions, picturesque and sometimes weird, so often encountered in the streets of Shanghai, and the ceremonies attending marriages and funerals, are generally regarded by foreigners with an amused interest, perhaps mingled with a feeling of complacency on their freedom from superstition in every shape and form. But to the Chinese it is all very real; it is an expression of their desire to escape the misfortunes of life by placating innumerable ghosts and demons, and to obtain health, wealth and posterity, a good old age and other reputed blessings. After all, the Chinese are not singular in desiring to be in right relations with their environment both in this world and in the other. To believe that this has been fairly well accomplished gives an anchorage that steadies in the storms and vicissitudes of life. Without an anchorage of some kind, individuals are apt to drift, not knowing whither they are going, and this may be said also of nations.

It is rather strange that in the discussion of Chinese affairs so little has been said concerning the effect of the overthrow of the monarchy in 1910 upon the inner life of the people. As the Son of Heaven, a semi-divine personage, the Emperor held a unique position in popular estimation because of the extraordinary, supernatural powers he was supposed to wield. He offered the national prayers and sacrifices at the annual State services and on such great occasions as a victory in war, or a calamitous visitation: he invoked the great spirits of earth and heaven to administer the forces of nature for the general benefit of the country; he was accredited with power over hosts of minor deities to whom he referred in state papers as if they were highly respectable State officials of a superior order, whose duty it was to support law, order, and morality, and to assist, promptly and efficaciously, in preventing or combating such calamities as floods, famine, or pestilence; he distributed posthumous honours and appointments, sometimes promoting the spirits of deceased notables to the rank of divinity; by the regular public worship of his own ancestors he strengthened the reverence or worship paid by the Chinese people to their dead, and this in turn strengthened their belief that his power was great in the invisible world as well as here. In short, he stood between the people and their ghostly enemies, warding off misfortune, and he obtained for them the help and protection of the more friendly deities and spirits. In accord with his exalted powers and functions he lived as a sacred personage, making public announcement at intervals of majestic ordinances, and was only occasionally seen in public when he officiated at high altars in the performance of some stately ceremonial. To the common people it must have seemed that between him and his ministers on the one hand, and the gods of heaven and earth on the other, there was little or no difference of kind and not much of degree. Now all is changed. He is dethroned and can be no longer accredited with the vast spiritual powers which it was believed he exercised for the happiness and prosperity of his people. Sic transit gloria mundi.

The religious beliefs of a people, whether true or not, cannot be suddenly undermined without producing disastrous effects. It is quite possible that the present political corruption and general lawlessness is very largely due to the disintegration of the State religion caused by the Emperor's retirement and the abandonment of all his public religious functions. Going further afield, perhaps the frightful barbarities of the revolution in Russia were due to similar causes, as there also the head of the State, the Tsar, was the chief representative of religion to the vast majority of the people. The recent deposition of the Caliph, the religious head of the Mohammedans, may have a very disturbing influence upon the communities of this religion throughout the world. As the Chinese number 440 millions, the Russians over 130 millions, and the Mohammedans 220 millions, about half the population of the world is in a state of religious confusion. Thrones, principalities dominions, powers, in the religious as well as the political world, are everywhere being shaken. The outlook is extraordinarily interesting.

THE NIBBLING AWAY OF TREATIES

Apr. 5.

This week we have been informed that Dr. Sun Yat-sen has begun fighting again with General Chen Chiung-ming on the East River and that the Tuchun of Shensi has been plotting against Marshal Wu Pei-fu, who is making ready to invade Shensi and oust him. A few days ago one of readers contributed a violent denunciation of Dr. Sun, in our correspondence columns, asking if any mortal, Dr. Sun himself included, could say what he was fighting about and what conceivable good he might hope to produce in compensation for the immense misery which his fighting had brought upon his fellow-countrymen. Dr. Sun has explained that he has no personal antagonism to General Chen and is merely fighting him as the agent of Marshal Wu. But that is obviously no answer to the question unless we know what Wu has been doing and whether he deserves to be treated as a common pariah. Quite possibly he does. His proposed invasion of Shensi, for example, appears to need some more convincing explanation than that he does not like the Tuchun of that province. But if we begin to look for the explanation of inter-provincial rivalries, we are soon lost in an utter maze of intrigue and mutual denunciation, stretching back and back for years, of which foreigners have long since utterly lost the clue.

And if the provincial leaders insist on fighting each other and their countrymen are so chicken-hearted as to submit to the inconvenience unprotesting, it is not the foreigner's business to say them nay. What is the foreigner's business is that the breakdown of all centralized government and complete independence of the provinces, each going its own way as it pleases, has brought about a gradual whittling away of the treaties which, unless stern measures are taken, will very soon virtually have ceased to exist. The worst offender in this respect is Chêkiang, and this is the more regrettable in that Chêkiang is certainly one of the three best-governed provinces in China. But in her lawless disregard of treaties she is giving a lead to all other provinces. She has declared independence of Peking, professes herself unbound by treaties that, Peking has signed and claims the right to impose taxation as she pleases. Transit passes are practically ignored in Chêkiang and all classes of goods are subjected to heavy and irregular duties. The twenty per cent. tax on cigarettes has attracted most attention, not because it is a heavier charge than that imposed on other goods, but because more is known about the movement of such things as tobacco, sugar and oil than of other commodities. But they are being taxed in precisely the same way and it is always those people who can bear it least who are hit worst. The big distributing companies can to some extent look after themselves and carry on. The smaller firms are very likely unconscious of what is affecting their business: they know only that it is falling off and that the up-country buyer will hardly take one or two cases or bales of goods where once he would take a dozen. Illegal and excessive taxation is the cause.

In many other ways Chêkiang is deliberately challenging the treaties. Her officials boast that nobody can touch them and they make no secret of the fact that they do not want the concessions promised at the Washington Conference to come into force, because they would restrict the province's freedom to do as she pleases with foreign trade. A curious parallel may be found in Canton's demand after the Chino-Japanese War, that Japan should return her ships, because Canton was not concerned in the war, which was purely Peking's affair. But in those days there was an organized framework of Government, through which the capital could impose its will on the provinces. Now there is none. Peking promises that bandits shall be suppressed and foreigners' lives and property respected. Neither promise is kept, and even in provinces which have not declared their independence, which are nominally on Peking's side of the hedge, contempt for national obligations flourishes unchecked. Our Liuchow correspondent, for example, reports to-day that a launch journey which used to take three days may now occupy eighteen because of the multiplication of tax-offices and the corresponding growth of smuggling. Probably native trade is as yet more affected in this way than foreign. But there is no doubt that other provinces are watching the behaviour of Chêkiang and will copy her example if no retribution befall. And already the list of claims filed in Peking on account of taxes illegally levied on goods moving under transit pass is very large.

The point has been reached at which half measures will not avail. If the evil is to be checked, it must be dealt with unflinchingly; and if it is not dealt with at once, it will spread throughout China with absolutely fatal effect. It is necessary to make a public example of Chêkiang and, inasmuch as Peking still professes to have a regard for treaties, the Legations would be perfectly justified in assisting Peking to maintain them. To this end they might begin by recognizing Chêkiang's declaration of independence and invite the Chinese Government to recognize it too, for all purpose of Customs' collection. All Chêkiang produce leaving the province for other provinces or for Shanghai should be treated as coming from a foreign country and taxed accordingly, exception only being made in respect of staple foodstuffs, meat, fish, poultry, and the like. Simultaneously a blockade on all telegrams into and out of Chêkiang might be urged, a course which had a great effect a few years ago in calming the hotheads of Canton. Chekiang must be taught that independence has its pains as well as its perquisites. She cannot be allowed to enjoy the treaty privileges of a province of China whilst ignoring the corresponding privileges of those who do business within her borders.

And as regards the mass of claims accumulating against the Chinese Government, claims in respect of the looting of Ichang three years ago, of Lincheng, of many bandit outrages and of illegal taxation in the provinces, we would urge that the Diplomatic Body should insist on the Customs surplus being devoted to their satisfaction before being used for the service of the domestic loans. At the end of 1922 that very threat was made, at the time when Peking appeared likely to take the surplus out of Sir Francis Aglen's hands for its own spending, and the clamour raised by the Chinese banks showed how very powerful a lever there is to the Diplomatic Body's hand in this direction. In 1922 the chief preoccupation was to supply security for unsecured loans; of which it may be said that people who lend money to China without being sure of how it is to be repaid are not entitled to any sympathy. The claims mentioned at the beginning of this paragraph are quite otherwise. Just in themselves, they are furthermore synonymous for a reasonable demand that the treaties shall be respected and that the insidious nibbling at them, now of every-day occurrence and in every direction, shall be put a stop to once and for all.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

M. Poincare

Even those who do not at all "hold with" Mr. Poincaré should approve his continuance as Premier. The issue on which he was defeated in the Chamber last week was really only "a snap vote" as it is called at Westminster, which means nothing. And as matters stand now in the Ruhr it is perhaps really better that there should at present be no change in the management of French policy. When action has to be taken on the latest report of the Allied experts on reparations it will certainly be as well that there should be in France a Prime Minister familiar with everything that has occurred. And the same feeling applies in respect of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's overtures for a better understanding between France and Britain. As regards the occupation of the Ruhr, it is rather curious that we have has so little news from that region latterly and the little we have had indicates that passive resistance is really broken down and that the French are getting the coal out. One does not suggest that that is the solution of reparations or that it is at all a good thing for the French occupation to continue indefinitely. But if M. Poincaré's policy is at all succeeding, he will probably be more amenable to adjustment, in common with Great Britain, than any successor.

Sir Charles Stanford

It may be that, to the modern school, the name of Sir Charles Villiers Stanford, whose death is announced to-day, means little but as that of a musician who clung to the now apparently discredited notion that art is intended to please and that music should have a tune. But to some others that name is associated with some very beautiful and inspiring music. Sir Charles Stanford was an Irishman and some of the finest work he did was undoubtedly his setting of old Irish melodies. He was also for many years an organist—first at Queen's College, Cambridge, where he had been a classical scholar, and then from 1872 to 1893 at Trinity—and no mention of his life would be complete without including his great contributions to church music. In this respect his taste was too operatic for some, but it seems ultra-puritan to cavil at the brilliance of his melody and its rich harmonization. Such a work, for example, as the "Te Deum" in "B" flat often performed in Holy Trinity Cathedral is a miracle of triumphant splendour. For many years Sir Charles Stanford dominated music in that great centre of the musical world, Cambridge, and under his régime it used to be said that the most difficult degree to get was that of Mus. Doc. Cantab. He was a man of amazing musical learning and with such others as Parratt, Mann and Bridge made up a cohort of which the great English school of sacred and classical music has indeed cause to be proud.

The Trademark Bureau

The account of the inefficiency already displayed by the Trademark Bureau established under the new Chinese Law, which appears to-day on another page of this issue, is worth studying. The Japanese firm of Suzuki registered, last November, a powder sauce "Vi Tsing," over which they are able to show rights in the Far East extending back for 10 years. Now come the Tienchu Manufacturing Co., claiming that "Vi Tsing" is one of their products and that they had registered the words as their trademark before Suzuki did. It appears that "Vi Tsing" simply means sauce of some kind, and that the Trademark Law does not permit the mere name of a commodity (say, tooth powder, or bath soap) to be registered as a trademark. Hence the Bureau is convicted either of having broken its own regulations, or of having allowed Suzuki to register a mark which had already been registered by some one else. It is important to notice that in this case the Chinese firm is quite as much dissatisfied with the Bureau's conduct as is the Japanese. So no doubt will it happen frequently. In this connexion, it is worth recalling that trademarks were originally invented for the protection of customers so that they might know what they were buying, not for that of the dealer. Under the new Trademark Law the only protection apparently likely to be enjoyed will be that of the syndicate which has bought the monopoly of having all registrations passed through its hands.

Claims on Russia

According to a Riga telegram to-day, Zinovieff, the arch-Bolshevist, announces that Great Britain has sent in claims to Russia of Gold Rls. 10,390,000,000 (say, roughly, 500 million pounds), not counting interest due on loans since 1915. Zinovieff is not, in all probability, a very trustworthy informant on matters of this kind, because the extreme nature of his political creed would probably cause him to say the worst of Great Britain that he possibly could, whether true or untrue. However, considering the large British property that was seized by the Bolshevists in 1917, the claims made are likely to be big. And now arise two interesting points. First of all, what Russia wants abroad is credit: recognition without it is a very empty honour. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald may recognize the de jure rights of the Soviet twenty times over: but unless the Soviet responds by recognizing the de jure and de facto rights of British property owners in Russia, it is not going to get one penny's worth of credit from British banks. Whether it puts in counter-claims for damages from "White" assaults or not is beside the question. If it wishes to get goods or money in England, it must first give back what it stole from Englishmen. But if it makes restitution to foreign property-owners, what is going to be its attitude to dispossessed Russians? It cannot very well be less conciliatory to them than to foreigners—at least, if it is, the latter will not find Russia a very healthy country to live in, nor, we imagine, will the Soviet. Altogether to seek recognition and the fruits thereof, without being prepared to pay for them, is a futile proceeding.

U. S. Immigration Anomaly

The "quota" system of immigration into the United States of America, which already has been responsible for much discussion and contention, disappointment and heart-rending, has taken on an entirely new aspect—an aspect that bids fair to have far-reaching results, by reason of two legal judgments in cases that seem destined to become famous. They are known as the "Gottleib" and "Markaran" decisions. Gottleib was a rabbi who was exempt from the quota because he was (and presumably still is) a minister. He claimed exemption for his wife on the grounds that the quota law does not supplant but is merely an addition to the Immigration Act of 1917 which grants exemptions for persons from the Asiatic barred zone, such as teachers, students, ministers, and their wives and minor children. The Federal Court upheld this contention and Gottleib and his wife were admitted. This case established a precedent and shortly afterward an Armenian named Markaran was admitted to the United States before his national quota was exhausted. Later, he sailed abroad, married and brought his wife back after the quota was exhausted. He claimed exemption as a returning alien and demanded admission for his wife, basing his claim on the Gottleib case, and won his point. Now, it is stated, thousands of Latins and Slavs in the U. S. are bringing their wives and children to that country from Europe and the steamship companies are taking advantage of the loophole in the law and are freely transporting them. The immigration authorities have accepted the situation and are helpless to prevent the rush unless and until the U. S. Supreme Court, to which the matter has been carried, reverses the Gottleib decision. It certainly appears that the U. S. legal authorities have been caught napping (may be they were too busy on the Teapot Dome business), and that the steamship companies are making hay while the sun shines, and making it—as an American contemporary puts it so delightfully—"from the grass growing under the feet of the immigration authorities."

The Cigarette Tax

The account received to-day from a Chinese correspondent of the failure of the cigarette tax in the Shanghai district is particularly interesting to this paper, because, when the antagonism was first manifested, and apparently with success, we commented upon it as an example of the force which any body of Chinese opinion can exert if it really means to do so. Since then statements by Chinese newspapers have seemed to indicate that the opposition had failed. Our contributor shows exactly what these statements were worth. The tax chief has forced licences on some unimportant salesmen, too weak to defend themselves; but in the main it is clear that the imposition of the tax is a failure. More than that, it is a failure in other provinces, notably in Hupeh, where the farmers have lost $80,000 by it. Significant is the evidence given that the pretext of providing funds for education is a mere blind for the usual squeeze. Our contributor admittedly takes an ex parte view of the case, being himself a tobacco merchant. But that in no way affects the force of his arguments or the importance of the movement. On the contrary, nothing could be more desirable than that Chinese merchants generally should realize what official rapacity means and be encouraged to voice their feeling as loudly as possible.

The Press By-law

This week's Municipal Gazette duly announces the special meeting of ratepayers, to be held together with the ordinary annual meeting, and on the agenda appears, once more, the famous Press By-law. The wording has, we think, been revised, though we confess that we have not taken the trouble to look up all the occasions during the past nine years on which this famous old bone has been worried and snorted over by self-constituted guardians of public right. In its present form it appears as unequivocal as any law can be. It simply says that anybody who wants to carry on the business of printer or publisher and fails, first of all to register his name and address with his consul or the Council and further fails to put that name and address on everything he prints or publishes, shall be liable to certain penalties. At one time, the Chinese printers got hold of the idea that the by-law would compel them to submit everything they published to the police. The fault was, perhaps, less theirs than that of unscrupulous agitators, some of foreign nationality. At any rate the present form of the by-law should allow of no possible misunderstanding and as it is unquestionably most necessary for the cause of good order in the Settlement, one hopes it may go through at last.

British Finance

The statement of national accounts as summarized in to-day's telegrams is surely one on which all British citizens may look with pride. The surplus of £48,000,000 is less than that realized during 1922, namely 101½ millions. But several factors have to be considered: first, that the biggest reductions naturally come nearest to the war, when the special staffs which it entailed are being cut down; then, that there was a reduction last year in both income and corporation taxes; lastly that the surplus realized is more than 24 times Mr. Stanley Baldwin's estimate, i.e. £1,884,000. It is to be hoped we shall get some figures given us by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of the total decrease of British indebtedness since the end of the war. Whitaker gives the net decrease at the end of 1921-22 as £246,334,610. To this has to be added £101,500,000 from Mr. Baldwin's last full year of office (1922-23) and now another 88 millions, bringing the total reduction to £436,834,610. But with cost of interest and management, etc., the net reduction can hardly be as much as this. At any rate, the result is highly satisfactory, especially when it is remembered that we are regularly paying off our debt to America, notwithstanding that our Allies are not paying their debts to us, which debts were practically the sole cause of our being compelled to borrow from the United States. Much of Great Britain's financial solidity to-day is due to the sound principle followed during the war, of never raising a new loan without imposing taxation to cover it. But there also are reasons for hoping that trade conditions are to some extent beginning to revive.

Critics of China

The report of the American Chamber of Commerce which we publish to-day, long as it is, should, and we trust will, be read by all who are interested in the welfare of China, whether they be of American or other nationality. The attitude that the Chamber takes is particularly welcome. To speak quite frankly, there is a very general impression that American feeling is prone to be "sloppy" where China is concerned. The asseverations of the Young China revolutionists of 1911 that henceforward China would take the American Republic for its model, their loud claims of brotherhood, the oily half-truths of Chinese spokesmen abroad, and, it must be added, the thoughtless enthusiasm of some of the missionary body for the new régime, did an immense amount of harm in America among the warm-hearted folk, who naturally responded to the implied compliments of Young China, without pausing to reflect, indeed without any knowledge which might lead them to reflect, that Young China's aspirations might be as unrealizable as they were foreign to Chinese nature. The importance of the Chamber's report lies in its showing that, not only American businessmen in China taught by bitter experience, but also the State Department has begun to realize that republicanism in China means nothing but the breakdown of all authority, disruption, violation of treaties, insecurity of life and property, impossibility of trade. Towards China as a whole American policy has not changed its traditional sympathy. But China as a whole has virtually ceased to exist, at least it cannot be got at, nor can any concession to, or pressure upon Peking affect it in any way. The letter from Mr. Hughes, quoted in the report, is specially valuable in this respect. As we have said in these columns many times, China is not one but twenty different kingdoms: each one, though perhaps momentarily attached to another in some transient phase of internal political intrigue, claims for itself complete independence, ignores every treaty stipulation and is in no respect whatever amenable to either threats, cajoleries or pleadings from Peking. It is a mistake to suppose that any of these little autocracies cares twopence about the concessions promised by the Washington Conference. Indeed they prefer to be without them, finding that there is much more to be made out of things as they are. This is the phenomenon with which the Powers are confronted, the worse that they have been repeatedly warned of the trend of events and have persistently refused to take heed. Now at last they appear to be awakening to the truly terrible state of affairs, when, we will not say it is too late, but when the problem is infinitely harder to tackle than it would have been if resolutely faced two or three years ago, or even if the advantage had been taken of the Lincheng outrage that might have been. Nobody asks for foreign intervention in China. By all means let the Chinese work out their own political salvation as they please. But while they are doing so, let the foreign Powers insist unyieldingly on strict observance of treaty rights. No Chinese whose opinion is worth heeding will gainsay them: indeed, he will be glad, because his own business is equally concerned in these rights and stands or falls with them. We are glad to see that the American gunboats on the Yangtze are to be strengthened.

The Munich Trial

Nobody could reasonably have expected anything but an acquittal for General Ludendorff and a nominal sentence for his fellow accused at the treason trial at Munich. It was at the end of October last or the beginning of November that the movement with which Ludendorff and his fellow conspirators were concerned took place, but it was at once overshadowed by the separatist plot in the Rhineland and so interest in it vanished until the recent trial started. The Munich plot was more or less directed against Berlin and was aimed at the government of the Socialist Party. Ludendorff hoped to establish once more an imperialistic régime, and the time being as yet unripe, he made a hopeless mess of it. That being so, it may be queried whether he will ever again be in the forefront of German affairs. There are no two questions of his ability as a soldier. When under Hindenburg he assumed command in France he knew that he was in a bad strategical position, and his great push of March, 1918, was a daring effort to snatch victory in spite of it. It has been admitted by some of the highest authorities that it very nearly came off. But Ludendorff is not now in his prime, and even his German admirers feel that any outstanding enterprise is no longer within his powers, that it must be left to a younger man. His actions to-day are no longer those of the man who controlled millions with wonderful facility, but savour of the breakdown which his nerves suffered on August 8, 1918, when Haig struck the first of his hammer blows. His confidence then gave way, and it may well be that Haig spoilt him for all time.

To the North Pole by Air

Arrangements are progressing fast in connexion with Captain Amundsen's attempt to cross the North Pole by aeroplane, from Spitzbergen to Alaska, and Captain Hammer, who will accompany him, has arrived in England to complete the final preparations. According to later information the American Government is to be represested at the flight, but whether this will have any bearing on the problem as to which country is entitled to the territory around the Pole—Canada or the United States—our information does not state. Each 'plane is supplied with wireless receiving and transmitting apparatus, with a range of from 400 to 500 miles and after being tested over the lakes of Switzerland they will, some time during April, be taken to Rotterdam and shipped to Green Harbour, Spitzbergen. A 500-ton wooden steamer, especially constructed to resist ice pressure, will accompany the expedition is support as far as possible, and will be used as a base. The whole project is intensely fascinating in that it opens up vast possibilities of communication, and may add to the scanty information we possess of the Polar regions. Before the real start is made the machines will reconnoitre the first portion of the distance with the object of estimating difficulties likely to be encountered. After this they will load up with petrol and then fly northward, seeking a landing place as near the Pole as possible. Here, Amundsen intends establishing a base from which he hopes to wireless his safe arrival. The machines will then set off for Alaska. Perhaps when the journey has been completed the problem of the disputed territory will be finally settled.

News has been received in Shanghai of the proposed flight of a French airman from France to Japan. The officer in question is Lieut. Pelletier d'Oisy, and it is learned that he intends landing at Canton, Foochow, Shanghai and Peking. His machine is a 370 H. P. Lorraine Dietrich Breguet.

NEWS FROM THE OUTPORTS

FINANCE AND OPIUM IN CANTON

The Drug Monopoly to Support the Troops: Salutary Action by British Gunboat

Canton, Mar. 15.

By special order of the Department of Finance the export of Canton subsidiary coinage (20 cent pieces) above the amount of $50 will be subject to a tax of 1½ per cent. in the form of permit fees, besides a $1 stamp fee for every permit issued. Anyone contravening this order will be subject to heavy fines and the money will be confiscated. The order will be effective from March 22. In addition to this order the Department of Finance is considering the issue of stamped papers, which all native banks must use for their written transactions.

The Government Anti-Opium Bureau has claimed the monopoly of the preparation and sale of opium in Kuangtung. In Canton the drug is being sold at $5.50 to $11 an ounce, and importers of the drug are taxed 50 cents an ounce. Dr. Sun's mercenary army depends much on the sale of opium for its support, and its demands for money are endless. If they are refused, they hold the officials of the Opium Bureau responsible. Recently Mr. Wong Sze-keung, the head of the General Affairs Department of the Bureau, was held by one of the commanders in his headquarters as a prisoner until a satisfactory guarantee was given for the delivery of $50,000, which the troops were demanding from the Bureau. Mr. Wong resigned his post two days ago.

Mr. Julean Arnold, the Commercial Attaché of the American Legation at Peking, is visiting Canton. In addition to making inquiries into trade conditions, Mr. Arnold takes particular interest in the Canton Merchants' Volunteer Corps, an organization of merchants for local self-defence. Mr. Arnold has already several times visited Mr. Chan Lim-pak, a former President of the General Chamber of Commerce and present Commandant of the Corps.

Practically all the vacant buildings in Canton are now occupied by the mercenary troops. Owing to the constant threat to the safety of the inhabitants through the presence of these troops, Dr. Sun Yat-sen has ordered them to leave for the front within the next fortnight.

BRITISH SHIPPING ASSAILED.

Some Hunanese soldiers this afternoon attempted to commandeer a launch belonging to the Horgkong & South China Launch Co., which was moored at the Ching Hoi Maloo Wharf, but marines from the British river gunboat Tarantula interfered, arresting six of the soldiers. These men were only released on the request of their commander after he had tendered an apology. In order to protect British shipping interests, British gunboats have several times lately been compelled to take action without reference to the Chinese authorities in Canton waters.

General Hsu Chung-chi, who was at one time one of Dr. Sun Yat-sen's most loyal commanders, has failed to arrive in Canton from Shanghai as expected. General Hsu's corps, while greatly reduced since its defeat on the eastern front last November, is still in existence and is being sent to the south-western front.

NO MONEY, NO FIGHT.

According to a new division of spheres of influence, the Hunanese will occupy the East River districts and the Yunnanese the North River while the Cantonese and Kwangsi-ites will defend the West River. So far there is no new development in the military situation, both Dr. Sun and General Chen Chiung-ming having failed to obtain the financial support expected from their friends. Neither army shows any intention to fight unless it is first assured of money and plenty of it, too.

In addition to the several units of non-Cantonese troops in Canton, Dr. Sun has recently commissioned more corps commanders to recruit for a northern expedition against Peking.

BOLSHEVISM FAILS.

Supporters of Bolshevism have so far failed to influence the more reasonable leaders of the Kuomintang in Canton to include its political and economic principles in the recently adopted Kuomintang programme. For a time it was feared by the Cantonese that Bolshevism would be adopted here. While it is true that the Chinese Bolsheviks have made an effort to dominate the present régime, no formal action has been taken by the local authorities one way or the other, and there is good reason to believe that Dr. Sun Yat-sen will not sanction the introduction of this policy into Canton at present.

Dr. C. C. Wu, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Quo Tai-chi, Assistant Secretary, are now visiting Mukden and Tientsin on behalf of their chief on a political mission, but it appears that up to the present their negotiations have not proved satisfactory.

A PRESIDENT NOT YET.

The talk of reorganizing the present General Headquarters and making Dr. Sun "President of the Consolidated Government of China" has been dropped for the time being.

General Shen Hung-ying, the Kuangsi commander, has again come back to Dr. Sun on condition that he is appointed Commander-in-Chief in Kuangsi. Whether he will get this post is not yet certain, but there is no doubt that he is after something more substantial and valuable than the mere commission and rank.

Owing to the heavy taxation and the presence of bandit-troops along the waterways, the cost of living is still soaring in Kuangtung. Rice and fire-wood are selling at figures unheard-of in the past. Poor grade rice commands a price of $7.50 per picul and fire-wood $2.50 per picul.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Excessive Taxation Defeating Its Own Purpose

From Our Own Correspondent.

Canton, March 24.

There has been no improvement in the situation in the City during the last few weeks. There is an attempt being made to enforce discipline amongst the Hunanese troops, who are now practically the only troops in the City, and there have been many executions of miltary offenders. Last week there were two men executed on the East Parade Ground for desertion. They were first shot and afterwards had their heads cut off. A few days later another execution took place at which the criminals' heads were cut off. On this occasion the first one's head came off at the first blow of the executioner's sword, but the second one had to be hacked off as the first blow was not successful.

Strenuous attempts are being made by Gen. T'an Yin-hoi of the Hunan forces to get the finances centralized, so that all troops shall have their share of the gambling receipts. He wishes to have all the money collected remitted to the Military Expenditure Bureau for distribution so that it shall not fall into the hands of individual military commanders.

KILLING THE GOLDEN GOOSE.

The difficulty experienced by the Government in raising funds is shown by the new taxes now being put on, such as the tax on mineral waters and the luxury tax on toilet articles etc. The result is that the cost of living in Canton is going up considerably. It would appear that many of the new taxes do not bring in as much as expected, as the consumption of the taxed articles goes down and the tax fails to attain its object. For example the restaurant tax brings in very little as, owing to the unrest, people do not dare to go to the restaurants as they used to, and for the same cause the brothel tax, which is collected by one body of troops to provide their expenses, is falling off to such an extent that the commander of the troops in question is making special efforts to induce people to become reassured, by despatching troops to the quarters concerned to prevent the disorders that deter the people from going out.

The arbitrary collection of taxes by the troops is being strenuously opposed by the Government, and last week some Yunnanese troops who began to collect a tax from the boat people on the river were arrested and punished by the Generalissimo's Headquarters.

Efforts are also being made to deal with the pirates in some of the worst places and last Thursday a force under Gen. Li Fuk-lam attacked a lair near Whampoa, and after encountering a slight resistance they captured about 40 pirates and set at liberty 23 persons who were being held captive. The pirates matshed stronghold was then burnt down.

THE RUMOUR OF BOLSHEVISM.

There have been persistent rumours that operations in the East River District were about to commence, and several conferences have been held at Headquarters to discuss plans but so far no serious fighting has taken place. It is expected, however that operations will start shortly.

Owing to the persistent rumours that Bolshevism was going to be tried by the authorities here an official denial of the Government's intention to do anything of the sort was published, and at the same time it was stated that persons spreading such rumours would in future be severely dealt with.

On Saturday night last in the Canton Club Theatre a very successful performance of the well-known farce "A Little Bit of Fluff" was given. There was a very large and appreciative audience, and the Members of the Canton Amateur Theatrical Society who took part in the production are to be heartily congratulated on a very successful show.

Further Fighting in Kuangtung

Canton, Mar. 29.

The native banks intend to suspend business on March 31 as a protest against the recent Government order requiring the use of stamped paper for all transactions.

Fighting has been resumed between Gen. Chen Chiung-ming and Dr. Sun Yat-sen on the East River. Dr. Sun Yat-sen's troops claim a success.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

KIANGSI IN FEAR OF INVASION

The Expedition from Kuangtung: Rumours from Fukien: The Market Depressed

From Our Own Correspondent.

Kanchow, Ki., Mar. 20, 1924.

Northern soldiers have, for some time been vacating the district. Persistent rumours have been current that Fukien has designs upon Kiangsi, and troops from this district are being withdrawn to meet the emergency. The road now seems fairly open for Kuangtung to march upon this district without opposition, if they feel inclined. The money market has been greatly agitated. Kiangsi notes are dependent, for their stability, upon the tenure of office of the present Tuli, and the Fukien rumours have caused a big slump in these notes. Holders are disposing of them as rapidly as possible, and taking Bank of China notes in exchange.

The weather, after two months of cloud and rain, has at length cleared up.

The city is tranquil, and the movement of troops is not causing any great stir. Great inconvenience to traffic and trade is still caused by the sealing up of small craft by the military.

HUPEH TUCHUN'S BIRTHDAY GIFTS

$150,000 Spent in Entertainment: Lavish Presents of Gold, Silver and Jewels

From Our Own Correspondent.

Wuchang, March 29.

The birthday celebrations of Governor Hsiao Yao-nan passed off with great éclat and splendour. It is said that over $150,000 were spent in entertainment, and that more than 10,000 guests partook of the Governor's hospitality. Each guest brought away with him a silver medal as a memento of the occasion. Among the magnificent presents made to the Governor were a set of the "Eight Immortals" carved out of a kind of precious stone known as "Yu fan," which is said to be found only in Shantung Province, in the State of Lu where Confucius was born. Other sets of the "Eight Immortals" were given in gold and silver, and more than 1,000 congratulatory scrolls were presented. A large amount of money and food was sent to the various Hankow charitable institutions to be distributed among the poor. An umbrella with 10,000 names inscribed on it came from the barracks; and the schools presented the Governor with a portrait of himself embroidered in silk.

THE TWENTY-ONE DEMANDS.

The local branch of the "People's Foreign Relations Society" met in Hankow yesterday. It was decided that a petition shall be sent to the President of the Republic urging the withdrawal of the Twenty-One Demands, and the restitution by Japan to China of Lü Ta, as promised, by March 26. On April 1 processions are to be held in all the streets of Wuchang, Hankow, and Hanyang in order to demonstrate against foreign aggression. This is not merely a students' movement, but is shared with merchants, working-men and all classes.

NATIONAL ATHLETICS.

Preparations are already being made for the National Athletics meeting, which is to be held next May on the public sports' ground in Wuchang. It is said that over 1,000 scouts from the various local schools will patrol the field. Arrangements are being made by the Chin Wu Athletics Club for displays of Chinese boxing to be given, in some of which 500 performers will take part simultaneously.

FEMININE DARING.

Some of the leaders of the feminist movement are evidently letting their enthusiasm carry them to lengths which have disgusted the authorities; for a strict order has recently been issued in Wuchang, that girls who attend the government schools are not to cut their hair short, nor to wear long gowns like men.

RIDDING CHINKIANG OF ITS BEGGARS

Rounded up and Made to Work: Police Commissioner Who Knows His Job

From Our Own Correspondent.

Chinkiang, April 2.

Some improvements that have recently taken place in our city that we might mention are given in the order of their importance:

First, by order of the government the beggars of all descriptions have been gathered into an old temple on Liangpeng san. In this nice position above the city they can enjoy the beautiful scenery and have an abundance of fresh air, and food to eat, and the unqualified association of each other. Perhaps the only privation they are called upon to undergo is the change from their former public begging to quiet obscurity, where they pass the days in some sort of useful occupation for those who are able to work, while those who are not are fed and looked after and in a measure supported by their stronger fellows. While the scheme may be said to still be in the experimental stage, I do not think the public will allow it to fail for lack of support.

Our new Police Commissioner Liu seems to be rather of the progressive order and more public-spirited that some who have held the office before him. One of the most noticable improvements is the increasing efficiency of the local fire department. In the old days there could never be a fire close enough to the fire station for the brigade to get there in time, now there are fire stations in the different parts of the city, and fairly well equipped.

The funeral of Miss Clough of the C. I. M. in Yangchow, was held in Chinkiang to-day, under the direction of Rev. Mr. Orr of Yangchow and Mr. Hoste of the C. I. M.

MANCHURIAN RAILWAY PROBLEMS

Japanese Company's Relations with Chinese Eastern and Ussuri Railways

Harbin, Mar. 25.

Baron K. Okura, Director of the South Manchuria, Railway who is now visiting Harbin, in an interview with a representative of the "Harbin Daily News," stated that one of the most important problems facing the South Manchuria Railway was that of its relations with the Chinese Eastern and Ussuri Railways, the status of which had been altered since the original agreement between the two railways had been consummated. At that time the Chinese Eastern Railway was under control of the Ussuri Railway. Later, however, the Ussuri Railway had been made independent of the Chinese Eastern and the result was that the South Manchuria Railway had been placed at an unfair disadvantage, for the latter continued to be tied up by the agreement for the whole of the freight business between Changchun and Dairen, while the Chinese Eastern was now bound only with respect to the traffic between Harbin and Pogranichinaia, instead of that between Harbin and Vladivostok, as originally stipulated. While the arrangement was an unfavourable one for the Japanese railway, the directors of the latter felt that good faith demanded that the agreement with the Chinese Eastern be kept, in spite of the fact that the Chinese Eastern was no longer in a position to fulfil completely the terms of the agreement as originally drawn up, so long as that railway remained in the present hands.

Should, however, a change be made in respect to those controlling the Russian railway, and that railway be taken over by the Soviet authorities, the existing agreement between the Chinese Eastern and the South Manchuria Railways would be, on that same day, automatically rendered null and void, and the South Manchuria Railway would be forced to negotiate with the new interests for the purpose of arranging a new agreement. These negotiations would necessarily be carried on between the South Manchuria Railway on the one hand, and, on the other hand, the Chinese Eastern and Ussuri Railways as a whole, or in other words the interests controlling the whole railway line between Harbin and Vladivostok.

FULL UNDERSTANDING NEEDED.

Baron Okura reiterated that such an agreement could not be made with the Chinese Eastern Railway alone. While there might be troubles between the various countries, he said, there must always be good relations between the railways, which should stand together and never compete. The communications were public services, for the benefit of the people as a whole, and political considerations should not be permitted to interfere with them. The only change in the general situation that might take place could be brought about solely when an agreement between the Chinese and the Reds came about. Until that time, said the Baron, there would be peace and quiet. Should such an agreement, however, be made, the South Manchuria Railway might be forced to have recourse to competition, unless full understanding between these two concerns was definitely reached.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

HOSPITAL LOOTED IN SZECHUAN

Enemy Soldiers' Revenge: Trial of Murderers of Missionaries

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mienchow, Sze., Mar. 11.

At Tungchuan on January 28 the men's hospital of the Friends' Foreign Mission was looted. The cause was that a great enemy of the 21st Division, a Colonel Dai of the 1st, was there mortally wounded. His enemies in revenge looted all the wounded soldiers, and also stole about $100 worth of goods from the hospital stores, besides an even larger amount from the house of the nurses. This is late news; but lends probability to the report that the C. M. S. Hospital at Mienchow has also been looted just recently. The report is from Chinese sources; and we hope it is not true, but it is well known that Chinese reports have a way of turning out only too reliable, especially if it is bad news. This is not said in a pessimistic mood: soldiers have generally kept clear of hospitals, seeming to realize their indebtedness to them, and it is a regrettable indication that things seem to be getting worse instead of better.

On the other hand there is probably another reason why trouble should arise at Mienchow. That city is the place from which all the proceedings in connexion with the trial of the murderers of the two missionaries, Messrs. Watt and Whiteside have emanated. H. M. Consul-General has been very thorough in his determination to sift the matter through, and the missionaries at Mienchow have given him substantial help. This is well known to the wrongdoers, who are members of a large society in which soldiers and brigands, and even city magistrates, all seem mixed up together. One man has been removed from office on account of his determination to find out nothing; and that not on the initiation of higher Government authority. The Consul-General has a very delicate and anxious piece of work in seeking to get justice, and at the same time avoid stirring up bad feeling. There is a sort of imperium in imperio which makes it desirable that robber chiefs should be placated in their own particular spheres of influence. It is often much safer to get the permission of such a gentleman to travel rather than bother the local mandarin.

There is a greater degree of quietness about at the present time than we have had for some months. This does not mean that life is always untroubled. For instance, a schoolboy was escorting a sick companion to his home the other day. The sick one was riding a huager (chairs cannot be got), when they fell in with some soldiers. The soldiers confiscated the conveyance in the interests of the public welfare. The planks of the city bridge are removed every night to keep away night bandits.

THE APPEAL TO DEMOS

A Chinese Orator on Popular Education

From a Correspondent.

Kiukiang, Mar. 28.

On the 25th instant a big parade was held in Kiukiang to gain support for the popular education movement, the demonstration being arranged by the newly organized Popular Education Association. The parade was joined in by the whole student body of the city, from the lower primary schools to the William Nast College, and General Wu, the Defence Commissioner, sent his band to head the procession. At various points en route, students and teachers addressed the people, advocating free education for all.

The following translation of a student's speech is given for the light it throws upon the native view of education and its relation to present day social problems:—

"Well, friends, do you know what we are doing here? Are we here for the national humiliation? No. For the Labour Day? No. What we are here for is on behalf of the popular education movement which may concisely be defined as the getting rid of so-called aristocratic education and substituting therefor the education of 400 millions of people, rich and poor, giving all an equal chance of obtaining the benefits of education. That is 'popular education,' and that is what we are here for.

"Friends, do you not all see that the wealthy are able to send their sons and daughters to high schools and colleges, and send them also abroad where they may obtain the degress of B.A., M.A., Ph. D., and the like, while you poor fellows have, through poverty, fail and remain in the deep mire of ignorance! You are ignorant and illiterate not because of natural inferiority but because of our traditional system of society which has allowed you to fall into such a pitiful condition.

"Our conscience and sense of humanity encourage us to begin this movement with the genuine purpose of helping you to get education, and it is hoped that, when your eyes and minds have been opened you will then proceed to think how best you may rid yourselves of burdens and inhuman treatment you now unconsciously but reluctantly bear. Poor fellows! Rise, Rise, Rise!"

THE CIVIL WAR IN SZECHUAN

Military Conference Again Postponed: The Idea of Independence

From Our Own Correspondent.

Changsha Mar. 26, 1924.

The much talked of "Military Conference" is still postponed At first the reasons for postponement were the non-arrival of certain important Generals. Their arrival, however, has been of no help in any actual formal meeting to discuss the messages which have been received from Wu Pei-fu asking for the abolition of the status of independence and the Constitution. Of course, all the Generals here have met and have discussed their attitude again and again; but always informally; and the answer is not one which they wish to formulate in words and forward to Loyang. Gen. Ma Chi left the city last Friday, and immediate rumours went round to hint that his life was in danger. Gen. Mei arrived on Tuesday, on the Japanese boat.

Although there is no official information as to the thoughts of the military men, it is generally believed that they are very reluctant to abandon their ideas of independence. Gen. Tang is said to be even more opposed that Gen. Yeh, though both agree that Gen. Chao, having led them all to fight T'an Yen-k'ai on behalf of the Constitution, cannot abandon it at the bidding of Wu Pei-fu. What would there be to say to all their fellow-provincials who would at once ask why they fought?

We have had a long spell of wet and cloudy weather. For the last few days, the return of sunshine has been most welcome.

We are just losing Mr. and Mrs. Lowndes, of the A. P. C., whose stay in Changsha has been marked by abounding hospitality. We welcome back to the port Mr. and Mrs. Drysdale, whose interest in Changsha is assured from the fact that it was here they were married. There are other changes in the personnel of the port, including the Japanese Consul, the Harbour Master, and the staffs of the B. A. T. and B. & S.

FUNERAL OF PRINCE KWACHO

Tokio, Mar. 31.

The funeral of Prince Kwacho took place to-day in the presence of Imperial Princes, Members of the Cabinet, officials and members of the Diplomatic Corps.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Marshal Wu Pei-fu will celebrate his 50th birthday on April 10.

A GREAT RELIGIOUS FESTIVAL

Kiangsu and Chekiang On the Eve of a Remarkable Ceremony

From Our Own Correspondent.

Soochow, April 1.

On Friday, April 4, there will begin the great Shuang Yang Hui (雙陽會) and it will run for about 15 days. This Shuang (雙—double, a twin) is sometimes written Sang (桑 mulberry). This great "Hui" is held only once in every 10 years. It is purely local, and is held in five large towns in the extreme southwestern corner of Kiangsu, where Kiangsu seems to cut into Chêkiang at the southeast corner of the West Lake. The worship is carried on for three days in each of these five towns. The Shuang Yang Temple is situated between Pingmong (30 miles south of Soochow) and Chinyah, on the main canal to Huchow. The Suang Yang idol receives little notice for nine years, then in the 10th year he has the spotlight turned on. He is about human size, and during this "hui" is taken from his temple and carried by boat to these five towns, in turn, to receive his due of homage and worship. Some claim that he is the local God of Agriculture, and some claim for his "sphere of influence" the mulberry tree and the silk worm. This southern part of Kiangsu is the chief silk raising district. Many of the boats taking part in this "hui" have a small model of a water wheel (for water pumping) placed on the forward deck. Some claim that this is a part of the worship, but some say that it is merely an old custom.

MASSED HUM'NITY.

Thousands of people from southern Kiangsu and northern Chêkiang will attend this festival, and the canals will absolutely be jammed with boats of all sizes and all types. It will be something like Columbia River when the "run" of the salmon is at its height. If for no other reason than as a view of Chinese humanity en masse, this "hui" is worth seeing. There have been many conflicting reports that this festival would, and would not be held. The District Magistrate at Wukiang, and many of the leading men in these five towns were against holding this "hui," but the people as a whole were for it, and the people seem to have prevailed. Ten years ago, this "hui" was not very greatly attended, because at that time the "Republic" (?) had just been established, and idolatry was greatly discredited; but this year the festival promises to be the greatest in the history of the Shuang Yang, which runs back at least a score of centuries. Most of the Soochow houseboats are already taken, and are commanding four to five times the usual price for hire; some of the Soochow pleasure boats will charge from $20 to $30 per day during the "hui."

JAPAN'S INTELLECTUALS

Widespread Unemployment

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, March 27.

There are more unemployed "black-coats" in Japan to-day than there have ever been in the modern development of this Island Empire of the Far East, the large number of intellectuals in need of jobs being one of the direct results of the depression of business and the destruction of firms and factories that followed the September cataclysm.

With the exception of physicians, lawyers and technical experts, the remuneration intellectual workers, as a class, get is very small, often smaller than that of a skilled worker, with the result that the financial position of the unemployed intellectual workers has become precarious. This is all the more so because they have to maintain a social position of sorts and because, unlike manual labourers, they cannot readily and easily migrate to other portions of the country. The business prospects before Japan are not believed to be very roseate for some time to come, and this has plunged the unemployed intellegentsia deeper in the slough of despond.

As one means of relieving and ameliorating their position a movement has been started for forming a union of intellectual workers which, if consummated, will be the first systematic organization of intellectual workers to be formed in Japan, or for that matter, in the East.

The Press welcomes the organization of such a union and urges the authorities to give every possible assistance to those backing the movement and also to aid the venture financially, on the ground that, in the long run, unemployed intellectuals develop into the most fertile source of political and social unrest.

An orderly demonstration of unemployed intellectuals was held yesterday, a delegation from among them calling on the Premier and the Home Minister. Both officials received the delegation and pledged all reasonable aid that the Government could proffer.

JAPAN'S ARMY

Falling Off in Recruitment

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, March 27.

The Army as a career for the young men of Japan is rapidly losing the attractions it once possessed, and the military authorities are said to be much worried over the marked decrease in the number of young men eligible for conscription who have reported at the various Army depôts throughout the country. Figures compiled by recruiting officials show that there is a decrease of nearly 40,000 persons of military age in comparison whth normal years.

Opinions differ as to the cause of this decrease. Some put it down to the earthquake, but then, against this theory stands the fact that the large majority of those who perished in the seismic upheavals and disastrous conflagrations following the catastrophe of last September were women, old men and children. Further, the reduction of the number of those eligible to to conscription is greater in districts like Osaka and Kyoto, where no natural visitations came to afflict those regions, than in Tokio and Yokohama. Others believe that the conduct of the European war has been instrumental in weaning the young men of Japan away from studying the latest scientific methods of slaughter, while yet others put it all down to filthy lucre. These point out that a private's pay is only a few sen a month, ludicrously below that of the most ignorant coolie, with the result that when a person is in training, learning how to serve his Emperor and his country, he has to be subsidized by his relatives. This last reason—the absurd inelasticity of the pay envelope—is perhaps as good a reason as any of the others advanced as to why the young men of the country studiously avoid the life of a soldier.

Despite the decrease in the number of men of military age for conscription this year, the military authorities say that a more hopeful sign is that the physical condition of those examined is above the average of the last few years, due, without doubt, to the fact that young Japan is taking to outdoors sports with enthusiastic avidity. The military authorities declare that the quality they possesss this year more than makes up for the reduction in quantity.

With the object of popularizing the Army, an unprecedented innovation was recently made when boys and girls of primary schools and members of young men's and children's associations took part in military exercises staged by the Bodyguards' Division and the First Division of Tokio, two of the crackest regiments of the Imperial Japanese Army. The object, according to the military authorities, was to make the people see that the Army was theirs and did not belong to any particular clan or coterie.

In addition to sham battles there were aeronautics, parachute descents, calisthenics, demonstrations of first aid rendered on the field of battle in which little school children participated, war song singing, wrestling matches and games of hockey and rugby.

It was a fine display of military and athletic exercises and the school children present must have thoroughly enjoyed the spectacular sights.

WINTRY WEATHER IN ANHUI

Rain Necessary for Wheat Crop: Irregular Postal Service

From Our Own Correspondent.

Pochow, An., March 26.

Our spring weather has been very peculiar. March has averaged almost as cold as was January and also very dry. We have had very little rain since September and no snow at all. Unless we have rain soon the wheat crop will be very much cut short. People have all ploughing done for spring planting.

So far this spring it has been quite peaceful in all this county, but we hear frequently of slight disturbances in the Kueitehfu region. Not long ago the troops of Governor Ma stationed here became rather over free in making themselves familiar in and about our mission places, but my brother jerked off the number from one of them who was one day rather impudent to him in his own yard and turned it over to the hsien official; and the presiding military men soon sent around an apology and things have been much better since.

Our postal service has not been so regular and efficient recently, owing to the fact that the authorities seem to expect the autos to carry letter bags free as a public service, or practically without remuneration. There are four different companies operating from here to Kueitehfu railway station, and they agreed once each to carry it for a month at the time, but it did not work well and we have gone back to the foot carriers. Our former Mr. Wang was removed to another office not long ago and a Mr. To placed here. He has had 25 years in the post office work and seems very anxious to get a better system of getting the mails in and out. He talks something of getting an auto and running it mainly for the mails. Many here will be glad if this can be done.

There has been much sickness among the people—a rather peculiar cold or grip accompanied nearly always with bad throat trouble, but so far it has not been very fatal, though the after cough hangs on in an aggravating manner as the writer knows by experience.

OPIUM CULTIVATION.

We have now a most peculiar and unsatisfactory situation in the opium question. I was at Rungcheng, Honan, last week and saw many signs by the way that they were really destroying the plant in that region and every body said that it was so throughout the county, but within 18 li of this place before we struck Honan territory there is a great deal in every direction. I hear that the hsien official here has made several trips into the surrounding country market towns and "preached" to the people that it must be destroyed, but so far as I have yet heard in this county it is proving a preaching that leads not to repentance or action. It does seem an international pity and shame that there is no central authority in China to act for the nation in the removal of this awful curse from the people as was so effectively and almost perfectly done from 1906 to 1916. One sometimes longs for the iron hand of Yuan Shi-kai. I am sincerely hoping that the League of Nations may effect some international measures in the matter that will greatly aid China unless she becomes too arrogant to accept such aid and rushes on to national ruin and decay.

TRANS-SIBERIAN RY. REVIVAL

Approaching Restoration of Wagon-Lits Cars and Through Passage

From Our Own Correspondent.

Harbin, March 22.

The Soviet representative in Paris and the Administration of the Wagon-Lits Co. there have reached an agreement whereby the Company will run its cars on the railways of Soviet Russia. Mr. Withoff representing the Company has left Paris for Russia with a view to concluding a final agreement. Upon the signing of the agreement sleeping cars will be run on the Siberian railways affording uninterrupted communication between the Far East and Europe. Through tickets between the Orient and all parts of Western Europe will be obtainable as before the War. It is expected that the Soviet Government will return to the Company all the latter's property including 280 sleeping cars, numerous dining cars, supplies linen, etc., as well as the repair shops owned by the Company.

The chairman of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce Harbin has publicly refuted the recent rumours that have been circulated among the Russian population and which have been substantiated by the local Russian press to the effect that the Japanese have been buying up large supplies of provisions fodder and horses in the C.E.R. zone, and thus preparing for military operations on a large scale in Manchuria. This same authority points out that such purchases as are being made are made yearly by the Japanese military authorities of the Kuantung district for annual needs.

The mixed-train No. 5 on the eastern section of the C.E.R. was fired upon by Hunghutze between the stations Hailin and Mudatantze yesterday afternoon. Bullets broke some windows of the baggage-car as well as entering the bodies of other cars, but there were no casualities.

Mr. Goldman, a local lawyer, who was accused of having swindled a client of his, has been found guilty of the charge by the District Court and sentenced to two and a half years' imprisonment and deprived of the right of further practising his profession for a period of 10 years. The case has created great interest in Russian legal circles and the accused was defended by three of the principal Russian lawyers here. The result was unexpected by the legal fraternity who affirm that their colleague only committed a technical error. An appeal against the sentence has been lodged, Mr. Goldman being let out on bail.

KUANGTUNG CONSERVANCY

The Customs Funds: Inquiries From Canton: Will There Be Money to Carry on?

Mr. Yau Yui-ping, Director of the Board of Conservancy Works of Kuangtung, went to see the foreign consuls in Shameen on March 21 to discuss the matter of turning Canton's share of the Customs surplus, or a portion of it, to the Board of Conservancy in this province, says the "Canton Gazette." The director declared that owing to the financial stringency of the local Government, money is not obtainable for the Board. He had tried his utmost to make various improvements in the waterways of the province, but he found that there was not sufficient money to finance the scheme.

Mr. Yau also pointed out that it is wiser to spend the Customs surplus in this important work than for any other purpose, as it will be most beneficial to the lives and properties of the people of the province.

CONSERVANCY IN THE EAST RIVER.

The Engineer-in-Chief of the Conservancy Board, Major Olivecrona, has just returned from an inspection trip up the East River. Interviewed by a representative of the "Canton Gazette," Major Olivecrona made the following statement:

"The conditions in the East River district are deporable. Last summer's violent floods have badly damaged the dykes, and, if the broken parts are not repaired, the population in this district will have to face serious inundations early this summer. Unfortunately, the Board have no funds, left to appropriate to repair work, and unless the peasants themselves take the matter in their own hands, no work will be done this season. It is, however, doubtful if anything can be done even if money were forthcoming, as, on account of the military operations, the villages are more or less deserted, and their leading men absent. The village administration, in ordinary times upheld by the gentries, is disorganized, and it is thus difficult to bring about a joint effort amongst the villagers to complete any work. Besides, the season is advanced and only a narrow limit of time is left before the river rises.

"The Board is, as I have already stated, sadly lacking in heart. I acknowledge the inability of the Board to effectively assist and relieve the suffering population. The warfare carried on in this part of the province, having raged nearly uninterrupted during the dry season, has prevented the Board's engineers from carrying out necessary maintenance of the already reconstructed dykes, on account of which also these will be more or less deteriorated in the rainy season to come.

"The plight of the population, already suffering bitterly from the political unrest, will, when floods and famine set's in, be almost unbearable. Generally speaking, the whole situation is extremely serious, and the feeling of inability to render any assistance is most disheartening."

OPIUM TRAFFIC ON UPPER YANGTZE

Military Steamer Held Up and Sent Back: Sixty Tons of Opium on Board

Ichang, Mar. 24.

The military steamer Kiahtsi, formerly the Ankong, has been lying here for some little time. It appears that she arrived here with a full load of opium, probably about 60 tons. It is thought that one of the Generals in Szechuan was sending down this consignment to purchase a supply of arms and ammunition from the Hanyang Arsenal. When the steamer arrived here, she was seized and held by the Commander in-Chief of the Upper Yangtze, Gen. Wang, so there must have been some difficulty about the ship and her cargo. All the while she was lying here, Gen. Wang had a guard on board, but the vessel still flew the military flag. It is to be assumed that arrangements have now been made between the factions, for the Kiahtsi has now gone down river to Wuchang or Hankow.

A DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

There was a disastrous fire here on March 18. Some soldiers were out flying a big centipede kite with some fire-crackers attached to its tail. Some of the exploding crackers fell on the thatch of some mat huts and over 100 of them were destroyed before the fire burnt itself out. As the fire happened at about four o'clock in the afternoon, many of the occupants were away at their work and only came home to find that their houses and all their belongings had been destroyed. Fortunately for them the weather is now milder and it will not be long before more of the huts can be built.

Some of the Upper Yangtze steamers have now transferred to the Italian flag. They are the Pakiang, Yungkiang and Shuho.

The river remains low for this time of the year. It was 0.5 ft. when the Chiping (later reported by telegram on the rocks at the Kungling Rapid) left the other morning. It rose a couple of inches and the watermark for to-day is 0.4 ft.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPAN RISING FROM THE SEA

A Result of the Earthquake and Experience of Other Generations

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, Mar. 27.

Although eminent seismologists, both Japanese and foreign, had discounted the supposition that the recent terrible earthquake was the result of volcanic disturbances, and that it was caused by a depression in the bed of the ocean, Dr. T. A. Jagger, the eminent American volcanologist, who for years has been studying volcanic phenomena from an observatory that he had specially built near the crater of Kilavea; in the Hawaiian Islands, declares that he is firmly of the opinion that the disturbances were of volcanic origin.

He also declares that Japan is rising from the sea and that the district embracing Tokio, Yokohama and the regions recently stricken is several feet higher than a generation ago.

Dr. Jagger believes that the entire eastern coast of Asia is rising and that within a short space of time, speaking in terms of the history of the world, the appearance of the surface of the globe will be entirely transformed.

"The Japan earthquake," according to him, "caused great changes in the surface of the earth in that vicinity. The extent of the changes is yet unknown, but from the investigations already made it is evident that far greater changes took place than is the case generally in similar disasters. Although the quakes centred about the cities of Yokohama and Tokio, the level of the ground has been changed for hundreds of miles in all directions, and it is possible that the east coast of China has also been affected."

The immediate site of Yokohama, it is known, sank several feet, but the solid rock underneath rose from seven to eight feet and this is believed to be the case throughout the entire district affected. Yokohama sank because the land there is soft. Geologists say that, approximately speaking, the east coast line of Japan is now several feet higher than it was a generation ago. The rumours that went out at the time of the disaster that this part of Japan is sinking have now been conclusively proved to be groundless. The opposite rather is the case; with each quake the land is rising.

The Recent Conflagration.

The biggest conflagration that has occurred in these regions since the unprecedented blazes that razed so much of Tokio to the ground following the earthquake of September 1 occurred yesterday and wiped out one of the northern suburbs of Tokio, known as Zoshigays. Nearly 3,000 persons were rendered homeless, 13 were injured and the damage is estimated as, at least, Yen 1,000,000. The extremely low water pressure and the narrow alleys that did duty for streets are chiefly responsible for the headway that the flames gained over the fire-fighters who responded promptly and efficiently. The blaze occurred early in the morning when a fair drizzle which had commenced the previous evening was still on driving the unfortunate victims out into the cold and wet.

Most of the ordinary fires of Japan can be traced to defective electric wiring, and when the fire brigades arrive in time and are unable to do anything worth while towards putting the flames out, this has been traced time and again to lack of water pressure and narrow streets in which the fire engines cannot operate. This has been the case for years, if not decades. None the less, defective wiring is still the order of the day, while there is not the slightest sign yet of any attempt to do away with the firetrap alleys and footpaths that do duty for streets in various parts of Tokio.

The Nanking authorities are reported to have issued an order to the effect that no Bolshevik meetings may be held in the province, nor must there be any memorial services for M. Lenin.

HSIUNG PING-CHI STANDING FOR CIVIL GOVERNORSHIP OF SHANTUNG

Ex-Tuchun Dismissed for Responsibility in Lincheng Outrage: His Appeal to President and Marshal Wu: The Murder of Mr. S. S. Keh

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, March 26.

A surprising report is now to hand to the effect that former Tuchun Tien Tsung-yui may replace Hsiung Ping-chi as Civil Governor of Shantung. He was "allowed to resign" as a result of pressure brought to bear upon the Peking Government by the Diplomatic Body on account of the Lincheng outrage. It is now reported that during the celebration of Marshal Tuan's birthday, General Tien solicited the assistance of Marshal Wu Pei-fu and President Tsao Kun in installing him as Civil Governor. The worthy general's idea seems to be that so long as he is not reinstated as Tuchun, the Diplomatic body will have no objection.

At the time of the Lincheng outrage the view was held that the poor protection given to the section of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway which runs through Shantung had made the bandit raid possible. Public opinion was very bitter over the maintenance of a large number of troops which were quite useless and gave protection to no-one, and it was felt that the laxity of the Tuchun's control over his troops, should be punished.

A memorial service was held on Sunday last in the Guild Hall in honour of the late Mr. S. S. Keh who was captured by bandits, held for ransom and eventually murdered. Mr. Keh was a district Locomotive Inspector in the employ of the Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway and through an intrigue between a sub-inspector and a band of cut-throats, he was kidnapped and held for ransom. Eventually, a compromise was reached between the Railway Administration and the bandits but through some bungling on the part of the people sent to deliver the ransom-money to the gang that held Mr. Keh, the latter murdered him and left his body at a spot near the Japanese cemetary at Tsinan.

The memorial service was held under the auspices of the Tsingtao American College Club, the Nanyang University Alumni Association, and the Locomotive Department of the Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway jointly. Mr. C. T. Sun, superintendent of the Locomotive Department was Chairman for the occasion, and gave a short account of the incidents leading up to the murder of Mr. Keh. The Managing-Director then outlined the Railway's efforts to secure compensation for the benefit of the widow and children and gave an account of the arrest of some of the kidnappers. Then Mr. Tong, a bosom friend of Mr. Keh, related the life history of the unfortunate man. Numerous messages of condolence were read, and several special representatives of prominent officials were present at the memorial service.

A resolution of the American College Club expressing its sympathy and condolence to Mrs. Keh and the children was read by Mr. James Giauque of the American Academy, Mr. Keh having been educated in America and was therefore a returned student.

It has now been decided to grant the family of the murdered Railway employee a lump sum compensation of $25,000 instead of the previous plan of a monthly allowance until the oldest son, who is at present six years old, attains his majority.

Treasury Sadly Depleted: The Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway Commission

Tsingtao, Mar. 28.

Mr. Kao En-hung, the new Director-General of the Kiaochou Territorial Government, will arrive here to-morrow evening. He will find himself faced with a difficult task in placing the territory on a sound financial foundation and re-establishing the credit of the administration. The treasury is said to be in a sadly depleted state and there does not seem to be any prospect of help from the provincial administration. Many of the officials have abandoned their posts, some without even the formality of a resignation. The latest departure is that of the head of the telephone department, who is alleged to have withdrawn from the treasury amounts far in excess of actual expenditure.

The arrival of the special commission, appointed by the Minister of Communications to investigate the affairs of the Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway, has been delayed by the illness of Mr. Griffith, one of the members. He is assistant manager of the Shanghai-Nanking Railway. It is expected that they will arrive now within a few days.

Memorial services were held on Sunday for Mr. Keh, the official of the Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway who was murdered by bandits. Nearly 1,000 persons were present at the Guild Hall, the majority being colleagues and fellow employees of the murdered man. Mrs. Keh and two of her children were also present. Mrs. Keh has received a cheque for $25,000 from the Railway in compensation for her loss. The Ministry of Communications decided on this form of payment instead of a monthly allowance as previously determined upon.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Arrival of the New Director-General: Marshal Wu in Complete Control

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, Mar. 31.

Mr. Kao En-hung, the new Director-General of the Kiaochou Territorial Government, arrived here yesterday evening and was received at the railway station by Department officials, the British Consul, and the Japanese Consular representatives.

Marshal Wu Pei-fu's control of the territories is thought to be complete and it is forecast here that the dispute between the Chinese and Japanese as to the railway revenue will very shortly reach its full height.

FISH DEALERS' STRIKE IN TOKIO

Dispute Over Market Fees

Tokio, Mar. 31.

The inhabitants of Tokio are faced with three fishless days beginning from to-morrow, unless mediation removes the troubles between the Municipality and fish dealers. The fish dealers have declared a strike for three days owing to the fees which the Municipality demand for the use of premises in the new city fish market, established in Tsukiji instead of the historic market in Nihonbashi destroyed last September by fire. Unless satisfaction is granted the strike will be extended.

Yokohama dealers have declared a similar sympathetic "holiday."—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Tokio, Apr. 3.

Through the intervention of the Mayor the fish-dealers' strike ended this morning when the market opened as usual.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

HUAI RIVER CONSERVANCY

Peking, Mar. 31.

Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan, Inspector-General of the three Yangtze Provinces, has telegraphed to the Government urging it to lose no time in carrying out the necessary work on the Huai River Conservancy. A special meeting of the Cabinet will probably be called to discuss this matter.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

PEIYANG UNIVERSITY STUDENTS ON STRIKE FOR "SELECTIVE" COURSES

Or the Right to Choose What They Would Learn

Tientsin News Service.

Tientsin, March 30.

Two hundred and ninety students of Peiyang University who struck recently, have been given until April 8, to return to their classes, failing which they will be struck off the rolls. To this ultimatum a portion of them have replied asking leave of absence until April 8.

As nearly as we have been able to gather the chronology and facts of the case between students and University authorities are as follow:

First of all the Peiyang University is a Technical school of Mining, Metallurgy and Civil Engineering, with a staff which includes 12 foreigners. It is independent of the Ministry of Education in Peking, being solely financed and conducted by the Chihli Provincial Government through the Chihli Commissioner of Education of Education. The Commissioner annually allocates for the University $225,000, which is expended, according to requirements by the Acting President of the University, Dr H.Y. Feng, a graduate of Yale. Among recent expenditure are a Chemistry Building costing about $65,000, and a Students' Dormitory costing $43,000, money being saved out of yearly grants to pay this.

NO ORGANIZATIONS.

About five years ago, when students thought more of politics than study and spent much time parading and lecturing to the detriment of their own learning and the standards of the University, came into prohibiting student organizations on penalty of dismissal. Matriculating students were required to pledge themselves not to join nor form organizations of any sort.

A few months ago the Ministry of Education promulgated the new system of education which permits "electives," or in other words, gives students the privilege of electing a stated number of subjects in order to make up their full complement of studies.

The Peiyang University, being a technical school with a very definite curriculum, declined to adopt the elective system and retained its rigid programme. It was decided by the Faculty that to permit students the privilege of electing studies would lower the standards of the school and oblige them to graduate students unfitted for their tasks. The school has, hitherto, maintained a high standard and its graduates are considered among the most capable in this country.

EASIER TASKS WANTED.

When the students, who were being dropped out of classes by the rigid curriculum, found the University would not introduce the elective system and thereby give them an easier course, they felt they were being badly treated. They considered the school should adopt the laws promulgated by the Ministry of Education. Their dissatisfaction grew to anger. Out of the 350 in the University, 290 held a meeting and decided to form an association to further their aims. The meeting appointed four students to carry its representations to the President, who, upon discovering that the students had broken their promise not to organize and also the school's rule against it, immediately dismissed them. President Feng then issued a proclamation reasserting the rule and had it posted on the notice board. It was torn down by a student.

The students then responded by striking and as the situation seemed to be getting into a violent state, the Civil Governor, at his own initiative, sent a detachment of troops to the University to maintain order. This move was taken by the students to mean military suppression of their just claims. A notice forbidding them to use the telephone was also similarly construed. A delegation of students then went to Peking to stir up an agitation in the Capital but their moves were closely watched by troops and upon the Civil Governor's authority they were forced to leave the capital and return to Tientsin. A certain amount of bitterness and rough handling was the outcome of this move, contributing in no small degree to the students' anger.

DR. FENG UPHELD BY STAFF.

In his stand for strict adherence to the customary standards of the University, the President has been solidly backed by the 12 foreign professors, all of whom, it may be stated, are men of excellent training and graduates of the best technical schools in the world. Their attitude on matters pertaining to the school is always sought and their advice acted upon by the President, who holds regular Faculty meetings.

The students claim that Dr Feng is incapable of controlling a technical school because he is a Doctor of Laws, and that he is frequently absent from duty. To this it is replied that Dr Feng, as a President, exercises executive functions only and relies upon the various technical members of the Faculty for advice upon matters coming under their departments. The students want an Engineering graduate for President, but inasmuch as there are three different and distinct branches of Engineering in the school, it would be impossible, even if advisable, to obtain a man with degrees in all three branches. Dr Feng is man of private means and obtains a very nominal salary for his services, Tls. 350. per mensem. In his absences secretary, who meets with the Faculty and permits the University to function normally.

STUDENTS EXCEPTIONAL BENEFITS.

Students pay an annual fee of $30, live in the dormitories free of charge and buy their own food. Servants are provided free of charge. Emphasizing the charitable nature of the school it is estimated that each student costs the Chihli Provincial Government $450, a year.

Between 35 and 50 students are graduated each year, out of a normal enrolment of 350.

The students' recent organization have showered libellous statements upon the local foreign and Chinese press, but have not so far succeeded in presenting a clean-cut statement of what they want, apart from the dismissal of Acting President Feng. The Chinese Press seems to take the students' side in the matter, but has not taken any steps to find out what actually is the trouble. In this connexion a Chinese newspaper-man went to the Acting President and said that if Dr Feng would give him $200 he would quash the Chinese press attacks. Dr Feng replied that he would not request it for two cents The foreign press has paid little attention to it.

Dr Feng has acted with great patience in the matter and although put to no end of embarrassment by the agitations is still willing to permit the students to return, providing they adhere to the rules of the school. His offer expires on April 8.

PEKING GRANT FOR EDUCATION IN SHANGHAI

Peking, Mar. 27.

To-day's Cabinet meeting decided upon the recommendation of the Ministries of Finance, Education and Communications that a sum of $35,000 be allocated to the Sino-French Technical Academy at Shanghai, this amount to be a charge upon the Inland Customs within an area of fifty li beyond the area under the Shanghai Maritime Customs district.

POLICE LESS LUCKY.

Marshal Wang Huai-ching called on President Tsao Kun yesterday in the interests of the police and the gendarmerie and requested that the Cabinet be instructed to pay the arrears of wages due the men in these services.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

STRANDED CHIPING

Passenger's Narrative of How She Struck A Rock in Upper Yangtze

A passenger who was aboard the str. Chiping when she struck the rocks in making the passage of the Upper Yangtze describes the incident in a letter which has just been received in Shanghai. Writing on March 22 he says:—

At daybreak yesterday morning we hauled up our mudhook and set gaily forth. At 8.50 a.m. I heard our siren hoot, and realized we were approaching the Kung Ling Fan, so I ambled out on deck to see how she took it. She didn't! The rapid is pretty bad just now, and there's only a very narrow channel on the left bank. We seemed to be going all right when suddenly the ship took a broad sheer to port, but I thought the pilot was running close up to the big rock in the centre of the river, before easing her into the channel. When we got to within about 20 feet of it, I realized something was wrong, and next second she gave a mild bump, followed by a much heavier one almost at once. There she hung for an appreciable time, slightly canted to port, and I hoped hard that she would slide off. If she had struck and had filled for'ard, she might have broken something, and even if we had been able to back off later, she would have been badly down by the head and difficult to navigate.

Fortunately the engines backed her off and then I knew it was just a matter of seamanship and finding a soft spot to beach her. Captain Fisher backed her slowly for maybe 600 or 700 yards, until the channel widened out a bit. He then turned her and jammed her hard into a soft shelving sandbank. He got out wires at once, and here we are, out of action, but as safe as houses. It was a fine bit of seamanship and I give the skipper full marks. He never batted an eyelid, but just stood waggling the telegraph until the ship was hard and fast ashore.

We at once started to jettison cargo, and the beach is strewn with umpteen bales of cotton yarn and boxes of tin plates. The forehold is full of water and they haven't been able to locate the damage yet, and I think No. 2 hold has water in it as well. The skipper and engineer have been working like Trojans, together with Captain Harris, who is to take the ship over later on, but we haven't got much forrarder yet, and I have my doubts they'll be able to do much without more assistance. The Chinese are a complete washout on occasions like this, and everything has to be thought out and more or less done by the three white men.

THE ANGLO-AMERICAN ASSOCIATION

Complimentary Tiffin to Gen. Connor, U. S. A.: Desire for a World's Peace

Peking, Mar. 28.

There was almost a record attendance at the Anglo-American Association tiffin to-day at the Grand Hotel des Wagons Lits. General Connor, commanding the American troops in Tientsin, was the guest of honour, and was introduced by the President, Sir Francis Aglen, in a few happy remarks in which he referred to the General's distinguished services in the Philippines and in France.

General Connor chose as the subject of his discourse "Peace." Peace, he said, was the most desirable thing in the world, and emphasized the importance of working for it. After sketching how primitive man had passed from extreme individualism to communal life, developing into the village, the seignory, the duchy, the small kingdom and the large empires of to-day, the speaker pointed out that progress was the outcome of communications, the spoken and, later, the written language, and went on to show that during years of human history man had made no signal advance upon these means of communication.

In the 20th century there were five epoch-making inventions in respect of communications, and he wondered if they might venture the hope that progress towards peace might be reckoned as having been proportionately accelerated by these discoveries. He agreed that a world language would contribute materially to world peace and called attention to the responsibility of the American and British people, in working for and securing world peace.

In conclusion, he remarked that it was said that charity began at home, but they should all remember that if any great reform was to be accomplished it would be by each individual working for it individually and collectively.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

STRIKE AT KOWLOON DOCKYARD

Housing Difficulty: Chinese Workmen's Protest Against Demolition of Dwellings

Hongkong, Mar. 31.

A practical demonstration of the housing difficulty was furnished at the Kowloon Dockyard this morning when over 2,000 Chinese workers from all departments laid down their tools as a result of the commencement of demolition of a block of about a dozen dwellings adjoining the dockyard, in which the engine-shop mechanics were housed, with a view to providing space for dockyard extension.

The workmen's attitude is considered unreasonable since the chief manager had promised an investigation into their grievance. The workmen demanded immediate alternative housing and walked out of the yard. The saw-mill is the only department still working.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

TIENTSIN CROWN LEASES

Renewal Certain: Chairman's Statement at B. M. C. Annual Meeting

The annual general meeting of the electors of the British Municipal Area at Tientsin was held on March 19, H.M. Consul-General, Mr. W. P. Ker, C.M.G., presiding.

Regarding the question of renewal of the Crown leases, the Chairman, in his report, stated:

I reported to you at the last Annual General Meeting, that Mr. Kent had gone to London to represent and give our case in the matter of the renewal of the Crown leases.

It will suffice to say that Mr. Kent was successful in obtaining the re-opening of the whole issue.

Mr. Kent was also able to obtain the support of Sir John Jordan, the President of the China Association, who is still helping us in this matter. The whole case is reopened for the consideration of the Cabinet. It will now come before the Cabinet of a Labour Government, and I think we may look for the same sane treatment from that Government as from its predecessor, and we have good reason to hope that the question will be settled soon.

FILLING THE EXTRA-MURAL AREA.

The next matter is our agreement with the Hai Ho Conservancy Commission. The effect of our arrangement with them will be that the whole of the Extra-Mural Area will be completely filled in before the end of 1928 if the agreed rate of filling in is adhered to. We have good reason to believe that this agreed rate will be exceeded for this year, and also in future years. That means that by the end of 1928, or before, the area available for building will be nearly doubled. Roads, drains, light and water have all to be provided for that greatly increased area. That means that we shall have to borrow money. For the moment there cannot be any question of repaying the loans we have already made. The time for repayment will come later. There is no prospect of getting further land from the Chinese authorities.

MR. F. W. CAREY AND NINGPO

Urgent Requests to Peking by Chinese Businessmen That He Be Not Transferred

The transfer of Mr. F. W. Carey, Commissioner of Customs at Ningpo, to Swatow appears to have created a feeling of dismay among the mercantile community both here and at Nnigpo, judging by the messages and telegrams that have appeared in the Chinese Press, of which the following are translations.

From the Ningpo Association at Shanghai to the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce.

"We beg to state that Mr. F. W. Carey, the Commissioner of Customs at Ningpo, who is undisputedly an official of high efficiency as manifested in his four years' brilliant service, is now going to be transferred to Swatow. This intelligence brings an uneasy feeling to all Ningpo. We all agree that his assistance is needed badly to bring a greater Ningpo into being, and have therefore requested the Inspector General to consider retaining him at his post. With the same purpose and intention, we beg you to send a telegram on our behalf to the Inspector General expressing our wish for the retention of the Commissioner at Ningpo."

From the General Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai, to Sir Francis Aglen, Inspector General Chinese Maritime Customs, Peking. (March 19, 1924).

"Ningpo Merchants here came personally to this Chamber stating that Mr. Carey, Commissioner of Customs, Ningpo, is respected and liked by all in way he fulfilled his duties since coming Ningpo that they are much grieved on hearing report of his transfer to Swatow. They request this Chamber telegraph you Mr. Carey be not transferred. This Chamber hopes that you can see your way granting their request so as to correspond with public opinion. General Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai."

From the Ningpo Association, Shanghai, to Sir Francis Aglen, Inspector General Chinese Maritime Customs, Peking. (March 18, 1924).

"Local Press reports Mr. Carey, Commissioner Customs Ningpo to be transferred Swatow. Mr. Carey's past excellent records as Commissioner and his great service in connexion Chêkiang Famine Relief work last year have won for him gratitude and love of whole Ningpo. Ningpo merchants here therefore beg that Mr. Carey may be retained, as change of new man at this time of unrest may have undesirable results. Soliciting request may be granted awaiting early telegraphic reply Ningpo Association, Shanghai."

From the Ningpo Chamber of Commerce and the local Gentry to the Inspector General. (March 20, 1924).

"We have the honour to state that for the past four years since Mr. F. W. Carey, the Commissioner of Customs assumed his post, trade has incessantly made headway, and the municipality has improved by leaps and bounds. As a member of the Board of the International Relief Committee the services rendered by him in relieving distress in Chêkiang were such as are to be expected from a man of his outstanding ability. Moreover, the introduction of collecting duty on luggage at the steamer wharves has been of great convenience to the passengers. Such improvements, though not uncommon to other advanced ports, are rather inovations to Ningpo. Now it is said that Mr. Carey is going to be transferred to Swatow. The urgent need of a man of quality in this port impels us to request that he be retained in Ningpo."

Telegrams have also been sent by the Steam Launch Association of Ningpo, and the Ningpo Chamber of Commerce has appealed to the Premier, Mr. Sun Pao-ch'i, urging him to discuss the retention of the Commissioner of Customs of Ningpo with the Inspector-General.

The well-known river steamer Heungshan, which went aground in the Canton River on February 29, has been abandoned to underwriters, the Hongkong & Whampoa Dock Company having declared that salvage is impossible. The "Hongkong Telegraph understands that the steamer will be sold by auction very shortly, as she now lies at Larkin's Point (Kellett Reach), in the Blenheim Passage of the Canton River. The Heungshan has been on the Hongkong-Canton run for many years and was a most popular boat with the travelling public. She was built in 1890.

PRINCE MATSUKATA'S RETURN TO LIFE

A Marvellous Recovery: Flight of Spirit from Flesh: Nerve Stimulation: Value of "Katsu" Again Brought to Light

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, Mar. 22.

The dramatic and semi-miraculous return to life staged by the octogenarian "Genro" (elder statesman), Prince Matsukata, who was believed even by physicians and those nearest his bedside to have definitely winged his way into an unknown life, has afforded me an opportunity of making an incursion into an almost unknown realm of medical science. Discussing the last-minute rallying of the aged Japanese statesman, a friend ventured to declare that the resuscitation was brought about through the application of Katsu. No evidence goes to uphold this supposition, but it furnished me with sufficient newspaper curiosity to find out what exactly did this mystic word Katsu, that can restore a man to life when to all appearances he is dead, signify.

Our field of investigation centred around Ryogoku, a section of Tokio famous for jiu-jitsu (Japanese science of self-defence) experts and sumo (Japan's national form of wrestling) men. After many potations of weak tea had been partaken of and many a cigarette's blue-black smoke blown in the air, enough material was gathered to find out that Katsu was mysterious only as far as its name was mystic; otherwise Katsu is an almost forgotten—it is to be hoped, not lost—branch of scientific medical knowledge.

WHEN DEATH IS NOT DEATH.

Adepts in the physical feats of jiu-jitsu and sumo, especially those who have reached that stage of perfection when they are awarded "belts" of merit, are credited with a knowledge of Katsu. These do not believe that there is such a thing as dying of shock, one of the fundamental necessities in Japan's ancient medical lore being that death does not set in until decomposition has actually occurred. The heart may stop functioning, but this is not regarded as conclusive proof that the spirit has fled from the flesh, for the medical men who bank on ancient teachings believe that the nerves continue to remain alive for some considerable time even after the heart has ceased beating and, by nerve stimulation, so Katsu experts aver, the heart can be induced to beat again.

Bluntly stated—in simple, yet truthful, language—this seems no less than bringing the "dead" (it is generally accepted, at least by the average layman, that those whose hearts have ceased to give signs of activity are no more) to life. The immense value of this closely guarded secret is apparent. The art is said to have been known and extensively practised two centuries before the Birth of Christ, but the extreme jealousy with which the secret has been guarded—a weak characteristic of all Asiatic peoples who would rather shield their discoveries in the realms of science and knowledge from others than give the benefit of the secrets they have wrested from Nature to the whole community—has all but killed it. For practical purposes, it is not supposed to be known anywhere except amongst some of the elect of jiu-jitsu and sumo circles.

NERVE STIMULATION THE SECRET.

Katsu, resolved into ordinary terms understandable by the layman, consists of a method of resuscitating the nerve centres in certain parts of the human body, and, by stimulating these nerves, bringing about a reaction of the heart which has temporarily ceased beating.

In the rough-and-tumble encounters that often feature a display of jiu-jitsu and sumo, it happens not infrequently that a person is thrown down with such force that he may be temporarily stunned. Often the stunning is different from that which ails the anaemic or the physically run-down. The force of the blow may also be so powerful as to cause cardiac action to stop temporarily—permanently, if suitable remedies are not immediately adopted. Here is where, it is claimed, Katsu scores. It is declared that one who knows this branch of ancient Japanese medical science, by applying pressure on the nerves of the pectoral arch where the thinness of the tissues leave the nerves most exposed, can revivify the apparently lifeless body. Two other centres which respond immediately to pressure applied immediately to the nerves of the pectoral arch are said to be the pneumogastric centre and the auditory nerve centre of the brain. Over and over again, according to persons who claim to have witnessed the operation of Katsu, after the action of the heart has stopped, this system of resuscitation has proved effective.

NO DEATH BY SHOCK.

The Japanese do not believe in death by shock and officers of the Army and Navy with whom I have talked about this science of Katsu also agreed that, in their departments of the nation's activities, such a thing as death by shock is not provided for. What really happens, a naval officer explained, is that there is stunning and what ultimately happens, in most cases, is that death comes about through a person being buried alive. He added that in the modern wars Japan engaged in, there was no conclusive evidence of death by shock, although, as may be imagined, every effort was made to study whatever lessons the war had to impart.

Perhaps this explains why burials in Japan are so long delayed. They prefer to make sure and prefer to err on the safer side. Not until there are obvious signs of decomposition and disintegration of the cells is a person pronounced dead.

BURIED ALIVE PERHAPS.

It seems perfectly reasonable to go on the premise that death does not set in until decomposition sets in, except in perfectly obvious cases, so apparent that there is no need to make mention of them.

One's thoughts run back to the recent war. Stretcher-bearers scour the battlefield and come across a wounded or unconscious man. They apply their ear to the place where the heart of the prostrate hero is. Not a tick; not a beat. They mournfully shake their heads and one who perhaps is not yet dead goes down into a living grave along with the mangled remains of those who have really taken their last farewell of life.

If Katsu is what it claims to be, there is no need to be gifted with extraordinary perception to realize the wonderful value to all humanity that lies behind this science which, if further developed in the light and knowledge of medical discoveries of to-day, may revolutionize that noblest of all arts—the great aim of conquering pain and staving off death through the achievements of medical lore.

NORTH MANCHURIA'S FUR TRADE

An Important Business Being Gradually Ruined by Officialdom

From Our Own Correspondent.

Harbin, Mar. 18.

One of the most important trade commodities of North Manchuria for years past has now lost its significance owing to a series of obstructions which sooner or later must be realized by the authorities, seeing that it is adversely affecting the economical prosperity of this northern province. I refer to the fur trade which has now been diverted through Mongolia to Kalgan and Tientsin though geographically exportation through Manchuli, Hailar and Harbin is a far more direct route. Practically all the large foreign fur traders who maintained offices at Harbin and had their agents scattered over northern Manchuria, Zaibaikalia and Mongolia have now transplanted their places of business to Tientsin not because of preference but of necessity owing to the sudden change in conditions in northern Manchuria.

One of the chief sources of supply Zaibaikalia and its hinterland is now a closed door to free trading since the Soviet Government has inaugurated a fur monopoly in Siberia. All furs are now dealt through Vneshtorg, the holders of the monopoly, who this season are faced with a reduction of turnover of at least 50 per cent. as compared with last year. The reason is the restriction placed on the hunters in Siberia, who are forced to sell at fixed prices to the monopoly-holders' agents and who have in turn to buy their requirements from Government run stores who also sell at their own prices. Thus the hunter finds that it does not pay him to hunt in the same manner as he has been accustomed in the past, and is now content to trap and shoot just enough for his requirements. Consequently, the number of squirrels and foxes that are being turned over to Vneshtorg are much less than when the hunters were able to dispose of their goods to the highest bidder.

THE GOVERNMENT OBDURATE.

The managers of the monopoly realize the harm that is being done to this once thriving trade, but the Government does not feel inclined to abolish it. Recently fur-traders, bankers, and representatives of the fur monopoly met together at Chita to consider the situation. The present policy was attacked from all sides and several detailed reports were submitted to the Soviet Government. These, however, have been shelved since any reforms would not be in accord with the existing general trading policy of the Government. Pelts from Monogolia have also been forced to find a new outlet since various dues and likins levied by the Chinese authorities on goods arriving into Northern Manchuria have become prohibitive, whilst one of the principal exports from Mongolia, marmot skins have been practically banned from entering Manchuria.

One of the results of the loss of the fur trade to northern Manchuria is that the financial resources of the municipalities of Manchuli and Hailar are going from bad to worse, and that they are compelled to discover new sources of revenue somehow or other.

The Hailar municipality is faced with statistical facts of 1923, that not only has the trade in furs come to an absolute deadlock but that the export of other Mongolian raw products has decreased many fold.

An investigation of the problems facing them resulted in the following:

(1) That notwithstanding that transportation from Mongolian trade centres to Kalgan by pack or cart is $2 higher than by Hailar, the former route is now preferred owing to the saving of various Chinese dues and levies and owing to the lack of bridges or ferries across the rivers Kurulium and Urshun.

(2) The high railway freights on goods that are shipped by Hailar and destined for export. This is proved by the fact that the Chinese Post Office is able to compete with them on favourable terms, so that the merchant finds it much more cheaper to ship by parcel post all his furs, thus avoiding various dues, export duties and veterinary charges that are levied when the goods are shipped as freight.

WHAT HAILAR WANTS.

The Municipality of Hailar has submitted to the C.E.R. Administration a proposal for the construction of crossing points across the above named rivers and the improvement of roads in the sandy Hanshura district in order to direct Mongolian products to Hailar. It suggests at the same time that the funds required for these improvements could be derived from an increase of freight on livestock from Manchuli, Jelainor and Hailar, as at present the cheaper rates offered on live cattle compared with slaughtered cattle divert the former from the Hailar to the Harbin slaughter-houses thus robbing the former of a slaughter tax.

Likewise the Hailar Chamber of Commerce has submitted a report to the C.E.R. Administration, for the establishing of an automobile service between Hailar and the Mongolian town of Sambes. The report indicates that all Mongolian raw mterials such as hides, sheep and goat-skins, wool, furs, hair etc., which are being collected by traders in the districts of Sambes, Barga etc., are now being transported to Kalgan, which is at a far greater distance from Sambes than is Hailar. It further points out that shipment to Hailar is preferred by merchants than to Manchuli owing to the fact that the highway to the latter town runs very close to the Russian frontier where life is not secure and where robbery is rife. There is in addition a saving in freight rates by rail, and, the also the more favourable geographical situation of Hailar should be considered.

RUSSIAN REFUGEES IN THE PHILIPPINES

250 of Admiral Stark's Party Still Unprovided for: Ships of no Value

Manila, Mar. 15.

The 250 Russian refugees who came to the Philippines from Vladivostok more than a year ago are looking toward America and are hoping they may be able before the end of the coming summer to join their 600 countrymen who were sent there by the American government last June on the United States army transport Merritt. They have received many letters from their friends in America who report satisfactory working conditions, good wages and an enjoyable climate.

It was late in the year 1922 when a party of some 6,000 Russian refugees under Admiral Stark set sail from Vladivostok in 16 ships, looking for a country where they could settle and build homes. Being adherents of the old Russian monarchical government, they were forced to leave Siberia. The party dropped several thousand at Gensan, Korea and another thousand or more in Shanghai. By the time it reached the Philippines the party had dwindled to 850 people and 11 ships. The refugees were without means of sustenance and it was necessary for the Red Cross and charitable organizations to provide food for them for many months after they had been allowed to land in the Philippines and had been provided with shelter at the United States naval station at Olongapo, 50 miles from Manila.

Since landing in the Philippines, the Russians have sold four of their ships and from the proceeds have managed to buy food enough to maintain a precarious existence. The other seven vessels, which are anchored in Subig Bay, near Olongapo, are said to be unseaworthy and virtually without value for transportation purposes. A number of the refugees found work for a time on the hemp plantations in the province of Davao, but these all have returned to Olongapo, having decided that work so near the Equator was not congenial. It is said that only about one dozen of the entire 250 are employed.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

ANCIENT COFFINS OF KIANGSU

Remarkable Discovery of Ming Dynasty Relics in Bed of Grand Canal

From Our Own Correspondent.

Suchien, Ku., March 24.

There has been much excitement in our little city owing to the discovery, the other day, of six coffins in the bed of the canal. For the last two or three days people have been flocking to see these said coffins. Buried there, 450 years ago, the men deepening the Canal bed dug them out in a wonderful condition of preservation. Your correspondent has just been to see them, so can testify to this statement. There was a "pei" or tombstone beside them with a good part of the family history written upon it. The stone is a polished stone, about a foot and a half in length, and with a second stone about the same size covering it, which has kept the characters in perfect condition.

It seems that about 300 years ago the Canal changed its course, and this place was originally the burial ground of a family called Tsiang. The largest coffin seems to have belonged to a Hsien magistrate of this city; and so much of his history is given that if any of his descendants are still living it should be an easy task for them to make their claim good. His grandfather's name is given in full, and also his mother's. He was one of three sons, and was a man of large stature; the coffin testifies to this. He left one son and three daughters, the married names of the latter are also given. His uncle was named as a degree man, being a "Chu ren." His merits were also extolled; how many would come to him with their troubles and were always helped, and no one could quarrel in his presence.

GIGANTIC WORK.

The coffins themselves are a remarkable sight. They are made of massive wood. The lid and sides in one at least were one solid piece of wood about a foot in thickness. They have also massive nails about an inch square in thickness and about a foot and six inches in length. There was not one little bit of rust on these nails. The largest coffin would be nearly five feet in height and seven and a half feet in length. Only one coffin was in a state of decay and the workmen had gathered out the blackened bones and were breaking up the coffin to remove it. Some idea of the size may be conveyed to your readers' minds in that it took 50 men to pull it with ropes up the Canal bank. The men could not carry it. The blackened bones were also an unusual size. The Commercial Guild are trying to find some relatives, and have sent word to the Tsiang Ancestral Hall, asking all of that name to look up their ancestral tablets. The date on the stone is in the Ming Dynasty. Report has it that the Ancestral Hall is calling a "Huei" and if the relatives cannot be found, subscriptions will be taken to buy a burial ground.

DEEPENING OF THE GRAND CANAL.

In my last letter I mentioned how it looked as if it would take a long time to finish the Canal. Your correspondent heard to-day that this channel of about 20 ft. wide is all that is to be done, and that there are prospects of the water soon being diverted back into the Canal. It is difficult to find out accurately how much money has been spent on it; report gives a large sum. As the bed of the Canal is very wide it is feared the sand of the higher ground will soon fill up this channel again.

PEKING BRITISH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Peking, Mar. 31.

The following officers of the British Chamber of Commerce, Peking, have been elected for the ensuing year:—Chairman, Mr. A. C. Henning; Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. S. Fripp; Committee, Messrs. R. C. Allen, G. W. Frodsham, D. R. MacKenzie and W. H. E. Thomas.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

FALL OF CHANGCHOWFU

Peking, Mar. 26.

Foreign telegrams report that Gen. Tsang Chi-ping has captured Changchowfu, which is situated about 50 li inland from Amoy, where Gen. Tsang has his headquarters. Gen. Tsang was formerly Military Commissioner of Amoy and Changchow. This Commissionership was abolished when Gen. Sun Chuan-fang arrived at Foochow.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

TONGSHAN MINE ACCIDENT

Tientsin, Mar. 27.

Three of the miners who were entombed have been rescued from the Tongshan mine.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

GUIDES TO CHINA'S REFORMATION

Dr. Alfred Sze's Suggestions: Military Suppression or Else Foreign Intervention

Peking, Mar. 27.

Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese Minister to the United States, has wired to the Chinese Government the following four items as measures for the salvation of the country:—

(1) Financial readjustment.—A certain limit shall be put to the revenues of the Central Government and local provinces, a financial retrenchment policy be adopted, and all new enterprises be suspended.

(2) Reduction of soldiery.—The Powers have been putting in force the reduction of their respective armies since the termination of the European War, where China is still unnecessarily keeping too many troops, with the consequence that she is badly pressed for military funds and her troops are doing great harm to the country. The troops shall, therefore, be reduced to such an extent that is required only for the defensive purposes of the country, taking into consideration the national financial power. In the meantime, measures shall be devised for the development of industries and for providing disbanded soldiers with the necessaries of life.

(3) Unification of North and South.—The country has been disintegrated for the last several years, and for this reason the intelligent classes are now averse to discussing politics and have come to engage in business or educational work. In consequence, those who are now dealing with politics are, on the contrary, detrimental to the unification of the country. At this juncture, it is necessary for the Government to call together representatives of provinces to deliberate upon national affairs, to release from prison on amnesty all political criminals, to employ men of ability, and to put into effect the provisions of the constitution in conformity with the trend of the popular will.

(4) Parliamentary elections.—The administration of the State shall be carried out according to the popular will and only those members of Parliament who really represent the people shall be elected.

In conclusion, Dr. Sze, quoting examples of the Powers in Europe and America, warns the Chinese Government against the practice of resorting to military power in regard to party strifes and adds that, unless the Chinese authorities concerned reform the above practice, foreign intervention will be forthcoming.—Eastern News Agency.

OPIUM ERADICATION IN ANHUI

Gen. Ma's Distastive Task: Anti-Opium Commission's Work in Fuyang

Peking, Mar. 28.

According to March reports from the Anhui Anti-Opium Association and particularly from the Fuyang branch in that province, there are signs of improvement. Anhui is one of the northern provinces directly controlled by the Central Government and ought easily be made an example and sign of the Government's determination to bring about total suppression. Gen. Mo is making some attempt to carry out the Government Mandate, but his past probably destroys the vigour necessary for radical fulfilment. After raising several millions in 1923 out of general and military protected opium cultivation, and having established the equivalent of a personal monopoly, even going so far as to print his own duty and transit stamps, it will require more than average boldness to enforce prohibition in 1924, and more than average fear on the part of the people before they obey him.

In the Fuyang district, where last year the opium land taxes alone amounted to over half a million dollars, the Government Anti-Opium Commission have, however, succeeded in uprooting about 80 per cent. of poppy fields. This is vouched for by our branch association in Fuyang, which sent two of its members with each of the five groups of investigation commissioners. Our local secretary refers to the Magistrate of Fuyang, Mr. Hsu, who is responsible for investigation in section 2, who stated that at Kao Kuan Temple a vast area of 15 square miles was one vast "opium sea."

At the time of writing this section had yet to be dealt with, and the issue was doubtful because of the stubbornness of the people. The farmers deserve some consideration, for after having paid an excessive land tax, and the poppy planted and well grown to be compelled to uproot it and lose a whole harvest would certainly produce trouble in other lands than China.

EXTENSIVE CULTIVATION.

The district of Haohsien is extensively planted with poppy and here Gen. Ma does not seem inclined to exert pressure, for it is the native place of the late Gen. Chiang Kuei-ti and opium has been extensively cultivated since the establishment of the Republic. Gen. Chiang was formerly a large trafficker in opium, and when Tut'ung of Suiyuan transported large quantities of opium from Suiyuan to Anhui for disposal. Having established cultivation in Haohsien for many years the Anhui Anti-Opium Association is of the opinion that only by extra pressure from Peking will Gen. Ma interfere with this district, and they request us to make representations to the Government upon the matter. Nothing will more convince the people of the Government's determination totally to suppress cultivation, than to find that the law is applied equally to all classes and places.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPAN AND LABOUR CONFERENCE

Selection of a Delegate: Keen Contest Between Rival Candidates

Tokio, Mar. 27.

Voting on the part of the various labour unions in the country to select a labour representative as delegate to the International Labour Conference was carried out on March 25, with the result that Mr. Bunji Suzuki secured 75 votes, Mr. Yozo Nagato 50, and Mr. Kosaburo Sakamoto 5. These three names will now be submitted to the Department of Home Affairs, with which rests the final choice of the delegate.

The favoured candidate is Mr. Bunji Suzuki, the well-known president of the Japan Federation of Labour, though Mr. Nagato, who has been put forward by the arsenal workers, runs him a close second.

The contest between the two men has been strenuously fought, and feeling runs high in both camps. Indeed, the arsenal workers' federation claims that if Mr. Suzuki is the final choice of the Government authorities, the publication of the ballot figures, prefecture by prefecture, will be demanded as a proof that there has been no previous understanding between the officials and the Federation of Labour, as is now alleged.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE BANDIT OUTRAGE IN SZECHUAN

Murderers of Missionaries Sentenced to Prison

Chêngtu, Mar. 15.

Sentence of seven years' imprisonment of the second grade and loss of all civil rights has been passed on Chang Yung-kao and 18 months' imprisonment of the fourth grade passed on Liu Shao-t'ing, accomplices in the murder of the Rev. Watt and the Rev. Whiteside at Mienchow. Two of the chief criminals still at large are reported to have fled to the Tribes' country on the borders of Tibet.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPAN'S WORKING ESTIMATES

Deficit in Revenue to be Met from Last Year's Surplus Funds

Tokio, Mar. 27.

The working estimates for the present fiscal year, which have just been approved by the Cabinet, show a State revenue of Y.1,320,793,000, while the expenditure is calculated at Y.1,347,173,000.

The deficit is to be met out of the surplus funds carried over from last year.

Details are as follows:—

REVENUE.

Ordinary	Y. 1,207,849,000
Extraordinary	112,944,000
Total	Y. 1,320,793,000

EXPENDITURE.

Ordinary	Y. 980,806,000
Extraordinary	366,367,000
Total	Y. 1,347,173,000

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE AND CHINESE LOANS

London, Mar. 31.

The Stock Exchange notify automatic removal of quotations from the official list on May 2 unless the Chinese Government fully resumes service of the bonds issued in Germany, of the Chinese Gold 5 per cent. Loan of 1896, the Chinese Gold 4½ per cent. Loan of 1898, and the Hukuang Railway 5 per cent. Loan of 1911.

The Rumanian 4½ per cent. Loan of 1913 (London issue) will be similarly treated.—Reuter.

The service of the bonds referred to was suspended upon China's entry into the war on the side of the Allies, and the Chinese Government has made the fullest use of "enemy property" legislation in order to escape or postpone financial obligations which should have been resumed upon the cessation of hostilities and the resumption of normal relations. Many of these bonds went on to the London market at the time of issue, in the ordinary course of events, and, becoming the property of British investors, should be free from whatever enemy taint may later have been put upon them. In any case, there is now no legitimate excuse for the Government evading its obligations; but it is chronically "hard up," and expedients of this nature are not surprising.—Ed.

PIRACY IN CHINESE WATERS

Hongkong Government Regulations Criticized in the House of Commons

London, Apr. 2.

In the House of Commons today, Viscount Curzon (Conservative) drew attention to what he described as the alarming increase in piracy in South China waters. He declared that the merchant shipmasters and officers considered the piracy regulations of the Hongkong Government useless. A large British shipping company was anxious to instal wireless on its ships as a safeguard, but was prevented by the Government regulation dealing with the nationality of the operators to be engaged.

Mr. J. H. Thomas, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, referred to his previous reply on the question. He said that the Governor's report would without doubt deal with the question of wireless, and the applicability of the regulation mentioned to Hongkong waters could then be further considered.—Reuter.

An interesting report appears in the "Sinwanpao," to the effect that President Tsao Kun has ordered all his subordinates to wear foreign apparel. The order appears to be unpopular, for in spite of a threat by the President to dismiss those who refuse to obey, the minor officials have declined. Their plea is that they are too poor, which is not unlikely as they have received no salary for several months.

FILIPINO SABOTAGE

Attempt to Cut Off Fresh Water

Manila, Mar. 29.

Twenty Filipino labourers on Corregidor, the fortified island at the mouth of Manila Bay, have been discharged by the Army authorities following an attempt to cut off the fresh water supply last week by tampering with the valves. One hundred and fifty thousand gallons of water were wasted before the sabotage was discovered, leading to a serious shortage. The authorities are uncertain as to whether the attempt was directed against an individual or against the Government.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

OVER HALF A CENTURY REPUTATION
Dr. LE CLERC'S PILLS FOR THE LIVER & KIDNEYS
INVALUABLE for DISEASES of these IMPORTANT ORGANS, GRAVEL, BACKACHE, GOUT, RHEUMATISM
Price 2s., leading CHEMISTS, or Post Free Dr. LE CLERC Med. Co. Haverstock Rd. N.W. 5, London
Dr. LE CLERC'S VEG. APERIENT PILLS. Price 3s.
Dr. LE CLERC'S PILLS FOR ANÆMIA. Price 3s.
SAFE & RELIABLE FOR LADIES AILMENTS
Dr. LE CLERC'S SOAP, 1s. or 6 Tablets 5s.
Sold by BOOTS', TAYLORS', Timothy Whites and leading STORES.

ARE YOU ILL?
Are you ill with any disease due to impure blood such as Eczema, Scrofula, Scurvy, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Boils, Sores, Eruptions, Piles, Glandular Swellings, Blood Poison, Rheumatism, &c.? If so, don't delay, start taking Clarke's Blood Mixture to-day and the experience of thousands whom it has permanently cured will soon be yours. It cures by reason of its great blood purifying properties. Over 50 years success. Pleasant to take. Of all Chemists, &c.
Clarke's Blood Mixture
CURES ALL SKIN AND BLOOD DISEASES.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA

SOUTHERN Rhodesia which was inaugurated as the youngest self governing Colony of the British Empire on October 1, 1923, and which had previously for 33 years been ably administered by the British South Africa Company possesses one of the finest climates in the world with long hours of sunshine, breezy temperate days and cool nights. For those who wish to take up farming or ranching in order to make the most they can of their capital, energy and technical knowledge, or for those who wish to retire from strenuous business or professional life and make a home, Rhodesia offers many advantages unequalled elsewhere. The business, social, sporting, educational and medical facilities bear favourable comparison with those of other countries. Native labour is plentiful and when properly managed is cheap and efficient. Taxation is light. Good land in healthy surroundings and amidst fine scenery is plentiful and not expensive.

Full information is obtainable on application to The Secretary, Southern Rhodesia Settlers' Board (attached to the Government of Southern Rhodesia), P. O. Box 372, Salisbury S., Rhodesia.

The giving of advice to prospective settlers will be facilitated if applicants will advise the Board in detail of their circumstances and the amount of capital they would be prepared to invest in a suitable venture.

During February, 50 per cent. Discount for each while they last!

Our Annual Januray Stock-taking brings to light this compendious

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

A Grand Miscellancy—1,500 Titles

From every corner of our stores and godowns

Your choice of good reading in Fiction, Essays, Religion, and the Teaching Branches at

HALF PRICE

Send for complete lists

EDWARD EVANS & SONS, LTD.

30 N. SZECHUEN ROAD, SHANGHAI. 137 VICTORIA ROAD, TIENTSIN

SHANGHAI NEWS

A MERCHANT KING'S VENTURE

Centenary of the Netherlands Trading Society: Steady Development in the East

Not the least interesting of the many commercial anniversaries recently celebrated in Shanghai was the recognition last Friday of the centenary of the Netherlands Trading Society. At noon the manager will receive guests at the Bank's offices, 21 The Bund, and there is certain to be a large attendance, for the Netherlands [illegible] throughout the Far East.

In 1824 the economic situation in the Netherlands and her colonies called for special measures. Shipping was heavily subsidized and industry was supported out of a fund for the encouragement of national industry. King William I, the Merchant King, took the initiative in the establishment of a big company for the purpose of furthering trade, shipping, shipbuilding, fisheries, agriculture and industry in the Netherlands and the overseas possessions, with a view to uniting various scattered efforts made by less powerful individuals without satisfactory result. The Royal Promoter hoped "with God's help to assure for the nation the advantages to which it is entitled by its rank under the nations, the situation of its territories and the importance of colonization."

VALUABLE MONOPOLIES.

This company, the Netherlands Trading Society, obtained under its charter far-reaching monopolies which enabled further assistance to and virtual control of all sailing vessels trading to the Indies. Outward cargoes comprised mainly cotton goods manufactured in mills which again were practically under its control and the present cotton industry in Twente is greatly indebted to the Society for assistance in the early days. On their return voyage, the vessels carried colonial products which were delivered to the Government under the Culture System. Their sale under the Consignment System was another monopoly of the Society. As shipping and industry grew and were able to dispense with protection, the scope of the Society's monopolies was greatly diminished and in 1853 the second era started, during which the company developed into a big mercantile concern trading with products from the Indies, cotton from America and British India, wool, hides and horn from South Africa, Australia and South America, coffee from Ceylon and various products from Japan and China.

After a number of successful years, the Society abandoned this field, as conditions had changed considerably and it was deemed preferable that commerce in produce should be left rather to private firms and that the Society should devote its efforts and capital to the financing of the trade rather than to competition. As such it has asserted itself in a remarkable way since 1880 and, as the leading bank in the Netherlands and the Dutch East Indies, it has established agencies in 27 commercial centres in the Far East. The re-establishment of the Shanghai agency dates to 1903.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE INDIES.

On the commemoration of its centenary, the Society can look back on a long history of great commercial achievements. There is in the Netherlands and in the Dutch East Indies hardly any branch of commercial activity or public service with which the Society is not at this time connected in one way or another. Railways and tramways, ocean shipping and inter-island communication, industrial and agricultural enterprises of all kinds have had its interest and help. Java's enormous growth into one of the richest producing islands in the world is greatly due to the work of the Society in its early days and to the financial support which it continues to give to the planters. Credit also must be given for the active part which the Society has taken in the development of Sumatra, Celebes and the other islands. In the course of its existence the company has increased its capital from 24 to 150 million Guilders and it is interesting to note that during its long history only twice have the yearly balances closed with a loss, in 1826 and 1828. Shareholders have received an average dividend per annum of 8 per cent.

With special relation to China, it is interesting to know that the tea industry in the Dutch East Indies took a high flight after one of the Society's tea-tasters, in the late twenties, penetrated into the province of Honan to study the Chinese tea industry. From a number of plants which he took from Fokien to Java various experimental gardens have originated, worked by Chinese under government supervision. Though in later years the Chinese plants were substituted by others from Assam, Java's special qualities for producing tea mainly were proved by the earlier experiments with the China plants.

WEDDINGS

Dumbarton-Trueman

A marriage of much interest to the Shanghai community was celebrated in Holy Trinity Cathedral on Saturday afternoon when Miss Nora Trueman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Trueman, was married to Mr. George Frederick Dumbarton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Dumbarton of Dulwich, England. The Cathedral was beautifully decorated for the occasion with blossoming boughs and bamboo. The ceremony was performed by the Very Rev. Dean Symons.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of white silk lace over georgette, its draperies caught in front with a buckle of orange blossoms. The long tulle veil which formed a trail was fastened with orange blossoms and the bridal bouquet was of pale pink carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Helen Macnaghten wore an effective gown of cyclamen georgette and carried freesias. The bride's mother wore a handsome gown of black and white crepe satin, with hat to match. One of the interesting features of the ceremony was the presence of a guard of honour from the Girl Guides, Company 3, of which the bride is Captain.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. H. V. Hummel, M.C., as best man and Messrs. Bond, Lester Arnold, Trueman, and Trenchard Davis acted as ushers. The reception, which was held at the house of the bride's parents, 547 Avenue Foch, was attended by hosts of friends of the popular young couple. The health of the bride was proposed by Mr. Wheen and responded to suitably by Mr. Dumbarton, who then proposed the health of the bridesmaid, Miss Macnaghten for whom Mr. Hummel replied.

Mrs. Dumbarton wore for her going away dress a green woollen suit with a green hat. The honeymoon will be spent in Mokanshan in the beautiful country house which Mr. Trueman built last summer.

Mackinnon-Sweet

A very pretty wedding was quietly celebrated on Saturday afternoon in Holy Trinity Cathedral, the Very Rev. Dean Symons, officiating, when Miss Norah Sweet, daughter of Mrs. F. Rayden, became the bride of Mr. J. M. Mackinnon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mackinnon of Innellan, Scotland. The bride, who was given away by Mr. F. Rayden, wore a stylish costume of white brocaded serge with hat to match and carried a bouquet of white carnations, roses and orange blossoms. Her sister, Miss Dorothy Rayden, acted as bridesmaid, wearing a white serge dress and white and yellow hat. The bride's mother wore a sand-coloured dress of curly stockinette trimmed with green and tan leather and a dark green hat of georgette and green feathers. Mr. A. M. Howat acted as best man After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 25 Yu Yuen Road, from which Mr. and Mrs. Mackinnon left for their honeymoon which will be spent in Kuling, the bride wearing a cape costume of grey curly stockinette, trimmed with grey figured crepe de chine.

Tyrrell-Chapin

A quiet wedding, attended only by the close friends of the bridal couple was solemnized on Saturday evening at the Carlton when Miss Madeline Chapin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Chapin of Honolulu, became the bride of Mr. Cyril Tyrrell of the Robert Dollar Company. The Rev. C. M. Drury of the Community Church performed the ceremony, which took place in a floral bower of green and white. The bride was given away by Mr. George Brush. After the ceremony a reception was held at the Carlton at which Mr. J. Harold Dollar proposed the health of Mr. and Mrs. Tyrrell and a wedding dinner was later given at the Astor House. After a short honeymoon in Hangchow Mr. and Mrs. Tyrrell will be at home at 7 Route de Grouchy.

How-Ng Quinn

A pretty Chinese wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at the Allen Memorial Church, Dr. F. L. Hawks Pott officiating, when Miss Rose Ng Quinn, youngest daughter of Mrs. Ng Quinn of Hongkong, was married to Mr. Bang How, secretary of the Commercial Press, Ld. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Sydney Ng Quinn, wore white charmeuse with silver embroidery and chantilly lace, with a train trimmed with lovers knots and pearls. A crown of orange blossoms fastened the tulle veil and her bouquet was white roses and maiden-hair fern. Her maid of honour, Miss Mary How, wore jade green satin, trimmed with silver lace and carried sweet peas. The bridesmaids, the Misses Mabel and Edith Tang, Elsie Tom, S. K. Wu, Mayling Soong, and Lois How wore georgette gowns of the pastel shades and Miss Rene Chur, the little flower girl wore pink tulle and carried a basket of ping sweet peas.

The bridegroom was accompanied by Mr. H. L. Huang as best man and the page boys were the bride's nephews, Mossy Lai and Mark Wei. After the ceremony a reception was held in the ball room of the Astor House and a dinner was given at the Great Eastern Hotel before Mr. and Mrs. How left on their honeymoon. Mr. Bang How is a graduate of the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania.

Furer-Leeds

The marriage took place in Tientsin on March 25 of Mr. Furer and Mrs. Leeds. The bride being British by former marriage, the wedding took place at the British Consulate as well as at All Saints Church. The "North China Daily Mail" announces that a marriage is to take place in Tientsin shortly of Mr. William Robert Beetlestone, engineer at Linsi, and Miss Paskey Mary Morley Hill, who has also resided recently at Linsi. Mr. Edouard Hippolyte Desiré Scheltus, of the Asiatic Petroleum Co.'s engineer in staff, living at 4 Nicolai Road Russian Concession, announces his forthcoming marriage to Miss Dorothy Vernon, who has been about one year in Tientsin, on the Victoria Hospital nursing staff.

Roberts-Puncheon

Mr. Arthur William Roberts, of Messrs. Lane, Crawford, & Co., was married at St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, on March 21, to Miss Edith Puncheon, daughter of Mr. James Puncheon, of the Hongkong and Whampoa Dock, Co., Ld. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. G. R. Lindsay, The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a gown of ivory charmeuse and silk lace, trimmed with seed pearls and orange blossom. She wore a tulle veil and carried a bouquet of china roses. Her bridesmaids were Miss Doris Puncheon (sister) and Miss Dorothy Goodman. Mr. T. R. Reeves fulfilled the duties of best man. Mrs. Fred Goodman was present as Matron of Honour.

JUDGE LOBINGIER'S RETIREMENT

Allied American Associations' Farewell Tiffin: Growth of the Colony

Judge C. S. Lobingier, on completing the first full term of Judge of the United States Court for China, on Friday was given a farewell luncheon at the Astor Grill by a number of American organizations, those represented being:—The American Chamber of Commerce, the American Association of China, the Far Eastern American Bar Association, the China Central Committee, American Red Cross, the General Ward Post (American Legion), the American Company, S.V.C., the American Troop, S.V.C., the Shanghai American School, the American Club, the Columbia Country Club, the American University Club, the American Baseball Club.

Judge Lobingier said:—

There could be no better index of the Shanghai American colony's growth than this gathering to-day of the officers and committees of its representative organizations. It is a little more than a decade since I entered upon the term whose completion you have done me the honour to observe upon this occasion. At that time, as I recall, there were only two of these organizations in existence—the American Association and the Athletic Association. To-day we have assembled here the representatives of about a dozen, exemplifying practically every phase of communal activity. It is clear that the growth of our colony has not been in numbers alone and that while it has been expanding it has also been differentiating. All the more gratifying to me is it that these varying phases of our colony's life should all be represented upon an occasion like this. I can conceive of no more satisfying reward for a public official than such a response from such a group of organizations. The approval which is most worth while is that which comes from those among whom one has lived and laboured.

I know that your presence here to-day is also a mark of your interest in and regard for the institution over which I have had the honour to preside during these past 10 years. In that interest I naturally share, for one could not devote 10 of the best years of one's life to an institution without acquiring a deep and abiding concern for its welfare. I am sure that we are all agreed that the United States Court for China must be maintained upon the highest level of prestige and efficiency and that every factor which tends to cripple or weaken it must be eliminated. One of the important factors in its successful operation is a competent and co-operating corps of assistants to its Judge and in this feature I feel that I have been remarkably fortunate. With two or three exceptions—belonging to a time now well past—those who have been selected to assist me, from the United States Attorney down to the Chinese servants, have been singularly loyal, faithful and efficient. Without their help the Court could never have performed its functions, especially in recent years.

I regret to be obliged to add that one important member of the staff—the Clerk—is greatly overburdened and another—the Commissioner—is greatly underpaid. I have made every possible effort for the relief of these worthy and capable officials and I now ask for them some of the effective help you have given me, for I speak from experience when I say that the American organizations in China need only be convinced that a cause is worthy in order to espouse it.

Looking back over 10 years I can think of nothing more strengthening than your support and encouragement, and with that continued support I feel sure that the opportunities of the United States Court for China for service to Americans and all others here—not excepting the Chinese themselves—will constantly expand. Service is the one reason for its existence. Now, gentlemen, permit me to express my profound thanks for this function. It crowns a long series of testimonials and courtesies whose memory never fade.

Judge Lobingier, left Shanghai on Thursday, on the Admiral Line str. President McKinley for his home in America. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lobingier. It is interesting to note that in all the years that Judge Lobingier has functioned in Shanghai, not a single appeal taken against his decisions to the Ninth Court of Appeals in San Francisco, has been reversed—truly a worthy record. Mr. and Mrs. Lobingier have not made any announcement as to their return to the Orient.

RAILWAY MAGNATE IN SHANGHAI

Visit of Mr. Byram, President of Chicago-Milwaukee Line

Mr. H. E. Byram, President of the Chicago-Milwaukee-St. Paul Railway left Shanghai for Hangchow last night.

In conversation with a "North-China Daily News" representative on Thursday afternoon, Mr. Byram stated that he and his family had come to the Orient purely on pleasure bent. In the course of his duties Mr. Byram has considerable dealings with the East, and as a natural consequence he has also always evinced a keen desire to see something of it. While he is here he intends taking a number of trips into the Interior by train, and at the invitation of a number of Chinese bodies he will give them his impressions of the Chinese Government Railways.

Up-to-date Mr. Byram has seen nothing whatsoever of railways in the East. He visited Canton from Hongkong by boat, owing to the fact that the Kowloon-Canton Railway was not running a through service at the time, and he came back by boat. At Manila he had no cause to use the railway. He is, therefore, all the more keen to see something of railways in this part of the World.

Mr. Byram expressed considerable surprise on his arrival in Shanghai. "Chicago," he said, "is a long way from here and we don't quite realize what a huge city Shanghai is, how full of business and how really alive." He expressed, also, admiration of the way in which the streets of the city are laid out.

During the afternoon Mr. Byram visited the Shanghai-Nanking Railway station and had a chat with Mr. A. C. Clear.

Asked whether it was true, as has been rumoured, that he came to Shanghai in connexion with the agreement which exists between the Chicago-Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway and the Osaka Shosen Kaisha Line, which arranges for the mutual handling of passenger and cargo freights at the Pacific ports and Eastern ports, Mr. Byram denied the story. He explained that the contract had been in existence for some years and there was no reason why it should not continue.

The Chinese have long since discovered the value of Shanghai as a recruiting ground for skilled labour, and another raid is just being made. A representative from the Mukden Arsenal has been sent here to engage a number of skilled mechanics. The wages offered are $50 and $60 per month, and numerous applications have been made for the jobs.

The Shanghai Bureau of Foreign Affairs has received instructions from the Peking Ministry with reference to foreigners in the interior (places other than the treaty ports) of China. These are:—(1) that no foreigners are to be permitted to establish factories in places other than those named in the treaties; (2) that no foreigners are to be permitted to import or to sell livestock in the interior; (3) that no foreigners are to be permitted to buy land in the interior; and (4) that no foreigners without huchao (permits) are to be allowed to travel in the interior.

ROYAL AIR FORCE REUNION

The Air as the First Line of Offence and Defence: Apathy in Shanghai

The fifth reunion dinner of members of the Royal Air Force (1914-1918), at the Shanghai Club on Saturday, was a great success. The menu cards were of a very tasteful design, illustrated by Sapajou, having on the front a comparison of the ancient and modern in an aeroplane flying above a Peking cart outside a Chinese walled city. Other pages carried caricatures of several prominent local flying officers. Capt. R. N. Swann presided and the guests of honour were Paymaster-Commander E. T. M. Green, R.N., and Col. W. F. L. Gordon, C.M.G., D.S.O. The toasts were "The King," "The Silent Toast," "Our Guests," "The Royal Air Force," and "The Sister Services."

In proposing the toast of "The Royal Air Force," the Chairman said:—

Our gallant Chairman last year stated that those present indeed formed a happy family, the esprit de corps which was in every one so manifest being a splendid augury for the future traditions of the R. A. F. There has been no reason to retract those words, and although we are a small band to-night when compared with other units we may remember with pride that it was the personnel of the R. N. A. S., the R. F. C. and the R. A. F. during the great war who made the force what it is to-day. Our sister services were continuing the good traditions of their respective units, whereas it was for us to inaugurate traditions.

There have been many reductions in the Service since most of us left it, but in spite of the destruction and the sweeping away nothing of the roots and foundations of the service, as it was in the war, have been destroyed, as evidenced by the fifth annual re-union dinner. The Regiment had 30,000 officers and 265,000 other ranks at the time of the Armistice. For every 20 then we have only one now. In spite of this great reduction, the apathy of the British Government, and, I regret to say, the supineness of the Sister Services, the work of the Air Force since the Armistice, in Afghanistan and in many other lands, culminating in the brilliant work of the "Z" expedition in Somaliland, when the Air Force fought on its own, has proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that the air must be the first line of offence and defence.

IMPORTANCE OF AVIATION.

The Secretary of State for Air under the new Labour Government stated on February 7 last, "The future is in the air and the chief menace to the Empire is from the air." To-day we have the Service recognized as a distinct branch of the Forces and not an auxiliary to them as in the great war. The importance of aviation is becoming more marked every day; it is becoming a distinct feature of our very existence. We read of women pilots who have flown the Channel, of the American flight around the world, of our poor lone aviator attempting, as they attempted in the great war, to establish the traditions of the British Air Force. We hear of the contemplated expansion both as regards the permanent Force and the creation of a Territorial Air Force, which latter gives us food for thought in Shanghai on the wisdom of the present apathy of the Council regarding aerial co-operation with the existing defence forces, but we also read of the great efforts being made by other Powers to establish aerial supremacy and wonder if the efforts of our own Government are sufficient. The lessons of the past are fresh in all our minds and should prove a safe guide for dealing with the probabilities of the future. Neither Army nor Navy can be complete without an efficient Air Force and with the intense interest which is being displayed by all Powers, friendly and otherwise, in aviation in all its branches it behoves our Government to leave no stone unturned in their efforts to regain that supremacy which we ultimately gained, at what cost we all know, during the great raw.

LOCAL SHORTCOMINGS.

Locally we are without any possible means for repelling attacks from the air and the importation of aeroplanes into China during the the past year can only bring us to the conclusion that our defence schemes have got to be radically revised. It is the duty of each one of us here to-night to do everything in our power to bring such revision about. All who have been in the Air Services are an asset to the Empire, and, I venture to say, continue to be an asset to the Service, for I feel sure that the affection for it will prompt you to endeavour to maintain the interest of the rising generation in the future of the Air Force and to watch over it and see that it is not allowed to deteriorate. We are jealous of its reputation; the reputation that we helped to earn.

LADY AUTHORS IN SHANGHAI

Reception at U. S. Consulate to Miss Mary Floyd Williams and Miss Joan Conquest

Miss Mary Floyd Williams, PH. D., an author, of San Francisco, and Miss Joan Conquest, the English author whose novel "Desert Love" has been so popular, were the guests of honour at a tea given by Mrs. Edwin S. Cunningham at the American Consulate General last Friday afternoon.

Dr. Williams, who is the author of two books on the San Francisco Committee of Vigilance of 1851, a writer on general subjects, and a lecturer in the Extension Courses of the University of California, is spending a few days in Shanghai on her trip around the world, but intends to return in the autumn for an extended trip through China and India. That Dr. Williams is no tourist tripper is shown by the fact that she left the United States in 1922, spent a year in Australia and New Zealand and six months in Manila. Her witty and informative address yesterday afternoon was largely concerned with her experiences in Australia and the contacts formed through the English-Speaking Union of which she is an enthusiastic member.

Miss Conquest's throat prevented her from speaking but she, too, has promised to return to Shanghai as her publishers have asked her for a novel of China, and she has the laudable, if unusual, ambition to become well acquainted with a country before using it as a background for a romance. Some delightful songs by Mrs. Connell and Mrs. Cunningham concluded a most interesting afternoon.

AN AMERICAN AUTHOR IN CHINA

Mr. Wallace Irwin a Visitor to Shanghai on a Rest Cure

Mr. Wallace Irwin, the creator of the "Japanese Schoolboy," author of various short stories and novels, the latest being "Lew Tyler's Wives," was in Shanghai yesterday as a member of the str. Resolute's round-the-world party. When seen at the house of his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Branagan, Mr. Irwin said that he was "sampling China," and that it was his desire and intention to return for a stay of at least a year.

Mr. Irwin said he was supposed to be taking this trip as a rest cure. He had been working hard on his last novel, which has been appearing in serial form as "Tomorrow's Bread," and will be published in book form and filmed as "The Golden Bed," and he must have sprained a nerve or something of the sort. Anyway, he went to pieces and the doctors sent Mrs. Irwin and him off.

Asked about this novel he said:—"I'm afraid I'm a doubled-faced, Janus-like sort of person. While I enjoy writing the schoolboy and light stuff I feel all the time as if I had something different to say that had to be put into a novel. 'Lew Tyler's Wives' was my first, and I intend to write a third after 'Tomorrow's Bread' to complete the series."

"Yes, the Japanese letters are a relaxation, and they paid expenses while I was doing heavier work. It's amusing how Togo survives. I had the idea of writing some 24 letters to start with, but I can't seem to stop, although I have killed him off in different publications and have thought various times that he was 'good and over.' This travelogue has an entirely different angle because hitherto the humour has lain in the reactions of a Japanese boy to situations surprising to him and familiar to us. Now the case is reversed.

AN INDIAN EPISODE.

We saw the Taj Mahal by moonlight and were at Benares for the eclipse of the moon. Never saw anything like it in my life. Here were five millions of pilgrims, more than the population of New York, gathered round to save the world. Their prayers and sacrifices to induce Siva to interfere on their behalf and prevent his blood-thirsty wife Durgha from swallowing the moon and deranging the rest of the sidereal system were eerie in the extreme. I never in my life had felt such a sense of invisible powers at work as when I heard their chants. Then at Darjeeling we were lucky enough to see the sun set over Mt. Everest so we felt that Siva was arranging the planets in our interests.

"And China? Yes, we were particularly interested in Canton, which we insisted on visiting. We were warned against the smells of the native city, but I want to say that we found it far cleaner than some cities I have seen at home and that the smell couldn't compare with those I've smelled between 96th and 115th Streets on the East Side of New York City. Canton Christian College impressed me very favourably, specially the practical work they are doing. Their inquiry into the cause of the silk blight, and improving the silk culture is bound to help China tremendously."

"And for Shanghai? Well, I've been so kindly entertained here that I am afraid I shall carry away with me mainly the memory of hospitalities and a collection of lacquer which my friends have helped me to assemble. But we are coming back to become better acquainted."

LUNGTAN CEMENT WORKS

A Description of an Industry Fostered by Chinese Enterprise: Hopes of Extension in the Future

A numerous party of foreigners and Chinese on Sunday visited the recently opened works of the Chin Portland Cement Co., Ld., at Lungtan, on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway a few miles from Nanking. Visitors, among whom were representatives of the leading foreign engineering firms, and professional and business men, were very greatly interested in the lay-out and equipment of the works, representative of the new industrial life radiating from Shanghai and other centres, and destined in course of time to revolutionize the economic life of this country.

A number of influential Chinese in Shanghai, among them Lord Li and Mr. S. C. Yao, the well-known building contractor, had the idea of this enterprise in mind for some time past and its completion represents carefully considered plans. The works are admirably situated, the square mile of ground on which they stand having within its limits limestone hills which should yield an almost inexhaustble supply of material—limestone, clay deposits and coal. The superior quality of these materials has been known to the people of the neighbourhood from ancient times, and many lime kilns have for years been at work in the vicinity, but until now only the most primitive methods have been applied to these valuable natural resources. There is excellent coal to be mined beneath the limestone deposits, and already four shafts have been opened and are being worked, by native methods.

DETAILS OF THE PLANT.

The new factory building is mainly composed of a spacious steel structure, with an area of approximately 10,000 square feet, and is served with numerous other buildings and offices, including laboratory, engineers' residences, etc. The plant consists of two water tube boilers, supplied by Messrs. Babcock & Wilcox, one 700 h.p. steam engine directly coupled with the generator, 14 motors, supplied by Messrs. Siemens China Co., and one 80 h.p. crude oil engine with generator, supplied by the General Electric Co., has been installed by Messrs. Nagel & Kaemp, of Hamburg, the laboratory outfit being also of German make. Light railways have been laid down throughout the works and in every respect the place is well equipped for extensive production. The whole plant is actuated by electric power and is under the supervision of German engineers. The "wet" process of manufacture is in use and, with one or two exceptions, the complete process is automatic from the feeding of the material into the machine until the finished product emerges from the immense tubular conveyors and furnaces, and is automatically packed.

RESULTS GIVEN BY TESTS.

The factory has a daily output of 500 barrels or 1,000 bags of cement, and of a quality which has proved to be first class, uniformity being maintained by hourly tests, day and night, in the laboratory, so that strict control of the process of manufacture is maintained. Visitors were much interested in watching the tests applied, and of which the results were:—

Tensile strength: Neat cement (after seven days), 730-lb. per square inch. (S.M.C. requirement 450-lb.); sand and cement, 230-lb. (S.M.C. requirement, 200-lb.). Compression strength: neat cement, 9,000 lb. per square inch; sand and cement, 2,600-lb.

In addition to the production of cement, the company is also operating five modern lime kilns, 16 brick and tile kilns, and one fire brick kiln. The concern is very well staffed, and is under the managing directorship of Mr. Yao King-sec, who is conducting affairs from the head office at 62 Kiangse Road. Mr. S. C. Yao is managing director, and Mr. Woo Ling-sue, chairman of directors.

PROSPERITY ASSURED.

Following inspection of the factory on Sunday afternoon, guests gathered in the works' offices and were welcomed by Lord Li, who who gave a brief account of the enterprise. He said that the originator of the scheme was Mr. Yao Sing-kee, a prominent figure in the building world of Shanghai, who had applied his usual ability and perseverance to realizing a project which he had had in view for the past 10 years. It was he who discovered the natural resources of the Lungtan district and, having done this, he set about the realization of his cherished scheme, energy and business acumen enabling him to overcome all opposition and raise the necessary capital, and to-day he had the satisfaction of seeing his project successful. The natural deposits of pure limestone and clay were sufficient to keep the works going indefinitely, and this, with coal waiting to be mined in the neighbourhood and easy lines of communication—(a railway siding communicating with the S. N. R., and a main canal to the Yangtze three miles distant)—the undertaking had a certainty of success. The plant of the company was capable of turning out 500 barrels of cement, each weighing 400 lb., per day, and as the demand for this kind of building material now-a-days far exceeded the supply, the company had hopes of building up a model of Chinese industry. Already, the directors were thinking of extending the works in the near future. They did not claim that their present outfit was perfect, but they believed they had made a fair start on a solid foundation.

On behalf of visitors, Mr. W. J. Davey, speaking in English and in Chinese, proposed the toast of the directors of the company and success to their enterprise—which toast was given due attention—and he thanked the company for the generous way in which visitors had been received and entertained during the day.

SILVER coins of the 20 cent. denomination are said to have been exported from Canton to Shanghai in large quantities recently, but the reason for this is not explained in the Canton paper from which the information is gleaned. Shipments of $500,000 by B. & S. steamers are mentioned.

"OLD LADY 31"

First Production by American Woman's Club: A Comedy of Village Life

The latest group of amateur actors made their first bow to the Shanghai public on Monday at the Carlton Theatre with a performance of "Old Lady 31," a comedy written by Rachel Crothers and presented by the Dramatic Department of the American Woman's Club under the able direction of Mrs. Gardner Crane, Chairman of the department. While the scene is laid in a small New England community in 1870, its cheery, wholesome plot made an appeal which is perennial and universal so that the enjoyment of its homespun philosophy of life was not confined to the Americans present, but captured the whole audience.

The atmosphere of the play is quaintly picturesque and much admiration was expressed for the sets, which were designed by Mr. Gardner Crane and painted by Mr. Ralph Peyton Griffin. The brief prologue shows Angie, played by Mrs. Crane, and her husband, Abe, or "Old Lady 31" (Mr. Crane) taking leave of their vine wreathed cottage with the garden full of hollyhocks and dahlias, and setting out, she to the Old Ladies' Home and he to the Poor Farm.

On the front verandah of the Home the philosophical spinster Nancy (Mrs. R. I. Clapp), the superior Mrs. Homans (Mrs. S. C. Kingsbury) and the acrimonious Sarah Jane (Mrs. A. M. Sheldon) indulge in a few ladylike recriminations at the opening of the first act. Later they are joined by the sweet-faced housekeeper of the Home, Abigail (Mrs. P. A. Sargeant), the flirtatious Blossy (Mrs. H. L. Cumming) and later pretty little Mary, (Miss Loraine Fleming) daughter of the Chairman of the "Home Board," appears with her carpenter lover, John (Mr. S. R. Schlobohm) in the background. A common impulse of sympathy leads the inmates of the Home to invite Abe to stay with them, along with Angie, so that they may be spared separation.

The succeeding acts take place in the "best room" of the Home, fearfully and wonderfully furnished with the current atrocities in the way of furniture, pictures, and artistic jim-cracks including painted vases and conch shells. A parlour organ and a huge family Bible on a marble-topped table are prominent features of decoration but the costumes themselves, ranging over a period of some years, as the old ladies needs must wear out their old clothes, are the greatest joy to the beholder.

As the plot develops we meet the man of all work, Mike, (Mr. P. W. Giovannini), Captain Darby (Mr. H. L. Paddock) the finally accepted lover of the coy Blossy, Minerva, played by Mrs. Rubel, Elizabeth, Mrs. V. G. Lyman, Mrs. R. W. Squires (Granny) and also another inmate of the Home, played Mrs. C. L. Boynton. Abe, gallantly determined to make the best of his unaccustomed surroundings, is in danger of being spoiled by the attentions of 30 women, until his wife has to warn him that "it's a turrible dangerous thing to be a hero." Amusing and pathetic misunderstandings which arise, together with the progress of the idyllic little love affair between Mary and John, form a thoroughly interesting story.

The winsome comedy, shot through with humour and tears, affords excellent opportunity for character work, but the different types are not so over-emphasized as to become grotesque. The elderly hero and heroine, Abe and Angie, as played by Mr. and Mrs. Crane, themselves once on the professional stage, convince the audience of their reality from the minute Abe carries out the trunk from the old home and Angie turns the key in its door, till the final curtain. In comparison the young lovers' romance had to take a second place, although Mr. Schlobohm made a delightfully natural lad and Miss Fleming made up in youth what she lacked in stage experience.

The romantically inclined are saved in good measure, for the love affair of the kittenish Blossy is brought to its pleasing, if hardly passionate, culmination when Captain Darby takes a firm stand, after 20 years of patient wooing. Other excellent work was done by the acidulous Sarah Jane, crabbed but capable, Nancy, Mrs. Homans, Abigail, the head of the Home, and Mike the woman-hater.

The progress made by the Tramway Co. in relaying the permanent way in Nanking Road is extremely slow and it would appear that measures easily could be taken to quicken up the work.—Mr. C. R. Burkill at the annual meeting of the Automobile Club of China.

The costumes of the play were no inconsiderable part of its charm. Those were the days when figures were really figures and there was no mystery about a lady's waist. From the bewitching frills and pantalettes of Mary to the elegancies of Mrs. Homans or the uncompromising austerities of Sarah Jane all the dresses were fascinating pictures of bygone days.

"SHANGHAI TIMES" BUILDING FIRE

Little Damage in Offices

Firemen were fighting the flames in the "Shanghai Times" office all through the night on Thursday, and at mid-day last Friday wooden beams were still burning. The building was then expected to collapse at any moment and Soochow Road and a portion of Museum Road were completely blocked to traffic—foot and wheel. Not even members of the office staff were allowed to go into the building—or rather the shell of the building, which was all that was left standing. The danger came from the fact that built into the brick walls are a number of timber beams for support. These were smouldering fiercely throughout the morning and the Brigade officers were of opinion that when they burned through the building must collapse.

Strangely enough, although the building was completely gutted and every floor appeared to be in a mass of flames on Thursday night, yet the editor's office remained intact. The door to the office was burned through, the window sashes and the walls were burned, but the desk and equipment was undamaged excepting by water. The unhappy part was, however, that the door to the room was shut and if once opened the whole wall would almost certainly have collapsed on the person who took the risk. The reporters' room also, which adjoins the editor's office, was only partially damaged. The walls were burned and the ceiling fell through, but the reporters' desks were untouched. The linotype machines still stood, looking as good as formerly. But they also, if touched, were liable to fall to pieces. There are two huge cracks in front of the building while the wall in Museum Road bulges dangerously.

The two fires demoralized the tram service for some little time especially the larger one, for with lines of hose strung over the northern lines on North Soochow Road, the system came to a complete halt for residents in the Hongkew district. The delay in the Western district was but slight. Trams finally had to be re-routed over the Woosung Road and Chêkiang Road lines and until early yesterday morning, patrons along North Szechuen Road got to this side of Soochow Creek behind time.

A rather ironical incident is told in connexion with the destruction of the "Shanghai Times" plant. As is the custom in the local newspapers, several hours before the paper is put to bed an employee is delegated to inquire from the Central Fire Station if there have been fires of note. As it happened the first person whom Miss Douglass saw after she discovered the fire, was the Chinese boy, who usually made the call at night. He quickly got to the telephone and instead of his usual query, this time demanded that the Brigade hurry to the scene.

We have been informed by responsible people that it had been proposed within the next 30 days to instal a concrete floor on the first storey and had it been in place it would have prevented the spread of the flames to the machinery, linotypes and presses below.

LOSS AND INSURANCE.

Investigations reveal that nearly Tls. 500,000 insurance was carried by the various tenants on the four floors, though just what the ratio between damaged goods and insurance is, it will require lengthy study by adjusters to ascertain.

Older Shanghai residents will recall that this corner has been the scene of two serious outbreaks in the past 10 years. In 1915 the Hall & Holtz bakery was on the identical premises and when the flames were finally quenched, the building was in more or less the same condition as it now stands. The other occurred in the Eastern Garage in 1918. Now that the building is ruined, it is probable that the proposed widening of Soochow Road at this point and the extension of the Chapoo Road Bridge will be undertaken. Under the new building laws, the new structure to be built here must be of reinforced concrete, making a nearly fire-proof building, which can never be the scene of such a conflagration again.

Last Friday night the beams in the walls had burned themselves out and the walls remained standing. The roads were still blocked, however, but there seemed to be no immediate danger of the walls toppling in. It is thought the building will almost certainly have to be pulled down.

Opium and other drugs seized by the subordinates of the City Procurator during the second half of last year will be burnt in the Procurator's compound on Friday next.

AUTOMATIC PHONES IN SHANGHAI

A Successful Test at the New East Exchange: Ready for Operation in Two Weeks

Last Friday the "North-China Daily News" gave an exclusive account of the Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co.'s new automatic exchange and a promise was given to supply a more detailed description of the apparatus at a later date. As a matter of fact, after attending a reception at the new East Exchange in Lay Road, on Wednesday, it must be admitted that it would be difficult to live up to that promise. None but a highly skilled engineer possibly could understand the intricate apparatus and though Mr. P. H. Cole, the engineer-in-chief and general manager, supplied elaborate notes on the subject and his assistants courteously endeavoured to make the matter plain, it is doubtful whether the general public really would be interested in reading such technical details.

One thing can be said—that several newspaper men personally tested the apparatus and all agreed that, though not one of them had seen it before, they were able to call up and get connected far more quickly than is the case with the system now in use. The working is as simple as can be and when one gains experience by practice a great deal of time must be saved. Many hundreds of people inspected our linotypes after the opening of the new building and were amazed at the working of that machine. The automatic telephone may be compared with it. In one case the operator plays upon keys as upon a typewriter; in the case of the telephone he swings a small wheel, and in each case the machine does the rest. The human element at the switchbboard is eliminated and the automatic telephone does not go on strike.

This particular installation is the only one of the sort outside Europe, though there are other patterns successfully working in Great Britain. It was natural to ask whether it had proved satisfactory in actual working for a sufficiently long period and the engineer replied that it was the only installation used in Stockholm and several other large cities, which had entirely discarded the operator type telephones. The new exchange has 700 lines, with extensions to 1,000 and it will be opened during the next two weeks to public service, though at present it is not connected up to subscribers. Eventually the whole of Shanghai will be automatically connected.

Although the manner of operating is so simple that it seems scarcely possible for mistakes to be made, yet it should be mentioned that various alarms and signalling devices also have been provided whereby notification is given to the attendant should any part of the apparatus stop functioning, or should there be undue delay in a call going through. Provision is also made for assisting people in difficulties in cases, for instance, where a subscriber cannot or does not know how to use the dial. In such cases the calling subscriber is connected to an attendant who can plug into his line and complete the call for him.

Humidity plays an important part in the successful working of the plant and steps have been taken automatically to regulate the moisture in the air. When the humidity reaches a certain percentage, electric heaters and fans instantly are set working and when the air is again at its correct degree of dryness the heaters and fans automatically stop.

THE BRITISH GAOL

Negotiations for Its Purchase by Council from British Government

Amongst the many interesting items in the Estimates section of the Municipal Council's Budget Report for this year is the following:—"Under Police Force is contained provision for acquiring the British Gaol site in terms of a very favourable offer by the British Government." And again:—"Under Police Force, provision is made for purchase of the building of the British Gaol, Tls. 130,000."

At present nothing much can be said about this matter, because the deal has not been carried through and presumably the Council's estimate is included only in case the parties should agree and the ratepayers give their sanction to the scheme. It must always have been a wonder why the British Government ever established such a palatial gaol as that in Amoy Road, for really it is a splendid place and it has been exceptionally well conducted. Yet the British out here are a very law-abiding community and the British Gaol staff have been very lonely for lack of prisoners to keep them company. Nor does the business show any signs of improvement. Hence, probably, the Government's readiness to sell. That is all that can be said about the matter at present.

The Shanghai Post Office has issued a notice (says the Chinese press) inviting people who can read French or Japanese to join the postal clerk staff, salaries ranging from $65 to $450 per month being offered. The report so far lacks official confirmation.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Bowes-Smith left for Home on Tuesday by the P. & O. S. Khyber, Mr. Bowes-Smith has resigned his position with Messrs. David Sassoon & Co., and is establishing himself as an exchange broker in Hongkong where he will succeed Mr. J. E. Joseph. He returns from Home at the end of the present year to take up his new duties.

For Thin Falling Hair Use Cuticura

If your scalp is irritated and your hair dry and falling out in handfuls, try this treatment: Touch spots of dandruff and itching with Cuticura Ointment and follow with hot shampoo of Cuticura Soap. Nothing better than Cuticura for all skin and scalp troubles.

Soap 1s., Talcum 1s. 3d., Ointment 1s. 3d. and 2s 6d
Sold throughout the Empire British Depot: F Newbery & Sons, Ltd., 27, Charterhouse Sq., London, E.C 1
Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

SHANGHAI BILLIARDS CHAMPIONSHIP

Ex-Champion, Mr. C. W. Porter, Defeated by Mr. Morriss in Second Round

The billiards match at the Town Hall on Saturday night, between Mr. C. W. Porter, ex-champion of Shanghai, and Mr. Gordon Morriss, in the second round of the senior championship, furnished one of the most interesting displays of billiards that has been seen in Shanghai for many years. After being 134 points in arrears at the conclusion of the first session, Mr. Morriss made a wonderful recovery after dinner and eventually ran out winner by 121 points—800-679.

In the opening stages the scoring was brisk and after the opening misses the score read 103-91 in favour of Mr. Porter after only three visits to the table, Mr. Porter having compiled breaks of 62, 29 and 11 against Mr. Morriss's 56 and 34. Then came a spell of safety play, after which a 42 to Mr. Porter and a 31 and 30 to Mr. Morriss brought the players on fairly level terms. Breaks of 24 and 17 by Mr. Morriss gave him a lead of five points (205-200), but shortly afterwards Mr. Porter made a beautiful break of 68, following up with a 47 and a 22, which put him well in the lead, and with a 17 (unfinished) he reached his 400 with a lead of 134 points (400-266), when play had been in progress for 80 minutes.

At the second session it was quite another story. Mr. Porter carried his unfinished break to 25 and Mr. Morriss replied with 13. A 16 to Mr. Porter was followed by a 49, and then after a 30, consisting principally of losing hazards off the white, Mr. Morriss compiled a beautifully built break of 71, using the red-losing hazard stroke into the middle pocket to considerable advantage, but at the same time gaining good position at the top of the table. This brought the score to 480-410, with Mr. Porter still leading. The next breaks of importance were a 33 to Mr. Porter and a 36 and 56 to Mr. Morriss. The latter's 56 consisted chiefly of losing hazards off the red ball into the middle pocket, and gave him the lead by 571 points to 536. Thenceforward Mr. Morriss took control of the game. To a 25 and 15 by Mr. Porter he replied with 21 an 15. A 27 by Mr. Porter was met by two 15's, 14, 25 and 13 by Mr. Morriss, the last break putting the latter 62 points ahead (715-653). A 25 to Mr. Morriss gave him a still further lead and after a 20 to Mr. Porter, the winner ran to his points with a beautiful unfinished break of 60, in the course of which he was several times in difficulty but regained position by brilliant shots.

The final scores were:—

Mr. Gordon Morriss	800
Mr. C. W. Porter	679

Mr. Morriss's best breaks were 71, 56, 56, 54, 36, 34, 31, 30, 30, 25, 25, 24, 21 and his 60 unfinished, giving him an average of 10 per visit to the table. Mr. Porter's best efforts were 68, 62, 49, 47, 42, 33, 29, 27, 25, 25, 22 and 20.

Barrett and Campos in First Semi-Final: Fine Win for Barrett

Captain E. I. M. Barrett played J. P. Campos at the Town Hall on Monday in the first of the senior championship semi-finals, and much interest was taken in the game, there being few seats vacant. The game was not at all brilliant during the first session, neither player being at ease and both labouring under the importance of the occasion. Captain Barrett in particular made a very poor beginning and was quite out in strength, touch and accuracy of striking, and had Campos been in a scoring mood he must have gone substantially ahead. As it was, he passed the first hundred with a lead of 65, Barrett failing to reach double figures and Campos's best being 22 and 27 (off the red). Barrett gained slightly with 21 and 22, and the Campos went to the table for the break of the session, a carefully played 73. Playing a variety of strokes, he kept the balls well under control until 68 was reached and then, failing to gather the balls after a cannon, he had the red in baulk and the white over a top pocket, a run through loser giving two more points but closing up the game. Barrett then had a stroke of luck. At 18, he made an unusually incautious attempt at a forced red loser into the middle pocket, missed the shot, and scored a rather hefty fluke, then going on steadily to 57. Campos could do nothing of note, and Barrett, favoured with scoring position after a forced cannon, put on 40 and got within 18 of his opponent (232—214). The game went forward at a slow pace, Barrett playing safety on every possible occasion, but Campos went out for all sorts of difficult strokes and, upon their failing, was rather fortunate that Barrett did not make better use of several good opportunities. The two continued within a few points of each other until the third hundred was passed and Campos then got away with 41. There was rather a dour struggle for the fourth hundred, and neither player accomplished anything better than a 20 break, Campos just keeping his lead and going to his points with 16 (unfinished), the score at the interval reading:—

Campos	400
Barrett	375

The game underwent a remarkable change in the second session, Capt. Barrett assuming command early and winning without the least difficulty. With an unfinished 16, Campos had the red ball in nice position but failed to add to his score, and getting position on his second visit to the table, Capt. Barrett put up a 38 and so gained a lead which he was never afterwards in danger of losing. It was evident that he was in a scoring mood, playing his strokes with much greater precision and confidence. After 21 by Campos and 26 by Barrett, the latter got position again and made a very pretty 51, spoiling position with the first really bad stroke of the break. Campos rapidly fell a century behind and seemed unable to do anything right, having a succession of difficult leaves and being so put off by this, coupled with his opponent's strength, that when he did get position he quite failed to do justice to it. The result was that Barrett went steadily ahead, a 40 and 39 taking him to 646 against 492. Thus well within the hour he had scored 271 against 92 by Campos. A 38 and 30 by Barrett, with several small breaks in between, carried his score to within 48 of game, and with Campos failing to do anything better than 22 and 17, Barrett went to the table and set about a very nicely played break which brought the game to the end. A prettily played double got him out of difficulties half way through, and he went to his points with 48 unfinished, the score then reading:—

Barrett	800
Campos	580

The winner played a wonderfully consistent game in the second session, and though Campos had none of the luck of the game, it must be said that he was altogether outplayed. After dinner there was a big crowd present, numbers even failed to find room in the hall, this no doubt in anticipation of a close finish. As it was, interest in the second session was confined to Barrett's unexpectedly good form.

Mr. Gordon Morriss Successful in Another Delightful Exhibition

After another splendid exhibition, in which he held the upper hand almost unchallenged throughout the game, Mr. Gordon Morriss, at the Town Hall on Tuesday, defeated Mr. E. D. Bush in the second semi-final of the Shanghai Amateur Billiards Championship by 800-637. He now will meet Capt. E. I. M. Barrett in the final.

The game had been in progress only 10 minutes when Morriss gave a show of his best form. The white was in the centre of the table and after making a few shots off it he manœuvred it so as to get a cannon and transfer the losing hazards to the red, the result being a break of 43. Bush replied with 23 and then Morriss fell off somewhat, the game being called in his favour at 75-60. However, he broke the first 100 at 105-66. Bush showed up with 30, the break including a wonderful back screw which must have run quite 18 inches and again, when Morriss made a mistake over an attempt at leaving safety, Bush added another 21. Morriss had some compensation when, after his next break ended through the red jambing, Bush tried an impossible shot simply because the red was close to the pocket and gave his opponent another opening, from which, with 34, Morriss went to 168-152.

Morriss had a lead of 30 at 200 and then went well away with 48, all off the red, and shortly afterwards a 58, in which red losers were interspersed with some pretty top of the table play. He now had an advantage of over 100 and played somewhat carefully up to 377-277, when he went to his points with an unfinished break of 24, the first session ending:—

Morriss,	400
Bush,	277

THE SECOND SESSION.

After dinner, when practically every seat in the hall was occupied, several by people whose presence well could have been dispensed with on account of their continual chattering, Morriss ran his unfinished break to 42. For a time both players appeared to be rather nervous and during this period the game went in favour of Bush. He did not do anything of note, but he scored regularly and gradually crept up until the score was only 501-454 against him.

At this point Morriss got his chance and went well away with a very fine break of 65. He was again worried by the white being in his way, he being one of those advanced players who score the majority of their points off the red, and it was a real treat to watch the clever manner in which he worked the red ball round so as to avoid the other. Eventually he had to bring the white into play and, getting to the top of the table, broke down when trying to make position off what was a perfectly simple shot if played without regard to after results. Bush only could reply with 15 and at his next visit Morriss added another 31, taking the score to 597-467. Thereafter Morriss completely dominated the game, Bush only making one break of note, which was the outstanding feature of his play. This was a spectacular effort for 58, made by all round play and just when he had got his best position and seemed to be well set he broke down.

Some rather careful play, in which a great number of safety misses were given, was punctuated by breaks of 26, 22 and 30 by Morriss Then a run of 41 took him to 740-604. Once again he got position and seemed likely to repeat the ending to his previous game by running out with an unfinished 60, but the spectators were disappointed when he finished at 22. However, two visits later he went to his points with an unfinished 32 (all reds after the first white) and the game ended:—

Morriss	800
Bush	637

CLEVER RED PLAY.

There was no question as to the winner being by far the better player and the only wonder was that, playing the balls so easily as he did, his breaks were not much bigger. He showed such perfect command that very few of his shots called for special effort, for he had gauged the table to a nicety and brought the red—it was almost always the red—back to position with amazing regularity. One other shot Morriss played several times with the most confident precision—a cannon from in or near baulk, off two cushions, to the red or spot, a very difficult shot to make with certainty His principal breaks were:—65, 58, 46, 43, 42, 41, 34, 32, 31, 30, 26 and 22 (twice).

Bush made a game fight but he was outclassed. His principal strength is in his knowledge of such a great number of shots that it is very difficult to leave him safe, but he could not equal Morriss at collaring the red and playing with it alone for 10 or more successive shots. He made some amazingly clever trick shots in order to get out of trouble, but they seldom brought him anything of account. His principal breaks were:—58, 30, 25, 24, 23 and 21 (twice).

INTERNATIONAL CHESS TOURNAMENT

Dr. Lasker Still Leading

New York, Mar. 27.

In the ninth round of the International Chess Tournament M. Capablanca and M. Reti defeated M. Bogoljubow and, M. Janowsky, respectively. M. Alekhine and M. Tartakower drew, and Mr. Marshall and Dr. Lasker drew. The game between Mr. Yates and M. Maroczy was adjourned.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Mar. 30.

In the tenth round of the International Chess Tournament, Dr. Lasker beat M. Reti and M. Boguljubow beat Mr. Yates, M. Janowski drew with M. Tartakower.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Mar. 30.

The position of the players at the end of the tenth round of the International Chess Tournament is as follows: Dr. Lasker has won 6 games and lost 2; M. Alekhine has won 6 games and lost 3; M. Reti, F. Tartakower and M. Capablanca have won 5 games and lost 4 games each.

Mr. Marshall and Mr. Capablanca drew. M. Edward Lasker drew with M. Alekhine.

In the 11th round of the International Chess Tournament Mr. Marshall, M. Maroczy and M. Reti defeated Mr. Edward Lasker, M. Janowski and M. Tartakower respectively. Dr. Lasker and Mr. Yates drew after 55 moves. The game between M. Alekhine and M. Boguljubow was adjourned. M. Capablanca drew a bye.—Reuter's American Service.

New York Mar. 31.

At the end of the first half of the International Chess Tournament at the conclusion of the 11th round the scores stand:—Dr. Lasker 7½ points: M. Alekhine 6½ points: MM. Capablanca and Reti 6 points: MM Tartakower, Boguljubow and Maroczy and Mr. Marshall 5 points; M. Janowski 3½ points; Mr. Edward Lasker 3 points; and Mr. Yates 2½ points.—Reuter's American Service.

Twelfth Round Results

New York, Apr. 2.

In the twelfth round of the International Chess Tournament today M. Reti defeated M. Bogoljubow. M. Maroczy drew with M. Tartakower and M. Capablanca drew with M. Alekhine. Mr. Yates defeated Mr. Edward Lasker. The game between Dr. Lasker and M. Janowski was adjourned after 62 moves.—Reuter's American Service.

A BRITISH-AMERICAN ATHLETIC MEET

Olympic Teams to be Opposed After the Games

New York, Feb. 26.

Dual athletic competition between the United States and the British Empire in England after the Olympic Games will cover several branches of sport, according to present plans. The Amateur Athletic Union announced to-day that it had tentatively accepted an invitation for American Olympic swimmers to meet British rivals in a tank meet at London, on July 26, while arrangements also are under way for opposing wrestling teams to stage a dual contest.

The A.A.U. some time ago accepted an invitation to have the American track and field team meet a British Empire team at a meet at Wembley Stadium, London, on July 19. Reuter's American Service.

INTERNATIONAL RUGBY FOOTBALL

France Defeated by Wales on Heavy Ground: Forwards Predominant

Paris, Mar. 27.

Wales beat France in an international Rugby match here to-day by 10 points to six in spite of heavy rain 30,000 people were present.

The downpour was continuous and the light very poor. The Frenchmen held their own in the first half, but were handicapped by the marsh-like ground and after the interval never looked like scoring.

After a quarter of an hour Griffiths got the ball from a line-out and dropped a beautiful goal. Then Jauneguy secured the ball in the midfield and sent Behoteguy over for an unconverted try. Following a Welsh forward rush, Joe Jones scored a try which was not converted. Near the interval Lubin scored a try for France, which they failed to convert. At half-time Wales was leading by 7 points to 6.

On the resumption the Welsh forwards pressed heavily. After ten minutes Richards scored a try, and from then on the Welsh pack dominated the field, Wales winning by 10 points to 6.

BOXING

McTigue Defeated by Stribling: Clark Beats Kelly in Fly-weight Championship

London, Mar. 31.

In a 20-round contest for the British fly-weight championship, at the National Sporting Club to-night, Elky Clark of Glasgow beat Kid Kelly of Plymouth, the referee stopping the fight in the 20th round.—Reuter.

Jersey City, Apr. 1.

In a 12-round "no decision" boxing contest here last night, Young Stribling, the light heavy-weight champion of the World, defeated Mike McTigue on points. The championship was not involved.—Reuter's American Service.

VARSITY BOATRACE

Oxford's Full Course Under Bad Conditions

London, March 28.

The Oxford crew went over a trial course from Mortlake to Putney to-day in 21 min. 10 sec. The conditions were bad, the crew encountering a head wind and rough water from the start to Hammersmith Bridge.—Reuter.

GOOD TIMES IN TRIALS.

London, Mar. 31.

The Oxford crew to-day rowed from Hammersmith Bridge to Mile Post in 2 min. 53-2/5 sec. beating the Cambridge record of 2 min. 54 sec., made in 1911.

The Cambridge eight's latest full course trial from Putney to Mortlake was done in 19 min. 51 sec. in fairly good conditions.—Reuter.

GRAND NATIONAL

Won by Master Robert

London, March 28.

The Grand National Steeplechase (about four and a half miles), run at Liverpool to-day, resulted as follows:—

Master Robert	1
Fly Mask	2
Silvo	3

Thirty ran. Won by four lengths, three lengths separating second and third.

Betting: 25 to 1 Master Robert; 100 to 7 Fly Mask; 100 to 7 Silvo.—Reuter.

GOLF IN AMERICA

Havers Wins North and South Championship

Pinehurst, April 2.

Hagen won the North and South Open Golf Championship scoring 283 for 72 holes. Cyril Walker was second with 285. The British players, Havers and Ockenden, played poorly and withdrew at the end of the third round. The Australian, Kirkwood, scored 296. Reuter's American Service.

COMPANY MEETINGS

SEREMBAN RUBBER ESTATES LD.

Annual General Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Shanghai Seremban Rubber Estates, Ld., held last Friday morning in the offices of the secretaries, Messrs. Wattie & Co., Ld., Dr. R. S. Ivy presided and was supported by Mr. A. K. Craddock and Mr. C. J. L. Stewart (directors and Mr. C. G. Copley, representing the secretaries. The Chairman, after the notice convening the meeting had been read, said:—

Gentlemen,—The report and accounts have been in your hands for the prescribed period and with your permission I will take them as read.

The accounts show, after deducting the amount of Tls. 246.70 at debit of profit and loss a/c brought forward from last year, a profit on the year's working of Tls. 11,115.14, which although fairly satisfactory does not, I regret to say, permit of the payment of a dividend.

The directors recommend that the amount be dealt with as follows:—

	Tls.
To [illegible] Medical Cer account	39.20
To write off Rubber Factory and Stores	645.60
To write off Plant and Machinery	78.22
To carry forward to next year's account	10,352.12 and I shall ask you later on to pass a resolution to this effect.

The amount to be carried forword is fully covered by liquid assets. The rubber stock has since all been sold and has realized over S 82,000 more than it was valued at in the balance sheet.

We should undoubtedly have had a more favourable balance sheet to put before you had our neighbours the Dutch East Indies, joined hands with Malaya and Ceylon in regulating supply to demand. It is to my mind deplorable that the burden of stabilizing and preserving this great industry from ruin should fall upon British shoulders alone. British producing countries restricted some 40,000 tons in 1923, whereas the Dutch incresed their output by some 35,000 tons which no doubt is responsible for the falling tendency of the rubber market to-day. Let us hope the Dutch may be brought to see the benefits of restriction which is not framed to rob either the manufacturer or consumer but is framed to enable the rubber producer to live and perhaps enjoy some return on the money invested.

There is no alteration in the acreage which remains at 638 acres as given by the 1916 survey. Weeding was done monthly and the estate is clean throughout, whilst cultivation in the way of contour draining was carried out as stated in the report; 60 more acres will be done this year which will complete the work on the estate.

Thinning out was done by selection based on yield test, every tree taken out was carefully examined by the manager before being dug up. The programme for this year will practically complete this work, so that there will not be much, if any, expenditure under this heading in the future.

I am glad to state that the estate keeps remarkably free from disease. Elephants destroyed 26 trees when they visited us during July, two of whom were shot, since when the herd has not again made an appearance.

THE STRAITS AGENCY.

For some considerable time past your directors have had in mind the desirability of having as our Straits agents some firm or individual who would be intimately connected with Shanghai in general and our interests in particular. An opportunity to achieve this end occurred during the past year and arrangements were accordingly made to transfer the Straits agency to Messrs. Kennedy, Burkill & Co., Ld., on December 1, 1923. I would like here to record our thanks to Messrs. Harrisons, Barker & Co., Ld., who have acted as the company's agents since its inception for their valuable services to the company and to emphasize the fact that your directors were in no wise dissatisfied with the manner in which they conducted the affairs of the estate, but that they felt that as Messrs. Kennedy, Burkill & Co., Ld., who represent practically all of the Shanghai rubber companies and moreover have in a senior position on their staff a gentleman who has lived in Shanghai for many years and who is very intimately acquainted with the affairs of the various companies, they will now receive that personal interest and attention which is so essential to the satisfactory conduct of business matters and which is unobtainable from mere correspondence.

In concluding these remarks, I have to state that the condition of the estate is first class, trees are healthy and foliage good, and I take this opportunity of expressing the Board's appreciation of the good work done by the manager, Mr. Gilchrist, during the year under review.

This is all I have to say, but should you wish to ask any questions, I shall be pleased to answer same to the best of my ability before putting the resolutions to the meeting. The following resolutions were adopted unamiously:—

That the Directors' report and statement of accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923 as presented and the disposal of the balance at credit of profit and loss account as recommended be adopted and passed—proposed by Dr. R. S. Ivy and seconded by Mr. A. K. Craddock.

That Mr. M. Speelman be re-elected a Director of the Company—proposed by Mr. A. K. Craddock and seconded by Mr. C. J. L. Stewart.

That Messrs. Thomson & Co., successors to Messrs. G. H. & N. Thomson, be elected auditors to the company for the ensuing year—proposed by Mr. A. J. Welch and seconded by Mr. G. Grayrigge.

LANGKAT OIL CO.

Details of Last Year's Working and the Future Prospects

The annual meeting of the Naamlooze Vennootschap Maatschappij Tot Mijn-Bosch-En Landbouw Exploitatie in Langkat was held last Friday afternoon at the office of the general agents, Messrs. George McBain, 1 The Bund. Mr. R. S. F. McBain presided and was supported by Messrs. John Prentice, R. C. Triggs and J. Elmore. After reading the notice convening the meeting, the Chairman said:—

Gentlemen, the report and accounts having been in your hands for some time past, I will with your permission take them as read.

In the accounts you will notice that reserve against sundry assets has been increased by Tls. 86,725.91 being the amount realized for sundry assets in excess of what they stood at in our books.

On the advice of our auditors it was decided to form a reserve of Tls. 28,723.41 for foreign staff leave pay and debit the respective working accounts annually with their proper proportion of these charges instead of in the year in which they were actually incurred as hitherto.

Sundry assets have been reduced during the year from Tls. 543,559.32 to Tls. 445,029.91 and we hope to see them reduced still further during the present year.

The item stores, plant and machinery has been increased from Tls. 229,001.85 to Tls. 306,307 principally owing to the taking back into stock of a quantity of stores, etc., from the Darat Oil Field not wanted by the B.P.M.

DISAPPOINTING FEATURES.

I regret that the accounts for the year under review show a somewhat disappointing result in spite of the fact that a satisfactory profit of Tls. 155,426.41 was earned on rubber. The loss on oil is due principally to the expenditure on packing and transport of machinery, but it is to be hoped that we shall reap the benefit of this work in the present year. The loss on timber was due to our losing our market in the south, and we had almost decided to abandon the business. It appears, however, that there are profits to be made in China on some of our timber, and it is our intention to give these markets a fair trial. During the year under review, however, little timber was sold in Sumatra and business at this end had not started to yield results. Up to the present sales have been small, but we have promises of good orders when we are in a position to deliver according to the requirements of the market. Our timber yard is on the Ward Road and we are installing a small sawmill and a kiln for drying timber; also, we are about to open a modest showroom where it will be possible for prospective buyers to see the finished article. As some of you may wish to see what we are producing I may mention that the address is No. 77 Szechuen Road. I do not want to say too much about prospects but it is my opinion that there are substantial profits to be made when the business is fully organized. It will never be on anything like the scale of the big concerns here, as we only compete in the better classes of hardwoods, therefore our competition should not be felt by them to any extent. Doubtless, we shall have troubles in the beginning to pass through, but for the present the market should be good and prices satisfactory owing to the great demand from Japan consequent upon the recent earthquake.

THE DRILLING MACHINERY.

You will have noticed in the auditors' report that they say: "We consider that after allowing for the reserve against same, sundry assets are stated in the balance sheet at figures in excess of their realizable value." It is of course impossible for me to say whether this opinion will prove to be correct as so much depends on the prices that the Asiatic Petroleum Company are able to secure for us for the drilling tools and machinery that we are delivering at San Pedro, and the first consignment to them has not yet arrived. Even if the result is not satisfactory, however, I wish to point out that we have valuable planting and timber concessions not mentioned in the accounts which should more than offset any difference that there may be. We have about 38,000 acres of good land, part of which we intend to reserve for our timber business, and the balance we are willing to sell when a favourable opportunity occurs. You will remember that we had an offer last year for part of this land but your directors decided that the price was too low. The prospective buyers were the Deli-Railway Company, and it is still possible that we may be able to come to business with them although they are out of the market for the present. It is not a good time to attempt to sell land suitable for rubber planting and we shall have to wait until the market improves for the raw material, but it is my opinion that we shall have our chance sooner or later.

There has been no drilling done on our Darat oil field and the Bataafsche Petroleum Maatchappij have not mentioned to us that they intend to do any in the near future but I believe they will still make an attempt to increase the output when circumstances are favourable for them to do so. The average daily production for the year under review was 21 tons as against 22 tons the year before.

RUBBER PRODUCTION.

I do not think there is very much of interest that I can tell you about our rubber estates, but everything is going on well and our visiting agent's reports are highly satisfactory. The estimated production for the year is 960,000 lb., as against 975,000 lb. last year. Our manager intends to start tapping some of our young rubber of Pelawi I, but the yield from this division of the estate for this year will not be of much importance, probably about 25,000 lb., which is included in the above mentioned estimate.

I do not think there is any necessity for anxiety about overtapping as we have gone into this question carefully with our manager, and our visiting agent has done the same. Bark renewal is excellent and it is considered that there is ample reserve. We are proceeding with the planting up of 1,000 acres as mentioned to you last year, and 245 acres will be planted up during the current year. The land has been carefully selected and the latest methods of planting will be employed so that this extension should form a very valuable reserve for the future.

That is all I have to say, but if any one has any questions, I will be glad to answer them to the best of my ability.

There being none, the following resolutions were unamiously passed:—

That the report and accounts as presented, be passed—proposed by Mr. R. S. F. McBain, seconded by Mr. John Prentice.

That the appointment of Mr. R. C. Triggs as a director of the Company be confirmed—proposed by Mr. W. G. Pirie, seconded by Mr. Ellis Hayim.

That the appointment of Mr. R. S. F. McBain as a director of the company be confirmed—proposed by Ellis Hayim, seconded by Mr. G. Fitzgerald.

That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-elected auditors for the ensuing year—proposed by Mr. W. G. Pirie, seconded by Mr. D. M Gubbay.

ANGLO-DUTCH (JAVA) PLANTATIONS

Annual Meeting

The 14th annual general meeting of the Anglo-Dutch (Java) Plantations, Ld., was held on Monday afternoon at the offices of the secretaries and general managers (Messrs. J. A. Wattie & Co.). Mr. G. Grayrigge presided, supported by Messrs. C. R. Burkill and E. S. Kadoorie, directors, and the attendance represented 77,213 shares.

The notice convening the meeting, and the auditor's report, having been read, the Chairman said:—

We meet to-day under happier auspices than this time 12 months ago. Then we were just emerging from a slump the like of which I trust we may not have to endure again and there would be positively no reason to fear it at all if the Dutch authorities would throw in their lot with the British and adopt some form of compulsory restriction. Instead of doing this, however, the Dutch Colonies have produced almost pound for pound that quantity restricted by the British Colonies which is perhaps the main reason why rubber remains to-day one of the cheapest commodities in the world. The price, though sagging at present, has however maintained a sufficiently high level to enable most companies adequately to upkeep their estates and to earn very modest profits though not at all in keeping with what an investor could reasonably look forward to from an agricultural enterprise carried on under tropical conditions with all its attendant risks.

VOLUNTARY RESTRICTION.

This company early on gave its allegiance to voluntary restriction and has loyally done its share towards maintaining the rubber market above the dead loss level.

What the present year may have in store for the industry is yet too early to predict, but with Europe all at sixes and sevens it is apparent the present scale of production is outpacing the world's capacity of consumption. The scale adopted by the British is a fair one, it works automatically and if the price advances beyond a certain level more rubber is permitted export and vice versa. The scheme has now had the test of 17 months' working and has proved the salvation of many enterprizes that otherwise must have gone under. It has placed no burden on the shoulders of manufacturers and consumers; all that can be claimed for it is that it has enabled the rubber producer to live and to pay, in some instances, a small return to those whose money is at stake. Thus, all interested are hoping that the Dutch may soon see their way clear to co-operating with the British and doing their share towards placing this great industry on a sound basis by regulating supply to demand as is done in other industries.

ESTATE IMPROVEMENT.

Good progress was made towards improving the Anglo Dutch properties during the past year. Mimosa Gigantica, which is both a soil improver and lallang killer, has been sown down in large quantities and the estate is undoubtedly benefiting therefrom.

Like most of the older estates, bark excision in the earlier years had been too rapid, but a conservative rotational tapping system was put into operation in the Autumn of 1922; excessive bark consumption was guarded against and the position now is safe for all time. These methods hit our crop returns for awhile very severely, but output is creeping up again now and next year we shall be able to harvest all the rubber we may be asked to produce. Costs naturally rose with the smaller crop and stood at 14 pence per lb. dearer than in 1922, but the higher market price obtained will offset this item.

The cultivation and conservative rotational tapping have apparently made a great difference in the betterment of the property, for writing in September, 1923, our visiting agent says inter alia:—"Change in appearance is positively astounding owing to the milder tapping system. New foliage is abundant and of a deep healthy green."

I think thus that we may rest content that our principal asset, the estate itself, is being well looked after and I am sure you will join the Board in an appreciation of the work put in by the manager, Mr. Petit, who has been with us many years, the visiting agent, Mr. Sheppard, and our Sourabaya agents.

ADDITIONAL LAND.

During the year the company acquired 1,246 acres of reserve land near Banjoemas, Middle Java, for the sum of F. 40,000 as authorized by shareholders at the extraordinary general meeting held on June, 1. Beyond cutting paths no work has yet been done on this reserve.

The coffee area having been stumped no crop was made last year, but we may see a small crop this, though it is yet uncertain.

The rubber harvest was 540,000 lb. or 60,000 lb. less than the estimate. The deficit was due to the lighter tapping system the necessity and benefits of which I have already dealt with. The estimate for this year is 600,000 lb., and judging by returns to date, I expect the estimate may be exceeded.

The selling price averaged practically sixpence per lb. over that of 1922, an advance due to British foresight by enforced restriction.

THE ACCOUNTS.

The above reflects in the accounts, for whereas the working account of the Dutch company in 1922 showed a profit of only F. 22,895.11, 1923 returns us F. 122,666.79. Of this, by agreement, the Dutch company has to pay the Shanghai company F. 25,470.04 for commission on sales and agency fees, and after providing for income tax and other charges, the net profit is F. 99,202.45, to which is added the balance of profit brought forward from the preceding year, making a total of F. 147,028.43.

The directors have dealt with this as follows:—Written off for Depreciation F. 28,880.70, which reduces the Dutch company's assets such as buildings, machinery and rolling stock to F. 1 each, paid a dividend to the Shanghai company of F. 100,000 and carried forward F. 18,147.73 to a new account.

The Shanghai company's Accounts show that the profit for the year amounted to Tls. 71,318.92, to which must be added the balance from 1922 of Tls. 32,504.58 leaving a sum of Tls. 103,823.50 to be dealt with.

If the directors' recommendations as to the disposal of this profit be adopted, the company will retain in liquid assets the equivalent of Tls. 38,772.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

There were no questions, and the following resolutions were unanimously carried:

That the Directors' report and statement of accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923, as presented be adopted and passed. Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. C. R. Burkill

That the balance at credit of profit and loss account be dealt with as follows:—

	Tls.
To pay a dividend of 20 candareens per share	70,000.00
To pay commission to Administrative staff	3,581.65
To carry forward to a new account	30,241.85
	103,823.50

Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Burkill.

That Mr. S. A. Hardoon be and hereby is re-elected a Director of the company. Proposed by Mr. E. S. Kadoorie, seconded by Mr. A. J. Welch.

That the appointments of Messrs. C. R. Burkill and E. S. Kadoorie as Directors of the Company be and are hereby confirmed. Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. S. E. Levy.

That Messrs. Mortimer, Reid & Slee be elected auditors to the company for the ensuing year. Proposed by Mr. Levy, seconded by Mr. Welch.

THE CHEMOR UNITED RUBBER CO.

Saints and Sinners in Tapping: Smuggling from the F. M. S. to Sumatra

The annual meeting of the Chemor United Rubber Co., Ld., was held on Wednesday.

Mr. E. E. Clark presided, supported by Mr. G. Grayrigge, Mr. C. R. Burkill, Mr. E. S. Kadoorie (Directors) and Mr. C. J. L. Stewart representing the secretaries and general managers.

The notice calling the meeting having been read, the Chairman said:—

Reading over my speech at our last annual meeting. I opened with a reference to the benefits we were even then deriving from enforced restriction.

We have now had a full 17 months in which to appraise the pros and cons of the scheme, and I may give it as my own opinion and also of my colleagues that the benefits of the scheme far outweigh the disadvantages. Like all new movements it had its anomalies and inequities, but those are gradually being balanced up and straightened out. The latest revision is a new assessment, pending which no estate is allowed a standard production of over lb. 400 per acre.

This will go some way towards evening up those sinners who got a huge standard production allowed them, by over-tapping during the standard period, with those saints who conserved and properly treated their trees and whose allowance suffered in consequence.

DUTCH PRODUCTION.

Prices during 1923 soared to no great heights. We started with an allowance of 60 per cent. of standard Production, for a brief three months we were allowed 65 per cent., and we finished the year back at 60 per cent. Every time the price climbed over 50 cents, it seemed to lose its backbone and drop down again. The reason is not far to seek. Our Dutch neighbours proved themselves only too keen to make money at the expense of our restrictive endeavours and produced almost pound for pound what we British restricted. This may be good business from a Dutch point of view but it certainly is a distorted one from the view of the countries which are doing their utmost to replace the rubber growing industry on its legs. If the Dutch would work hand in hand with us, I am quite sure a scheme could be evolved whereby rubber growers would be able to make a living and a bit to spare and which would in no way prove tyrannous to manufacturers and consumers.

Going through the statistics of Dutch East Indies export, I notice it is not the Island of Java that shews such a big increase as those Sumatram ports opposite the F.M.S., which makes me think that perhaps a deal of the rubber figuring as Dutch is really smuggled stuff from the F. M. S. I hope the latter will take measures whereby the sale of illicit rubber may be entirely checked and one way towards this would be certificates of origin.

Coming from the general to the particular, I am glad to tell you that the two properties belonging to this company are both in excellent condition, especially Chemor, which has splendid bark reserves. Batu Dua is not so well placed in this respect and on this division a very conservative tapping policy has been adopted with partial resting, which in time will have the effect of placing its bark reserves on an A. 1 footing. Meantime any shortage of production on Batu Dua is easily made up by Chemor.

With restricted crops the cost has naturally increased, 1923 being 1.35 pence above 1922 but the average sale price of 15.20 pence as compared with 8.33 pence in 1922 amply compensates for this, and is at the same time an eloquent witness to the success of restriction. This company might possibly have survived without restriction but it certainly would have been unable to pay you any return on the money invested.

The report before you is brief but deals with all essentials and leaves me nothing to add except to voice our thanks to our managers, Mr. Johnson of Chemor and Mr. Murray of Batu Dua both of whom have been with us many years and enjoy our confidence.

THE YEAR'S PROFITS.

The accounts make better reading than we have been accustomed to of recent years. The nett profit for 1923 amounts to Tls. 33,923.40 to which must be added the sum brought forward from 1922, making the divisible profits Tls. 71,620.03. Out of these the company paid an interim dividend of 5 candareens per share on November 6, 1923 absorbing Tls. 20,000, leaving the sum of Tls. 51,620.03 to be dealt with to-day.

Last year I stated that it was the Board's intention to build up a reserve fund in a gold currency and a glance at the balance sheet will show you that this has been carried out by the purchase of S. $25,000. Straits Settlements 1929 5½ per cent. Loan.

The Board recommends that the balance at credit of profit and loss account be dealt with as laid down in the report.

With those remarks, Gentlemen. I have pleasure in proposing Resolution No. 1, viz:—"That the Directors' report and statement of accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923 as presented be adopted and passed." This is proposed by myself and seconded by Mr. G. Grayrigge.

The resolution is now before the meeting and is open to discussion I shall be glad to answer any questions that may be asked.

No questions were asked and the resolution was carried, also the following:—

"That the balance at credit of profit and loss account be dealt with as follows:—

	Tls.
To write off investment account (rubber roadways)	79.22
To write off live and rolling stock	4.13
To write off development account	964.02
To transfer to general reserve	12,000.00
To pay commission to secretaries and managers —	600.00
To pay a final dividend of 5 candareens per share	20,000.00
To carry forward to a new account	17,972.66
Tls.	51,620.03

Proposed by Mr. J. Sudka and seconded by Mr. A. J. Welch. —"That Messrs. G. Grayrigge and E. E. Clark be and are hereby re-elected directors of the company."

"That the appointments of Messrs. C. R. Burkill and E. S. Kadoorie as directors of the company be and are hereby confirmed."—Proposed by Mr. A. J. Welch and seconded by Mr. G. Grayrigge.

"That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham and Matthews be and hereby are elected auditors to the company for the ensuing year."—Proposed by Mr. J. Sudka and seconded by Mr. G. Grayrigge.

AT the meeting of the United Services Association (Women's Branch) held at the B.W.A. Headquarters last Friday afternoon the following officers were elected:—Chairman, Mrs. McMichael; Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Elwin; Committee members, Mrs. R. M J. Martin, Mrs. H. Y. Irwine, Mrs. Graham Barrow, Mrs. Alex. Samson, Miss England and Miss Lyall.

THE SHANGHAI WATERWORKS

Chairman's Speech at Annual Meeting: The Council's Negotiations for Purchase and Recent Developments: How Shareholders Are Suffering

The annual meeting of shareholders in the Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld., was held on Thursday afternoon, when there were present Messrs. H. Martin Little (presiding) and A. W. Burkill, Directors; F. B. Pitcairn, engineer-in-chief and manager; W. R. Walter, secretary; L. E. Canning, Chun Bing-him, C. A. Pearson and T. Cock. The attendance represented 10,779 shares.

The notice convening the meeting, and the auditors' report having been read, the Chairman said:—

I regret to say that Mr. Cubitt is unable to be with us to-day on account of illness. Mr. Mackie has recently resigned from the Board on leaving for Hongkong and we have invited Mr. F. R. Scott, of Messrs. Mackenzie & Co., to take his place.

The report and accounts for the year ending December 31, 1923, having been in your possession for some days, you will doubtless agree that they be taken as read.

As you will have seen the directors recommend that the disposable balance, after the transfer of Tls. 40,000 from equalization of dividend fund, be dealt with as follows:—

	Tls.
To pay a final dividend for the year 1923 on 33,530 shares of 10/- per share £16,765 at ex. 3/2½	103,500.96
Carry forward to new account	24,474.63
Tls.	127,975.59

When paying the interim dividend in July last we considered it desirable to point out to shareholders that our action in paying an interim dividend was not to be taken as an indication that the final dividend would be maintained at the same rate as that paid in respect of 1922. I regret to say our fears have been fully realized. As stated in the directors' report the two principal reasons for the unsatisfactory result of the year's working are (1) the fact that the company is unable, at the rates fixed by the agreement of 1905, to collect revenue commensurate with the increased cost of providing an efficient supply of water and (2) that the profit derived from the fittings department has been disappointing.

FITTINGS.

I will deal with the case of the fittings department first. In previous years we have derived a satisfactory profit from the sale and repair of water fittings but for the year under review the result has been disappointing. A careful investigation has since been made and we have come to the conclusion that the keen competition that has arisen in recent years has forced our prices too low; this setback we look upon as only temporary. The fittings department is a very valuable adjunct to the company's business. I do not think I am wrong in saying that our turnover is larger than that of any other similar concern in China. We are, I think, popular with local architects; we have connexions with the leading purveyors of sanitary ware and heating apparatus in Great Britain and the U.S.A. and we receive few complaints from our customers. There is therefore no reason so far as I can see why this department should not be worked at a satisfactory profit.

INCREASED COST OF SUPPLY.

The increased cost of providing an efficient supply of water is due principally to the adoption of the methods of purification to which reference is made in the summary of the engineer-in-chief and manager's report. It must be remembered, however, that but for this intensified treatment we should have had to buy more land for filter beds, reservoirs, etc. Moreover, we have the satisfaction of knowing that we are supplying water of a far higher standard of bacteriological clarity than before. Reference to this is made in the report of the Commissioner of Public Health for last year recently published. He says: "A systematic investigation extending over 14 months has shown that the processes employed at the Waterworks are capable of reducing the number of lactose-fermenting organisms of the 'B' coli group to 40 per litre in all seasons of the year, and that with rare exceptions, this standard has been maintained. It is a high standard and the quality of the supply is most creditable to the Waterworks authorities. Again in the chemical laboratory report: "A progressive improvement in the clarity of the water supplied from the mains has been evident and the ordinary condition of the water during the latter part of the year was that of only very slight opacity and approaching clear brightness."

If you reflect upon the contaminated state of the Huangpu river from which we draw our supply, I am sure you will agree that our staff is to be congratulated on this tribute.

We also had to pay a higher price for our coal in 1923 than in 1922 but I am happy to say that there is a small reduction in the contract price for the current year.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.

As you will have seen from the accounts the total expenditure on working account has increased by Tls. 148,573.62 over that of the previous year, while the revenue from all sources in spite of the disappointing result of the fittings department has increased by Tls. 110,838.15. The profit from the sale of water shows an increase over that for 1922 but this is due in a considerable measure to the fact that we now charge extra agreement consumers by meter at an increased rate. To consumers residing within the Settlement and on roads under the control of the Council our charges are limited by the agreement with the Council of 1905. I believe I am correct in saying that practically all waterworks undertakings in Great Britain—I have no statistics from other countries—have been permitted during the last few years to increase their rates, in many cases by 50 per cent, and the French Municipal Council has recently sanctioned an increase in the rate charged by the French Waterworks undertaking from 7½ candareens per cubic meter to 8½ candareens per cubic meter (with abolition of the meter rent), that is to say from 47.4 dollar cents per 1,000 gallons to 54.3 dollar cents per 1,000 gallons. The former rate was already higher than our meter rate. The French Waterworks undertaking charges for the supply for all purposes, domestic and non-domestic, by meter. The mere fact that negotiations have taken place is an admission on the part of the Council that modification of the agreement of 1905 has been called for, yet no increase in rates, although asked for, has been sanctioned.

RELATIONS WITH THE COUNCIL.

Turning to profit and loss account, you will see that interest is Tls. 32,280.23 and depreciation Tls. 5,575.52 higher than the preceding year. These increases are inevitable with the growth of capital expenditure. We have been accused of lack of foresight in embarking upon the large capital expenditure of the last few years without previously obtaining the Council's sanction of increased rates. Gentlemen, the Municipal Council is a body of men of high standing in the commercial world; could it have been anticipated that some six years would elapse without their being able to come to a decision in regard to our relations with them?

As pointed out in our last letter to the Council dated February 22 this year, our policy has been to spare no expense in keeping up and enhancing the efficiency of the undertaking in the interests of the community and beyond what is strictly called for in the agreement of 1905, basing our trust on the assurances and fairmindedness of succeeding Councils that the company would receive such treatment as would compensate shareholders for the protracted delay in the negotiations.

HARDSHIP TO SHAREHOLDERS.

We fully realize the unfortunate position in which many of our shareholders are placed by the diminution of the dividends paid by the company and by the consequent fall in the market value of shares. We have received letters from some of them. One a retired missionary writes that nearly 20 years ago he bought shares at over Tls. 400 per share as he was led to believe that the Shanghai Waterworks Co. was a perfectly sound security and that he could rely on a steady 5 per cent. on his capital but that the small sum now received causes much distress; he expresses the hope that we shall soon find the Municipal Council more just and reasonable; another, at one time the head of the oldest firms in the Far East, writes that many shareholders are persons of very limited means and a few are solely dependent on the dividends for their income and that the reduction in dividends and the delay in declaring them have been productive of great hardship and anxiety. Our shareholders are, I think, without exception residents and ex-residents of the Far East and their descendants. Gentlemen, I say without fear of contradiction that the treatment we have received from the Municipal Council is a stigma upon the fair name of Shanghai which those ex-residents did so much to create.

PROPOSED PURCHASE.

I do not think the accounts call for further comment and I will therefore proceed to consideration of the proposed purchase of the company's undertaking by the Council. I hope you have all read the record of the negotiations during the last two years which accompanied the annual report and accounts. You will have seen that after consultation with a leading firm of chartered accountants in London we decided to base our price upon the value of the property and plant at the date of purchase. Accordingly a valuation was made by the company's engineers assisted when required by expert advice, and we informed the Council that we were prepared to recommend the shareholders to sell the company's "business and undertaking etc.," for the sum of Tls. 14,947,780 subject to certain conditions which are set forth in our letter to the Council of April 13, 1923, to which would have to be added further capital expenditure up to the date of purchase. We reserved the right to amend this price in the event of the Council being unable to agree and deciding to submit the matter to arbitration. At the Ratepayers' meeting held on April 19 last year a resolution was passed authorizing the Council to purchase, with an amendment whereby the Council should not exercise the authority until it should have further examined the financial considerations involved and should have taken the directions of a further meeting of ratepayers whether or not there should be a quorum of ratepayers present. The Council has since informed us that it is advised that it cannot exercise the power to purchase except with the authority of a special meeting of ratepayers at which a quorum is present, and that it may therefore be necessary to lay the whole matter de novo before the ratepayers at their next annual meeting.

I may point out that if the Council is unable to agree to the price named by us and decided to submit the matter to arbitration, it must, under the terms of our agreement, first give one year's notice to purchase and then, having given that notice, it must purchase whatever the result of the arbitration may be.

COUNSEL'S OPINION.

In September last year, it was intimated that in the Council's opinion the price to be paid should be based upon an agreed number of years' purchase of the net maintainable profits. We therefore decided to consult the best possible counsel in England on the question and we obtained the opinions of the Right Hon. Sir John Simon, K.C., M.P., and Mr. G. J. Talbot, K.C., now Mr. Justice Talbot. Both counsel supported our contentions. I had an interview the Chairman of the Council and acquainted him with this and on December 12 we advised the Council in writing. We also drew attention to a decision of the Supreme Court of the U.S.A. last year that the value of a public utility undertaking is properly measured by the cost of its reproduction, or more elaborately, the cost of construction to-day at prevailing prices of material and labour. Yet the Council in its letter of January 18 this year asks the company to accept a price based upon 15.3846 years' purchase of the profits earned during the year 1922—less than Tls. 8,000,000—with a view to avoiding "what may possibly develop into a long and costly arbitration."

THE COUNCIL'S DESIRE.

Time does not permit of my going into all the arguments in support of our price nor in view of the possibility of arbitration is it desirable. Suffice it to say that the Council by this offer seeks to gain possession of the company's undertaking at its highest state of efficiency at a price based upon the year in which the return on capital expended was at its lowest. The basis of maintainable profits is in itself manifestly unfair; the company's profits have been limited by its agreement with the Council. The Council seeks to regard these profits as the net maintainable profits, it ignores the potential profit earning capacity of the undertaking, for, if the Council purchases, it will be the sole arbiter of the rates to be charged and I think there is very little doubt that purchase will be followed by an immediate increase in water rates.

We have refused the Council's offer, indeed, I find it difficult to believe that such a price could have been offered by a set of business men unless when they enter the Council room they get their ideas warped by the bureaucratic atmosphere tinged with an oriental influence and thus offer as is customary in the East at least half of what they are prepared to pay.

NOT TREATED FAIRLY.

Well, Gentlemen, I am sure that the views of ratepayers are that an individual or a company should have a square deal. For six weary years we have been negotiating with succeeding Councils and while nearing agreement at times—you have only to refer to former speeches of the Chairman of this Company—the Council again and again changes its ground, and I cannot help feeling that the company has not been treated fairly.

In our letter to the Council of February 22 we suggested a profit sharing arrangement in lieu of purchase, whereby the Council should participate in the profits earned after paying interest at an agreed rate upon the capital cost of the concern, the company in return being authorized to base its charges upon a meter tariff. An arrangement of this sort has been adopted in Alexandria (Egypt) and has much to commend it. We have this week received a preliminary reply from the Council in which no reference is made to purchase but it is stated that the Council is giving particular attention to this suggestion of the company.

A CHANGED ATMOSPHERE.

I am afraid I cannot at present give you further information, but there are certain principles put forward in the letter which we may not see our way to fall in with. The letter is couched in friendly terms and welcomes discussion on points open to difference of opinion and is a very great advance on previous communications. If we may take this as a forerunner of a new atmosphere in the Council's deliberations and as a token that they are now prepared to recognize the just claims of the company, well then, Gentlemen, I think there is a very good hope indeed that this will really be the last time that your Chairman will have to make any reference to protracted negotiations and the next time he addresses you our difference with the Council will have been amicably and fairly settled to the satisfaction of both parties and the company on a fair way to the prosperity it has so long been debarred from.

Before sitting down I should like on behalf of the directors to bear testimony to the satisfactory manner in which the staff of the company has carried out the work entrusted to it during the year.

There were no questions, and the following resolutions were formally carried:

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. A. W. Burkill: That the directors' report and accounts for the year 1923, as submitted to this meeting be and are hereby received and adopted.

Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. A. W. Burkill: That a final dividend for the year 1923 of 10/- per share be and is hereby declared; payable in Shanghai at exchange 3/2½ per tael.

Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. L. E. Canning: That Mr. A. W. Burkill be and he is hereby re-elected a director of the company.

Proposed by Mr. C. A. Pearson, seconded by Mr. Chun Bing-him: That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be and they are hereby re-elected Auditors of the company.

On the proposal of Mr. Canning, a vote of thanks was accorded to the staff and the directors for their work during the year, and the Chairman acknowledged the compliment, the proceedings then terminating.

ANGLO-FRENCH LAND INVESTMENT CO., LD.

Details of Year's Operations Given at Annual Meeting: Property Development

The 18th annual general meeting of the Anglo-French Land Investment Company, Ld., was held at the offices of Messrs. A. R. Burkill & Sons on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. C. R. Burkill took the chair, and was supported by Mr. Gilbert Davies and Mr. Liu Chang-yin. The total number of shares represented was 4,899.

The Chairman, presenting the annual report said:—

While the figures showing the year's working indicate an increase of approximately Tls. 3,900, the actual result is not quite up to the last year's standard. The net profit for the year amounted to Tls. 113,883.71 as against Tls. 114,851.57 for the previous year, a decrease of Tls. 967.86. This result is mainly due to the charge of Tls. 7,834.11, expenses and debentures discounts in connexion with the flotation of the new issue of Tls. 800,000 debentures.

During the year the directors received an offer for the purchase of Estate "J" on the Fokien Road. For several years this property has been yielding a comparatively poor return and although the price offered was not as high as we might have wished, the directors considered it advisable to dispose of the property and utilize the proceeds for the purchase of more remunerative properties which were then on the market. A loss of Tls. 11,114 was incurred on the sale but this loss, however, does not affect our profit and loss account as the amount has been written off depreciation and renewals account. Although the sale of this property naturally affected our rentals, I am glad to say that the gross rentals for the year exceeded last year's collections by Tls. 5,321.51 which may be considered very satisfactory.

NEW PURCHASES.

As you have been informed in the report, Estates "S" and "T" are new purchases. The development of Estate "R" purchased last year and Estate "S" were completed last month and all houses and shops are now fully occupied. Since the report and accounts were published, Estate "T" has been augmented by the purchase of B.C. Lot 1113 situated at the corner of Yuhang and Miller Roads. The acquisition of this corner piece now gives us the whole road frontage on the Yuhang Road from Miller to Fearon Roads and will greatly facilitate development. The building of this property is now in hand and will be completed during the current year.

A fire occurred in October last in the Rue de la Mission—part of Estate "A"—12 houses being totally destroyed and the remaining four partly damaged. It was decided to rebuild this property with 12 three-storied shops which will assure a much better return on the rebuilding than the original houses which were destroyed.

At an extraordinary general meeting held on March 28, 1923, a resolution empowering the directors to borrow sums up to the full nominal capital of the company, instead of half as formerly, was passed. Under this new power, the directors decided to pay off the 1908 issue of Tls. 250,000 debentures and to create a new issue of 5-20 year 6 per cent. debentures amounting to Tls. 800,000. The 1908 issue was therefore redeemed on December 31, 1923, and it was decided to invite subscriptions for Tls. 450,000 of the new issue at 98. Up to the end of our financial year, applications amounting to Tls. 301,000 of this new issue were received making, with the 1911 issue of Tls. 300,000 a total amount of Tls. 601,000 debentures. Since March 1 further applications have been received, bringing the total of the new issue up to Tls. 450,000 (leaving a balance of Tls. 250,000) which is considered sufficient for present requirements. Further debentures will be sold when funds are required and the directors are on the look out for any suitable properties for investments which may come on the market.

EIGHT PER CENT. DIVIDEND.

I do not think there is anything in the balance sheet which calls for any special comment. Property account shows an increase of Tls. 95,278 over the previous year's figures while mortgages remain the same. Our loan account of Tls. 173,500 was obtained at very favourable rates and is repayable at call.

The directors are glad to be able to recommend a final dividend of Tls. 4.50 per share, making eight per cent. for the year. It is also proposed to place the sum of Tls. 31,114.84 to depreciation and renewals, bringing this account up to Tls. 360,000 and to place Tls. 15,000 to special repairs account. This latter sum is being put aside for a thorough overhaul of the company's properties in North Szechuen, North Chêkiang Road and Burkill Roads and on completion of the work a considerable advance in rentals will be obtained.

Prospects for the current year are very encouraging and I am pleased to report that our new properties are well let and there are no empty houses on our other properties.

That is all I have to say, gentlemen. Before putting the resolutions to the meeting, I shall be glad to answer to the best of my ability any questions shareholders may wish to ask.

No questions were asked and on the proposition of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Liu Chang-yin, the report and accounts for the year as presented were accepted.

The Chairman proposed and Mr. Liu Chang-yin seconded:—

"That the following recommendation as to appropriation of balance at credit of profit and loss account be accepted:—

	Tls.
Pay final dividend of Tls. 4½ per share (making 8 per cent. for the year)	58,500.00
Place to special repairs account	15,000.00
Place to depreciation and renewals	31,114.84
Carry forward	9,268.87
	113,883.71

On the proposition of Mr. R. C. B. Fennell, seconded by Mr. W. A. Ogden, Mr. Liu Chang-yin was re-elected a director of the company.

On the proposition of Mr. W. A. Ogden seconded by Mr. J. R. Moodie, Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews were re-elected auditors to the company.

This concluded the business of the meeting.

The "Sarawak Gazette" announces the death on January 11 at Torquay of Major W. H. Rodway, who joined the Sarawak Civil Service in 1862, and retired on pension in 1883. Major Rodway, who was a great-uncle of Mr. E. S. Benbow Rowe, of Shanghai, was nearly 90 years of age at the time of his death. He spent a great part of his service at Mukah, being one of the officers there when the fort was captured and held for a short time during the Chinese rebellion. Major Rodway later acted as Commandant of the Sarawak Rangers, Resident of the 1st Division and President of the Committee of Administration.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

A SOLUTION FOR MOTOR-CAR PROBLEMS IN SHANGHAI

Why Not a Central Sky-Scraper Garage to Save Parking? One Way Traffic: Tram Co.'s Intolerable Delays in Track Repair

Some very important points were raised at the annual meeting of the Automobile Club of China, held at the General Chamber of Commerce rooms, on Monday Mr. C. R. Burkill (the Chairman) presided, supported by Mr. M. O. Springfield, Mr. J. J. Keegan (members of the Committee) and Mr. R. N. Swann (secretary).

The Chairman said that, with regard to the accounts, there was nothing calling for special comment. Their investments were intact and the expenditure was approximately the same as in the preceding year.

The accounts were adopted and the retiring committee (Messrs. C. R. Burkill, H. von Heidenstam, R. T. Peyton Griffin, G. Okada, C. Harpur, J. J. Keegan and M. O. Springfied) were re-elected, with the addition of Mr. A. L. Anderson.

The Chairman—Many matters of importance have been dealt with by your committee during the past year, chiefly connected with traffic and parking problems, and questions relative to street congestion. Parking and ranking of vehicles and other traffic problems are becoming so serious that an impossible state of affairs will be reached in a very short time. The amount of traffic on the streets is certain to increase rather than decrease and more especially with regard to automobiles. Local statistics show that the increase in the number of cars used is very considerable from year to year and it will readily be seen that grave difficulties will arise in the congested areas if steps are not taken to relieve the situation.

A MONSTER PARKING GARAGE.

The Shanghai Municipal Council has endeavoured to meet the parking difficulties by providing spaces on wide and little used roads and, of course, on the Bund; and shopping centres have had ranking spaces allotted them, these latter adding rather seriously to the general congestion I am afraid, but it is difficult to know how to avoid it. Streets have been widened and the Council are, I understand, taking every opportunity which arises to acquire road frontage, but this entails considerable expense and time and I feel that some other means should be sought for solving our difficulties. I have already said that cars ranked and parked along the street side add to the congestion and we must therefore endeavour to find further facilities for ranking and parking and the only sound and practicable scheme that comes to my mind is multiple storage. That is the provision of a huge centrally situated garage with numerous floors and elevators.

A scheme of this nature could be worked by the Council in such a way as to obtain the return of expenditure on land and buildings; 1,000 cars stored at 25 cents per diem would produce an annual income of $91,250 and there should be no difficulty in obtaining the consent of the ratepayers to the expenditure in the circumstances. At the present rate of progress in Shanghai the estimate of 1,000 cars needing day garage space does not seem too high and the exposure of valuable cars to the elements costs owners in the end more than $7½ a month as proposed in this scheme. Similar parking arrangements have met with success in other parts of the world, and though the problem is a difficult one there is no doubt that a long view of the situation should be taken by the Shanghai Municipal Council now.

ONE WAY TRAFFIC.

There are many alternative schemes for providing relief and the time has arrived when serious attention must be given to the matter of traffic problems. The appointment of a local commission assisted by a representative of the Traffic Commissioner and the Commissioner of the Public Works Department in an advisory capacity, would appear to be essential, and your committee would be willing to render any possible service in this direction.

In my remarks at the last annual meeting I referred to the necessity for introducing a "one-way" traffic scheme in the congested areas, but I understand the scheme met with serious opposition from certain quarters. I am still of the opinion, however, that such a scheme would provide a certain amount of relief and I trust the Traffic Department will continue their efforts in this direction. Questions relating to traffic in Avenue Edward VII have been brought before your committee during the year, but dual police control on this thoroughfare renders proper regulation of traffic difficult. Several new suggestions for checking the cutting corners by cars and other vehicles are under consideration. The new traffic signals have given satisfaction and it would seem that some efforts might now be made at standardising them.

TRAMWAY DELAYS.

Before leaving the question of street traffic, I think I ought to refer to the length of time taken by the Tramway Company to relay the permanent way in Nanking Road and other thoroughfares. The progress made is extremely slow and it would appear that measures could easily be taken to quicken up the work, which is a source of great inconvenience and would not be tolerated in other parts of the world. Your committee has found the Traffic Department ready at all times to consider reasonable suggestions, but many of them entail considerable expense which can only be sanctioned with the approval of the ratepayers themselves. However, the club welcomes suggestions from members and the same will receive full consideration with a view to making representations to the Council, where deemed expedient.

The chauffeurs' school, closed in December, 1922, is sadly missed and I hope the resuscitation of same may be found possible at an early date. Several inquiries have been received by the club regarding same and in many quarters it is considered a necessity in the interests of public safety. No further progress has been made regarding motor road extensions or the building of new roads outside the Settlement and Concession limits, but the existing roads have been kept in comparatively good order which augurs well for the future of the road building movement in China.

CLUB MATTERS.

Turning to the club matters members continue to take advantage of the benefits of affiliation with the Royal Automobile Club, London, and have found the privileges extended of considerable help both as regards the purchase and landing of cars and the general facilities provided for tourists. A letter has just been received from the Royal Automobile Club extending to members of our club visiting Great Britain on the occasion of the British Empire Exhibition, a cordial invitation to become honorary members of the Royal Automobile Club during the period of the Exhibition on presentation of a letter of initroduction. Members desiring to take advantage of this exceedingly generous offer should apply to our secretaries for a letter of introduction.

The Club Handbook which was recently issued to members contains a good deal of information of interest and value to motorists. It is hoped to improve future issues by adding to the contents, and the secretaries will be glad to receive suggestions from members at any time. Your committee has appointed the "Asiatic Motor"

(Continued on Page 22)

COMMERCE AND FINANCE

Money and Exchange

OFFICIAL RATES.

Shanghai, Apr. 4.

Bank's demand selling rate for 11 at 3/2⅜=Tls. 6.25 at 7160=$8.73

Bank's demand selling rate for G.$100 at 68¾=Tls. 145.45 at 7160=$203.14

Mex. Dollars, market rate	7185
Native Interest	06
Copper Cash	262,000
Bar Silver	32 1/16
Bank rate of Discount	4%
Paris on London	74.40
New York on London	430¼

BANK'S OPENING SELLING RATES.

	Per Tael
LONDON—
Telegraphic Transfer	3/2½
Demand	3/2⅝
NEW YORK—
Telegraphic Transfer	68⅛
Demand	68¾
PARIS—
Demand	1198
INDIA—
Demand	228¾
HONGKONG—
Demand	73½
JAPAN—
Demand	61½
BATAVIA—
Demand	190½
SINGAPORE—
Demand	73½

BANK'S OPENING BUYING RATES.

LONDON—
Demand	3/3
4 m/s. credits	3/4⅛
4 m/s. Docs.	3/4⅜
6 m/s. credits	3/4⅜
6 m/s. Docs.	3/5¼
NEW YORK—
Demand	70
4 m/s. credits	72
4 m/s. Docs.	72½
PARIS—
4 m/s. Docs.	1275
Closing business done at
London T.T.	3/2½
New York T.T.	69¼

CUSTOMS EXCHANGE RATES FOR APRIL

Hk. Tls. 5.49 at 3/3½	£1
,, 1 at 163 1/2	Frs. 18.17
,, 1.28 at 69 7/8	Gold $1
,, 1 at 62⅜	Yen 1.79
,, 1 at 233½	Rupees 2.60
,, 1 at 1.50	Mex. $1.50
,, 1 at 16.35	It. Lire 18.21
Marks and Roubles	no quotation

Sino-Italian Bank Quotations

Selling Rates, Apr. 4.

It. Lire 15.60	Tl. 1
Swiss Frs. 3.92	Tl. 1
It. Lire 9.55	Y. 1

Week's Exchange Notes

Apr. 5.

At the close of business on the 3rd instant the stock of silver in Shanghai was Tls. 30,931,000 and $44,760,000.

These figures include Tls. 8,120,000 and $28,810,000 in Chinese banks in which there were 933 bars.

BAR SILVER.

Arrivals were:—
nil.

Shipments were:—
70 bars to Foochow.
10 ,, ,, Mukden.

80 bars.

SYCEE.

There were no movements of sycee during the week.

DOLLARS.

Arrivals were:—
$250,000 from Chinkiang.

Shipments were:—
nil.

SILVER.

The price came yesterday as 32 1/16d. ready and 32⅛d. forward, showing declines of 1/16d. ready and ⅛d. forward compared with a week ago. The market has generally been reported as quiet. China sold, the Continent bought, and India both bought and sold. Bars in stock, 2,331, including silver yen 10 lakhs.

EXCHANGE.

Last week exchange left off at 3/2¾d., where it remained until Thursday. There was a feeling of weakness about and at 10.30 the rate dropped to 3/2½d. With silver down again yesterday 3/16d. ready and forward, the rate dropped a further ⅛d. down to T.T. 3/2⅜d.

At the moment the market is quiet with sellers of T.T. 3/2 1/16d. and Gold $69 to June.

Official quotations are T.T. 3/2½d. to June, 3/2d. to December, G.$T.T. 68¾ to December, 4 m/s. L/C 3/3⅛d. and 4 m/s L/C G.$ 71¼ both ready and forward.

SHANGHAI MARKET REPORT

Further Improvement at Piece Goods Auctions but Private Business Extremely Slow

Apr. 5.

Another very dull week has to be registered in the case of the local markets. At the auctions piece goods have again shown an improvement, but there is little indication of a general resumption of business activity.

Local yarn and cloth are going into consumption fairly well, but no new business is mentioned.

All exports show a stagnant tendency.

PIECE GOODS.

Piece goods prices remain steady, and clearances continue to be good, but no new business of any moment has been transacted. The same state of affairs was noted last year at this period, but was followed by a good inquiry, and the hope is expressed that within the next few weeks business may eventuate. Recent reports from Peking indicate that onlookers there do not anticipate any tangible developments of the political situation for the time being, and there may thus be enough confidence to promote trade.

In woollens business is very slack, and no forward contracts are reported. The Home market is steady, prices showing a tendency to rise.

The auctions have again shown a general improvement this week. For the most expensive qualities of Venetians there was a strong demand, while the lower types remained steady. Velvets were also in request. High quality Italians are making a very steady recovery, having regained about 4 per cent. of the total fall from the highest point of the year—the third week in February. The loss amounted in all to 14 per cent. There is therefore a very good prospect of a complete recovery of the remaining 10 per cent. as stocks are low and all cargo purchased is being shipped away very rapidly. Speculators are having little opportunity of carrying out their usual operations at the present juncture, and have had no chance to lay in their customary stocks. Greys continue to enjoy a very good all-round demand, and there is much confidence in the future. In Whites the outstanding feature is the extensive demand that has sprung up in the north, especially Tientsin. Realizing that supplies of spot cargo are very small, dealers are anticipating better prices prior to the arrival of new shipments.

COTTON AND YARN.

China Cotton—China cotton continues firm, and holders do not seem inclined to sell. In view of the amount of watering which today has to be contended against, more attention is being given by local mills to the Indian staple On the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange the following quotations are current:—April 46; May 45.50; June 44.85; July 44.05; August 43.10; September 40.70. Spot market rates are as follows:—Tungchow 47.50; Shanghai 45; Shensi 45/46.50; Hankow 44.

Yarn—Local Yarn remains firm but no new business with the mills is mentioned. Deliveries are fairly good, and this is also the case with local cloth. On the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange yarn prices are quoted as follows:—April 176.50; May 174.50; June 172.20; July 170.90; August 169.70; September 167.80.

SILK.

The demand from Lyons has ceased, and the market there is dull, buyers apparently expecting lower prices.

New York is still holding off, and reliable quotations are unobtainable.

The Japan market is also reported very weak, and some short sales which are going on there seem to be a sure sign that a further drop is expected.

The local market is quiet, and prices are decidedly on the weak side.

PRODUCE.

There is no business to report An absence of any purchases from New York is noted, and few signs of activity can be seen. The European market also remains inactive, and there people seem to be waiting for a measure of stability in the franc before operating.

Amsterdam Loan

London, Mar. 28.

The issue price of the City of Amsterdam loan is 96½.—Reuter.

Rubber Production and Consumption

London, Mar. 28.

Presiding at a meeting of the United Serdang Rubber Plantations, Mr. C. Heath-Clark estimated that the exportable production of crude rubber in 1923 was 370,000 tons and the world's consumption 405,000 tons. The production in 1924 was estimated at 380,000 tons to 400,000 tons and the consumption at 430,000 tons.—Reuter.

WHOLESALE PRICES IN SHANGHAI

Bureau of Markets Index Number

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Markets has issued the wholesale price index number for Shanghai for the month of March. In making the figures public the Commissioner of the Bureau says:—

The total index number for this month is 157.5 being the same as those for February and December of last year. It is 1.3 per cent. lower than the previous month and 0.8 per cent. lower in comparison with the corresponding month of last year. All groups are down except metals, which have risen on account of the higher price of antimony.

Our index number is a wholesale one and contains altogether 147 kinds of principal imports, exports and daily articles, having the purpose of measuring the general price level and the change of the purchasing power of money. It differs from cost of living index and has no connexion with the revision of import tariffs. Some people have a wrong impression that this index number is to be used for future tariff revisions. If an index number is to be used for the amendment of tariffs, having such a purpose it must be based upon imports in particular and will be decidedly different from this one.

Our monthly figures since March, 1923, are given below:—

		Cereals	Other food products	Textiles	Metals	Fuels	Miscellaneous: Building materials	Industrial materials	Sundries	Average	Total Average
Feb..	1913	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0	100.0
Mar.	1923	149.2	156.2	155.7	162.5	178.5	166.1	199.3	136.5	170.1	158.7
April	,,	150.1	156.3	154.1	160.3	177.0	168.4	189.7	135.1	167.6	157.7
May	,,	154.1	159.8	154.9	162.4	169.5	162.3	177.7	134.3	160.6	158.4
June	,,	153.7	152.6	155.8	157.8	167.7	159.1	172.5	126.0	156.3	155.2
July	,,	152.8	154.4	155.9	155.8	168.1	160.9	170.8	132.8	158.1	155.4
Aug.	,,	150.0	148.5	153.8	156.8	164.2	162.4	162.9	132.4	155.5	153.1
Sept.	,,	153.2	150.3	154.8	166.9	165.2	165.7	173.0	131.7	158.9	156.8
Oct.	,,	146.1	152.9	160.0	160.8	166.0	166.3	180.6	129.5	160.6	156.1
Nov.	,,	141.5	157.4	165.8	157.9	166.4	167.2	193.0	129.7	164.1	157.3
Dec.	,,	141.2	155.8	165.7	161.6	172.2	162.9	189.6	129.7	163.6	157.5
Jan.	1924	139.1	154.9	165.7	162.4	169.9	163.8	183.5	128.8	161.5	156.7
Feb.	,,	145.6*	159.8	167.9	166.6	159.5	160.5	179.0	130.5	157.4	*159.5
Mar.	,,	141.2	154.9	165.8	172.0	157.9	155.9	170.6	130.5	153.7	157.5

IMPORTANT INSURANCE ENTERPRISE

Proposal to Take up Trustee Business in Shanghai

A very important circular has just been addressed by the general manager to shareholders of the Yangtsze Insurance Association Ld. It is in the following terms:

Your directors have taken under consideration the advisability of extending the scope of the Association's business so as to enable it to act as a trustee, executor, administrator and agent, and otherwise in a fiduciary capacity. So far as your directors are aware, no public company at present transacts business of this nature in Shanghai or other ports in China. One of the results of this is that the ordinary resident in the Far East, who presumably has a considerable portion of his property invested locally, when providing for the disposition of his property by will, is compelled to appoint one or more private individuals as his executors or trustees. The disadvantages attending such an appointment are obvious. The persons appointed may decline the responsibilities of such office, or they may leave China or die before their duties are concluded, in any of which events considerable legal expenses may have to be incurred by the estate, and other disadvantages may accrue.

The opportunity of appointing as trustees or executor or placing other trust business in the hands of a public company of established reputation, thereby ensuring continuity of management and safe administration, should be one of which many persons will be glad to avail themselves.

From the Association's point of view, the benefits of the new department would not be immediate In course of time, however, the trust business should progress and result in a satisfactory profit to the department itself, and should also at the same time tend to develop the Association's insurance connexions.

This proposed extension of business necessitates an addition to the memorandum of the association. The Association being a "China Company" within the meaning of the Companies Ordinance 1915, and, therefore, required to have its registered office within the limits of the China (Companies) Order in Council 1915, the opportunity has also been taken to obtain the alteration of clause 2 of the memorandum so as to make it conform to the present law. The necessary alterations and additions have been prepared by our legal advisers.

FORTHCOMING RESOLUTION.

Your directors, although they do not contemplate opening this new department until they are satisfied that it will receive adequate support, propose to invite the sanction of the shareholders to the necessary alteration in the memorandum by a special resolution to be proposed at an extraordinary general meeting to be held immediately after the conclusion of the annual general meeting in May next. If the resolution is carried, a further extraordinary general meeting for confirmation thereof will be convened after the necessary interval. If the approval of the shareholders is then obtained, application will in due course be made to His Britannic Majesty's Supreme Court for China at Shanghai for the necessary confirmation.

The additional clause to the memorandum of association is in the following terms:

(H)—To undertake and execute any trusts the undertaking whereof may seem desirable and also to undertake the office of and act as trustee, executor, administrator, guardian, committee, agent, custodian, receiver, treasurer, registrar or auditor and to keep for any company, government, authority or body any register relating to any stocks, funds, shares or securities or to undertake any duties in relation to the registration of transfers, issue of certificates or otherwise and generally to transact all kinds of fiduciary business and either with or without remuneration.

RUBBER OUTPUT IN DUTCH INDES

Suggested Compromise With British Planters

Amsterdam, Mar. 30.

In authoritative rubber circles the reported intention of the Dutch East Indian Government to tax native-grown rubber exports is received with some reserve. The motive submitted, that it is impossible to include non-European profits in the income tax, is not considered sound. It is generally accepted that the Government scheme is the result of a compromise with British rubber planters, for such a tax would slacken the speedy development of native rubber cultivation.

The "Handelsblad" points out that the restriction of native rubber cultivation would be directly opposed to the policy carried out hitherto, and, moreover, it remains to be seen whether it will be easy to keep native and plantation rubber apart.—Reuter.

GULA KALUMPONG RUBBER ESTATES CO.

Dividend of Two Shillings on Fully Paid Shares

Messrs. Ilbert & Co., Ld. the local secretaries of the Gula-Kalumpong Rubber Estates Ld., inform us that they have received the following cable from the London secretaries of the company:—

The annual general meeting will be held on April 8, balance of profit and loss is £56,678.16.4. Dividend will be 2/- per share on fully paid shares and 6d. per share on partly paid shares less income tax 4/7½ in the £. Proposed to carry to reserve fund £10,000, and to carry forward £42,941.10. Dividend payable on and after April 15, subject to confirmation at the annual general meeting. Payable to all shareholders registered on April 8 and bearer shares coupon No. 21.

FIRE LOSSES IN FAR EAST

Typhoon and Earthquake Effects

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Hongkong Fire Insurance Co. Ld., Mr. D. G. M. Bernard, the Chairman, made reference to the Japan earthquake and the Hongkong typhoon. He said:—

Fire losses in the Far East during the period under review have not been numerous or severe, but you will, perhaps, wish me to say a few words with regard to the effect upon the company of the two disasters in our local field last year, viz., the earthquake in Japan in September and the typhoon in Hongkong of August 18.

In connexion with the former, we only had on our books one small insurance in Yokohama against the risk of fire arising from earthquake, and as subsequent investigations have revealed that the insured property withstood the shocks but was ultimately destroyed by fire, liability for the loss was admitted and settlement authorized.

Liability for loss or damage from both earthquake shock and from fire arising from earthquake is expressly excluded from the risks covered under the universal policy conditions adopted by all the leading British and foreign offices, and these two risks can only be covered at an additional premium, which in Japan is exceptionally heavy. Consequently, only an infinitesimal proportion of the owners of destroyed properties in Yokohama and Tokio had protected themselves against loss from either of these causes, so that the liability of the various insurance companies under their ordinary fire policies is nil and under special "earthquake" policies, it must also be comparatively trifling.

As regards the Hongkong typhoon, although the volume of the company's insurance against typhoon risks has shown a steady increase in recent years, I am glad to be able to state that, in spite of our being substantially interested by insurance on much of the property which suffered damage, the loss was considerably less than we had at first anticipated and was no more than the company might normally expect to bear in a calamity of this nature.

Share Report for Week Ending April 4, 1924.

No. 24/13

J. P. BISSET & CO.

Telegraphic Address: "BISSET SHANGHAI"
Codes in use: A1 Code
A.B.C. 4th 5th and 6th Editions
B. Becombail's Imperial Combination Code
Bentley's Complete Phrase Code.
Telephone Cent. 171 & 174.

Members of Shanghai Stock Exchange
Land, Estate & Insurance Agents.
Hongkong & Shanghai Bank Building,
12 The Bund.
Post Office Box No. 244, Shanghai.

The local share market has been dull during the past week and except for Yangtze Insurance Association Ltd. share quotations generally show no changes calling for special comment. "Rubbers" due to a slight improvement in the price for the raw material are a firm market at prices offering to-day and enquiries indicate more confidence in the prospects for rubber generally. "Cottons" are neglected and the local mills continue to work short hours whenever possible. All sound local shares are in good demand but stagnation in trade generally here makes it questionable whether some of them are worth prices offering to-day in comparison good sterling investments.

London market quotations have improved slightly since last week and the following are the latest prices cabled to us this week:—

Chinese Govt. 5% Reorg. Gold Loan 1913, B.I.	£ 72. 10. 0	(Middle Price)
" " " " " " " F.I.	69. 10. 0	" ex B.R.I.S.
" " " " " " " G.I.	65. 0. 0	(Buyers) "
" " " " " " " R.I.	66. 0. 0	(Middle Price) cum "
" " " " " " " R.I.	65. 0. 0	(Sellers) ex "
Chinese Engineering & Mining Co., "B"	3. 3. 9	(Middle Price)
Gula Kalumpong Rubber Estates, Ltd.	1. 11. 0
Shanghai Electric Cons. Co., "B"	2. 13. 3	(Middle Price)
British-American Tob. Co., "B"	5. 6. 0	" "
Imperial Tob. of G.B. (Ord).	3. 10. 9	" "

Sterling Quotation.—The opening T.T. Rate on London to-day is 3/2¼.

Shanghai, April 4, 1924.

Following is the official business recorded on the Shanghai Stock Exchange:—

MARCH	29th		31st		APRIL 1st		2nd		3rd		4th
	Cash	June	Cash	June	Cash	June	Cash	June	Cash	June	Cash	June
RUBBERS
Kroewock Rub' Est., Ld. .. Tls.	13	..	..	..	12	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Semambu Rub. Est., Ld. .. "	..	..	1.10	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Consolidated Rub. Co., Ld. .. "	..	..	2.20	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Bukit Toh Alang R. E., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	1.10	..	1.10	..	..	..	1.12½	..
Dominion Rub. Co., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	1.85	..	1.85	..	..	..
Sungala Rub. Est., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	0.97½	..	..	..	..
Anglo-Java Est., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	5.85	..	5.85	..
Kali Glidik Coffee Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	6.15	..
Tanah Merah Rub. Est., Ld. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	0.60	..
Anglo-Dutch Plant., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	2.15	..
Batu Anam R. E., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	0.80	..
Senawang Rub. Co., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	0.82½	..
MISCELLANEOUS STOCKS
New Eng. & S. Wks. (Pref.) Tls.	4.95	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
S. & H. Wharf. Co., Ld. .. "	188	..	..	195	..	..	192½	197½	..	..	..	..
H. & S. Bank .. .. .. $	..	..	115½	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Land Invest. Co., Ld. Tls.	..	..	118	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Mutual Tel. Co., Ld. "	..	..	73	..	..	..	..	..	74	..	..	..
S'hai Dock & Eng. Co., Ld. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	98½	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Loan & Invest. Co., Ld. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	6½	..	..	..
Lanekats (combined) .. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	88	..
S'hai Sumatra Tob. Co., Ld. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	105	..
S'hai Elec. Cons. Co., "B" "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	16½	..
COTTONS
DEBENTURES
S. M. C. Sterling Loan .. .. £	104	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Land 6% 1909 Debs. Tls.	..	..	..	..	98	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Gas 6% " " "	..	..	..	..	..	..	94	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Land 6% 1916 " " "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	88	..	..	..
S. M. C. 6% 1923 " " "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	99	..	..	..
" 6% 1916 " " "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	99	..	..	..
" 8% 1921 " " "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	110	..

FORWARD SETTLEMENTS FOR 1924.

COMPANIES' NOTICES, MEETINGS, ETC.

The Shanghai Gas Co., Ltd.—At a meeting of directors held on 6th inst. it was decided to recommend at the forthcoming annual general meeting, the payment of a dividend for 1923 of Tls. 4 per share, being at the rate of 8% on the paid-up capital.

The Annual General Meeting will be held at the Office of Messrs. Scott, Harding & Co., Ltd., 35 Peking Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, April 10, 1924, at 4 p.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 1 to 10, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Batu Anam (Johore) Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The 11th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 10, 1924, at 3.30 p.m.

It was decided to recommend to shareholders a dividend of 5 cents per share.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 7 to 10, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Consolidated Rubber Estates (1914), Ltd.—The 10th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 2 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 8, 1924, at 4 p.m.

To Pay a final Dividend of Tls. 0.15 per share (making 28 per cent. for the year.)

The Transfer Books will be closed from March 31 to April 8, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Gula Kalumpong Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The local Transfer Books will be closed from March 24 to April 11, 1924, both days inclusive.

A dividend at the rate of 2/- per share on Fully Paid Shares will be paid on and after April 15, 1924 (Coupon No. 21) Less Income Tax 4/7½ in the £.

The Ziangbe Rubber Co., Ltd.—The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Monday, April 7, 1924, at 11.45 a.m.

A dividend of 25 candareens per share will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 2 to 7, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Anglo-Java Estates, Ltd.—The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Monday, April 14, 1924, at 4 p.m.

A final dividend of 30½ candareens per share will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 7 to 14, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Java Consolidated Rubber & Coffee Estates, Ltd.—The 11th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, April 17, 1924, at 4.30 p.m.

A final dividend of 75 candareens per share, making Tls. 1.25 per share for the year will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 12 to 17, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Bute Plantations (1913), Ltd.—The 11th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 2 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 15, 1924, at noon.

The Taiping Rubber Estate, Ltd.—The 11th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 2 Kiangse Road, Shanghai, on Wednesday, April 9, 1924, at 11.30 a.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 5 to 9, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Chartered Bank of I. A. & C.—At the approaching annual general meeting of shareholders the Directors will recommend that a dividend be declared for the past half year at the rate of 14 per cent. annum and a bonus of 6s. 3d. per shares free of income tax (equal to 20½% per annum).

The Kapayang Rubber Estates Co., Ltd—The 15th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 23 Peking Road, Shanghai, on Monday, April 7, 1924, at 12 noon.

To pay a final dividend of 6% per share.

The Dominion Rubber Co., Ltd.—The 10th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 2 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 15, 1924, at 4 p.m.

To pay a dividend at Tls. 0.10 per share will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from [illegible]

The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at

CLOSING QUOTATIONS, APRIL 4, 1924.

STOCK		Last business done.	Buyers	Sellers	No. of Shares	Authorized Value	Reserve, etc:	Finan. year ended	Last Dividend etc.	Paid or Due
BANKS.
London	£	127½
Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Cor.	$	1150	1155	1165	61) 400,000	H $125	(a H $3,350,212 (c H $85,123,837	Dec.	Final £3 & Bonus £2 (mkg. £3 1922) less I/T	25-3-24
Chartered Bank of I., A. & C. .. London	£	19 3/16			600,000	£5	(a £222,201 (c £3,800,000	Dec.	Final 7s. & Bonus 6s. 3d. (mkg. £1 0s. 3d.) free of I/T, 1922	5-4-24
INSURANCE.
Union In. Society of Canton, Ld.	H$	240		55)	200,000	d £4	(av £437,386 (b £99,500 (c £3,574,054	Dec.	Final 16s. (mkg. 40s.) ex 1921 Work. a/c., Interim 24s. & Bonus to Contributors, 20%, ex 1922 Work a/c	26-5-23
North-China Insurance Co., Ld.	T	138			10,000	e £5	(av T610,627 (c T4,782,855	Dec.	Final 15s. (mkg. 30s.) ex 1921 Work a/c. and Interim 15s. ex 1922 Works. a/c.	30-6-23
Yangtsze Insurance Association, Ld. ..	$	27	29½	21)	250,000	$10	(av $1,921,990 (aw $2,408,636 (c $4,063,242	Dec.	$2 (or T1.46) ex 1922 Work. a/c. payable in Taels at Exchg. 73	30-5-23
Far Eastern Insurance Co., Ld.	T	22		1)	50,000	T20	(av T518,346 (aw T294,093 (c T9,361	Dec.	T1.20 ex 1922 Work. a/c.	30-5-23
Canton Insurance Office, Ld.	H$	720	715		10,000	f H $100	(av H $2,172,375 (c H $6,649,892	Dec.	Final H $22 (mkg. H $40) ex 1921 Work. a/c., and Interim H $18 ex 1922 Work. a/c. ..	11-5-23
Hongkong Fire Insurance Co., Ld. ..	H$	550	520		8,000	g H $50	(au H $515,102 (c H $4,207,311	Dec.	Interim H $35 ex 1922 Working a/c.	28-3-24
China Fire Insurance Co., Ld.	H$	127	145		20,000	h H $20	(av H $1,328,926 (c H $5,523,650	Dec.	H $7 and Bonus H $3 ex 1921 Work. a/c. ..	20-6-23
Assurance Franco-Asiatique	F	500			14,000	¥500	(a F101,368 (c F3,784,330	Dec.	None, Floated 1918	....
SHIPPING.
Indo-China S.N. Co., Ld. .. (6%cum.pref.	H$	38	38½	2)	120,000	£5	(a £2,167	Dec.	Pref. 6s. at Exchg.—$2/4 London Warrants less I/T a/c., 1922. Def. Ord. Nil	15-6-23
(def. ord. ..	H$	140		2)	120,000	£5	(c £2,103,182
Shell T'sport & Trading Co., Ld. (ord.	'B'		£4:13:0	£4:16:0	56) 30,000,000	£1
(5%cum.pref.	£			28)	300,000	£10	(a* £2,020,050	Dec.	Interim 2s., free of I/T, Coupon 42	5-1-24
(7% cum. 2nd pref.	£			57)	10,000,000	£1	(c £5,000,000
S'hai Tug & Lighter Co., Ld. (ord.	T	85	85	90	20,000	T25	(a T23,575	Dec.	Final Ord. T4.50 (mkg. T7, 1923)	11-3-24
(7% pref.	T	51½	52		10,000	T50	(c T410,000		Final Pref. T1.75 (mkg. T3.50, 1923)	11-3-24
DOCKS AND WHARVES.
Shanghai Dock & Engineering Co., Ld. ..	T	92½	95	96½	47) 55,700	T75	(a T102,535 (c T1,048,000	Apr.	T7.50, 1922-23	27-7-23
Hongkong & W'pao Dock Co., Ld.	H$	155			‡ 60,000	H $50	(a H $319,796 (c H $4,067,500	Dec.	Final H $5 (mkg. H $9, 1923)	21-3-24
New Eng. and Shipbuilding Works, Ld. (ord.	T	5½	5½		42) 500,000	T5	(a T200,000 (b T1,211,017	Dec.	Ord. T0.25, 1923	10-2-24
.. .. (8% pref.	T	4.95	4.97½		65) 500,000	T5	(c T1,015,251		Pref. T0.40 1923..	10-2-24
Shanghai & H'kew Wharf Co., Ld.	T	192½	191		‡31) 40,000	T100	(a T200,000 (b T290,000 (c T1,015,251	Dec.	Final T10 (mkg. T13, 1923)	4-3-24
H'kong & K'loon W. & G. Co., Ld. ..	H$	168	169		80,000	H $50	(a H $200,819 (b H $300,000 (c H $59,240	Dec.	H. $6 & Bonus H. $3, 1923	26-2-24
MINING.
Oriental Consolidated Min. Co., Ld. ..	£	12/-			24) 500,000	G $10		June	G $0.50, 1920-21	26-7-23
Chinese Eng. & Mining Co., Ld. (Bearer).	T	20½	20½		†264) 2,000,000	£1	(a £10,537	June	Final 84% (Coupon No. 23) free of I/T, 1922-1923	11-12-23
London	£		£3:7:0	£3:10:0			(c £252,000
Raub Australian Gold Min. Co., Ld. ..	H$	5			200,000	£1	(a £23,613 (c £4,573	Mar.	1s. 2d., 1909-10	21-5-10
LANDS AND HOTELS.
Shanghai Land Investment Co., Ld. ..	T	118	118		‡) 78,000	T50	(a T34,410 (b T275,000 (c T2,239,317	Dec.	Final T3 & Bonus T2 (mkg. T8, 1923)	21-3-24
H'kong Land Invest. & Agcy. Co., Ld. .. (New Reg.)	H$	121		120½	240,000	H $25	(a H $157,500 (b H $250,000 (c H $1,582,200	Dec.	Final H $1.50 & Bonus $2 on 200,000 shares (mkg. H $5, 1923) H $2.50 on 40,000 new shs.	28-1-24
Humphreys Est. & Finance Co., Ld. ..	H $	24			150,000	H $10	(a H $50,000 (b H $50,000 (c H $421,483	Dec	H $0.80 and Bonus H $0.80, 1923	9-2-24
Weihaiwei L. & B. Co., Ld.	T	6			3,874	T20	(a T2,946 (c T7,000	Dec.	T1.20, 1923	13-2-24
Anglo-French Land Invest. Co., Ld. ..	T	115½	118		‡23) 18,000	T100	(a T9,209 (b T20,000 (c T375,000	Feb.	Final T4.50 (mkg. T8, 1923-24)	3-4-24
Hongkong & Shanghai Hotels, Ld. ..	H$	28	26		23) 500,000	H $10	(a H $85,238 (c H $4,953,767	Dec.	Final H $0.75 & Bonus H $0.50 on 375,000 shares (mkg. H $2 (old) & H $1.75 (new), 1923)	14-2-24
Carlton, Ld.	T	53			14) 10,000	T50		Mar.	Floated April 1, 1922
Asia Realty Co., Inc.	G$	100			‡18) 10,000	G $100		Dec.	Incorporated under the laws of Delaware 1922, 7%	4-1-23
Raven Trust Co., Inc. .. .. (ord.	G$	10	12½		106,000	G $10
(pref.	G$	10	10			G $10			Ord. Pref. 1st gr. 1923, 1½%	4-1-23
PLANTATIONS.
Alma Estates, Ld.	T	5½	5½		70,000	£1 at T9	a T28,940	Sept.	T0.50, 1922-23	19-12-23
New Amherst Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	0.25	0.20		‡62) 500,000	T1		Oct.	....	....
Anglo-Dutch (Java) Plantations, Ld. ..	T	2.15	2.05		12) 400,000	10s.	a T30,242	Dec.	T0.20, 1923	1-4-24
Anglo-Java Estates, Ld.	T	5.85	5¾		4) 500,000	10s.	(a T129,151 (c T378,570	Dec.	Interim T0.25 a/c. 1923	14-9-23
Ayer Tawah Rubber Co., Ld.	T	21			27) 80,000	T10	(a T16,223 (b T22,000 (c T69,960	Sept.	Final T2.00, (mkg. T2½, 1922-23	28-12-23
Batu Anam (Johore) Rub. Ests., Ld. ..	T	0.80	0.72½		400,000	T1	a T20,789	Dec.	T0.05, 1919	10-4-20
Bukit Toh Alang Rubber Ests., Ld. ..	T	1.12½	1.10		500,000	T1	a T20,402	Mar.	Final T0.25 (mkg. T0.50, 1916-17)	25-7-17
Bute Plantation (1913), Ld.	T	0.75	0.72½		300,000	T1	a (Loss)T13,076	Dec.	Final T0.05 (mkg. T0.10, 1916)	29-3-17
Chemor United Rubber Co., Ld.	T	0.85	0.90		400,000	T0.90	(a T17,973 (c T12,000	Dec.	Final T0.05 (mkg. T0.10, 1923)	3-4-24
Chempedak Rub. & G'bier Est., Ld. ..	T	4½			39) 35,000	£1	a (Loss)T13,435	Oct.	2nd Interim, T0.50, (mkg. T1, 1916-17)	16-10-17
Cheng Rubber Estates, Ld.	T	1½			135,000	T5	a T4,120	June	T0.20, 1916-17	1-11-17
Consolidated Rubber Estates (1914), Ld. ..	T	2.20	2¼		25) 500,000	2s.—T0.75	(a T23,192 (c T30,000	Dec.	Interim T0.06, 1923	15-10-23
Dominion Rubber Co., Ld.	T	1.85			19) 350,000	T1	a T15,813	Dec.	T0.40,1919	18-5-20
Gula Kalumpong Rubber Ests., Ld. ..	T	8	8½		†48) 750,000	21;450,000 5s; 200,000	(a (c	Dec.	2s. less I/T at 5s. in £1922, "B" Coupon 20)†† ..	28-3-23
Java-Consolidated Rubber & Coffee Est., Ld.	T	11½	10½		8) 85,000	£1 at 2.31½	(a T54,465 (c T650,113	Dec.	Interim, T0.50, 1923	3-9-23
Kali Glidik Coffee Estates, Ld.	T	6.15	6		70,000	T5		....	....	....
Kapayang Rubber Estates Co., Ld. ..	T	10			‡5) 15,000	T10	(a T6,977 (b T4,023	Dec.	(T0.50, 1922	19-4-23
Karan Rubber Estate Co., Ld.	T	4			25,000	T10	(a (a	Dec.	Interim 1923, T0.50	17-7-23
Kota Bahroe Rubber Estates (1921), Ld. ..	T	0.75	0.75		390,000	T1	(b T10,000	Mar.	T0.60, 1922-23	1-8-23
Kroewock Java Plantations, Ld.	T	12	12		20) 70,000	£1 at T8.60	a (Loss)T35,264	June	....	....
Padang Rubber Co., Ld.	T	5½			50,000	T10	(a T12,986 (c T62,599	Dec.	T1 (mkg. T1.50, 1923)	8-3-24
Pangkalan Jambon Estates (1923), Ld. ..	T	5.00	5.05		36) 600,000	T5	(a T16,410 (c T249,000	Apr.	T0.04, 1919-20	6-3-20
Pataling Rubber Estates, Ld.	T	0.60	0.65		36) 600,000	T1	(a T8,744

The following telegraphic advices have been received:—

Singapore, April 3, 1924.

Spot or April	42⅞ cents
May/June	43¾ ,,
July/Sept.	44¾ ,,
July/Dec.	45¼ ,,

Market firm with upward tendency.

Thursday, April 17, 1924, at 11.30 a.m.

A dividend of 7 per cent. will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 14 to 29, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Cheng Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The Transfer Books will be closed from April 10 to 16, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Shanghai Malay Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at No 23 Peking Road, Shanghai, on Monday, April 14, 1924, at 11.45 a.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 10 to 11, 1924, both days inclusive.

DEBENTURES.

LOANS	Term in years	Last business recorded		Loan Amt.	Int %	Payable
S'hai Municipal Council	1905	6 to 20	12-5-22	T96½	d 320,000	6	June-Dec.
	1907	do.	24-1-22	T94	500,000	6	do.
	1908	do.	11-3-24	T99	650,000	6	do.
	1909	do.	15-3-23	T99	300,000	6	do.
	1910	do.	11-5-23	T99	313,800	6	do.
	1911	10 to 30	3-4-24	T99	350,000	6	do.
	1912	do.	3-1-24	T99	340,000	6	do.
	1913	do.	3-3-23	T100	756,300	6	do.
	1914	10 to 50	8-5-22	T78	500,000	5½	do.
	1914	10 to 30	8-1-23	T91	900,000	5½	do.
	1915	do.	11-3-24	T91	800,000	5½	do.
	1916	do.	3-4-24	T99	1,400,000	6	do.
	1918	10	18-10-23	T103	507,300	7	do.
	1919	10	4-12-23	T104	1,793,300	7	do.
	1920	10	1-2-24	T105	2,240,600	7	do.
		10 to 30	29-3-24	£104	£750,000	6	do.
	1921	do.	18-2-24	$110	$1,000,000	8	do.
	1921	do.	4-4-24	T110	T5,096,400	8	do.
	1922	do.	2-4-24	T105	T8,000,000	7	do.
	1923	do.	2-4-24	T99	*a*T6,000,000	6	do.
French Municipal Council	1911	do.	8-10-23	T96	400,000	6	May-Nov.
	1914	do.	12-2-23	T88	500,000	5½	June-Dec.
	1915	do.	5-3-24	T90	350,000	5½	do.
S'hai Waterworks Co., Ltd. S'hai Gas Co., Ltd.	1921	do.	20-11-23	T108½	2,000,000	8	do.
	1923	do.	17-12-23	T95	a T300,000	6	May-Nov.
	1921	10 to 30	2-10-23	T112	2,000,000	8	June-Dec.
	1922	do.	6-6-22	T108	T500,000	8	do.
	1922	do.	2-10-23	T105	T1,000,000	7	do.
	1905	do.	2-4-23	T94	e 800,000	6	do.

LOANS	Term in years	Last business recorded		Loan Amt.	Int %	Payable
Shanghai Land Investment Co., Ltd.	1905	5 to 20	31-8-22	T96½	T250,000	6	June-Dec.
	1909	do.	1-4-24	T98	750,000	6	do.
	1911	do.	26-9-22	T92	250,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
	,,	do.	28-3-24	T98	250,000	6	May-Nov.
	1912	do.	2-4-24	T98	250,000	6	June-Dec.
	1913	do.	3-4-23	T98	250,000	6	April-Oct.
	,,	do.	11-1-24	T98	250,000	6	May-Nov.
	1914	do.	22-3-23	T98	250,000	6	April-Oct.
	1916	5 to 25	3-4-23	T88	f 500,000	5½	do.
	1922	do.	12-2-23	T98	750,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
	1922	do.	10-1-24	T98	500,000	6	May-Nov.
Shanghai Club	1907	20	1-2-24	T93	455,000	6	do.
Country Club	1901	Perpetual			139,000	6	June-Dec.
Lane, Crawford & Co., Ltd.	1911	5 to 20			120,000	6	May-Nov.
	1915	do.			110,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
Anglo-French Land Invest. Co., Ltd.	1900	do.			250,000	6	June-Dec.
	1911	do.	7-6-23	T98	300,000	6	do.
S'hai Mutual Tel. Co., Ltd.	1923	10 to 20	27-2-23	T95½	h 270,000	6	do.
S'hai Race Club	1923	25	11-3-24	T100	1,200,000	6½	Mar.-Sept.
Culty Dairy Co., Ltd.	1915	10			50,000	7	Feb.-Aug.
Hall & Holtz Ld.	1914	5 to 20	14-10-22	$92	i 280,000	7	Jan.-July
Asia Realty Co., Inc.	1922	5 to 20	..	..	T500,000	7	Jan.-July

*Plus interest accrued since last half-yearly payment.

a—Now Issuing; Redeemed or Unissued:—b—Tls.65,100; c—Tls.51,100; d—Tls.34,100; e—Tls.68,500; f—Tls.262,400; g—Tls.189,800; h—Tls.12,300; i—$18,90

RUBBER OUTPUT STATISTICS.

Company	Authorized Capital	Financial Yr. closes end of	Output last 2 fin. year: Year before	Output last 2 fin. year: Last year	Estimated output present fin. year	All in cost per lb.	Output from end. last fin. year to 31-12-23	1924: Jan.	1924: Feb.	Total output this fin.yr. to date
			lb.	lb.	lb.	d.	lb.	lb.	lb.	lb.
Alma	Tls. 630,000	Sept.	292,500	259,100	246,618	8.87d	68,000	22,000	15,000	108,000
Amherst (New)	,, 500,000	Oct.	72,442	80,692	90,751	*8.89d.	19,020	8,214	8,175	35,709
Anglo-Dutch	£220,000	Dec.	540,000	510,000	600,000	8.45d.	..	67,000	50,000	114,000
Anglo-Java	£250,000	Dec.	1,521,711	1,350,000	1,550,000	6.95d.	..	184,000	164,100	348,100
Ayer Tawah	Tls. 300 000	Sept.	369,447	358,912	360,000	†9.24.41	..	..	..	..
Batu Anam	,, 400,000	Dec.	258,510	217,822	185,793	9.01d.	..	12,500	11,500	24,000
Bukit Toh Alang	,, 600,000	Mar.	309,254	305,615	315,000	7.54d.	222,682	25,000	Nil.	218,122
Bute	,, 300,000	Dec.	220,057	174,350	159,516	10.11d.	..	17,000	16,000	31,107
Chemor United	,, 360 000	Dec.	310,791	267,627	..	8.40d.	..	27,000	23,500	50,500
Chempedak	,, £35,000	Oct.	145,760	153,063	..	1.75.42d.	30,700	11,000	7,400	49,100
Cheng	Tls. 675,000	June	151,923	145,338	..	11.09d.	102,014	10,500	9,700	122,214
Consolidated (1914) ..	,, 375,000	Dec.	669,599	645,778	761,500	7.47d.	..	55,000	55,775	101,779
Dominion	,, 350,000	Dec.	271,150	323,140	306,867	11.01d.	..	28,000	27,000	55,056
Gula-Kalumpong	$500,000	Dec.	1,113,000	937,000	1,215,000	170.74d.	..	78,000	78,000	166,000
Java Consolidated	£85,000	Dec.	675,500	626,000	..	7.05d.	..	65,000	60,000	129,200
Kapayang	,, 150,000	Dec.	189,239	146,710	..	†26.20	..	10,592	8,815	18,907
Karan	,, 250,000	Mar.	113,875	104,753	84,000	8d.	60,067	8,145	6,448	74,661
Kota Bahroe (1921) ..	,, 380,000	June	138,330	329,970	..	..	160,918	29,156	26,419	216,923
Kroewock	,, £70,000	Dec.	449,000	583,881	569,000	0.7.24d.	..	53,000	55,000	114,000
Langkat	Gs. 2,500,000	Oct.	842,589	913,000	975,000	Glds.0.28	179,300	82,500	71,500	345,300
Padang	Tls. 500,000	April	209,711	220,232	..	10¼d.	120,500	19,700	11,100	151,300
Pangkalan (1921)	,, 150,000	Mar.	172,022	135,263	176,088	†40.19	..	..	2,780	2,780
Permata	,, 250,000	Oct.	98,303	86,299	..	0/84d.	17,685	8,080	6,063	31,868
Repah	,, 275,000	Dec.	68,584	217,087	..	..	..	17,400	8,700	26,100
Samagaga	,, 600,000	Sept.	361,816	250,813	..	..	..	..	..	..
Sandakan	,, 100,000	June	179,065	142,000	115,183	11.37d.	120,500	8,500	11,600	140,603
See Kee (1918)	,, 300,000	Dec.	161,105	241,593	158,204	0/9.37d.	..	13,100	13,100	26,800
Semam	,, 375,000	Jan.	272,500	275,100	..	*17.35d.	..	..	11,500	11,500
Sendawang (1921)	,, 400,000	Sept.	313,411	246,542	..	8.12d.	67,625	21,000	17,250	105,875
Shanghai Kedah	,, 315,000	Dec.	126,108	106,034	..	11.35d.	..	5,700	8,000	13,700
S'hai-Klebang	,, 600,000	Dec.	373,111	289,156	392,000	..	..	22,782	21,474	44,256
S'hai-Malay	,, 200,000	June	209,881	188,010	..	9.3d.	100,973	16,432	14,475	131,880
S'hai Peahang	,, 325,000	Dec.	171,213	147,112	..	9.82d.	..	14,400	13,800	27,500
S'hai-Seremban	,, 650,000	Oct.	661,725	679,710	650,000	Glds.0.58	111,341	61,111	51,170	223,621
S'hai-Sumatra	,, 250,000	Dec.	114,886	97,700	..	..	..	..	..	..
Sua-Manggis	,, 100,000	Mar.	30,473	166,757	..	17.20	14,010	3,382	..	22,002
Sungei	,, £10,000	June	308,073	296,568	220,000	11.61d.	126,409	23,598	22,272	172,379
Sungei Duri	Tls. 950,000	Dec.	107,011	103,689	99,000	..	..	8,184	8,592	16,776
Taitung (1913)	,, 750,000	Mar.	415,000	390,500	..	7.85d.	234,500	21,000	22,000	277,500
Tanah Merah	,, 750,000	Jan.	630,888	723,000	717,725	0/7.66d.	..	..	67,000	64,000
Tebong	£150,000	Dec.	514,586	522,000	600,000	7.24d.	..	67,500	58,200	125,700

*Excluding Depreciation and Shanghai Expenses.

† Straits $ cents.

Senawang Rubber Ests./ord.	T	0.82½	0.80			63)	300,000	T1	(a	T10,482	Dec.	Interim T0.05, 1923		20-4-23
Co. (1921), Ltd. (12% Cum. Pref.	T					67)	100,000	T1	(c	T20,000	Jan.	.. ..		30-10-23
Shanghai Kedah Plantations, Ltd.	T	0.75	0.75			34)	400,000	T1	a (Loss) T20,075			.. ..		....
S'hai Klebang Rubber Estate, Ltd.	T	0.50				13)	315,000	T1			Sept.	T0.05, 1923		27-12-23
S'hai Malay Rubber Estates, Ltd. .. ord	T	3					87,500	T10	a	T1,183	Dec.	T0.05, 1919		24-2-20
,, 8% cum. part. pref.	T	9				22	2,000	T10	a	T12,033	Dec.	(Ord. T0.60 for 9 months ended 31/12/16		2-5-17
									a	T19,124		Pref. T0.10, for 6 months ended 31/12/22 ..		31-10-23
S'hai Pahang Rubber Estates, Ld.	T	0.75					200,000	T1
S'hai Seremban Rubber Estates, Ld. ..	T	0.60			0.75		325,000	T1	(Loss) T1,213		June	Final T0.09 (mkg. T0.10, 1916-17)		12-10-17
S'hai-Sumatra Tobacco Co., Ld.	T	105	100			7)	30,000	T20	a (Loss) T10,352		Dec.	T0.04 for 10 months, ended 31/12/22		31-3-17
Sua Manggis Rubber Co., Ld.	T	3				30)	56,090	T5	a (Loss) T25,816		Oct.	T2, 1914-19		1-4-20
Sungala Rubber Estate, Ld:	T	0.80	0.95			15)	100,000	T1	(c	T12,170
									a	T6,055
Sungei Duri Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	7½	6¾				10,000	£1 at T3.50	a	T25,000	Dec.
Taitung Rubber Estates (1913), Ld. ..	T	0.50					200,000	T1	(a	T4,625				20-4-20
Tanah Merah Estates (1916), Ld.	T	0.60	0.57½			32)	750,000	T1	(c	T10,000	Mar.	T0.10, 1916-17		12-7-17
									a (Loss) T5,491		June	T0.05, 1922-23		12-10-23
Tebong Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	1.05	1.05			‡54)	750,000	T1	a	T31,851	Dec.	T0.03, 1919		20-5-20
Zangbe Rubber Co., Ld.	T	3	2.90			6)	0,000	10s.	(c	T5,747
									a (Loss) T13,874		Mar.	Interim T0.06 1916-17 (Final, Nil)		7-12-17
COTTONS, ETC.									a	T38,757	Jan.	.... ††		.... e	T5,239	Dec.	T0.50, 1919		28-4-20
Ewo Cotton Mills, Ltd: (ord.	T	11½	11½			15)	1,000,000	T5	(b	T3,257
,, (8% cum. pref.	T	105	106			43)	10 000	T100	b	T1,400,000		Ord. T0.55, 1923		5-3-24
									c	T2,802,920	Dec.	Pref. T8, 1923		5-3-24
Laou Kung Mow C. S. & W. Co., Ld. ..	T	8					80,000	T10	a (Loss) T36,057
									b	T120,000	Dec.	Final T2, (mkg. T4, 1921)		8-3-22
Oriental C. S. & W. Co., Ld: .. .. ord. pref.	T	5				60)	500,000	T3	c	T7,612
	T					3)	5,000	T100	a (Loss) T9,590
Shanghai Cotton Mfg. Co., Ld. (Shanghai Boshoku K.K.)	T	(6 old 36 new)							b	T200,000
							80,000	T50	c	T2,551,760	Dec.	Final T0.50 (mkg. T1.50, 1921)		25-3-22
							40,000	T50
INDUSTRIAL.									a	T50,375
British-American Tobacco Co., Ld. (ord.	£		£5 ..	£5 ..		66)	18,000,000	£1	c	T1,270,000	June	T3.50 1922-23		24-8-23
,, (5% cum. pref.							4,500,000	£1
China Inn. & Ex. Lumber Co., Ld.	T	350					5,000	T100	a	£3,531,846	Sept.	Final Ord. 1922-23, 9% (mkg. 25 ..) free
									c	£2,251,649		of I/T		11-1-24
China Sugar Refining Co., Ld.	H $	284	236				20,000	H$100	a	T161,833
									b	T300,000	Feb.	T8, 1922-23		31-5-23
Gordon & Co., Ltd.	T	25				37)	6,000	T25	c	T2,100,000
									a	H$2,762
Green Island Cement Co., Ld.	H $	34	33¾				400,000	H$7.50	b	H$470,000	Dec.	H$10, 1922		27-3-23
Maatschappij, &c., In Langkat	T	10½	9¼	(comb. T23)	(comb. T22½)		200,000	Gs.10	c	H$879,752
									a	T19,695		Div. T2.50 & Bonus T0.02½
									c	T150,015		1922-23		5-7-23
									a	H$38,634		(Final H $1.50 (mkg. H$2, 1922)
									c	H$1,000,000	Dec.	(Interim H $0.50 a/c., 1923		24-2-23
Shanghai Loan & Investment Co., Ld. ..	T	6½	6.40	(comb. T23)	(comb. T22½)		250,000	T5	a (Loss) T158,435		Oct.	T0.50, 1918-19		18-9-23
									c	T190,161				30-3-20
S'hai Exploration & Development Co., Ld.	T	13					250,000	T5	(a	T35,698
Major Brothers, Ld.	T	5				10)	6,000	T30	c	T300,000	Dec.	T0.50, 1923		5-3-24
John Richards & Co., Ld.	T	10				11)	25,000	T10	a (Loss) T13,341		Dec.	....		....
									a	T6,941	Dec.	....		....
Shanghai Gas Co., Ld:	T	45				‡)	24,000	T50	c	T70,000
									a	T3,130	Dec.	T0.50, 1922		24-6-22
Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld:	T	136 80ex				‡9)	50,900	$20	c	T30,000
									a	T23,791	Dec.	T3.50, 1922		13-4-23
STORES.									b	T50,000
									c	T365,891
Hall & Holtz, Ld:									a	T24,475	Dec.	(Final 10s./- (at Exchg. 3/2½ = T3.09) mkg.
									b	T75,000		20s./-, 1923		4-4-24
S. Llewellyn & Co., Ld.	$	7	7			‡16)	28,000	$20	c	T1,770,986
									a	$5,339
S. Mootrie & Co., Ld.	$	30					1,200	$60	b	$20,000	Dec.	$6, 1922		12-6-23
									c	$250 000
Weeks & Co., Ld.	$	50				17)	10,000	$30	a	$20,282	Mar.	(Final $2 & Bonus $4 (mkg. $9, 1922-23) ..
									c	$323,195		(Int. 6%, 1923-24		2-6-23
									a	$37,633	Feb.	$1.50, 1922-22		30-11-23
Lane, Crawford & Co., Ld.	$	11				‡50)	30,000	$20	c	$210,000				30-5-22
									a	$5,339
									b	$20,000		$8, 1922-23		24-5-23
	$	102	105			‡)	2,500	$100	c	$250 000
MISCELLANEOUS.
Culty Dairy Co., Ld.	T	13	12				10,000	T10	a	Loss T26,956	Oct.	T0.60, 1921-22		30-12-24
									c	T119,293
S'hai Electric Construction Co., Ld., "B"	T	16½	16¼	16¼					a	£17,022
London	£1		£2/12/0	£2/15/0			40,000	£1			Dec.	(1st Int. 1923, 12s./- (Coupon 23)		1-10-23
									c	£114,315		(2nd Int. 1923, 12s./- (Coupno 24) both less
S'hai Horse Bazaar & Motor Co., Ld. ..	T	50					5,400	T50	a	T18,548	Dec.	1/T at 4/7½ in £		1-2-24
Shanghai Mercury, Ld.	T	25					3,000	T50	c	T215,257
											Apr.	T1 50 1913-14		20-4-23
Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co. Ld. ..	T	74	73½	74		‡49)	40,000	T50	a	T10,285
									b	T70,000	Mar.	T4.50, 1922-23		31-3-15
									c	T920,016
Oriental Press (L'Imprimerie Francaise)	$	100					940	$100	a	$109,513
									b	70,000	Mar.	$10, 1922-23		31-5-23
									c	$21,101				5-7-23

For all Dollar shares quoted on the Shanghai Stock Exchange the Exchange rate is fixed at 73.

a Carried forward at last Ann: Genl. Meeting.
b Dividend Equalisation Reserve.
c General and Other Reserves.
d Uncalled liability £8 per sh;
e ,, £10 ,,
f ,, T$100 ,,
g ,, T$200 ,,
h ,, T$ 25 ,,
i Working Account '22
k Working Account 1922
m Working Account 1921
† Registered; or Bearer (idem. "B").
†† Issued Capital; 7% Cum. Prof. 24,461 shares; Ordinary, 16,270 shares.

‡ Debentures Issues also.
‡‡ Subject to Estate Managers' Commissions
* Subject to E. P. D. and Comm. Tax.
 Contingent liability for Interest on 12% Cum. Prof. Shares of Tls. 5,989

1—24,000 sh' unis'd.
2—70,411 ,,
3— 5,000 ,,
4— 4,000 ,,
5—101-2 ,, 6—50,000 ,,
7—10,761 ,,
8—10,000 ,,
9—16,470 sh. unis'd.
10—500 ,,
11—12,500 ,,
12—50,000 ,,
13—1,387 ,,
14—3,000 ,,
15—10,000 ,,
16—5,000 ,,
17—3,000 ,,
18—5,000 ,,
19—154,688 ,,
20—15,000 ,,
21—100,000 ,,
22—10,000 ,,
23—5,000 ,,
24—70,810 ,,
25—125,000 ,,
26—60,000 sh' unis'd.
27—3,921 ,,
28—100,000 ,,
29—4,683 ,,
30—2,000 ,,
31—2,000 ,,
32—[illegible] ,,
33—125,000 ,,
34—102,370 ,,
35—[illegible] ,,
36—180,000 ,,
37—1,443 ,,
38—7,695 ,, 42—200,000 ,,
43—1,000 ,,
(Not to be issued for less than 950 ea.
47—500 sh; unis'd
48—100,000 ,, 49—5,644 ,,
50—8,178 ,,
54—40,000 ,, 55—30,000 ,,
56—10,634,800 ,, 57—5,000,000 ,,
60—16,000 ,,
61—240,000 ,,
62—401,055 ,,
63—15,000 ,,
64—600 000 ,,
65—200,000 ,,
66—1,952,900 ,,
67—60,067 ,,

In order to ensure accuracy of the above Details, Agents and Secretaries of Companies are requested to notify Messrs. J. P. Bisset & Co: of any alterations, errors or omissions.

Clubs and Societies

(Continued from Page 18).

[illegible] club notices will in future be published therein, together with motor notes received from Europe and the U. S. A. The "Asiatic Motor" will in future be delivered free to all members of the club having paid their subscriptions and cases of non-delivery should be reported to the secretaries. I trust you will approve the action of your committee in this matter.

Negotiations have been in progress for some time for the leasing of a site for a club house. A river frontage is desired, easily accessible by road, and sufficiently in the country to provide the necessary change of atmosphere and facilities for recreation or rest. The site must of necessity be on Chinese territority and suitable places on motor roads are few but your committee hopes to be able to submit a scheme for your approval in due course.

SHORT MEASURE.

Mr. A. L. Anderson—The gasoline pumps erected on the sidewalks, on Municipal ground, are allowed to be put up for a nominal fee but, considering that they are licensed by the Council, I think that involves some responsibility on the Council to see that the amount of gasoline paid for is delivered. I am not able to prove anything, but I have good reason to doubt if, at some places, you get the five gallons you pay for. I have noticed after I have been to some garages, that my car does not go so far as it does after I have been to some others, though I pay for the same amount of gasoline at all of them. I have noticed that my chauffeur prefers to go to the garages whose gasoline seems to take the car not so far. I notice also that my chauffeur makes mysterious signals when approaching certain garages. I asked one firm whether it would be possible so to alter the pumps that less gasoline would be given, although the register showed the correct amount. They said that it would be the easiest thing in the world, though they did not do it themselves. I also noticed at one garage that, though there were five gallons in the jar, there were only 4½ on the measure. Now, I got the five gallons, but who lost the half gallon before? I think the Council should test these pumps.

The Chairman—We will approach the Council and see if they will shoulder the responsibility. If they will not do anything, we might be able to go round the various garages and collect our own proofs in the matter.

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman on the call of Mr. Anderson.

SHANGHAI AND ITS MERCHANT SEAMEN

Scheme for Tls. 250.000 Institute as Memorial to British Mercantile Marine: The King's Patronage and Sympathy

The building and endowment of an Institute for Seamen which is also to be a memorial to men of the British Mercantile Marine who gave their lives in the war, was resolved upon at the annual meeting of the Missions to Seamen in Shanghai, held on Tuesday in the Cathedral Church House. It was announced that his Majesty the King has given the proposals his sympathy and patronage.

Mr. Sidney Barton, C.M.G., H. M. Consul-General, presided at the meeting, supported by Dean Symons, the Rev. T. W. Hall, the Mission Chaplain, and Mr. W. A. Willis, the hon. secretary.

Mr. Barton, in opening the meeting, observed that the report for 1923 was of special interest to all who had the welfare of seamen at heart; and these were many, for the subscription list showed the number was not limited to those attending that meeting. Old friends of the Mission had continued their support, and they were once again indebted for very generous assistance from the Race Club. The Chaplain's report was an inspiring account of the work done afloat and ashore and must convince the most sceptical of the immense field for this work there was in Shanghai, and also must convince them of what it was possible for one man with his heart in the work to accomplish with limited resources. The tonnage of Shanghai was increasing at a very rapid rate and already it was now within the number of the world's greatest ports. Obviously, Mr. Hall had not undertaken his Chaplaincy a moment too soon, and it was to his energy they owed the fact that the reproach of leaving uncared for men to whom we owed so much was not heavier than it is. The only satisfactory return Shanghai could make to Mr. Hall was to supply him with the means of coping with his work, and an opportunity for this would be given in the proposal to establish a new Seamen's Institute as a memorial to the men of the Mercantile Marine who gave their lives in the war. The [illegible] was a big one, but the need was bigger, and it called for the best effort that could be made. (applause).

THE SCHEME IN OUTLINE.

The report and accounts having been adopted, Dean Symons outlined and moved the adoption of the Institute's home, agreed on in principal at the last annual meeting. He first mentioned that subscriptions to the amount of Tls. 1,500 had already been received, almost unasked for, and said it was a scheme which should undoubtedly appeal to the residents of Shanghai. It was proposed to erect the Institute by voluntary subscription as a memorial to British merchant seamen who fell in the war. The Committee had taken the bold step of sending to his Majesty the King to ask if he would kindly give his patronage, and through the Secretary of the Privy Purse the following message was received:

"The King sincerely sympathizes with the excellent object you have in view," and the local representatives of his Majesty—Sir Ronald Macleay, British Minister, Admiral Leveson, Commander-in-chief on the China Station, and Mr. Sidney Barton, H. M. Consul-General—had given the proposal their cordial approval. The scheme, therefore, was well laid, and started out surely with the prospect of receiving worthy support.

As an instance of the great need for such an institute, the Dean quoted figures indicating Shanghai's growing importance in the shipping world. In 1920, he said, London had a tonnage of 17,000,000. Liverpool 16.500.000, and Shanghai 12.000.000 (increased last year to 15.000.000); there were some 50 shipping companies represented in Shanghai, interested in 600 vessels aggregating about 6.000.000 tons actual capacity, while during 1922, the number of British ocean vessels which put in at Shanghai was 457. Allowing an average stay of four days for these steamers, and an average complement of 30 men, this meant there were 150 seamen in port every day of the year, whilst in addition, there were 600 officers and engineers of the coastal shipping fleet.

WHAT THE INSTITUTE WILL DO.

The reasons for establishing the institute were: to give the men the change of environment which was necessary for their bodily and mental well being; to introduce them to the right kind of people who shall remind them of home and for which it stands; to afford them rest, quietness and spiritual help; and to give them entertainment and recreation. The work of the Mission was ever growing, and its present machinery was altogether too inadequate, so that an institute was absolutely essential. The rough plans provided for social rooms for officers and seamen, reading rooms, billiard rooms, concert hall, Chapel, and Chaplain's flat, and the building would be so arranged that sleeping quarters could be added if found necessary.

Tentative inquiries showed that Tls. 30,000 would be required for purchasing the necessary land, whilst the building was estimated to cost Tls. 80,000, furniture Tls. 10,000, and extras Tls. 10,000. As it would be necessary to endow such an institution, Tls. 120,000 for investment to bring in an annual income of Tls. 6.000. Thus the total estimated cost was Tls. 250.000. This might seem to some people to be an almost impossible scheme, and perhaps it might take some few years to accomplish, but surely, in a place of the size and importance of Shanghai, so greatly depending on seafaring men, it might be regarded as comparatively a small sum, especially emphasizing the spirit of the scheme as a memorial to men whose war record made some of the finest history that had been written (applause).

THE HANBURY INSTITUTE.

Mr. E. F. Mackay said there was one point on which he was in some doubt. As a Trustee of the Hanbury Institute, he was not quite sure what functions the Hanbury Institute was going to fulfil if a scheme on the scale of the one outlined was going to be carried through. As far as he recollected, the Hanbury Institute had been established for just the purposes the Dean had described.

The Rev. T. W. Hall, in reply to Mr. Mackay, said that in 1908 the Hanbury Institute amalgamated with the Sailors' Home in Broadway, and when the scheme was drawn up the following stipulations were made: that sleeping accommodation should be found for 40 men of the Merchant Service, for 20 bluejackets, and for 10 or a dozen destitute seamen, or others, giving a total of 72. And this was what the Hanbury Institute was, viz., a boarding house, and one fulfilling its purpose very well. But the new scheme was not at all for a boarding house. That was a purpose it was hoped the Hanbury Institute would continue to fulfil for many years to come.

Mr. Mackay went on to say that he was not speaking against the scheme, but merely, as a Trustee of the Hanbury Institute, drawing attention to the fact that the objects of the new scheme were essentially the same as those laid down by Sir Thomas Hanbury when he founded the Institute. Sleeping accommodation was provided, but it was never intended the Hanbury Institute should be merely a boarding house, and he mentioned this because, as a Trustee, he did not wish the point to be passed over without notice.

POOR RICHARD'S PARADISE.

Mr. Barton—You don't suggest that the existence of the Hanbury Institute, whatever its functions are, is sufficient to minimize in any way the requirement of a new Institute? Personally, I do not think the Hanbury Institute could possibly cope with the requirements of the present day as far as the Merchant Marine is concerned.

Mr. Mackay—I think not.

Mr. Barton—Then there is also the point that the Hanbury Institute is bound to receive the destitute, and that is another reason for founding a new institute, for it is hardly a compliment to the Merchant Service to ask them to share the place with the destitute.

Mr. Mackay mentioned that he had heard the Hanbury Institute described as "a place for dead beats", but it certainly never was intended to be so.

Mr. Barton—It is probably one of the nicest places "dead beats" are ever likely to strike. The fact is, I think, that the Hanbury Institute will continue to discharge its functions exactly as it does to-day, and that it will always be just as full. I do not think there is any possibility of the two Institutes competing with each other or clashing in any way.

The Rev. T. W. Hall seconded the Dean's proposal that the the scheme be formally adopted, and the resolution was carried without dissent.

COMMITTEE AND SUBSCRIBERS.

In addition to the ex-officio members, the following were appointed to the Committee:—Messrs. D. W. A. Holder, R. Pote-Hunt, G. F. A. Mulcok, P. H. Rolfe, T. H. R. Shaw, E. S. Wilkinson, H. V. Wilkinson, W. A. Willis and W. E. Wilson.

The Chaplain proposed a cordial vote of thanks to the subscribers, mentioning that several firms and individuals had doubled their subscriptions and many others had increased theirs, the total last year being Tls. 3,000 as against Tls. 1,700 in the previous year.

THE SHANGHAI MEDICAL SOCIETY

Annual General Meeting at General Hospital: The Council's Report on the Visit of Dr. Brinkley: An Association of Ten Nationalities

The fourth annual general meeting of the Shanghai Medical Society was held on Thursday evening, March 27, at the General Hospital. Dr. S. A. Ransom, President, was in the chair, and called the meeting to order at 6 p.m. The following members were present:—Drs. Ransom, Neild, Cumming, Tucker, Morris, C. J. Davenport, Hiltner, Snoke, Legrang, Price, Bary Joffick, Decker and Siao.

After the usual preliminary business had been concluded, the President made a short speech reviewing the work of the past year. He then called upon Dr. H. Lovett Cumming, Hon. Secretary-Treasurer, to read his report of the society's activities during 1923-24.

The report is as follows:—

Mr. President, and members: since the last annual general meeting, March 22, 1923, the roll of the society's membership has been increased from 91 to 100 by the addition of nine new members. The latter include four British, one American, one Russian, one Hungarian and two Chinese doctors.

Unfortunately, during the year the society lost two of its members through death, viz., Dr. Parrott and Dr. Petit. In addition, three of the original members, Drs. Billinghurst, Massie, and Marland have left Shanghai for good: also, two Japanese members, Drs. Nakano and Senoo, have left Shanghai. The latter five doctors are now considered as absent members. Excluding the names of Drs. Parrott and Petit the actual number of members on the register is now 98. Of this total, 88 are resident, five associate and five absent members.

The different nationalities are represented as follows:—

British 31; American 29; French three; Russian two; Belgian, Italian, Roumanian and Hungarian, one each: Japanese six and Chinese 23. Thirteen of above are women, viz., American eight and Chinese five.

MEETINGS.

There were nine meetings of the society during the year, including the annual general meeting, and two joint meetings with the China Medical Missionary Society and the National Society which were entirely clinical. The remaining six were regular monthly meetings. Two of these were clinical and, at the other four, papers were read by members. The papers were as follows:—"Medical art in relation to Modern Psychotherapy" by Dr. Bary; "Fractures of the Femur" by Dr. Tucker; Lecture and demonstration on the "Laboratory Diagnosis of acute Dysentery" by Dr. Hicks; "Treatment of Diabetes with Insulin" by Dr. Parsons.

At the four clinical meetings which were well attended, 25 cases, and eight pathological specimens were presented to members for examination and discussion. Most of these cases were specially selected and of an extremely interesting nature, presenting features which were both uncommon and instructive. A very keen interest was displayed and, perhaps, no little benefit was derived by members present. If only the habitual absentees could realize what opportunities they were actually missing, the average attendance would be very considerably larger.

At the nine meetings, the chair was taken seven times by Dr. Ransom, President of the Society, and twice by Dr. Neild, the Vice-President. The average attendance of members at the meetings was 21, and of visitors, three, which figures were identical with those of the previous year.

Notwithstanding the fact that the hour of the meeting was altered from 9 p.m. to 5.30 p.m. to suit the convenience of a number of members who found it difficult to attend at the former hour, yet the attendance remained very little changed. An average attendance of 21 out of a membership of nearly 100, shows, unfortunately, a condition of apathy and disinterestedness which would be difficult to understand in any place other than Shanghai where counter-attractions are as numerous as they are distracting and where most societies are similarly handicapped.

If non-attending members would only realize the pleasure and benefits to be derived from these meetings and the unique opportunity of coming into contact with other medical men of different nationality, with different kinds of experience, and with, perhaps, a completely different viewpoint, they would make a serious endeavour to be present at some of the meetings, at least.

ATTENDANCE AT MEETINGS.

An extraordinary general meeting was called on December 8, 1923 to discuss the visit of Dr. John Brinkley to Shanghai and to consider a cablegram sent by him to Dr. Ransom, the President of the Society, requesting him to hold a clinic. Fifteen members were present at the meeting and after prolonged discussion it was unanimously agreed that, the President, Hon-Secretary, and any of the Council and members who so desired should arrange to meet Dr. Brinkley in Dr. Ransom's office and give the former a hearing before coming to any definite decision in the matter.

Drs. Ransom, Fresson, Cumming, Legrang, Cameron and Gardiner were present at the meeting.

A report of what took place was later put forward and discussed at a full meeting of the Council. As a result of this, and also taking into consideration the amount of propaganda in the press of which Dr. Brinkley had evidently been at least cognizant if not actually the author of, the Council not only refused to countenance any clinic, but decided to ignore the whole matter, and instructed the secretary to inform Dr. Brinkley that after discussing the matter fully, the Council had unanimously decided to take no further action.

The decision of the Council has since been completely justified by correspondence between Dr. W. W. Peter and Dr. Cramp of the American Medical Association re Dr. Brinkley, which appeared in practically all the local papers in February last.

WORK OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

The Council of the society held eight meetings during the year in April, May, June, July, October, and December, 1923, and in February and March of this year. Besides the usual business of election of new members, and of dealing with a fairly large amount of correspondence, the Council got through quite a useful amount of work considering the limited number of meetings. Chief amongst the work accomplished was the appointment of a special V. D. Committee on April 3, 1923, on the strength of a mandate from the members present at the annual general meeting held the preceding month. This committee, which consisted of Dr. Marsh (President), Dr. Bryson, Dr. Legrang and Dr. Cumming (as Hon. Secretary) was instructed to go into the whole question of V. D. in Shanghai, and draw up a report embodying their opinions, suggestions and advice, in as practical a form as possible for presentation to the Shanghai Municipal Council, after previously being submitted to the Council of the Society, for examination and discussion, and for whatever alterations and corrections might be deemed necessary.

This report was dealt with exhaustively at five Council meetings. The V. D. committee held altogether four meetings, in April, May, June, and July 1923, at the General Hospital, and as a result of its painstaking deliberations two separate reports were presented to the general public, viz., one long, historical, and comprehensive report which appeared first as supplement to the China Medical Journal of January 1924 and afterwards reprinted as a separate pamphlet for distribution to the members of the society and for sale to the public, and another shorter, preliminary report dealing mainly with the whole V. D. question from a public health point of view, and containing practical suggestions only. This was sent in the form of a letter to the Shanghai Municipal Council, dated December 10, 1923, and appeared in the Municipal Gazette of January 17, 1924.

At the Council meeting on April 3, 1923 a committee, consisting of Drs. Tucker and W. S. New, was formed to inquire into the standard of qualifications and medical experience necessary for Chinese doctors to possess before being admitted as members of the society.

A special report in the form of a standard syllabus was prepared by the medical council of the China Medical Missionary Association, June 25, 1923 and printed in the China Medical Journal of July 1923. A reprint copy of this was supplied to the Council by Dr. Tucker for their guidance in this matter.

At the same Council meeting in paragraph five section V of the Bylaws, the clause "Meeting shall be convened at 9 p.m. was altered to read, "Meeting shall be convened at 9 p.m. or at such time as the council may decide."

This alteration which was agreed to unanimously, enabled the Council to arrange the meetings for 5.30 p.m. to suit several members who found it inconvenient to attend after dinner. Unfortunately, so far, this alteration has not increased the average monthly attendance. While a number who were formerly regular attenders have found it impossible to come before dinner. The Council are of the opinion that it would be better to revert to the original arrangement of 9 p.m.

As the society, so far, does not possess a Journal of its own it was arranged through the courtesy of Drs. Tucker and W. S. New (May 15) that reports of our Society's meetings could be printed in either the China Medical Journal or in the National Medical Journal.

At a meeting on December 18, 1923, the question of the standardization of medical fees was brought forward. A committee was appointed consisting of Dr. Neild (Chairman), Dr. Fresson, Dr. Murray, and Dr. Cumming (Secretary) to discuss the whole question of medical fees in Shanghai and to present a report on same for the Council to bring before the Society. As the deliberations of this Committee are not complete, the report is not yet available.

Amongst numerous subjects discussed and inquired into by the council are the following:—

(1) The condition and treatment of lunatics in the Chinese Hospital, Haining Road.

(2) The question of legal procedure against doctors performing illegal operations in Shanghai.

(3) Danger of the present method of sewage disposal in reference to spread of bacilliary dysentry, etc.

Members were invited to make use of the excellent medical reference library at the Health Office, which had been carefully arranged and indexed, after a considerable amount of labour and energy, by Dr. Hill.

FINANCES.

The finances of the Society continued in a satisfactory condition, and, notwithstanding several very heavy items of expenditure, a substantial balance remained at the end of the year. This would have been very much larger but for an unfortunate slackness in the payment of dues which, it was hoped, would be remedied during the ensuing year."

The Secretary then briefly announced his intention of retiring from the secretaryship after three years of continuous service. He hoped that his successor might be able to give more time and undivided attention to the work which was gradually increasing and becoming more exacting.

The Secretary's report was approved unanimously and was followed by the election of Officers and Councillors for the ensuing year 1924-25, viz., President; Dr. F. M. Neild; Vice-President, Dr. H. Lovett Cumming; Secretary-Treasurer, Dr. H. H. Morris; Councillors, Dr. S. A. Ransom, Dr. R. J. Marshall, Dr. A. W. Tucker, and Dr. W. S. New.

AMERICANS' GROWING DISSATISFACTION WITH CHINA'S MISGOVERNMENT

Strong Words by American Chamber of Commerce: No Change in American Policy But Sympathy Not to Be Taken as Sign of Weakness

At the annual meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce on Thursday evening in the American Club 100 members and friends assembled to dinner, after which the elections were held and resulted as follows:—Committee, Messrs. S. R. Brown, J. Harold Dollar, J. Eichwald, B. C. Haile, H. B. Lane, V. G. Lyman, A. E. Schumacher, P. P. Whitham and H. A. Wiley. This body will meet on Monday and choose their officers.

In addition to the annual report of the Board, Mr. J. Harold Dollar, the President, commented in general on the situation of the past year. He was of the opinion that protestations on the part of the several Chambers of the Orient had attracted the attention of the various Governments to things Chinese and suggested that continual repetition would cause greater activities at Home. He did not believe that the Peking Government could enforce the trade-mark law in the various provinces and urged unremitting action by the incoming committee as to the protection of rights of extraterritoriality in this same connexion. The financial balance of the Chamber showed nearly 50 per cent. betterment over last year. "Our policy, as I see it, is to continue to maintain a helpful and sympathetic attitude towards the Chinese and to see to it that our treaty rights are safeguarded fully."

A discussion followed on the ownership of American newspapers in China and the policy of the Chamber in this connexion, while further argument centred on the point of the best medium (journalistic) of keeping in touch with American officialdom.

Mr. Julean Arnold, U. S. Commercial Attache at to Peking, also spoke on "constructive commercial tactics."

The report stated:—

At the last annual meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce (Shanghai) held on June 29, 1923, considerable attention was devoted to the serious situation existing in China. The Lincheng outrage was fresh in our minds, and served to bring home to us a very keen realization of the urgent need that something be done to improve conditions which were rapidly drifting from bad to worse. Very soon after the release of the captives had been secured, this Chamber, both independently and in conjunction with other foreign Chambers here, urged that some action be taken by our home Governments to bring China to a sense of her responsibilities and obligations as a sovereign, independent nation—the place to which she had been accorded at the Washington Conference.

On August 10, the Diplomatic Body sent a note, signed by the representatives of 16 nations to the Chinese Government protesting against the activities of bandits and uncontro'led soldiery, and demanding that the foreigners involved in such affairs be reimbursed for property losses, loss of time, and injuries, and also demanding the proper punishment of the Chinese officials responsible. The Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Chinese Government replied to this note in part as follows:

"The safety of foreigners has always been the subject of very deep solicitude on the part of the Chinese Government." and said further that,

"Through the series of measures recently adopted, the lives, property, and interests of foreigners in China will enjoy added security."

A WORTHLESS PROMISE.

As far as that particular locality is concerned, some protective measures have been taken; but, while there have been no instances of quite the magnitude and audacity of that affair, the list of bandit and military atrocities in other parts of the country has continued unabated. In one of the Shanghai newspapers a few days ago a recital of these was given, from which it is seen that no less than nine foreigners have been murdered, and at least 50 others have been kidnapped or subjected to indignities such as robberies, beatings, or insults. In two or three cases, the American flag has been deliberately insulted, and quite recently a boat flying the American flag loaded with American cargo and operating on one of the rivers in the adjoining province of Chekiang was forcibly detained by the military authorities, and the Chinese crew thrown in jail, because of the refusal of the company to submit to an illegal tax levied on foreign merchandise by Chinese military authorities in contravention of treaties between the United States and China.

Just prior to our annual meeting last year, this Chamber, in conjunction with the American Association of China, sent a strong cablegram to Scretary of State Charles E. Hughes, recommending that additional protection for Americans and American interests in China be provided, and that in case China failed to take definite steps to place her house in order all further benefits granted to China by the Washington Conference be withdrawn or delayed in their application. This action has since evoked some criticism on the part of some who thought it to be a reversal of America's traditional policies toward this country.

U. S. PATROL ON YANGTZE.

We are pleased to find, however that our views were not considered extreme by our Governmental authorities, as steps are being taken by the Navy Department to improve our Yangtsze patrol force to the extent of six new boats, costing G.$700,000 each, capable of navigating the upper reaches of the Yangtsze River, and in addition two boats of the "minesweeper" class have been sent here from Honolulu for reconditioning for service on the lower Yangtsze. Furthermore, in news dispatches from Peking, Washington, London, and Paris early last month, it was indicated that the Powers have decided to delay the holding of the Special Tariff Conference and also the visit of the Judicial Commission authorized at the Washington Conference to investigate into the matter of extraterritoriality. It is reported that definite action is soon to be taken in respect to China's default upon her foreign loan obligations, including obligations for materials purchased by the Chinese Government Railways.

CO-OPERATION WITH BRITISH.

At the recent annual meetings of the British Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai and of the Associated British Chambers of Commerce in China considerable attention was devoted to the important matter of American-British co-operation in respect to the solution of many of the pressing problems affecting the development and conduct of foreign business in China. On behalf of the American Chamber I am pleased to state that the friendly desire for co-operation expressed at the meetings of the British Chambers of Commerce in Shanghai is heartily reciprocated by our membership. At the Washington Conference it was demonstrated that the United States and Great Britain stand practically on the same ground from the standpoint of their policies in the Far East and if our governments are in agreement naturally the same spirit should be carried out by the private citizens of the two countries in their various commercial activities in this part of the world. A full and frank spirit of cooperation on the part of the Americans and Britons represented out here is certain to be productive of good for all concerned in this part of the world, where active constructive leadership is so greatly needed.

SECRETARY HUGHES'S WARNING.

During January of this year, the various newspapers in China published a letter written by Secretary of State Hughes to Mr. George Lockwood, Secretary of the Republican National Committee, which shows that the Administration at Washington is aware of the seriousness of the Chinese situation, and that preparations are being made to cope with it. Secretary Hughes' letter in part reads as follows:

"The Far Eastern policy followed by the Administration in connexion with the Conference remains unaltered in its main objective and has in its application been modified only to the extent necessitated by the changes which have meanwhile taken place in China itself. Those changes I very much regret to say have been a disappointment to those who had hoped that a fuller measure of opportunity for independent development would hasten the evolution of a more normal and orderly internal administration in China and make possible the establishment of a governmental entity capable of fulfilling the international obligations correlative to the rights of sovereignty which the Conference had recognized and sought to safeguard for China..... ..... Under these circumstances the application of our Far Eastern policy to the situation in China has had necessarily to take into account conditions created by the almost complete disintegration of administrative authority and of the sense of political responsibility on the part of those nominally in control of the affairs in China..... But whatever our faith in the capacity of the Chinese people to work out ultimately their own salvation, we cannot ignore the present responsibilities involved in our duty of assuring due protection of the persons and interests of our citizens who are sojourning in China as missionaries or in business or professional pursuits in pursuance of rights clearly granted them by the terms of our treaties with China. This duty compels us primarily in the interests of our own citizens, but secondarily in the interest of China itself, to hold the Chinese Government as rigorously as we may to the fulfillment of the foreign obligations which, no less than the rights of sovereignty, are incident to its enjoyment of a position in the family of nations. I feel fully assured that no measures that we have thus far taken or which we contemplate taking to that end are unduly harsh; and I am, on the contrary, confident that the steps in which this Government participate will in the end prove no less advantageous to the real interests of the Chinese people than to the foreigners whose interests these measures are designed immediately to protect.....

"The difficulty of the situation in the Far East, as you will perceive, lies in the weakness of the Chinese Government. We have done what we could to strengthen it and to give it the opportunity for development, but that development must of necessity take place within. It is not possible for the powers to create a government for China or to substitute with any hope of success a government through their own agencies. The utmost which they may hope to do is to bring the Chinese authorities to a realization of their responsibilities and give such assistance (even though it should be against the will of certain elements in Chinese politics which hope to profit by a continuance of disorder and corruption) as will tend to stabilize the finances and the transportation services of the Chinese Government and thereby bring about conditions of order and security which may offer a less difficult, set of conditions in which the Chinese people may develop an effective administration of their own."

NO CHANGE OF POLICY.

The above, written by Mr. Hughes while not given out as an official document, nevertheless undoubtedly gives the views of the Administration regarding the present China situation and the measures which are now under consideration for meeting it. There has been no reversal of American policy towards China; America always has been, and still is, one of the best friends that China has. History offers conclusive proof that the United States has no desire for political or economic aggression against any country, and her action in calling and conducting the Washington Conference offers very recent and striking evidence of her attitude towards China. This does not mean, however, that the resolutions of the Washington Conference were ever intended to be an abrogation of foreign treaty rights in China as the military-minded gentlemen in this country seem to think. It does not mean that we intend to sit calmly by and witness the murder and persecution of our citizens at the hands of the militarists and bandits without protest or the adoption of protective measures. When however, we see that the Chinese are taking definite steps to bring about orderly government and stable conditions in China, and when we see that improvement actually taking place, China will find the United States, as always, most friendly, altruistic, and ready to help.

THE NEED OF EDUCATION.

As to the means by which such improvement is to be effected, we can only repeat that this is in the hands of the Chinese themselves—and that the business men of China can play a very large part. The solution here, as in every country, lies in education—the education of the people to a realization of their right to good government and freedom from oppression by despotic militarists; and a prerequisite to this is, of course, education of the illiterate masses in such elementals as reading and writing, With this in mind, it is pleasing to note the progress that is being made along these lines, a concrete example of which is the "Mass Education Movement," organized and promoted by Mr. Y. C. James Yen, M. A. of the National Committee, Y. M. C. A. This consists in principle of a vocabulary of 1,000 of the simpler Chinese characters, which can be mastered by even an illiterate person in four months of steady application, and which will enable the student to read the newspapers, simple books and magazines, and write simple letters. This campaign is being carried on all over China, with volunteer teachers and utilizing local public buildings, and remarkable success has already attended the movement.

While we are all agreed upon the principle of the political and adminstrative integrity of China and that the country must be given the fullest possible opportunity of self-development we cannot however close our eyes to the fact that more than 90 per cent. of the Chinese people are illiterate in their own language and from the standpoint of modern development the greater part of China is still in a primitive condition and that as long as this condition exists the Republic of China cannot expect to occupy a position in world affairs which has been accorded to other nations where the standard of civilization as we know it has been raised to a much higher level. So long as these conditions exist in China the country must require the friendly assistance of outside nations otherwise it becomes a menace to the world generally.

It is our firm conviction that the solution of the problems now facing the Chinese people rests entirely in the hands of the educated and business classes, and until such time as they take a firm hand in political and governmental affairs, no lasting improvement can take place. To this end, it is our duty to lend assistance wherever it may be needed to those elements which are working for right and justice. Until something is accomplished along these lines, however, it will be necessary for the foreign governments to insist upon fulfillment of all treaty rights, and to see to it themselves that the lives and property of their nationals are safeguarded.

This policy, as Mr. Hughes states, will work out to the benefit of the Chinese people as well as the foreign interests in China.

ASSOCIATED AMERICAN CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE OF CHINA.

This organization, which was formed on October 23, 1922, and which is composed of the American Chambers at Harbin, Hankow, Peking, Shanghai, and Tientsin, has continued to function successfully, and has proven of great value in coordinating sentiment and action amongst American business interests throughout China. The annual meeting of this body was held in Shanghai on October 16 and 17, 1923, and the annual report received much favorable attention in the United States.

The principle of a closer working arrangement between the American business communities in China and those of the Philippine Islands and in Japan has been agreed by all to be most desirable and there is reason to hope that such an arrangement will be effected within the near future for the organization of a Far Eastern Association of American Chambers.

The Associated Chambers in October 1923 appointed a resident representative in Washington, Mr. J. J. Underwood, whose address is 621 Colorado Bldg.

BOXER INDEMNITY.

During the past few months considerable discussion has appeared in the public press with regard to the proposed expenditure of the balance of the American share of the Boxer Indemnity amounting to some fifteen million dollars, United States currency, which Congress is now considering remitting to China.

The Board is of the opinion that any expenditure for educational or other purposes in China should be closely supervised by an American committee composed of representatives of the United States diplomatic or consular services and of the American business and missionary organizations in China.

As it has come to the attention of the Board that an organized campaign is being conducted in America to obtain remission of this fund to be administered by a committee, the majority of whom are non-American, the attention of the various governmental departments at Washington was directed to the resolution passed on October 23, 1923 by the Associated American Chambers.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAY DEFAULTS.

The United States Government has taken the position that obligations for materials supplied to the Chinese Government Railways constitute a part of the operating expenses of the railways, and as such should be met before any charges on the surplus revenues are provided for, or in other words that such obligations for equipment are a prior lien on the actual earnings of the railways and must be satisfied before any surplus can be said to exist.

This matter was the subject of a resolution to the above effect passed at the meeting of the Associated American Chambers held on October 17, 1923 but in view of the continued disregard for the rights of American creditors by the Chinese Government the Chamber believes this matter should once again be brought to the attention of the State Department in order that it may obtain arrangements whereby these obligations may be liquidated.

ILLEGAL TAXATION.

During the past year illegal taxation has spread throughout the country so that few if any of the provinces are free from this complaint. The example set by Chekiang Province has extended throughout all the provinces in the Yangtze valley. The reason advanced by Chekiang Province for levying the taxation was that this province was independent of Peking and was not bound by the treaties or special arrangements entered into by the Peking Government. The other provinces along the Yangtze have not been able to make this excuse and now all violations of treaty rights are excused on the plea that the treaties have become obsolete and that therefore the provinces should not be bound by them.

The provincial authorities in some cases have pointed out that the failure to bring into effect the agreement arrived at by the Washington Conference has left them no other course than that of the increase to which they feel they are entitled and this is offered as the reason for their acts in levying and collecting illegal taxes. The Peking Government has recognized the illegality of the taxes against which protests have been made by the various Legations but these instructions to the provinces have not been executed. There seems to be a determined effort generally throughout the provinces to proceed without regard to the treaties and to question generally treaty rights which have been recognized and acknowledged for many years.

Various treaties between China and the foreign powers have put a limitation upon the taxation of imported goods, without regard to their nature. Any taxation levied in excess of those provided for in these treaties is therefore a violation of the said treaties. The first exception to this principle appears in the Washington Agreement in the provision that has been made for the levying of a tax on luxuries. It therefore applies that any violation of treaties by the illegal taxation of any article of commerce jeopardizes the principle established by treaty and would further establish a precedent which might be extended to all importations.

YANGTZE PATROL FORCE.

The Board of Directors take pleasure in announcing that partly as a result of our efforts in cooperation with representatives of the State, Commerce and Navy Departments a bill introduced in Congress early this session providing for the construction of six patrol boats of a special type for operation on the upper Yangtze to cost not more than G. $700,000 each recently passed the House of Representatives. According to the present plans of the Navy Department these new boats will be used to replace the present craft now operating under the American flag on the Yangtze River.

In addition to the above the Navy Department has sent to Shanghai two boats of the minesweeper class for reconditioning in one of the Shanghai shipyards for service on the lower Yangtze.

It is felt that these new boats will do much to maintain peaceful conditions in the Yangtze valley, affording greater security to American lives and interests in that section.

TRADEMARKS.

The Chamber has taken a very active interest in the new Chinese Trademark Law. Without consulting the various Legations the Peking Government promulgated in the month of May, 1923, a law providing for the registration of trademarks which gives to foreign firms six months within which to register existing trademarks which they could use in China. Committee of the Chamber cooperated with a committee from the British Chamber at Shanghai in reviewing this trademark law and suggested certain changes which would make the law more suitable to the conditions which exist in China. In general the law is considered to be a good law but the joint committee of the two Chambers recognized that no matter how good the law may be it will not give the desired protection if it is not properly administered. The Chambers have been most interested in seeing that precaution would be taken to have the law properly administered. Representations have been made by all of the foreign Chambers to the proper authorities to try to bring about the establishment of safeguards which would protect them in their valuable trademark rights but up to the present no satisfactory result has come out of the negotiations between the various Governments and the Peking Government. The position of all foreigners has been somewhat handicapped by the fact that individuals on their own initiative have registered marks with the new Bureau without taking into consideration the fact that the promulgation of this law has not met with the approval or has been accepted by their home Government.

It is hoped however that at an early date some conclusion will be reached by the Governments concerned which will correct the apparent defects in the law which will provide the proper administration of the law thus ensuring the proper protection to the right of ownership. The opinion of the foreign merchants in Shanghai [illegible] and protests have been made jointly and severally to their respective [illegible] advising [illegible]

[illegible]

On March 15, 1924, the American Chamber at Shanghai sent the following telegram to President Coolidge and Secretary of State Hughes:

Americans reside and do business in China under their own laws in accordance with extraterritorial clauses which have been incorporated in all treaties between the United States and China. At the Washington Conference it was decided to investigate the practice of extraterritoriality in China with the idea of suggesting improvements, but the appointment of the international committee of investigation authorized by the Conference has been postponed (at China's request) because of the political situation now existing in the Chinese Republic—the seriousness of which is recognized all over the world.

"Now the Chinese Government is trying to obtain America's consent to a new trademark law recently enacted by the Peking Parliament which will have the effect of breaking down immediately the rights of Americans and other foreigners guaranteed under the treaties without waiting for the investigation and recommendations of the Commission authorized at the Washington Conference.

"The Trademark law which the Chinese Government is attempting to enforce arbitrarily places all American and other foreign owned trademarks, and tradenames under the exclusive jurisdiction of a native bureau without provision in the law for appeal to courts of justice as is the established practice in the United States, in Europe and in Japan. Since trademarks and tradenames constitute the backbone of foreign commerce and carry values running into the millions of dollars, the ratification of this law by the United States Government would certainly be followed by disastrous effects and confusion in American trade in this country.

"Even if the new trademark law was ratified with safeguarding amendments—it would not protect American rights in China because of the self-evident fact that due to the disturbed political condition of China, no laws promulgated by the Peking Government command the slightest respect in the provinces.

"The acceptance of the new Chinese law by the United States would constitute a waiver of our extraterritorial rights; would nullify the action of the Washington Conference in respect to the matter of investigating China's fitness for a relinquishment of foreign extraterritorial rights in China; would immediately place American and other foreign property from the standpoint of trademarks under purely Chinese control without resort to properly constituted courts of justice; and finally would cause confusion and losses in America's important trade with China which might be most disastrous."

CHINA TRADE ACT.

In view of the fact that the China Trade Act which was passed by Congress in 1922 does not fulfill the expectations of American businessmen interested in trade in this part of the world a serious effort is now being made to amend the act so that it will be of service to American business operating in this country. A number of amendments dealing especially with the taxation features of the bill which have the approval of the Chamber are now before Congress and according to recent advices which have been received from the Registrar of the China Trade Act who is now in Washington there is a possibility of favourable action resulting from the present Congress.

To make the Act of benefit to American interests, there are two groups of amendments proposed.

One proposed amendment to give China Trade Act companies entire exemption from the 12½ per cent. Federal corporation tax, as is done with British China Companies. The Act as passed only gives relief from Federal corporation taxes to the extent of a special dividend to American and Chinese stockholders resident in China equal to and credited to the China Trade Act Corporation in the payment of its corporation tax in the proportion that the percentage of stock so held bear to all outstanding stock. The revenue part of the Act as originally proposed, and as now proposed to be amended, has not contemplated any exemption of personal income taxes on China Trade Act company dividends.

As the Act now stands, there are some provisions which are not clear and some provisions that are inconsistent. It is also felt that the application and administration of the Act can be simplified. To this end there are proposed 10 amendments which briefly stated in order are as follows:

1.—Reduce number of necessary incorporators from five to three. This will conform to all State Laws, which require only three incorporators.
2.—Eliminate the requirement for maintaining principal office in the District of Columbia.
3.—Eliminate the necessity of maintaining a resident director in the District of Columbia.
4.—Extend the period for the payment of the initial capital. All of which must now be paid in full before issue of certificate of incorporation.
5.—Change the purpose of the Act to developing trade between China and the United States instead of developing markets in China for goods produced in the United States.
6.—Require a corporate seal, which is now optional.
7.—Permit stock to be issued at more but not less than par.
8.—Require the president and treasurer to be American citizens, or persons who at their place of residence are subject to the laws of the United States.
9.—Permit proxy-voting of stock.
10.—Require an audit of the annual reports of China Trade Act corporations.

There are now about a dozen companies incorporated under the China Trade Act.

PROPOSED REGULATIONS FOR THE HANDLING OF "DANGEROUS" CARGO AT THE PORT OF SHANGHAI.

The proposed regulations issued by the Harbour Master's office received the careful attention and study of the shipping committee and the Board, who recommended to the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce that the proposed regulations should be accepted in principle, with a view to getting them before the Consular Body as a definite basis to work upon.

The Board also recommended that the General Harbour Regulations be amended so as to provide the necessary local authority which can be appealed to for quick decision in the event of its being desired to import or store larger quantities than those allowed in the present proposals.

The Board recommended that nothing be introduced in the proposed regulations which will adversely affect present approved bulk petroleum storage installations.

The Board recommended that a set of buoys be provided where vessels with considerable quantities of restricted commodities on board and having no oil installation wharf privileges may berth in the lower section of the River instead of being forced to berth at Woosung as at present.

With regard to the proposed limitations of storage areas for inflammable petroleum products such as gasoline, and certain chemicals, also restrictions in the amount of only 29,250 Imperial gallons in the area between the Cosmopolitan Dock and Yangking Creek, it was made clear that the Chamber's acceptance in principle does not waive the right for any responsible interests having the endorsement of its Chamber of Commerce or Consul from being privileged to negotiate with the Harbour authorities for what it may require in this respect.

IMPORTATION OF RESTRICTED ARTICLES.

In connexion with the importation into China of articles which have been listed under the general heading of contraband, prohibited and restricted articles the Board of Directors of the Chamber have recommended revisions of this list to permit of the importation of wireless equipment, articles such as sulphur, saltpetre, sulphuric acid, nitric acid, spelter, picric acid and oil of mirbane, but that dynamite, nitroglycerine, gelignite, melinite, detonators and powder strings be retained on the restricted list as at present. The chamber does not approve of the proposal emanating from certain Chinese sources that industrial copper be placed on the restricted list.

RULE, 1, CHINESE MARITIME CUSTOMS.

This question was considered again during the past year and the Board upon being asked for a decision restated, its opinion that the position of the Chamber remains unchanged, i.e. that advalorem duties shall in all cases be calculated upon the c. i. f. cost of the goods, imported that is to say, the landed cost in bond, or in other words, the prices at which the goods have been sold by the exporter in the foreign country to the importer in China plus the insurance and the freight on the goods.

CHANGE IN CUSTOMS CLASSIFICATION HEADINGS.

The Chamber in conjunction with the Trade Commissioner's office interviewed many members of the American business community in regard to any changes desired in connexion with the compilation of the Maritime Customs Trade Returns. The recommendations of the Chamber were forwarded to the Commissioner of Customs for consideration.

DUTY ON MOTOR-CARS—PORT OF SHANGHAI.

On December 17, 1923 a conference was held with the Commissioner of Customs by representatives of verious national Chambers of Commerce at Shanghai with a view to arriving at the duty paying value for automobiles. At that meeting it was suggested that a fixed percentage of 20 per cent. be added to the invoice value the wholesale market or duty paying value. This proposal however did not meet with unanimous approval and the duty is still assessed in a manner similar to that on other unenumerated articles. Unenumerated articles pay duty at the rate of 5 per cent. advalorem, and the value upon which duty is to be calculated is the wholesale market value of the goods in local currency. This market value when converted into Haikwan taels is considered to be higher than the duty-paying value by the amount of the duty on the goods and 7 per cent. of the duty-paying value of the goods.

TONNAGE DUES IN CHINESE PORTS.

No change has been made since the meeting of the Associated American Chambers on October 17, 1923 in the tonnage dues now being assessed against foreign shipping entering Chinese ports. The Chamber desires to re-affirm the resolution which was passed by the Associated American Chambers at that time quoted below:—

"The tonnage dues which China is permitted to charge foreign vessels are based upon treaties between China and other nations beginning with the Tientsin treaty between China and Great Britain signed in 1858. These dues amount to 4 mace (equivalent to 30 cents U. S. currency) per net registered ton on vessels of over 150 tons and 1 mace (equivalent to 8 cents U. S. currency) per net registered ton on vessels of 150 tons and under. The dues are levied in a lump sum upon any foreign ship that touches at a Chinese port, and cover a period of four months. These dues are higher than those charged by any other country and were adopted originally more than a half century ago because of the fact that few foreign ships touched Chinese ports and the high dues were necessary to provide funds for the construction and maintenance of light-houses, etc. Since these high rates work a handicap upon American shipping not engaged in the coastwise trade of China, the Associated American Chambers of Commerce of China recommend that steps be taken by the United States Government to revise these regulations which have been in effect without change for 64 years.

The Associated American Chambers of Commerce of China recommends that all foreign vessels be granted the privilege of paying tonnage dues at the rate of 4 mace (equivalent to 30 cents U. S. currency) per net registered ton and good for a period of four months or the privilege of paying tonnage dues at a fair rate per net registered ton per call."

UNITED STATES COURT FOR CHINA.

In view of the fact that the American population in China has increased from about 3,000 in 1906, when the United States Court for China was first created, to about 9,000 at the present time and of the further fact that America's share of the foreign trade of China has increased from about 50 million gold dollars to 200 millions it has been found that the original machinery creating the United States Court for China is now entirely inadequate. To remedy this situation the American Chamber of Commerce (Shanghai) has recommended to Congress several amendments to the original act, briefly as follows:

1.—Placing the Court under the administration of the Department of Justice in accordance with the other Federal courts of the United States.
2.—Appointment of an assistant judge or in lieu of that increasing the powers and number of commissioners so that sessions of the Court may be held during the absence or disability of the presiding judge.
3.—Inauguration of a modified form of jury trial considered workable in this jurisdiction.
4.—Increasing the salaries of the district attorney, commissioners, clerk and other court officials so that it should not be necessary for them to engage in the private practice of law.

U. S. DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR SERVICES.

There has been before Congress for several years a measure known as the "Rogers Bill" which is intended to improve the consular and diplomatic services of the United States through combining the two services into a unified foreign service.

According to the terms of the Rogers Bill provision is made for increases in salaries, travelling expenses, post allowances, retirement and for promotions in accordance with the abilities of the individual.

In view of the fact that the question of improvements in the United States Consular and Diplomatic Services in China have been a frequent source of consideration on the part of this body as well as other American organizations in China the American Chamber of Commerce (Shanghai) desires to go on record as being in favour of and fully endorsing the Rogers Bill and expresses the hope it may be speedily enacted into law by Congress.

AMERICAN OWNED CONSULAR PROPERTY IN CHINA.

The Chamber has cooperated with the American Association of China in the collection and publication in booklet form of data dealing with the need for the purchase of land and the construction of modern buildings for the accommodation of American consular officials in China.

Copies of the booklet under preparation are to be mailed to members of Congress, heads of departments and Bureaus of the Government at Washington in the hope that Congress may be induced to take action on this subject during the present session. There is now a measure before Congress providing for the construction of new Consular buildings at Tientsin, Hankow and Canton which it is hoped will be passed.

ICHANG CONSULATE.

We regret to have to report that to date no action has been taken in regard to stationing an American consular official at Ichang to represent and protect the various American missionary and commercial interests established there, and to assist American shipping now regularly engaged in the upper Yangtze trade. This Chamber is still very strongly of the opinion that American interests generally are of sufficient importance to justify the opening of a consulate at Ichang.

PILFERAGE OF CARGO—STRENGTHENING OF SHANGHAI RIVER POLICE.

During the year a proposal to increase the River Police was brought to the notice of the Board. The strength has been increased and a new police hulk obtained which should be of considerable help in reducing the pilferage of cargo at this port.

The original proposal from the Maritime Customs provided for a special addition to the wharfage dues which would have to be met by the trade of the Port. The Board did not approve of this as it would establish an undesirable precedent to permit any further surtaxes levied on cargo moving through the port of Shanghai.

The improvements referred to above were finally obtained without any additional levy on cargo passing through the port of Shanghai.

SOOCHOW CREEK IMPROVEMENT.

One of the chief avenues of communication between Shanghai and the hinterland is Soochow Creek, a native waterway, which in recent years has become so difficult to handle the traffic that normally passes through it between Shanghai and the interior. This creek although running through the foreign settlement is under the control of the Chinese Government and up to the present it has been impossible to obtain improvements because of the opposition of the provincial and local Chinese officials. This matter has had the earnest and careful consideration of a special subcommittee and that committee as well as the Board is of the opinion that immediate dredging and more effective policing of the Soochow creek is imperative. The Chamber has made representations to the proper authorities urging that immediate action be taken on this important matter and stating that in its opinion the best method to accomplish the dredging and engineering work would be to have this done by the Chinese authorities utilizing if possible the engineering facilities of the Whangpoo Conservancy Board.

AMERICAN INCOME TAX.

American Chambers of Commerce in London, Paris, Mexico City, Buenos Aires, Manila and elsewhere representing American commercial interests engaged in foreign trade have for many years agitated against the injustice of the United States Government enforcing its domestic income tax regulations upon Americans residing abroad who derive their income from non-American sources.

There are approximately 240,000 foreigners residing in China of which number about 9,000 are Americans, and the Americans are the only foreigners who are required by their home Government to pay income taxes upon incomes derived from activities in this part of the world and entirely outside of the United States.

The handicap which this places upon the American citizen in his competition with the British, Japanese, French, Germans and other activities in China is practically self-evident. Governor-General Leonard Wood of the Philippine Islands has well stated the case in letters and cables to the Secretary of War and to the President of the United States dated September 7 and 8, 1923. In these communications Governor-General Wood said:

"Filipinos and foreign residents of the Philippine Islands, business competitors of Americans, are exempt from Federal income tax paying only local taxes which are very much lower. Resulting discrimination against Americans on an outpost of our foreign commerce is grossly unjust, . . . British subjects abroad have never been subjected to British taxation on income derived from sources outside of Great Britain. By the Finance Act of 1920 Great Britain has even gone to the extent of refunding to overseas British subjects taxes heretofore levied on income derived solely from British sources. Relief on the part of Congress would greatly facilitate the general efforts to build up our foreign trade now seriously interfered with by subjecting it here and elsewhere abroad to the handicap of heavier income taxes than those paid by foreign competitors . . . I feel very strongly that the least the home Government can do is to give a considerate hearing to the American business men of this community in order that all the facts may be before you before definite action is taken."

The situation affecting Americans interested in business and other activities in China is practically the same as the situation outlined by Governor-General Wood in the Philippines. All foreigners residing in China are subject to certain municipal and other taxes in the communities wherein they live but it is only the Americans residing in China who are in addition subjected by their home Government to all of the domestic taxes of the United States even though the incomes are derived from sources entirely outside of the United States.

In view of the above factors the American Chamber of Commerce (Shanghai) desire to approve of the action of other American Chambers of Commerce in various parts of the world, and especially the action of the American Chamber of Commerce of the Philippine Islands, as well as the action of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America to the effect that Congress in framing the next Revenue Bill may provide exemptions for Americans residing overseas and deriving their income from non-American sources.

PASSPORTS.

The American Chamber of Commerce (Shanghai) has endorsed a movement stated by the Merchants Association of New York to reduce the application and visa fees paid for passports from G$10 to G$2. This proposal has the support of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and other influential organizations in America, and a bill providing for this reduction has been introduced in the present Congress.

SHANGHAI AMERICAN SCHOOL.

The American Chamber of Commerce (Shanghai) is rendering what assistance it can in the campaign in America for raising funds for the support and endowment of the Shanghai American School. In addition to this an effort is being made to obtain from the American Government the enactment of suitable legislation to secure financial assistance from the Federal Government toward the running expenses of the several American Schools in China subject to periodic consular or other inspection and approval.

THE SHANGHAI CLAY PIGEON CLUB

Plans for a New Pavilion: The Elimination of Pot-Hunting: Handicap Reforms

Mr. J. Ambrose (the President) occupied the chair at the annual meeting of the Shanghai Clay Pigeon Club, held at the Shanghai Club, on Thursday, and there were also present Messrs. H. H. Read (Vice-President), A. E. Algar, H. E. Gibson, W. G. Pirie, E. H. Himrod (committee), A. E. Stewart (hon. secretary and treasurer) and a number of members.

The report and accounts were passed and the following were elected:—General Committee.—Messrs. J. Ambrose, H. H. Read, A. P. Nazer, H. E. Gibson, K. J. McEuen, W. G. Pirie, E. H. Himrod, W. J. Gande (hon. secretary and treasurer). Balloting Committee.—Capt. E. I. M. Barrett, Messrs. F. Schwyzer, Gordon Morriss and N. E. Moller.

Votes of thanks were passed to Mr. Ambrose and Mr. A. E. Stewart.

A NEW PAVILION.

Mr. Ambrose mentioned the question of the pavilion. Year after year, he said, they had to spend a lot of money on it and it could not possibly be left in its present condition. The committee unanimously were in favour of rebuilding it on better lines, so as to give more room and a better outlook. Plans and estimates had been prepared and if the turnout continued to be as good as it was in the past season they would be able to pay off the whole cost in two years.

Messrs. I. Tuxford, H. E. Gibson, Gordon Morriss and A. P. Nazer were appointed a sub-committee to make a decision on the matter.

A VETO ON POT-HUNTING.

Capt. E. I. M. Barrett said that the number of cups put up for competition rather savoured of pot-hunting. It would be better to have sweepstakes, or else to shoot for a few better cups on the system of legs.

Mr. E. H. Himrod said that he thought the elimination of the weekly cups, as suggested by Capt. Barrett, would do away with a lot of the trouble in handicapping. He suggested that in handicapping they should start on the basis of the average of the whole of the previous season's shooting, and then continue on the whole of the shooting of the current season to the date of a competition.

Mr. Tuxford and other members strongly supported this suggestion, which was put as a proposition and agreed to. It was further decided that the club should offer one cup to be shot for through the season.

MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS

Registration of Printers and Publishers.

A resolution providing for the licensing of printing establishments and of the Press was introduced by the Council at a Special Meeting of Ratepayers in 1919 and was duly passed. The reasons for this measure were very clearly set forth by the Chairman of Council for that year, Sir Edward Pearce, who stated inter alia that Shanghai was very behind hand in this matter and reminded his hearers that the French Consul-General had recently issued an Ordinance for the regulation of all printing establishments in the French Concession, the British Municipal Council in Hankow had for some years a Bye-law governing the licensing of the Press and the British Concession in Tientsin had recently obtained similar powers.

The Bye-law in question as also the Licence Conditions which were passed at the same meeting did not meet with the support of the Consular Body, but in March 1920, the Council learned that with a view to achieving the same object, the Consular Body favoured the registration of printers and the publication of their names and addresses on all printed matter, in a manner similar to the practice obtaining in other countries. In the circumstances, and in the view that such a measure, whilst not of the same value as the Council's licensing proposals, would be valuable in keeping a check on printed matter—particularly scurrilous and seditious pamphlets—the Council decided to lay before the Ratepayers a Bye-law in such terms as would meet with the approval of the Consular Body.

The publication of this proposed Bye-law four years ago, when the Council's first endeavour to bring it before the Ratepayers failed because of the lack of a quorum, brought forth considerable protest from the Chinese Publishers' Guild, the Chinese Publishers' Association and other Chinese concerned in the printing business, and appeals were made to the Foreign Community to reject the proposed bye-law on the ground that it was a remedial measure and that the remedy was worse than the disease. The Council's second endeavour to bring the matter before the Ratepayers at a Special Meeting three years ago again failed because of the lack of a quorum.

In March, 1922, the Council gave notice of its intention again to propose the Bye-law, but there was no quorum, and, for the fourth time, therefore, the matter is put on the list of resolutions to be proposed at the forthcoming meeting on April 16.

The Council is not so sanguine as to anticipate an attendance at the Ratepayers Meeting this year any greater in numbers than upon previous occasions; but it has been decided to adopt the policy of bringing up each year for consideration the business held back from previous years on account of lack of a quorum, until opportunity should occur to obtain thereon a decisive vote by the ratepayers.

In 1922, considerable opposition was manifested to the proposed measure for registration of printers and publishers, and an extensive campaign was set on foot by certain native merchants to secure its withdrawal, which, however, failed of accomplishment. Signs are not lacking that the same interests are again at work in similar propaganda.

It is not the purpose of this minute to deal in detail with the misleading character of this propaganda, suffice it to say that the provisions of the proposed Bye-law were fully explained two years ago to those who are opposed to it, as follows:—

Printers and publishers shall register with their Consul, if they have one, or with the Council if they have not.

Having registered, printers shall print their names and places of business on their publications.

No person may publish or distribute printed matter which does not bear the name and place of business of the printer.

Registration will not have to be repeated, although changes of address, and in the case of a printing company, changes in the directorate, will have to be notified. There is absolutely no question of the registration of printed matter itself, as is customary in so many other countries.

Volunteer Corps.

Annual Inspection.—A letter from Major-General Sir John Fowler K.C.M.G., Commanding H. M. Forces in China, informs the Council that he will be able to conduct the Annual Inspection of the Corps from May 21 to May 23 inclusive.

Chaplains (attached Headquarters).—The Rev. T. W. Hall, late Chaplain of the British Armies in the Field, to be Captain.

Brothels.

In accordance with the policy adopted as a result of the report of the Vice Commission in 1920, the remainder of the licensed brothels will be closed on December 31, next.

Fire Brigade Report for February.

The total number of calls received was 45 of which 42 were genuine fires, 29, (including 1 chimney fire), occurring within the Settlement and 13 outside. The remaining three were false alarms.

The damage on assessed property within the Settlement was estimated at Tls. 7,325 (Foreign Tls. 3,950: Chinese Tls. 3,375), whilst the property at risk was estimated at Tls. 2,032,000 (Foreign Tls. 1,852,000: Chinese Tls. 180,000).

One life was lost during the month, and 2 firemen were injured. 10 premises were damaged. In dealing with these calls Brigade machines travelled approximately 342 miles. Hose used 13,800 feet and the time occupied was approximately 120 hours.

The fire at Mahriah's on February 12, at 7 a.m., which was extinguished with very slight damage by the Astor House staff prior to the arrival of the Brigade, was another illustration of the danger of leaving the current on electric irons. In this case the iron was resting on a wooden table, not even on an iron stand, and the consequence might have been extremely serious as the shop was an under portion of an Hotel.

There was a loss of life at No. 137 off Fokien Road, where after the extinguishment by the Hongkew Division, a body was found by them buried under the débris.

Return of Communicable Disease.

Reported during the week ending Saturday, midnight, March 29, 1924.	Foreign Cases notified from within Settlement limits (Estimated population 21,400)	Deaths among Chinese resident estimated population of 825,000.
Small-pox	3	2
Cholera	0	0
Typhoid Fever	0	5
Paratyphoid Fever	0	0
Diphtheria	2	0
Scarlet Fever	0	2
Tuberculosis	2	17
Plague	0	0
Amœbic Dysentery	0	0
Bacillary Dysentery	1	0
Influenza	2	1
Total Deaths from all Causes	13	177

"Where to Stay in England"

GLORIOUS DEVON

MR. AND MRS. GOODACRE,
(LATE TIENTSIN)

Tembani Private Hotel,
Sea Front, Paignton,
Near Torquay.

CORRESPONDENCE

EDUCATION AND CHINESE CHILDREN.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—Mr. W. W. Lockwood has raised in your columns a subject of the greatest importance and one worthy of the consideration of those responsible for the government and control of this great city. It would surely be well to invite Mr. Lockwood to be a little more explicit especially in these days when the subject of Education as a whole, and its ideals—possibly the product of individual fancy—and aims are matters about which there are great differences of opinion. If Mr. Lockwood has up his sleeve a scheme which he considers will prove beneficial and of real practical value as regards the progress, peace, and prosperity of this city and tend to the better maintenance of law and order, he will find the ratepayers ready and eager to discuss it. General remarks and criticism of the Commission are merely futile.

To confine our attention for the moment to this city alone, it will be profitable to consider what foreign education has done for the Chinese. What has it produced that is of real and lasting value? Have we employment for the numerous foreign trained students? Are those who have studied abroad, even in the United States, welcomed in commercial circles as tending to maintain and improve the standards of the commercial life of this city?

Primary education on Chinese lines will teach a number of people to read and write but it is to be much doubted whether the ability will tend to their betterment. What are they to read? Chinese newspapers, rubbishy periodicals and anti-foreign propaganda. When you have given the children of the masses of this city some measure of education, what are you going to do with them? There may be work of a kind for them, but it is just that kind of work they will refuse to do, even if you cover the whole city with juvenile employment exchanges.

Is not education largely a matter of supply and demand? Any vast scheme of education in this city would merely produce vast numbers of youths with little or nothing to do put express their dissatisfaction with their environment, and expend their energies upon making things hot for the Municipal Authority which had educated them.

Increased educational facilities can only be given when the country as a whole is showing signs of progress and development to such an extent that she is capable of finding suitable and sufficient employment for those educated. There are not a few today who have received a really sound technical education abroad, and yet, owing to the present condition of this country, they can find no suitable employment.

The present situation in India is to a large extent due to the fact that the educational system has developed beyond the capacity of the country to assimilate the educated, who have thus been thrown back upon that profession which is destructive rather than constructive, the political agitator. We have already enough of these would-be "Lo-ins" in Shanghai.

That knowledge and capacity is of the highest value to the pupil who is representative of the world about him, and tends to bring him up to the level of what is best in the tradition and custom of the people, and, on the other, "It is yet to be proved that non-European races submitted to our education are capable of assimilating themselves to our mental standards." These two statements are obviously contradictory. One is at a loss to make out what he really means.

The above is sufficient to point out the fallacies of Mr. Anti's statement and is written with the hope that those who can see that, in order to build a bigger and prosperous peaceful Shanghai, co-operation and mutual understanding among foreign and Chinese inhabitants are necessary and that one of the best means to achieve these aims is by a sound state of education among its inhabitants, will not be misled by such irresponsible statements as put forward by Mr. Anti.

I am, etc.,
C. C. H.

Shanghai, Mar. 31, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—Lest we be accused, on the top of myriad other sins, of lack of appreciation, I hasten to do homage to the moderation as displayed in some of the counter-proposals which have appeared since the publication of Mr. Lockwood's letter. It is wonderful how their writers can restrain the selves to say simply that the money now wasted on the education of the Chinese should be used to relieve indigent foreign residents of part of the burden of their children's school fees and to provide the same children with higher education, so that they will be better equipped in the glorious battle of keeping the "Chinks" inferiors in perpetuity. For in this way, the poor fathers have still to work and their sons cannot yet go to Cambridge or Oxford. And these are very grave handicaps to superior men.

A less moderate man would certainly go much farther. He could easily demonstrate how all the monies now spent on the Chinese residents in the way of policing, lighting and road-building are worse than wasted; how they only initiate them into comforts which they will be unwilling to give up; and how the enjoyment of these unaccustomed delights will breed jealousy and envy in their minds and end in an anti-foreign movement. And therefore, he could go on to deduce with perfect logical sequence, that all these expenditures should be saved and much better spent on providing the poor fathers with rich incomes so that they can live in idleness and send their sons to European universities.

But, as befitting a higher race, the advocates of the counter-proposals will not let themselves thus run away with their feelings, and it behoves me, a representative of the inferior Chinese, to register this phenomenom, and, on my knees, do a little hero-worshipping.

The reference to Tuchuns and selfish millionaires, I must admit, is most elevating. Is it not always sweet and comforting to know that there are wise sinners in this part of the world? Perhaps, it was their intelligence to descend to the same moral level that has made these most admirable writers such beautiful examples of self denial. Anyway, it would be most insulting to the city fathers even to think for one moment that they would ever be a party to the practice of receiving and not doing.

"Anti" is quite right in assuming that "it is yet to be proved that non-European races are capable of assimilating themselves to our mental standards." Indeed, most of us would not, even if we were capable, if the examples we see in the correspondence columns of your paper are representative of those "mental standards." Only, "Anti" seems rather to have confused the issue. Which is, that the Council should do more in the way of educating the children of the Chinese residents. Whether the education is to be on foreign lines is another question.

I am, etc.,
K. C. K.

Shanghai, April 1, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—May I be allowed a few lines in which to reply briefly to C.C.H.? I regret that C.C.H., after a perusal of my letter, should have arrived at the conclusion that education for Chinese is not desirable at all, and more especially so in that I have not arrived at such conclusions myself. It is also a matter for regret that C.C.H. is unable to admit that foreign newspapers and periodicals are slightly less objectionable than similar Chinese publications in this city. I am in touch with quite a number of Chinese students who have noted a considerable difference as regards moral and intellectual tone.

Mr. Anti. has no wish to make anyone do any particular kind of work; but he does object to any form of mass education which will make countless thousands of youths dissatisfied with their environment when there is nothing better to offer them.

If the schools planned by C.C.H. and his friends are going to concentrate on the formation of character, most people will be willing to have any number of them. In this country the word character has many interpretations and no doubt C.C.H. would like it to cover another ambiguous term "Sovereign Rights." The masses C.C.H. wishes to educate so far in advance of the development of the country would be out for dollars not character: it would be a case of "follow my leader" (in Peking).

It is not my fault that C.C.H. finds the statements in paragraph 7 contradictory and is at a loss to make out what I mean. I am afraid he must remain at a loss until he is better acquainted with the English language.

Your peroration, C.C.H., is excellent and one such as is frequently met with at conferences and gatherings for the uplift of the masses. I have no quarrel with your aims or ideals, but I would beg of you to come down from the clouds and face facts. The Education of this city cannot be run on the same lines as a Ford factory. The educational policy of the Municipal Council is sound and wise, and at this stage increased educational facilities would produce unfortunate results.

I am, etc.,
Anti.

Shanghai, April 2, 1924.

THE CALIPHATE.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—Replies have come from other Mosques to the deposition of the Caliphate at Constantinople by a Congregation after meeting held, must be maintained as sacred because there could be no unfair reason, not made public.

Caliphs are like Princes or Dukedoms are useless lot, proved to hilt in the late Great War. Those Statemen who make speeches to lure the people to go to the front, whilst princes stay behind and High Monarchs visit the seat of Fire out of Range (danger zone) Whilst hundreds get their limbs shot off or thousands bereaving the loss of their husbands or Fathers we have not heard of King, or Emperor leading a Bayonet Charge, but he is seen conspicuous when giving out Rewards to his favourities who succeeded in his game. No Caliph was near the danger zone, Was he?

Through your Columns, I like to be known to the other Moslems who had asked to be put in Constantinople against the verdict of the Congress to think once more, that Religion and Politics do not go hand in hand together therefore must leave them alone. is the decision in China. The result of these all over the world, had been disastrous, therefore there must be a change to the good. Take for instance Italy and Holy See, England and Temporal Power.

I am, etc.,
Mullah Nawan Chus

Shanghai, Mar 27, 1924.

Shanghai Mar. 27, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—Many of your readers will, I fear, be somewhat puzzled or dissatisfied with your footnotes and comments on this subject.

According to Mr. Gilbert Peet's figures (quoted from the best source available on these questions) the Chinese portion of the municipal rate is rather larger than the foreign portion. Whereas the amount expended on education for foreign children is considerably more than double that spent on Chinese.

You point out that "there are items headed 'Foreign' which upon anaylsis, will be found to include Chinese contributions, and vice versa, and in order to ascertain the precise total paid by Chinese and foreigners, the municipal accounts would have to be gone through item by item." This may be so, but may we not assume that the official figures quoted are approximately correct? And may not the apparent inequality herein brought to light justify the public in questioning the grounds of your further statement? "There is no gross unfairness in the proportion spent on Chinese education and the proportion spent on foreign education, the amounts being relatively the same to the amounts of rates paid by Chinese and foreigners."

No one of Mr. Lockwood's critics has attempted to answer his argument that our municipality, having in some measure recognized its responsibility for providing education for Chinese by establishing Secondary Schools, should not leave Elementary Education for Chinese children entirely untouched. His plea was not that the Council should spend "millions" on the education of Chinese children, but that something should be done which might be a model and an encouragement to the Chinese in this direction.

In reminding us of the proportionate amount spent on education in cities of the West, Mr. Lockwood was not, I think, urging that the same proportion necessarily ought to be spent in Shanghai, but the contrast gives reason for asking whether in our Municipality, education, and particularly education for Chinese, has a fair share of attention.

I am, etc.,
G. W. Sheppard.

Shanghai Mar. 28, 1924.

If what Mr. Sheppard says in his fourth paragraph of his letter is all that Mr. Lockwood meant to ask for, it is actually far less than the Educational Commission recommends, as we showed in Wednesday's letter, Mr. Lockwood having entirely ignored this part of the Commission's report. As regards the footnote to Mr. Peet's letters, Mr. Sheppard may be assured that it was not written without our verifying our references.—Ed.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—I have followed with interest the correspondence in your columns regarding the desirability and otherwise of the Council subscribing a larger share of its contribution to the education of the Chinese children of the Foreign Settlement.

I quite agree that they should receive the benefit of the highest order, and would suggest the Council set aside Tls. 25,000,000 to build a large wide road outside the limits of this Foreign Settlement. We could then invite [illegible] to send their children to [illegible] with the [illegible] Engineering with the [illegible] Council's Engineer [illegible] and [illegible] built, [illegible] the completion of this [illegible] of education, we might [illegible] like the rulers of [illegible] and Kiangsu Provinces [illegible] Central Administration, of course, drawing their pay from [illegible] 20 per cent. Cigarette Tax. The present students of the various Chinese Law Schools would by that time have fully grown up and could then instruct their police in the desirability of protecting China's Sovereign Rights by seeing that all foreigners do not get beyond the limits of the Settlement Boundary.

The above would, I think, meet with the approval of the knowing ones.

I am, etc.,
Humpty Dumpty.

Shanghai, March 29, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—I think it is pretty safe to say that Chinese children attending school are in the majority those of well-to-do parents. If such is the case, I would make a fair suggestion to Mr. W. W. Lockwood and his followers, i.e., to start a "drive" amongst the Chinese only; from which circle Mr. Lockwood will find a long string of millionaires who would contribute liberally, and their support alone will be good enough to maintain as many schools as they like for exclusive education of their children absolutely independently of any contribution from our Municipal coffers.

For the present the Council is contributing an excellent amount for the education of these children and if this money were devoted to the education of foreign children instead, we should hear less complaints of high school fees for our own children, many of whose parents find it all they can do to meet the school bills.

I know of many cases in which parents (foreigners of course) make immense sacrifices to keep their children in school.

Mr. Lockwood may also apply to the many Tuchuns and Generals as well as to the Chinese warlords for school funds. They are all millionaires and there is no reason why they should not look after the education of the coming generation of China.

We ought to see that no more money from the Council goes towards the education of Chinese children as that will tend to entail much higher school fees for the future, and we cannot afford it.

Enclosing my card,
I am, etc.,
Leventis.

Shanghai, March 28 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—Mr. Anti's expression, contained in your correspondence column of the 29th instant, is so unsound and misleading that some comments thereon are necessary for the interest of those who have education problems at heart.

Mr. Anti points out, in paragraph 2, that Chinese students who have studied abroad are not welcomed in commercial circles, and, again in the last paragraph, that "A little learning is dangerous thing." From what he states it can only be concluded that education for Chinese is not desirable at all, which is rather an astonishing statement.

In paragraph 3 Mr. Anti puts: "Primary education on Chinese lines will teach a number of people to read and write. . . . What are they to read? Chinese newspapers, rubbishy periodicals and anti-foreign propaganda?" Well, reading is, more or less, a matter of personal choice. We cannot stop a Chinese boy from reading Chinese newspapers, rubbishy periodicals and even anti-foreign propaganda, in the same way as we cannot very well stop a foreign boy from reading foreign newspapers, rubbishy periodicals and anti foreign writings one may find in a near at hand newspaper. In the same paragraph—"When you have given the children of the masses of this city some measure of education, what are you going to do with them? There may be work of a kind for them, but it is just that kind of work they will refuse to do." I would like to know what is the kind of work which Mr. Anti would like to make them do and wouldn't like them to refuse to.

Paragraphs 4, 5 and 6: Education is a matter of demand and supply, etc. May I point out to Mr. Anti that, besides for commercial purposes, "Education has for its object the formation of character" (H. Spenser)! If education should be given in accordance with need, who has more claim for it than the Chinese, who (as a whole) are more illiterate than any people? Granted that education has close relation with employment, the writer never hears that any country advocates the closing down of schools or cutting down of the budget for education on account of unemployment.

In paragraph 7 Mr. Anti states, on the one hand, "That knowledge and capacity is of the highest

TRAMWAY RETURNS.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—The comparative figures published for the third quarters of 1923 and 1924 (First?? Ed.) teresting data for consideration. are interesting data for consideration.

1924—$586,659.31
1923—$544,489.89

increase over last year $42,169.42 or roughly 8 per cent.

Query: Do the above amounts include sales of season tickets?

II. Passengers carried:

1923—31,726,866
1924—31,059,208

less this year 567,658 or roughly 1.8 per cent.

Query: Do the above figures include the season ticket holders and such as don't pay, due to over-crowdedness and the consequent impossibility of conductors collecting fares?

III. Car Miles run:

1924—1,495,232
1923—1,448,123

increase over last year 47,109 or roughly 3¼ per cent.

Query: Do these figures include the car miles by "reserved cars" for the Company's own purposes?

In conjunction with the above let us consult the Municipal Report of 1923, page 31. We read, "The Company's rolling stock has been increased by 2 Railless Cars during the year and is as under:—

	1923	1924
Motors	90	90
Trailers	90	90
Railless Cars	12	14

In Tokio there were, after the earthquake, 800 cars in use, and that was considered absolutely inadequate, although the population had decreased to about 1½ million as compared to over 2 millions in the pre-earthquake days. Considering that the International Settlement of Shanghai has about 1 million population, and also the fact that the lines 8, 9, and 2 serve partly the French Concession (the French Bund), and line 2 partly Chapei, (North Szechuen Road Extension), we see how hopelessly inadequate our Tram Service is. There should be 600 and not 90 motors to meet our requirements to travel in comfort.

Owing to the cars being used so excessively, and also carrying heavier loads than they were built for, the natural consequence is that many have to be in "hospital" for patching up a bit, which reduces still further the effective number of cars in service.

We have been promised year after year improvements, but instead things go from bad to worse. The Great War can no longer be accepted as an excuse for the company not having enough rolling stock, and with money it can get any number of motors now. Who are the sufferers of this system of false economy Certainly in the first place the travelling public, and it is time to kick, now that the revenue of the company has been considerably increased, and the public has to bear the depreciation of the copper currency, no matter even if silver is tendered in payment of fares, for which incidentally one gets penalized to the extent of 5 or 10 coppers, as the case may be, an additional squeeze for the benefit of the conductor. If the present capital of the company is insufficient to tackle the improvements which are a crying need, there are certainly enough people who would willingly subscribe towards a Public Utility Corporation.

In spite of the fact that there has been little done to improve the Service, the increased number of accidents through the tram cars is surprising:

1923—700
1922—535

Increased 165 or 30 per cent. within a year.

These are of course the reported cases only, those not reported are perhaps many times more. And to what are these accidents due? To over-crowding of the cars for one thing, and lack of care for another thing. The conductors are often so jammed by the excessive number of passengers, that they are simply not in a position to signal to the drivers. These conditions are appalling, and what is going to be done about it? The only remedy is an increased number of cars. Are we to continue to have deaf ears turned to our complaints, and for how long? Safety first! It is all very well to put up such notices, why is there, for instance, no tramway official or a police officer on the north end of the Garden Bridge to supervise traffic? Motor-cars dash along when trams are at standstill, as there is nobody there to give the stop signal. I wonder how many accidents happen at this danger zone daily?!

Thanking you for the space,

I am etc.,
H. Kliene.

Shanghai, April 2, 1924.

KATSU.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—A few remarks regarding the Japanese "resuscitation" methods known as "Katsu," which your Tokio correspondent enlarges upon in your issue of today, by one who has been in the unfortunate predicament of having to have it practised upon him, and who has seen it in operation and been taught its use, may prove of interest to your readers.

It consists of very violent sudden jerks on the diaphram, just above the abdomen; on what is generally referred to as the "solar plexus." The subject, always unconscious, is lifted to a sitting position, the operator sits behind him, places both arms around the body of the subject, and with his two clasped hands pulls suddenly and strongly on the solar plexus. This causes a reflex nerve-action throughout the entire body, which stiffens up, and without question it does bring back consciousness to a stunned person.

But I think it is clearly understood that this method is only of use where the cause of the accident was plainly seen; it does not apply where illness or enfeeblement has caused the unconsciousness. Therefore I am extremely sceptical as to its use in any cases but the results of some accident. Accidents amongst the more advanced students and exponents of ju-jitsu are so alarmingly frequent that when one has reached a certain degree of proficiency the "Katsu" methods are shown one in fairness to one's opponents, and also one sees it in operation.

I did practical ju-jitsu for seven years, had the usual number of minor accidents, and a major one which permanently weakened some joints. But "katsu" was practised on me when I was thrown and had my neck "broken," i.e., dislocated; instantly the neck was set, and "katsu" applied, and in a short while I was conscious again. But I wonder how good it was for me, and certainly the terrific blows on my abdomen did not improve that organ.

There is really little difference between our methods of artificial respiration and "Katsu," the idea being much the same; whereas we try to start the heart through the lungs, the Japanese try to start it through the nerves; and one method has about as much chance of success as the other in most cases, but in a case of violent shock I would recommend "Katsu," violent and cruel as it seems at the time.

I am, etc.,
R. V. Dent.

Shanghai, Mar. 31, 1924.

DR. SUN AND THE WARFARE IN CHINA.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—The fighting in South China has now been in progress for about three years, if I am not mistaken, and yet it is doubtful whether one man in 20, be he Chinese or foreigner, could say what Sun Yat sen is driving at.

From what one can gather he still seems to enjoy a certain measure of popularity, but it is indeed difficult to understand why this should be so. He is the sole and direct cause of instigating the weary warfare that has been and continues to be waged, with its terrible toll of life and infliction of misery and privation on thousands of his own country men. It is he who is responsible for the revival of the licensed gambling houses and the direct encouragement of this awful curse. Not content with this shameful expedient for raising money, he has authorized and upholds the most barefaced system of robbery in the form of illegal taxation in 20 different ways, the theft of private and public lands and property, the most outrageous press gang system and in short, the adoption of methods for extorting money and recruits for his armies from the whole territory under his evil control that rank far above those adopted by the most ruthless of any of China's warlords.

The particular irony in all this lies in the fact that he is an avowed Socialist and Republican, both ideas standing for the freest form of Government of the people, by the people and for the people, whereas the latter have not the faintest or remotest vestige of a voice in the management of his miserable travesty of a Government, nor are they ever likely to.

If he had some vision splendid of a goal the attainment of which would ensure the abolition of military tyranny even in his own part of China the establishment of a firm, clean and effective form of government, the development of means of communication and a general reconstructive policy, one could almost be brought to condone the measures he is using and the misery he is causing.

But instead, the only trace one can discern of any specific aim he is pressing takes the form of an extraordinary obsession on his part that the gang of corrupt wasters, masquerading as the Peking Parliament, should have been dissolved long ago and, by its continued existence, has offended his pure and lofty sense of constitutionalism. Once clear them out and replace them by a fresh lot—incidentally as corrupt and worthless as their predecessors—but elected by filling in the correct coloured papers or whatever the process may be, and the freed man could retire from the public gaze with his life's work achieved.

It probably lies far nearer the truth to say that if this is his only reason for his course of action during the past few years of miserable and squalid warfare, it is a mere blind and that he is bent on nothing short of the President's Chair, and if his actions in the past form any criterion of what one might expect when he gets there, then Heaven help China.

I am, etc.
X.Y.Z.

Shanghai, March 29, 1924.

THE BANQUE INDUSTRIELLE.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—I have before me an ancient cutting culled from the "North China Daily Mail" dated July 22, 1921, giving an official statement of the closing of the Banque and, with the exception of two pamphlets suggesting a settlement, the matter seems to be entirely forgotten. If we are to wait for a "Gold Franc" settlement, most of us will not be in need of it. I, as a small and poor creditor, acknowledge my weakness in trusting such a concern when I might have owned one brick in that palatial structure which adorns the Bund. As a suggestion, I think matters may be brought to a head by holding a creditors meeting in Shanghai and calling for signatures from all creditors in China, to demand that the Banque liquidate and pay its creditors. We have patiently waited long enough.

I am etc.,
Bitten.

Tsingtao, March 31, 1924.

Northern papers state that the Yalu has begun to thaw. In a few days, the river will entirely be relieved of ice, and become thoroughly navigable.

A paper on the subject of "Kublai Khan and the Yuans" was read by Miss Lucille Douglass at the meeting of the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club on Friday. It was the beginning of this Department's study of this Dynasty and the paper was in the nature of an historical sketch of the time beginning with the rise of the Mongols in A. D. 1125 and describing their conquest of China and the reign of Kublai Khan.

LAW REPORTS

THE CHENG RUBBER ESTATES

Scheme for Reduction of Capital Approved by Supreme Court.

The scheme of arrangement involving a reduction of capital, recently passed by the Cheng Rubber Estates Ld., was on Monday sanctioned in the Supreme Court by his Honour Judge Sir Skinner Turner.

In presenting the company's petition, Mr. H. Lipson Ward said the present capital of the company was divided into 135,000 shares of Tls. 5 each, making a total of Tls. 675,000 and it was proposed that this capital should be divided into 675,000 shares of Tls. 1 each, and that three-fifths of these shares be surrendered to the company for future issue, the balance of 270,000 shares to be credited as fully paid up. Out of the 405,000 shares surrendered, it was proposed that one share be offered to old shareholders for subscription at par in respect of every five old shares held by him. This would dispose of 27,000 shares, and the balance of 378,000 would be reserved for future issue. This was one of the companies, said counsel, which was floated during the rubber boom, and it was obvious to everybody that it was over-capitalized, so that a reduction of this nature would be of the utmost benefit to the shareholders.

Counsel detailed the formalities taken to effect the change and, in reply to his Lordship, said there was no opposition to the application. He also read the petition, in the course of which it was stated that the object of the scheme was to admit of the payment of adequate dividends and also provision of further capital for working capital.

PROSPECTIVE PROFITS.

Dr. R. S. Ivy, the chairman of the company, in an affidavit said that the total area of the estates was 910 acres, of which 789 acres were planted. Having regard to the altered conditions in the rubber industry, the capital of the company, which worked out at over Tls. 855 per planted acre, was far too large and did not admit of the payment of an adequate dividend. Under the new scheme, the issued capital would work out at about Tls. 337 per acre, a figure which in the opinion of the directors more fairly represented the present value of the estate. On the assumption that under the present Restriction Ordinance the company was allowed to produce 145,608 lb. of rubber, it was calculated that the cost of production, including all Shanghai expenses, would be about 32 Straits' cents per lb. With the present average selling price of 45 Straits' cents per lb., such production would allow a profit of Tls. 13,250, 1.96 per cent. only on the present issued capital but nearly 4½ per cent. on the proposed reduced issued capital. Every increase of five cents in the price of rubber would mean an increase in profit of 1.71 per cent. on the latter, as against only 1.17 per cent. on the former. The last dividend paid by the company was one of 4 per cent. in 1917. In order to place the company upon a sound financial basis it had become necessary to raise further capital for the purpose of providing sufficient working capital for its needs, and the directors were of opinion that to raise funds by any increase of capital would be unjustifiable and impracticable, the proposed scheme being considered the only practicable way.

His Lordship sanctioned the scheme, and made an order for discontinuance of the words "and reduced" in the companys title.

The servants quarters in the godown of Messrs. Butterfield and Swire at Changsha were looted on March 18 by soldiers, who got away with $21 and 16,000 cash. Mr. Rawlinson, the agent, has demanded of the police restoration and punishment of the offenders.

UNUSUAL CLAIM IN SUPREME COURT

Chauffeur's Action Against Former Employer: Verdict for Defendant

A generous employer and an ungrateful chauffeur were parties to an action of an unusual character heard by his Honour Judge Grain in the Supreme Court on Thursday. The plaintiff, a chauffeur named Koeg Fook-kan, claimed from Mr. Charles A. Howard the sum of $328, alleging that this amount had been deducted from his wages and deposited in the bank on his behalf.

Mr. Arthur Covey appeared for plaintiff and Mr. R. G. MacDonald for defendant.

The case for plaintiff, as stated by Mr. Covey, was that the chauffeur served Mr. Howard for a little over six years, beginning with a salary of $20 and rising to $25 and $30. Mr. Howard suggested that the plaintiff was living a rather fast life and ought to look to his future, and urged him to deposit $5 in the bank each month. Plaintiff was agreeable to this, but did not know to proceed in the matter, and Mr. Howard accordingly opened an account for him in the Hongkong & Shanghai Savings Bank, the arrangement being that defendant was to have control of the account. Defendant left Shanghai, on Home leave, and plaintiff obtained other employ. When, upon defendant's return to Shanghai, plaintiff went to him and asked for the money in the bank, Mr. Howard told him he could not possibly give it to him. He offered $100 and expressed the intention of handing over the balance to some charitable institution.

Mr. F. A. Branagan, in charge of the Hongkong & Shanghai Savings Bank, said the account was marked "C. A. Howard to operate," which meant that he was the person who was to be recognized when any withdrawals were made. On the cover of the pass-book, there were the words (initialled by defendant): "This belongs to my chauffeur." Mr. Howard closed the account in January of this year.

Plaintiff, in his evidence, said defendant suggested to him that saving the money would prevent him from going to bad places and that he might presently be able to buy a small business. Accordingly, he paid $5 into the bank every month, on each occasion handing the pass book back to Mr. Howard, who arranged for the continuance of the monthly deposit of $5 during the time he away on Home leave. Witness had arranged to return to his employ when he came back to Shanghai, but at that time he was earning $60 a month and Mr. Howard was not prepared to pay the same. The money in the bank had been paid out of his wages and he thought it belonged to him, but upon asking for it, Mr. Howard only offered $100 and said he would give the balance to charity; to which witness replied that he was a poor man and the money was his.

In answer to Mr. MacDonald, witness said he went to work for Mr. Rosenfeld, who paid him $70 a month, and he was now with the Central Garage, receiving $20, and cumshas.

Mr. MacDonald, for the defence, described the case as a trumped-up action brought by an ungrateful, impertinent and underserving employee. Mr. Howard had treated him most generously. He rather liked the boy and took him into his employ when he was earning only $3 a month, clothed him, allowed him to learn driving on his own car, and procured a temporary licence for him. Then he started this fund as a provision for his old age, but only on condition that he became an old retainer and discharged his duties faithfully and well. The money never at any time belonged to plaintiff and it was only out of pure generosity that Mr. Howard offered to give him $100.

Defendant, in evidence, bore out counsel's statement, and went on to say that the monthly deposit did not come out of the chauffeur's wages. He personally gave him $5 out of his own pocket with the pass book, to go the bank, sending the chauffeur with it in order that he might see the money was being put by. He had no right whatever to the money, but when he grew old he might have had it. The deposit of this fund was a purely voluntary action, on witness's part, and the chauffeur was distinctly made to understand this. The chauffeur was the only servant who did not return into his employ, and when he called for the money witness pointed out to him that he had no right to it, though afterwards he did offer him $100, saying that he did not want it, the chauffeur went away, and within half an hour witness received a lawyer's letter.

His Honour, in giving judgment, said he was bound to say that the demeanour of plaintiff in the witness box to some extent supported Mr. MacDonald's suggestion that the claim was an impertinent one. After reviewing the evidence, his Honour concluded by saying it was abundantly clear that in fact and in law the money belonged to the master and that property in it had never passed to the servant. Accordingly, he gave judgment for defendant, with costs.

"FOR PURPOSE OF HIS EVIL SPITE"

Counsel's Strong Denunciation of Complainant in Larceny Charge

When Miss Camelia Mason, alias Camelia Boisserie, appeared before Mr. G. W. King in the British Police Court again on Thursday of last week to answer a charge concerning the alleged larceny of a diamond ring and coat, valued altogether at $1,900, Mr. P. W. Goldring, representing the complainant, Oscar Matias, said he had received certain written instructions from his client, and on those instructions he proposed to offer no evidence.

Mr. M. Reader Harris, appearing for the girl, said he wished to register a strong protest against a foreigner in Shanghai evoking the aid of H. M. Police Court for the purpose of his own evil spite, in making serious charges of larceny against a young girl earning her own living. She could bring evidence to the Court which would prove that the coat in question was actually brought by Mr. Matias and put on to her shoulders by his own hand in the shop, and he saw her walk away. They could produce evidence, also, showing that he fitted the ring on to her finger himself. Mr. Harris considered the whole thing a very disgraceful case of spite and a vicious charge against a young girl which acted naturally to her detriment, since accounts of the charges had appeared in all the newspapers here. The case had been taken into the French Court and twice into the British Court. In the British Court the complainant did not even take the trouble to appear.

The Magistrate asked to see Mr. Goldring's written instructions. These, consisting of a small slip of paper with a few words upon it, were handed up, and his Worship commenced to read. At the first few words, however, Mr. Goldring asked the Magistrate to treat is as confidential.

The Magistrate, in dismissing the case, remarked on the seriousness of the charge preferred and the facts of the complainant's non-appearance. It was not, he said, in his province to comment on a charge being brought: it concerned the alleged larceny of $1,900, and at neither hearing had the complainant appeared. The case would be dismissed.

A DISASTROUS NIGHT ASHORE

Sailor's Story of Attack by Coolie Gang

An American sailor's night ashore had an interesting sequel in the Mixed Court last Friday, before Mr. Whitamore, British Assessor, and Magistrate Li, when a couple of coolies were charged with highway robbery, and being concerned with two or more in robbing Hans Jenson (the sailor aforementioned), and assaulting Jenson in Soochow Road.

Jensen's story was that he engaged a ricsha at Markham Road on Thursday night and told the coolie to take him to the Customs Jetty, where he intended to rejoin his ship. Past North Thibet Road in North Soochow Road about ten coolies set upon him with stones, and his coolie, one of the accused men, waited till they reached an alleyway and then turned him into the road. The overturning was really done by the second accused who ran after the vehicle and grabbed it at the Stone Bridge. He turned on his assailants but one of them hit him in the stomach with a pole and he fell to the ground unconscious. Chinese police came to the scene and he was taken to the General Hospital and treated.

The ricsha coolie told a different story. He agreed that Jensen got into the ricsha at Markham Road but stated that when they reached North Soochow Road he got out of the vehicle. Witness asked for his fare and Jensen struck him and kicked him about the legs. After that he went into the alleyway and lay down and went to sleep.

Jensen stated that he had had two beers at the Savoy Hotel during the evening.

Inspector McKenzie said the Police had information that complainant was seen outside the Sinza Police Station during the evening in a drunken condition.

The case was dismissed.

ALLEGED IMITATIONS OF TRADEMARKS

China Soap and Candle Co's Action Against Loong Mow Soap Co.

This case was tried before Messrs. Whitamore and Lee at the Mixed Court last Friday. Mr. M. B. Brown, of Messrs. White-Cooper, Master and Harris, appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Woo Fee for the defendants.

Mr. Brown, in opening his case, said the proceedings were brought under three separate charges with a total of six separate counts. One charge was in respect of imitations of the plaintiffs' "Ziang Mow" mark, one in respect of imitations of their "Peh Chi" mark, and one in respect of a collection of stencils used for marking cases. Mr. Brown, in a brief outline of the case, mentioned that a warrant to search had been granted by the Mixed Court and that this search revealed all the evidence which would be produced in Court, namely the infringing brands of soap, 15 dies for stamping soap, and 16 stencils for marking cases. He went on to mention the China Soap & Candle Co.'s case against Tin Fong early in February, when judgment was given against defendants in a fine of $100. Subsequent to this case plaintiffs inserted a quarter-page advertisement in the "Sinwanpao" warning soap manufacturers against imitating or infringing their well-known and old-established brands, and, in addition to this, all the soap manufacturers in Shanghai known to plaintiffs were circularized warning them in a similar manner. A few days after the search the plaintiffs had information that, in spite of the search and summons, the Loong Mow Soap Company were again manufacturing imitations of the plaintiffs' mark, and a further warrant was granted by the Mixed Court, which search revealed many pieces of soap obviously newly manufactured lying about the premises.

Mr. P. H. Cobb, of the plaintiff Company, gave evidence in support of Counsel's statement.

The next witness called was Chow Tze-kan, manager of the Loong Mow Soap Co., who said that since receiving a letter from the China Soap & Candle Co., Ltd., he had ceased to manufacture any of the brands complained of. He said there were 1000 cases of soap in the godown at the time of the search, and that the soap seized on the second search was only new because it was taken from a case and that in cases it took a considerable time to dry.

Mr. Cobb was recalled with regard to Chow's evidence, and pointed out that when the original search was made it was long subsequent to their having received plaintiffs' letter and they were actually stamping the soap in the works when he arrived. He also said that the soap seized on the second search was not taken from a case but was standing out on trays to dry.

PLAIN SPEAKING AND A $400 FINE.

Mr. Brown then summed up for the plaintiffs, pointing out that early in February the Tin Fong Soap Company had been fined the maximum penalty of $100 for infringing on the plaintiffs' brands. Advertisements had been issued in the paper warning manufacturers against imitating plaintiffs' brands, a letter had been written to every soap manufacturer known to the plaintiffs in Shanghai, among whom were the Loong Mow Soap Company, and all this apparently had no effect seeing that in the time between the summons and the trial the defendants had made new dies and started anew the manufacture of infringing soaps. On these grounds Mr. Brown asked for imprisonment as being the only method of stopping manufacturers from continuing in these offences.

The Assessor in passing judgment said:—"Yours is one of the meanest and most despicable offences possible, and to all intents and purposes you are a thief because you have stolen trademarks belonging to another Company. The evidence you gave is a tissue of lies and was fortunately able to be controverted by the plaintiffs' representative. Yours is a corporation and 'a corporation has no body to be punished and no soul to be damned' but we consider that you are far worse than any of the many coolies who are daily sentenced to imprisonment for petty theft. You will pay a fine of $400. We only regret that the law does not permit us to send you to prison also."

EX-COMPANY MANAGER CHARGED

Allegations of Swindling Against Mr. W. Wallace: Alleged Worthless Cheques

Mr. W. Wallace, former manager of the China Pacific Trading Company, appeared in the Mixed Court again last Friday before Mr. Martin, British Assessor, and Magistrate Kuan to answer charges of fraud by tendering false cheques. It was alleged that he committed a swindle by uttering a worthless cheque for $2,500 and fraudulently using the name of the China Pacific Trading Company: also that he obtained electrical fittings to the value of Tls. 125 by a worthless cheque from 5 Soochow Road: that he obtained by means of a worthless cheque from Mr. Lane, of Arbuthnot & Co., 250 cases of Beehive Brandy, valued at Tls. 3,063.70: and that he obtained from one Fa Yoong-kang the sum of $500 by fraud.

Dr. O. Fischer defended and Inspector Kinniple prosecuted for the Police.

Lam Ngai Pak, an employee of the East Asia Bank, stated that Wallace went to the Bank in company with a Chinese and opened an account with Tls. 5,000. He gave a specimen signature. This deposit was drawn out at later stages with a cheque for Tls. 2,000 and another for Tls. 3,000. After that a number of cheques were presented to the Bank and returned, as there were no funds to meet them.

The complainant Fa Yoong-Kang told the Court he was introduced to Wallace by a friend at the end of last August and after some general conversation the accused told him his company had four ships, one of which, the "Gweneth" or "Meping," was expected to arrive in Shanghai on the 2nd or 3rd of September. When she did arrive witness was to be given the position of Chief Steward. Before taking this, however, he was asked to give a guarantee of $500, which he did. The ship was a day or so late but she came in eventually and witness asked Wallace about the job. Wallace told him the vessel had to go into dock for repairs and he could take the position when the repairs were completed. He would not let witness go on board and forbade that he see the vessel's captain. Finally he told Wallace that he did not want his job and asked for the return of his deposit. Again he was put off and given a note to take to the ship, but was again told he was not to see the captain. He did see him, however, and gave him the note. The captain read it, smiled, and gave witness a reply to take back to Wallace. He again asked Wallace offered him a cheque. He refused the cheque because when he wanted to pay Wallace the original $500 deposit by cheque he refused to accept and demanded cash. Therefore he demanded cash of Wallace. He visited him at his office again after that and Wallace gave him $200. He had never repairs were completed. He had been to the defendant's house in the French Concession on three or four occasions to try and collect it, but the last time he went he found it guarded by French policemen.

Wallace then gave evidence. He stated that he was originally employed with Getz Bros. at a salary of $350 per month. A member of the China Pacific Trading Company offered him the position of manager with them at $500 per month and he accepted. After this he heard of a good job going at Harbin and immediately proceeded to the Russian town, only to find the position was taken. He went on to Hankow and it was while at that port he heard there was a warrant out for his arrest. He immediately postponed a visit he intended making to Chunking, journeyed back to Shanghai, communicated with the police and was met on arrival and arrested. It was not a part of his duties when he was with the China Pacific Trading Company to handle the finances. The only thing he ever did was to sign the cheques as they were brought to him and he knew nothing of any of the frauds with which he was charged.

The case was again adjourned.

Mr. Wallace's Defence: Denial of Responsibility for Company's Affairs

Mr. Wallace, occupied the witness box in the Mixed Court all of Tuesday afternoon.

Wallace stated that he was employed by the China Pacific Trading Company simply as their manager and at no time was it his duty to look after the accounts. He admitted that he went to the Asia Bank in company with one of his Chinese employers and opened a current account with Tls. 500, and he admitted that he signed cheques afterwards for sums considerably over that amount. He explained this by stating that whenever the company wished to issue any cheques they brought the cheque book to him and it was for him to sign. At all times when he signed these cheques he was under the impression there was a large balance at the Bank to meet them.

In cross-examination he stated that he did go to the Bank on one occasion and ask what was the balance the company had. The accountant, however, refused to let him know and after that he admitted he made no effort to find out.

Questioned with regard to the man to whom he was alleged to have offered the post as steward on one of the company's ships, he stated that one of his Chinese employers came to him one day and asked him to sign a receipt for $500 which had been received from the man as a deposit. When he refused to accept the position and asked for the money back witness understood that it had all been paid. The Chinese manager told him the man had threatened to make a complaint to the authorities if the money was not paid and therefore he (the Chinese manager had handed the money over. At no time did the man complain to witness.

With regard to the charge of fraudulently obtaining 250 cases of "Beehive" brandy, he said, still in reply to Superintendent Vaughan, that his employers asked him to go to 24 Whangpoo Road and get samples. He did so and was afterwards instructed to make the purchase, which he did with a cheque on September 5, post dated to October 5.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR RENT.

Regarding the premises at No. 5 Foochow Road, concerning the rent of which there was a civil action elsewhere, he denied that he was responsible.

Superintendent Vaughan:—How is it, then, that the landlord has been looking for you for the rent?

Witness.—Has he? Then I am surprised. Is the contract for the premises signed by me? Is the lease signed by me?

Superintendent Vaughan:—I don't know.

Witness:—If it is I am liable to pay, but I have not signed the lease.

Asked in what condition the business was at the end of September he stated that it was "not looking too bright." Further questioned, he said no complaints were made to him before he left Shanghai for Harbin with regard to the cheques he had issued, and when he left Shanghai he had no idea there was anything wrong. The first he heard was in the Customs Club at Hankow when a man who was on leave told him there was a warrant out for his arrest in Shanghai, and on hearing that he took the next boat down here. He had not been home half an hour when he was arrested. He was quite satisfied that he had met all his particular obligations in connexion with the business when he left Shanghai. He was under the impression all responsibility rested with the Chinese.

Superintendent Vaughan told the Court that he had made further inquiries and he could bring evidence to prove that defendant was the actual founder and owner of the China Pacific Trading Company.

Dr. Fischer objected to this. He pointed out that the case for the prosecution was closed and that Superintendent Vaughan had no right to make such damaging statements at that stage of the proceedings.

Superintendent Vaughan said he believed he had every right to bring in fresh evidence at that stage; he could do so in similar circumstances in the British Court.

Dr. Fischer:—It may be permissible in the British Court, but it is surely not so in this Court. I have practised here for 10 years now and never in the whole of that time have I heard such an application, or known it granted.

The Assessor said the Court would have to reserve its decision on a point of that sort. He had never known it granted before.

After further conference, he asked the Superintendent whether he would mind withdrawing the application, and in deference to the Court Mr. Vaughan did so.

The case was again adjourned.

CHINESE JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

Laws and Regulations Now Published in English and French and for Sale

The Commission on Extraterritoriality has made a series of English and French translations of Chinese laws and regulations, the French editions being provided with notes and indexes. Those now ready for sale are the following:—

I.—English translations:—

1. New Provisional Criminal Code	$2.50
2. Regulations relating to Criminal Procedure	1.20
3. Regulations relating to Commerce	1.20
4. Chinese Supreme Court Decisions relating to General Principles of Civil Law, Obligations, and Commercial Law	5.00
5. Regulations relating to Civil Procedure	2.50
6. Regulations relating to Judicial Administration	4.00
7. Trade Mark Law	40 cents.

II.—French translation:—

1. Code Pénal Provisoire	2.00
2. Réglement de Procédure Pénale	2.00
3. Réglement de Procédure Civile	2.50
4. Législation Commercials	2.50

The above books we are informed may be obtained:—

English Translations:—Sales Office of Judicial Gazette, Sze-fa kunpao, and other book sellers, Peking.

French Translations:—La Librairie Française, Hotel de Pekin.

The

"Three Castles"

MAGNUMS

CIGARETTES

Smoked around the world.

MADE IN ENGLAND

This advertisement is issued by the British-American Tobacco Co., (China) Ltd. A-8

FOREIGN TELEGRAMS

BRITAIN'S REDUCED EXPENDITURE

Past Year's Budget Surplus: Sound State of Nation's Finances

London, Apr. 1.

In the House of Commons today, Mr. Philip Snowden, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced that the Budget would be introduced on April 29.

The fact that the national accounts for the year ended yesterday show a surplus of £48,000,000 instead of £2,000,000, for which Mr. Baldwin had estimated in the former Government's Budget, constitutes a striking contrast to the deficits of Britain Continental neighbours and confirms the sound state of the country's finances.

The surplus goes automatically to the reduction of debt, which, in view of the budgetary debt provision of £40,000,000, will be thereby reduced by £88,000,000.

The revenue has exceeded the Budget estimates by £18,000,000 in spite of the fact that the Excess Profits Duty, which had been estimated to yield £12,000,000, failed to contribute a single penny.

The fact that the yield in all other taxation items exceeded Treasury anticipations suggests that trade conditions are not so bad as financial experts had expected them to be.

The expenditure showed a reduction of nearly £28,000,000 on the estimates, the fighting forces recording a saving of £16,000,000, and the Civil Services, over £12,000,000.—Reuter.

THE PEACE TREATY WITH TURKEY

Government's Desire for Early Renewal of Relations: Debate Adjourned

London, Apr. 1.

In the House of Commons today the Government's intention to carry out the Labour policy of no secret treaties was announced by Mr. Arthur Ponsonby, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in moving the second reading of the Treaty of Peace with Turkey Bill. He urged the passage of the Bill so as to allow ratification of the Treaty without delay. The Government desired renewal of normal Anglo-Turkish relations as early as possible.

Mr. Ponsonby declared that the Government intended to lay every treaty, when signed, on the table of both Houses 21 days before ratification and publication. Important treaties would be discussed, if desired, thus secret treaties would be impossible (Ministerial cheers). The Government would also inform the House of all agreements and understandings which might in any way bind the nation to specific action in certain circumstances.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, replying to criticisms of the Treaty, declared that there was much in it with which everybody disagreed, but it must be ratified as otherwise there was going to be no end to the state of war. He stated that the Dominions and India had agreed to ratification.

The debate was adjourned till next week.—Reuter.

"WARM" TIME FOR THE GOVERNMENT

Chorus of Criticism in the House of Commons as to Labour Policy

London, Apr. 2.

That the Government are going to have a very warm time was the suggestion of Lord Henry Cavendish-Bentinck, Conservative member for Nottingham, at question time in the House of Commons to-day when even the Conservative front benchers joined in the chorus of criticisms of the Government's action on the subject of their housing scheme, unemployment benefits and other matters. Feeling ran high throughout, questions on the Wembley strike especially exciting heated passages between the Government and the Opposition benches.

To day's business included controversial topics like the Evictions Bill, the Capital Levy, Army discipline, including the death penalty, and the use of troops in trade disputes. The Evictions Bill, otherwise the Rent and Mortgage Interest Restrictions Bill, which was introduced by Mr. John Wheatly, Minister of Health, provoked the Conservatives and Liberals, who describe it as a "sop to Clydeside," chiefly on account of its first clause which prohibits the ejectment of a tenant not paying his rent, if the tenant is unemployed.

When Sir H. Kingsley Wood, Conservative Member for Woolwich, asked for a prolongation of the debate on a bill of such gravity, Mr. J. R. Clynes, the Deputy Leader of the House, said that in view of the serious grievance which the bill dealt with the Government intended to take a decision of the House to-night (Ministerial cheers).

The Evictions Bill.

Later.

In the House of Commons today, Mr. John Wheatley, the Minister of Health, moved the second reading of the Evictions Bill. He vividly depicted the destitution in Glasgow due to unemployment. Women and children were starving, yet evictions were increasing, destroying family life and subjecting them to treatment worse than that inflicted on great criminals. Mr. Wheatley agreed that the burden of helping them should not be thrown entirely on property owners (Opposition cheers and laughter). He knew that there were still members of the House who put the rights of property above the rights of human beings (Opposition protests and Ministerial cheers). He warned the House that there were limits to human endurance.

Mr. Neville Chamberlain, Conservative Member for Birmingham, said that Mr. Wheatley fulfilled a double function. He was a hostage in the hands of Mr. Ramsay Macdonald for the good behaviour of the Labour Party back-benchers and a pledge for his friends that class war would not be allowed to sleep. The back-benchers were now beginning to realise their power.

Mr. Asquith, Liberal Member for Paisley, said that he was unable to support, the bill, which introduced an iniquitous and invidious proposal. Unless the Government deleted the first clause, he said that the Liberals would vote against the second reading.

Mr. J. Maxton, Labour Member for Glasgow, pressed the Government to accept the Opposition's ultimatum and appeal to the country on the issue.

The Bill Talked Out.

The trend of the Opposition speeches was heralding the doom of the Government until Mr. J. R. Clynes, Deputy Leader of the House, at the last moment announced their willingness to erase Clause I and substitute a clause whereby the cost of maintaining unemployed in their homes fell on the public funds. Discussion thereupon arose as to whether the insertion of such a clause would make the measure a money bill, which would necessitate complete re-framing. Thus the allotted time for discussion passed and the bill was talked out. This does not mean that the bill is lost, but that the debate is adjourned.

The Government are considering the situation arising from the debate on the Evictions Bill, but have decided that, whatever the outcome, they will not treat the matter as one of confidence.

(It is the opinion at present that the bill will be dropped and a new measure substituted).

The Capital Levy.

Later.

After the Evictions Bill had been got out of the way the House of Commons settled down to the debate on the subject of a capital levy, which was of an academic character as it is recognized that the question is not a live issue in this Parliament.

Lieut.-Col. Walter Guinness, Conservative Member for Bury St. Edmund's, submitted a motion inviting the House to register the opinion that encouragement of enterprise and fruitful use of capital was needed and a capital levy would prove disastrous to employment.

Mr. F. W. Pethick-Lawrence, Labour Member for Leicester, moved an amendment supporting a capital levy.

Mr. J. R. Clynes, the Deputy Leader of the House, recognized that no Government could introduce a capital levy proposal unless they were assured of public opinion. He believed that people would soon see that it was a real and stern necessity.

The amendment was defeated and Colonel Guinness's motion carried by 325 votes to 160.

It is understood in the Lobby of the House of Commons that further consideration of the evictions question has been adjourned to the Cabinet meeting to-day.

Army and Air Force Bill.

Apr. 3.

The House of Commons after an all-night sitting passed the third reading of the Army and Air Force Bill. The Bill was not amended. There were lengthy debates on the questions of abolition of the death penalty in the Army and the use of troops in trade disputes, etc., but all the amendments were rejected. The Government promised to ask the Army Council to inquire into the whole question of the death penalty and to report to the Cabinet.—Reuter.

TRANSPORT STRIKE SETTLEMENT

Immediate Increase of Pay for London Tram and Bus Men: Terms Accepted

London, Mar. 28.

The tram and bus strike has been settled.

Later.

According to the terms of the tram strike settlement, the men will receive an advance of six shillings a week immediately. The remaining two shillings demanded will fluctuate according to the cost of living.

Mar. 29.

The terms of settlement of the tranway strike reached between the companies' negotiating committee and the Transport Workers' Union are subject to confirmation by the Transport Workers' Delegate Conference, which will be held to-morrow, and possibly by a ballot vote of the men. Pending this ratification, the inconvenience suffered by Londoners during the past week will continue, but it is hoped that some tram and bus services will start again on Sunday in the event of the terms proving acceptable.

The provisional settlement carries with it postponement of the threatened Tube strike at midnight. Nevertheless, it is anticipated that a full service on the Underground railways will not be available in the earlier part of to-morrow owing to the difficulty of communicating the postponement of the strike to the men off duty.

The news of to-night's turn in affairs obtained wide publicity, in spite of the comparatively late hour of 9.30, by being broadcast.

Later.

As an outcome of a four-hour sitting, at which Mr. Bevin, the secretary, urged endorsement of the terms of the tram strike settlement, the conference of delegates of the Transport Workers' Union decided that the position should be explained to the strikers to-morrow and a ballot taken on Monday. It is understood that the conference will refrain from any recommendation to the strikers.

It is stated that Mr. Bevin's speech was well received, but that strong opposition developed, chiefly on account of the terms offered to the lower grade men.—Reuter.

London, Mar. 30.

Crowded meetings in London warmly applauded Mr. Bevin, Secretary of the Transport Workers' Union, who advocated acceptance of the offer of the tram and 'bus employers as a great victory.—Reuter.

London, Mar. 31.

The tramwaymen's ballot has accepted the terms of the strike settlement.—Reuter.

THE COAL DISPUTE

Owners' Offer Rejected by Men: Government Called on to Institute Inquiry

London, Mar. 28.

A miners' delegate conference to-day decided to take a ballot on the recommendation to reject the coalowners' final offer to increase the minimum rate of wages from 90 to 34½ per cent. and to give 87 per cent. of any surplus to wages and 13 per cent. to profits instead of the present ratio of 83 per cent. to 17 per cent.

The conference also decided to call on the Government to institute an inquiry. This will not be a strike ballot.—Reuter.

EMPIRE EXHIBITION STRIKE

Work at a Standstill: Police to be Employed to Protect Willing Operatives

London, Mar. 31.

A mass-meeting of the building operatives at the British Empire Exhibition to-day declared an unofficial lightning strike to enforce a claim for an increase of 2d. an hour. Seven thousand men are involved.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 1.

Work on the Empire Exhibition is almost paralyzed by the strike of building operatives, who are marching round the grounds stopping everything.

Later.

During their march through Wembley grounds the strikers met with opposition in the Burma section, but eventually forced the workers to down tools by stone-throwing.

The strikers threatened to pull girl art-students from the scaffolding unless they ceased work. The girls finally consented to cease work, although they protested that they were in no way connected with the strike.

The authorities of the British Empire Exhibition anticipate that many of the strikers who are idle through intimidation will return to-morrow, when 500 police will be drafted to Wembley to protect the willing workers.

On the adjournment of the House of Commons Sir Philip Sassoon (Conservative) deplored the strike at Wembley. He said that he had learned that it would inevitably delay the opening and he severely condemned the action of the strikers, which, he declared, was an insult to the Empire.

Mr. J. H. Thomas, the Colonial Secretary, strongly contradicted the statement that the Exhibition would not open to time.

Police Now in Control.

Apr. 2.

A strong force of mounted and unmounted police have matters well in hand at the Empire Exhibition. They forcibly ejected the chairman of a meeting which the strikers attempted to hold inside the grounds. Artists and others who yesterday were intimidated entered unmolested this morning, but the activities generally are still paralysed. The strike is entirely unofficial. The trade unions are not participating.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 2.

It is estimated that 50 per cent. of the men are now back at work at Wembley.

Apr. 3.

Mr. Murray, the London organizer of the Building Trades Federation, has advised the Wembley strikers to resume work immediately. He pointed out that continuance of the strike would prejudice the pending negotiations with the employers. In the event of failure of the negotiations there would be a national strike on May 1.—Reuter.

LONDON'S TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

An Advisory Committee to Ministry of Transport: Monopolies for Private Undertakings

London, Mar. 28.

In the House of Commons, today, Mr. Harry Gosling, Parliamentary Secretary for the Ministry of Transport, moved the second reading of the London Traffic Bill, introduced in the House of Commons on March 25. Mr. Gosling said that it was merely proposed to constitute an advisory committee to the Minister of Transport and he appealed to the authorities of London to give it a fair trial. He hoped that this would result in the formulation of some agreed larger scheme.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin supported the Bill.

Mr. Percy Harris, Liberal Member for Bethnal Green, moved its rejection on the ground that it was contrary to the principles of local government and conferred a monopoly on private undertakings. He said that London must sooner or later come into line with other cities where traffic was controlled by the municipality.

Mr. Sydney Webb, President of the Board of Trade, arguing in favour of the Bill, emphasized the necessity of dealing with the traffic problem in view of the Wembley Exhibition.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Harris was rejected by 211 votes to 112. The Bill passed the second reading.—Reuter.

THE SINGAPORE BASE

Australia's Views: Abandonment a Serious Prejudice to Peace

Melbourne, Mar. 27.

In the House of Representatives to-day, Mr. S. M. Bruce, the Prime Minister, reviewed the work of the Imperial Conferences. He emphasized Australia's determination to have a voice in the framing of foreign policy while remaining within the Empire. He considered it incomprehensible that some members should regard the Singapore base as unnecessary. He himself was convinced that abandonment of the base would seriously prejudice peace. Its construction would strengthen the League of Nations. The Premier said that he was confident that the House of Commons would ultimately give a decision based on the needs of the whole Empire. The Government, however, did not intend to take alternative action towards provision of a naval base although, if Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's Government's views were not modified, it would be necessary for the Australian Government to consider action to provide what he believed to be an absolutely vital essential. "If we cannot look to Britain we must look to ourselves," Mr. Bruce declared.—Reuter.

AMERICAN CONSULATE AT NEWCASTLE

Settlement Reached in a Long-Standing Dispute: All Cloud Removed

London, Apr. 1.

Every cloud in the relations between Britain and American has been removed by the settlement of the longstanding dispute with regard to the American Consulate at Newcastle. Here the two Consuls were deprived of their exequaturs on the ground that they had used their official position to further the interests of American passenger shipping companies.

The details of the settlement have not yet been officially announced, but there is reason to believe that the Consuls will be free to go wherever their Government chooses to send them.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 2.

Letters have been exchanged between Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and the United States Ambassador with regard to the Newcastle Con-sulate incident. The Prime Minister says that, after further consideration, the Government are not prepared to insist upon the charge against the Consuls of exceeding their authority, and it is therefore recalled.

The Ambassador notifies Mr. MacDonald of the new appointment.—Reuter.

M. POINCARE'S NEW CABINET

Special Choice of Ministers to Relieve Premier of all but Foreign Policy

Paris, Mar. 27.

M. Poincaré has consented to form another Ministry.—Reuter.

Paris, Mar. 28.

The following is an authoritative forecast of the Cabinet:—

M. Poincaré, Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs;
M. Marsal, Minister of Finance;
M. Maginot, Minister of War;
M. Le Trocquer, Minister of Public Works;
M. Loucheur, Minister of Commerce;
M. Daniel Vincent, Minister of Health and Labour;
M. de Jouvenel, Minister of Public Instruction;
Lieutenant-Colonel Fabry, Minister of Colonies;
M. Leygues, Minister of the Interior;
M. Mercier, Minister of Justice;
M. Bokanowski, Minister of Marine;
M. Rimbert, Minister of Agriculture.

Later.

M. Poincaré has made a clean sweep of the old Cabinet except for M. Maginot and M. Le Trocquer, who were directly responsible for the occupation of the Ruhr. Their retention is interpreted as signifying that the occupation of the Ruhr remains the keystone of M. Poincaré's policy. It is generally accepted that the changes in the Cabinet do not indicate a change of principle in regard to foreign or home policy.

The Premier seized the opportunity to eliminate Ministers not enjoying the confidence of the country, thus revivifying the Ministry and galvanizing the majority party on the eve of the elections. M. Poincaré is too much engrossed with his foreign policy to attend to other problems, for which he requires capable men.

Of the newcomers, M. Bokanowski has been the protagonist of retrenchment for the past 18 months; M. de Jouvenel represented France on the League of Nations, and M. Loucheur has been prominent in connexion with reparations in kind and at one time was regarded as a likely successor to M. Poincaré in the Premiership.

Later.

The forecast of the new Cabinet is confirmed except for the following:—

M. Lefebvre du Prey, Minister of Justice;
M. Caups, Minister of Agriculture;
M. de Selves, Minister of the Interior;
M. Marin, Minister of Liberated Regions.

Mar. 29.

The Ministers state that the first meeting of the Cabinet this morning unanimously decided to continue the late Government's foreign policy.—Reuter.

M. Poincare's Ministerial Declaration: The Ruhr and Reparations

Paris, Mar. 31.

M. Poincaré made his Ministerial declaration in the Chamber of Deputies to-day. The Premier said that the Cabinet, formed in the spirit of Republican union and national concord, was determined to pursue unflinchingly the late Government's foreign policy. France would only withdraw from the Ruhr in proportion as Germany fulfilled her obligations. France was most desirous of the earliest possible agreement with her allies and associates on reparations and security. Immediately the experts handed in their report, which the Government strongly hoped would lead to a speedy and general settlement, the Government would be ready to seek with its friends the elements of a definitive solution. Any Power subsequently seeking to disturb European order and to recover lost provinces would arouse universal indignation, and those who barred the road would earn the approval of the whole world. France was not imperialistic, but was given to peace, to which she was entitled. France would march with right toward the new sun, of which the long-delayed rising was awaited feverishly by the world.

At home, M. Poincaré declared, the Government's main task would be drastic financial reform. The new Government would continue its predecessor's policy for the restoration of the devastated regions. But there must not be any inflation, since, until France came to an agreement with her creditors, the situation would require prudent handling. The Government would take steps to prevent a repetition of the recent campaign against the franc.

In conclusion, the Premier stated that the Government's colonial policy would be to develop the wealth of France's oversea possessions.

The statement met with a lukewarm reception from both Houses.—Reuter.

M. Poincare's Reiteration of his Views on the Ruhr Occupation Policy

Paris, Apr. 2.

M. Poincaré's reply to interpellations on the Government's policy in the Chamber of Deputies to-day was interrupted owing to a violent scene, which necessitated a temporary suspension of the sitting.

The trouble arose on a supplementary remark to M. Poincaré's speech by the Minister for War, M. Maginot, as a result of which a Communist, after calling M. Maginot "infamous scoundrel" and "blackguard," was only prevented from assaulting him by the intervention of the ushers.

The Prime Minister declared that the choice of new Members of the Cabinet did not signify a change in foreign and home policy. He reiterated his well-known views regarding the French hold on the Ruhr until satisfaction was accorded. M. Poincaré declared that the receipts from the Ruhr last year exceeded expenditure by Frs. 658,000,000 and estimated that the net surplus in 1924 would be Frs. 3,000,000,000. He emphasized the necessity of united will and perseverance on the part of all Allies in carrying out the Reparations Expert Committees' decisions, but in any event France would not waver in her determination.

The concluding statement was greeted with prolonged cheers.

The Chamber then adjourned.—Reuter.

FRENCH AND GERMAN ELECTIONS

German People's Party Advocating Restoration of Democratic Monarchy

London, Mar. 31.

Interest is deepening in the forthcoming elections in Germany and France. The latter are fixed for May 11, a week later than the German elections. It is stated that the date was deliberately chosen, as it is expected that reactionary successes in Germany would influence the French electors in M. Poincaré's favour.

It is significant in this connexion that the programme of the German People's Party, which was drawn up at a meeting in Hanover presided over by Herr Stresemann, declares that the Party will fight under the old black, white and red colours, and for the restoration of German power and greatness under a democratic monarchy.

It is noteworthy that, while Herr Stresemann is announcing his support of the monarchical programme, the Chancellor, Dr. Marx, speaking in Hanover, declared that a victory for the chauvinistic Nationalist movement in the elections would ruin Germany.—Reuter.

THE MUNICH TREASON TRIAL

Gen. von Ludendorff Acquitted: Other Accused Released Conditionally

Munich, Apr. 1.

Gen. von Ludendorff has been acquitted and Herr Hitler sentenced to five years' detention in a fortress.

Herren Poehner, Kriebel and Weber were also sentenced to five years' detention in a fortress. The accused were ordered to pay costs and a fine of 200 gold marks. The prisoners will be conditionally released after six months.

The costs of the case of Gen. von Ludendorff will be borne by the State.

The other accused, Herren Frisk, Roehm, Brueckner, Wagner and Pernet, were sentenced to 15 months' detention in a fortress and payment of costs and fines of 100 gold marks, but were released immediately on an undertaking of good behaviour until April 1, 1928.

The court was packed to suffocation when the sentences were read. Many were unable to gain admission.

Gen. von Ludendorff was in the full uniform of a General. Some of the other accused were also in uniform, wearing all their war medals and decorations.

The verdict was received quietly by the public, but the accused, especially Gen. von Ludendorff, were loudly cheered by the crowds outside.

The sentences virtually amount to an acquittal, since the period of detention is deducted from them. The closing scenes of the trial were marked by fervert outbursts from Gen. von Ludendorff, to which the spectators responded enthusiastically. He rose when the verdict was announced and protested that his acquittal, when his colleagues were convicted, was an insult to his uniform. The President of the Court sharply rebuked the General, who again became violently excited and demanded to be arrested when the police tried to remove him quietly through the court-yard.—Reuter.

MILITARY CONTROL IN GERMANY

German Reply to Conference of Ambassadors and New Proposals

Berlin, Apr. 2.

The German Government's reply to the Conference of Ambassadors on the question of military control, which was presented last night, suggests that the proposed investigation of German armaments should be carried out by the Council of the League of Nations and also proposes immediate replacement of the Allied Control Commission by a body subordinate to the Council.—Reuter.

Paris, Apr. 2.

The opinion is expressed in French official circles that a very grave situation has been created by the German reply to the Note of the Ambassadors' Conference.

It is stated that for the first time after the Armistice Germany adopts the tone of an independent Power unbound by treaty. It is also intimated that no steps towards resumption of control are possible until after the German elections.—Reuter.

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 29.—The Central Pennsylvania bituminous coal miners have accepted a proposal to renew the present wage scale for three years.—Reuter's American Service.

THE RUSSO-RUMANIAN CONFERENCE

Deadlock as to Bessarabia: Soviet's Demand for a Plebiscite

Vienna, Mar. 31.

A complete deadlock on the subject of Bessarabia marks the Russo-Rumanian Conference, which is proceeding here, the Rumanian delegates having refused to discuss the question, which, they contend, has been settled by the decision of the Conference of Ambassadors.

The Russians have issued a statement declaring that the Soviet Government will never consent to the annexation of Bessarabia by Rumania, contending that the Allies' endorsement of the annexation is invalid, and insisting that the question must be settled by a plebiscite.—Reuter.

NAVAL DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

Japan Willing to Co-operate on Certain Conditions: Battleship Strength

Tokio, Mar. 27.

Japan is prepared to co-operate with the other Powers in any measures tending towards the promotion of peace and the welfare of mankind, according to naval opinion as quoted by the "Yomiuri" in connexion with the resolution passed by the American House of Representatives calling for another naval disarmament conference.

This willingness to co-operate, however, is conditional on Japan's being allowed to retain a defensive force, large and efficient enough to meet the available strength of any potential enemy in Far Eastern waters.

Discussing the possibilities of further naval retrenchment, naval officers, quoted by the "Yomiuri," declare that no one could seriously oppose restriction of battleship strength, or even the total abolition of this first-line ship, seeing that its function is purely for offence. When it comes to the question of auxiliary vessels, the opinion is expressed that in view of the wide differences in the needs and circumstances of the Powers concerned, little progress is likely in the effort to bring about a really effective curtailment in naval strength of this type.

As regards submarines, Japan is reported to be in favour of restriction, but cannot see her way to accepting a proposal aiming at abolition.

Her attitude towards aircraft is understood to be somewhat similar; while she would favour retrenchment, the difficulty of distinguishing between machines used for war and for commercial purposes is held to render any agreement on the amount of retrenchment to be enforced impracticable.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Alleged Slight to Japan.

London, Apr. 1.

The Political Observer of the "Daily Telegraph" professes to discern some resentment in political circles in Japan owing to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, in his statements in regard to disarmament, not mentioning Japan among the Powers which should issue invitations to a general conference. The writer declares that the Japanese certainly will not sincerely co-operate in any international move in which they have not been allotted the position due to their preponderant influence in the East.—Reuter.

Australia and the Pacific.

Melbourne, April 1.

Asked in the House of Representatives to-day whether, in accordance with the defence resolutions of the Imperial Conference he would summon a Pacific conference on further disarmament to be held in Australia, Mr. S. M. Bruce, the Commonwealth Prime Minister, said that, while he did not think a conference would have the best prospect of success if summoned by Australia, he would certainly welcome the suggestion if one of the Great Powers issued the summons and that Australia would be represented.—Reuter.

THE AMERICAN OIL SCANDAL

Attorney-General's Resignation: His Obstructive Attitude to Senate's Inquiry

New York, March 28.

The Attorney-General has resigned. President Coolidge has accepted his resignation.

In a letter to Mr. Daugherty, the President based a request for his resignation on the Attorney-General's refusal to comply with a summons issued by the Senate Investigating Committee for the production of certain papers relating to gun-running on the Mexican border.

Mr. Daugherty in his reply said that he resigned solely in deference to President Coolidge's request.

The President's letter insisted that Mr. Daugherty was an interested party and he was therefore not justified in refusing the information desired by the Senate Committee. The President declared that he was convinced that Mr. Daugherty was unable to give his undivided attention to his duties in the present stress.

Mr. Daugherty replied arguing at great length that President Coolidge's position was untenable.—Reuter's American Service.

Mr. Sinclair Charged With Contempt

Washington, Mar. 31.

Mr. Sinclair has been indicted on ten counts for contempt as a consequence of his refusal to give evidence before the Senate Oil Investigation Committee. Each count relates to a specific question put to Mr. Sinclair before the Committee, which the Federal Grand Jury held to be pertinent.

Mr. Sinclair's attorneys indicate that he will voluntarily answer the charges.—Reuter's American Service.

Washington, Apr. 1.

Mr. Sinclair has pleaded not guilty of contempt of court. He has furnished a bond of $5,000.—Reuter's American Service.

Washington, Apr. 2.

President Coolidge has selected Mr. Harlan F. Stone, dean of the Columbia University School of Law, New York, to succeed Mr. Harry M. Daugherty as Attorney-General.—Reuter's American Service.

OBITUARY

Sir Walter Parratt

London, Mar. 27.

The death is announced of Sir Walter Parratt, K.C.V.O., M.A., MUS. DOC., Master of the King's Music, at the age of 83.

Sir Walter was the organist of St. George's Chapel Royal at Windsor and had been Dean of the Faculty of Music of London University since 1916. Amongst his compositions was the music for the "Tale of Troy." His recreation was chess and for two years he captained the Oxford University chess team against Cambridge.—Reuter.

Sir Charles Stanford

London, Mar. 29.

The death is announced of Sir Charles Villiers Stanford, M.A., MUS. DOC., D.C.L., LL.D., Professor of Music at Cambridge University and Professor of Composition and Orchestral Playing in the Royal College of Music, at the age of 71.

Sir Charles Stanford studied in Germany under Reinecke and Kiel. He produced operas in Germany and conducted concerts in many Continental capitals as well as in London.

Among his works are the operas "The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan," "Savonarola," the "Canterbury Pilgrims," "Shamus O'Brien," "Much Ado About Nothing" and the "Critic."—Reuter.

PARIS, Mar. 29.—A member of the new Ministry, in an interview to-day, stated that M. Sarraut, the former Ministry of the Colonies, would be French Ambassador to Japan.—Reuter.

'ARGENTINE AVIATORS' WORLD FLIGHT

Plans for Long Journey in British Machines: To Cross Atlantic in One Day

London, Feb. 28.

Major Pedro Zanni and Ensign Nesto T. Page, the Argentine aviators who are to attempt a flight round the world next summer, expect to let contracts for a specially designed landplane very shortly. This machine will be used for the first half of their trip. The two aviators have completed an inspection of British aircraft factories and are understood to have selected a builder. They will personally supervise the construction of their aeroplane and also are arranging for the purchase of a seaplane for the water leg.

After a conference with British officials, Major Zanni and Ensign Page have changed their route, avoiding Constantinople and proceeding via Egypt. The present route will be from London to Paris, Rome, Cairo, Bagdad, Calcutta, Rangoon, Shanghai, Tokio, Alaska and San Francisco. From San Francisco the flight to New York will be made in four stages over the transcontinental route and the trans-Atlantic flight will be from St. John's. They hope to make this last leg in one day directly to London. They expect to start about April 15.—Reuter.

BRITISH ROUND-WORLD AIR FLIGHT

Squadron-Leader MacLaren Forced to Descend Lake St. Matthew

Corfu, Mar. 27.

Squadron-Leader MacLaren arrived here to-day. He will resume his flight to Rome to-morrow.—Reuter.

Lyons, Mar. 27.

Squadron-Leader MacLaren has left for Rome in continuation of his world flight.—Reuter.

Rome, Mar. 28.

Squadron-Leader MacLaren has arrived.—Reuter.

London, Mar. 30.

Squadron-Leader MacLaren today left Rome on his way to Athens, which he intends to make without stopping at Brindisi.—Reuter.

Paris, Mar. 31.

Squadron-Leader MacLaren was compelled to descend on Lake St. Matthew, Corfu. Nobody was injured. The machine was slightly damaged. Squadron-Leader MacLaren will continue the flight after repairs.—Reuter.

London, Mar. 31.

Advices from Corfu state that Squadron-Leader MacLaren landed at Garitza Lake, at the south end of Corfu, on Sunday afternoon owing to engine trouble. He telephoned to the British Consul saying that no assistance was required and that he hoped to continue his flight on Monday morning.

Corfu, Mar. 31.

The damage to Squadron-Leader MacLaren's engine prevents the continuance of the flight before spare parts, which have been telegraphed for, arrive from England. The passengers are well.—Reuter.

THE AMERICAN ROUND-WORLD FLIGHT

Closed Japanese Ports Lent as Landing Stages

Tokio, March 28.

The American Government has accepted the Japanese Government's invitation to send two destroyers to the Imperial Closed Ports of Kushimoto and Busan as the Kyoto Imperial Government wishes to express and render assistance to the American aviators who are flying around the world.

The destroyers will accompany the American vessels and render similar assistance.

This is the first time in history that foreign vessels have been permitted to enter these ports.

The destroyers are expected to sail from Yokohama on April 5. Newspaper men will probably be permitted to sail with the destroyers.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE MEXICAN REVOLT

False Report as to Death of Gen. Huerta

Washington, Mar. 30.

Gen. Huerta, the Mexican insurgent leader, has instructed his representative in Washington to inform the press that he is safe and that the story of his disappearance was propaganda in favour of President Obregon.—Reuter's American Service.

SNOWSTORM IN N. YORK

Eastern America Covered with Heaviest Fall of Season: Numerous Accidents

New York, Apr. 2.

The heaviest snowstorm of the season swept the entire eastern section of the country to-day. There were from six to eight inches of snow in New York and elsewhere, hampering traffic and crippling the telegraphs and telephones. There were many accidents in New York. One person was killed and 25 were injured when two elevated trains collided on Long Island.—Reuter's American Service.

FIRE ON A PILGRIM STEAMER

Twelve Hundred Passengers on Board: Vessel Abandoned and Sinking

London, Apr. 2.

Twelve hundred pilgrims for Jeddah are on board the burning British steamer Frangestan, from Bombay, which is making for Port Sudan, where she is due at daybreak to-morrow. She is accompanied by the Clan MacIver, while the steamer Pangistan is proceeding from Port Sudan immediately to render assistance.

The Frangestan first wirelessed stating that a cargo of cotton was on fire in the tween-deck in No. 2 hold, that the weather was calm and that there was no immediate danger. Later the vessel wirelessed that the fire was spreading and becoming serious and that the crew were making every effort to control the outbreak.

Later.

A despatch from Port Sudan states that the Captain of the Frangestan reports that the situation is now very serious and that it may be necessary to abandon ship.—Reuter.

Passengers All Safe.

Port Sudan, Apr. 2.

The Captain of the steamer Frangestan reports by wireless that the fore end of the steamer is fiercely ablaze. All passengers have been transferred to the steamer Clan MacIver. The crew have been ordered to abandon ship.—Reuter.

Alexandria, Apr. 3.

A wireless message has been received from the str. Clan MacIver, stating that the str. Frangestan, which is on fire, has been abandoned and is sinking. The Clan MacIver is bringing all hands to Port Said.—Reuter.

PREFERENTIAL TARIFFS IN AMERICA

Japan's Protest Followed by One from Holland

The Hague, Mar. 28.

The Government have instructed the Dutch Minister at Washington to protest against the enforcement on May 20 of Section 28 of the Merchant Marine Act, providing for preferential tariffs on goods carried by American railways destined for transport in American ships. The protest is based on Article 1 of the Dutch-American Treaty of (illegible)

Note.—The Japanese Government have already registered a protest in this connexion with the United States State Department. It is expected that other countries also will protest.—Reuter.

DISASTERS IN AMERICA

Tornado's Long Casualty List: 25 Virginia Miners Killed

Kansas City, Mar. 29.

Eight persons were killed and 70 injured at Shawnee, Oklahoma, as a result of a tornado which levelled 200 buildings in the best section of the town.

Four hundred students of the High School narrowly escaped, as they were dismissed only a few minutes before the building was demolished by the storm.

One death occurred in Kansas.—Reuter's American Service.

Charlestown, W. Va., Mar. 29.

The 25 miners trapped in the Yukon coal mine are dead.—Reuter's American Service.

CINEMA THEATRE FIRE

Terrible Affair in Mexico City: People Electrocuted or Crushed to Death

Mexico City, Apr. 1.

Twenty-six persons were killed and 56 injured in a fire in a cinema theatre in the suburb of Tacubaya City. A panic followed the outbreak. The majority of the victims were electrocuted by wires hanging neck-high along the main aisle and trampled upon in the wild rush for the exits. It is believed that a short circuit was the cause of the disaster.—Reuter's American Service.

FLOODS IN SPAIN

Collapse of a Bridge: Death Roll of At Least 30

Paris, Mar. 31.

It is reported from Seville that as a result of torrential rains an old bridge over the Guadalquiver, on which a crowd was watching the flood, collapsed under the weight of a crowded motorbus. Thirty dead and 50 injured persons have up to the present been recovered.

Enormous damage was done by the floods elsewhere in Spain. Roads and railways are blocked.—Reuter.

DISASTROUS FLOODS IN POLAND

Warsaw, Mar. 31.

The rising of the Vistula has caused catastrophal floods involving the towns of Cizchocinek and Torun and 38 villages.

Thousands of farmers have lost all their cattle and implements.

Several factories have been partly destroyed and over 70 lives lost.—Reuter.

AMERICAN ARMY VOTE

Washington, Mar. 29.

The House of Representatives has adopted the Army Appropriation Bill, providing for an expenditure of $326,000,000.—Reuter's American Service.

ARMAMENT LIMITATION

Washington, Mar. 27.

Senator Borah lodged a resolution in the Senate to-day calling on the President to invite such nations as he deemed wise to a combined economic and disarmament conference in Washington, especially to consider limitation of the size of submarines to 10,000 tons.—Reuter's American Service.

EXPELLED BISHOP BOUND FOR ROME

Rome, Mar. 31.

The Vatican has been informed that Monsignor Cieplak, whom the Soviet Government have released from prison, has departed for Rome.—Reuter.

REDUCTION OF NAVY AND ARMY OFFICERS' PAY

London, Mar. 29.

Fleet orders state that, in accordance with the stipulation made in 1919 when the new scales of pay were introduced, the pay of Naval officers will be reduced by approximately 5½ per cent. from July 1 in view of the fall in the cost of living.

An Army Order, corresponding to the Fleet Order, has been issued. Officers only are affected.—Reuter.

NARROW ESCAPE OF GREEK PRINCESS

Brunswick, Ga., Mar. 30.

Mr. Leeds, his wife, Princess Xenia of Greece, and their guest Mrs. Thompson, daughter of Colonel Harvey, the former Ambassador in London, had a narrow escape from drowning in a gale in the dangerous St. Simon's Sound, when a launch, in which they were returning from a picnic on the island, sank 200 yards from the shore. The party, in lifebelts, reached the shore in a small dinghy, which they carried astern, after a perilous struggle.—Reuter's American Service.

PERSIA AND A REPUBLIC

Teheran, March 28.

The report that the Mejliss (Parliament of Persia) had decided to depose the Shah is incorrect.—Reuter.

Teheran, Mar. 31.

The Premier has issued a proclamation declaring that a republic is contrary to the Islamic religion and prohibiting all mention of the subject under threat of penalties.—Reuter.

ALL-BRITISH TELEGRAPH SERVICE LOAN

London, Mar. 31.

The House of Commons to-day unanimously passed a resolution sanctioning expenditure not exceeding £400,000 in the form of a loan for a period of 30 years to provide a system of all-British cable and wireless communication with the West Indies and British Guiana under the control of the Pacific Cable Board. The new agreement will replace that with the West India and Panama Telegraph Company, which expires in 1924, under which the States paid a subsidy of £26,000 a year.—Reuter.

INCREASE IN SHIPPING FREIGHTS

London, Mar. 31.

Hull shipowners announce a general increase of 7½ per cent. on freight rates to meet the increased pay of the dockers and additional working expenses abroad.—Reuter.

DECREASE IN BRITISH REVENUE RETURNS

London, Mar. 31.

The revenue of the United Kingdom for the fiscal year ended March 31 totalled £837,000,000, as compared with £914,000,000 last year. The decrease is chiefly accounted for by a fall of £49,000,000 in property and income tax and super-tax. The expenditure chargeable against revenue totalled £789,000,000 as compared with £812,000,000 last year.—Reuter.

FRANCO-JAPANESE RELATIONS

Paris, Apr. 1.

The impending official visit of M. Merlin, Governor-General of Indo-China, to Tokio is described by "La Depeche de Toulouse" as a highly important political event with respect to drawing together France and Japan. The writer hopes that the visit will mark the end of the system of separate interests in the Far East and will be the beginning of a co-operation which will be profitable to French prestige and interests.—Reuter.

THE BRITISH WAR LOAN

London, Mar. 31.

The Government is offering holders of 5 per cent. War Loan to convert their holding into a new 4½ per cent. issue redeemable in 1939-44.

The terms are £103 of the new stock for every £100 of the old.

It is intended at first to convert up to £200,000,000.—Reuter.

AMERICAN INCOME TAX REDUCTION

Washington, Apr. 1.

The Senate Finance Committee has unanimously approved the proposed 25 per cent. reduction in the income taxes payable during the current year.—Reuter.

THREATENED LOCK-OUT IN SHIPYARDS

London, Apr. 1.

The shipbuilders have declared a lock-out on April 10 of members of all Unions whose members in Southampton do not resume work by April 8.—Reuter.

RUHR COAL EXPORTS

Paris, Apr. 1.

Exports from the Ruhr destined to the Allied countries last week totalled 187,000 metric tons of coke and 413,682 metric tons of coal, constituting a record since the signature of the Peace Treaty.—Reuter.

PRINCE OF WALES AT BIARRITZ

London, April 1.

The Prince of Wales has gone to Biarritz for a 10 days' stay to recuperate from the effects of his accident.—Reuter.

RECOVERY OF THE FRANC

London, Apr. 1.

French francs to-day touched this year's high record at 75.70 to the £. The recovery of the Belgian franc is still greater, being quoted to-day at 90.50.—Reuter.

THE INDIAN MENACE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Capetown, Apr. 2.

The Minister of the Interior, moving the second reading of the Class Areas Bill in the House of Assembly, said that it was introduced owing to pressure by Indians on Whites. The Bill only aimed at separation with regard to residence and trading. Every consideration and justice would be shown to an Indian, but the claim of equality could not be allowed. There was no place for the expansion of Indians in South Africa to-day and the so-called Indian menace could only be dispelled by expansion of Whites throughout the Union.—Reuter.

THE SIAMESE LOAN

London, Apr. 2.

Large applicants for the Siamese Loan will receive 10 per cent. and small applicants nil. Dealings commenced at 2 per cent. premium.—Reuter.

SHIPPING BOARD VESSELS AND DIESEL ENGINES

Washington, Apr. 2.

The House of Representatives has passed a bill authorizing expenditure of $25,000,000 on the installation of the Diesel type of engine in United States Shipping Board vessels.—Reuter's American Service.

RUMANIA'S CLAIM TO BESSARABIA

Vienna, Apr. 2.

The Russo-Rumanian negotiations have been definitely broken off. The Rumanians have refused consent to taking a plebiscite to decide the position of Bessarabia.—Reuter.

Sale of America's Highest Building

New York, April 1.

The Woolworth Building, which has 50 storeys and is the tallest office structure in the world, has been sold for $17,000,000.—Reuter's American Service.

British Empire Exhibition Grant Increased

London, March 28.

Mr. William Graham, the Secretary of the Treasury, has given notice of a motion in the House of Commons to increase the Government guarantee in connexion with the British Empire Exhibition by £100,000 to £600,000.—Reuter.

Lisbon to Macao by Air

Lisbon, Apr. 2.

A Portugese airship will depart at dawn to-morrow on the projected flight to Macao.—Reuter.

Eight-Hour Day Bill

London, Apr. 2.

In the House of Commons to-day at question-time, Mr. Thomas Shaw, the Minister of Labour, said that it was hoped to introduce the eight-hour day bill shortly, whether or not foreign countries took similar steps. The Bill would cover textile operatives.—Reuter.

Japanese-Polish Treaty Ratified

Warsaw, Apr. 2.

The Senate has approved the ratification of the commercial and navigation treaty between Japan and Poland.—Reuter.

City of Amsterdam Loan

London, Mar. 31.

Dealings in the new City of Amsterdam Loan commenced around a half per cent. discount.—Reuter.

SATURDAY'S TELEGRAMS

EMPIRE EXHIBITION STRIKE

Majority of Operatives Returning to Work: The Effect of the Delay

London, Apr. 3.

A mass-meeting of the Wembley strikers to-day adopted by a narrow margin a resolution in favour of returning to work. Consequently a vast majority of the men have returned.

Later.

Colonial Liddell, Deputy Administrator of the Empire Exhibition, estimated that 70 per cent. of the men had resumed work. Many had left for good, but a certain number of Londoners would probably return on the morrow.

The effect of the strike is far greater than the three days' delay involved, but until the extent of the delay is ascertained it will be impossible to tell the effect on the opening date.

Sir James Stevenson, Chairman of the Exhibition, speaking at an Australian luncheon to-day, said that he was convinced that the Exhibition would open on April 23.—Reuter.

U. S. LIQUOR LAWS

Members of Crew of Megantic Fined for Smuggling

New York, Apr. 3.

Federal Judge Garvin to-day fined seven members of the crew of the White Star liner, Megantic, $1,500 each for bringing liquor into the country.

Judge Garvin recalled that he only imposed nominal fines on the crew of the Royal Mail liner, Orduna, when they were recently similarly convicted and when he issued a warning that the next time he would inflict heavy penalties on British seamen. He declared that foreign ships owed special obligation to American laws in American waters. Earlier in the day the Cunard and Hamburg-Amerika Lines had paid $275 and $281 respectively for liquor seized on board the Berengaria and the Albert Ballin.—Reuter's American Service.

PLAGUE IN THE PUNJAB

Raging with Heavy Mortality

Lahore, Apr. 3.

Plague is raging virulently here and in Mooltan. Thirty deaths occur here daily. Four colleges have already been closed. The examinations of the Punjab University will probably be postponed. The Commissioner of Mooltan has forbidden the holding of the usual large annual religious fair at an adjacent village.—Reuter.

AUSTRALIA AND JAPAN

Queensland Premier's Confidence that No Clash Need Be Dreaded

London, Apr. 3.

The Queensland Premier, Mr. Theodore, speaking at a luncheon in London to-day, said that he was convinced that Australia respected the Japanese nation. Some said that Japan was a menace to Australia, but he did not think so. Australia could live in neighbourly amity with Japan, which had a great destiny and was undoubtedly entitled and bound to exercise her great influence even in the Pacific, where Australia had a vital interest. He expressed the opinion that there was no danger of a clash between Australia and Japan over any Australian domestic policy.—Reuter.

JAPANESE PRINCE IN RUMANIA

Heartily Welcomed on Arrival in Bucharest: The Prince Regent's Message

Bucharest, Apr. 3.

Prince Naruhiko Higashi-Kuni, brother-in-law of the Emperor of Japan, was welcomed on his arrival here to-day by the King, the Crown Prince, the Cabinet Ministers, Diplomats and the chief State dignitaries. A guard of honour was drawn up at the station. They Mayor of Bucharest presented the customary bread and salt. The King and Prince Higashi-Kuni drove together to the Royal Palace. The whole route was gaily decorated. The Prince lunched with the Royal Family and later laid a wreath on the tomb of the Rumanian Unknown Soldier and visited the Military Museum.

In an interview, Prince Higashi-Kuni declared that he had been instructed by the Prince Regent of Japan to express to the King of Rumania his gratitude for the visit of the Crown Prince of Rumania to Japan.—Reuter.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE IN FRENCH GOVERNMENT

Paris, Apr. 3.

The Chamber of Deputies passed a vote of confidence in the Government by 408 votes to 151 at the conclusion of the debate on interpellations of the Government's policy. M. Herriot, the leader of the Radical-Socialists, was the principal critic, particularly of the reparations policy. He declared that the only solution lay in an international guarantee under the auspices of the League of Nations.—Reuter.

THE EX-CALIPH'S SALARY

Cut Out for Contumacy

Constantinople, Apr. 3.

In the National Assembly to-day Ismet Pasha announced that the ex-Caliph having taken up an open stand against the decisions of the Assembly, the Government had decided not to pay him any more money.—Reuter.

WASTE LAND IN BRITAIN

London, Apr. 3.

The House of Commons devoted the entire evening to agricultural discussion in the course of which Mr. Noel Buxton, the Minister of Agriculture, threatened possible re-introduction of control of undercultivated land. He said that something would be heard about State grants to sugar beet factories during the Budget speech. He hoped that there would be a definite period during which the growers and workers of the important beet industry would be assured of assistance.—Reuter.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS

In the outports can rely on fresh supplies of Films, Plates and Papers and all Photo Sundries by sending to Mactavish & Co., Ld.

The Hongkew Medical Hall, Shanghai.

Developing and Printing by experienced operators.

FIRE ON SWEDISH SHIP

London, Apr. 3.

A telegram from Kalmar states that the Swedish steamer Formosa, bound for Hamburg from Vladivostok with soya beans, has had a fire in her cargo, a portion of which was reloaded and transhipped and has arrived at Kalmar.—Reuter.

HIMROD'S ASTHMA CURE

Over 40 years ago the late Lord Beaconsfield testified to the benefits he received from Himrod's Asthma Cure, and every post brings similar letters to-day.

FAMED FOR 50 YEARS

Sold in tins by all Chemists and Stores throughout the Country. BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

THE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE THROUGHOUT THE EAST

WAC PAINT

Varnishes, Enamels, etc.

Large Stocks Kept in China

Wilkinson, Heywood & Clark

SHANGHAI—HONGKONG

EAST ASIATIC Co., Ld.

(Aktieselskabet Det Ostasiatiske Kompagni)

COPENHAGEN

TO THE EAST.

Japan Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to HONGKONG, SHANGHAI, KOBE, YOKOHAMA, DALNY and VLADIVOSTOCK.

Bangkok Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG, MIDDLESBROUGH and ANTWERP to PORT SAID, COLOMBO, PENANG, SINGAPORE and BANGKOK.

Java Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA and HAMBURG to BATAVIA, SAMARANG and SOERABAYA.

TO SOUTH AFRICA.
Sailings from DENMARK, NORWAY, SWEDEN and BALTIC PORTS to CAPE TOWN, ALGOA BAY, EAST LONDON, DURBAN, DELAGOA BAY and BEIRA.

TO AUSTRALIA.
Sailings from DENMARK, NORWAY, SWEDEN, HAMBURG and LISBON to FREMANTLE, ADELAIDE, MELBOURNE, SYDNEY and BRISBANE.

TO NORTH PACIFIC.
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to ST. THOMAS (with transhipment to the GREATER and LESSER ANTILLES), CRISTOBAL (with transhipment to CENTRAL AMERICAN PORTS), LOS ANGELES HARBOUR, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND (Ore.), SEATTLE, TACOMA and VANCOUVER (with transhipment to other NORTH PACIFIC PORTS).

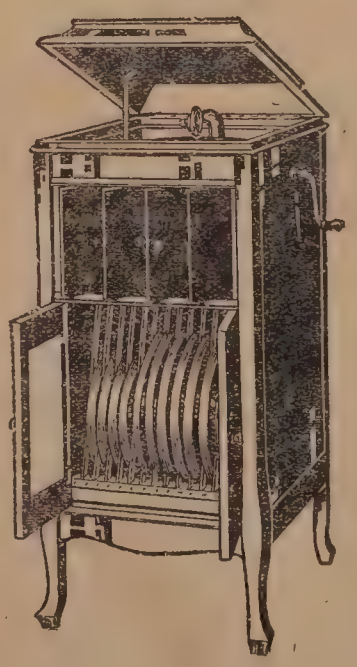
TO SOUTH PACIFIC.
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to ST. THOMAS (with transhipment to the GREATER and LESSER ANTILLES), CRISTOBAL (with transhipment to CENTRAL AMERICAN PORTS), GUAYAQUIL, CALLAO, MOLLENDO, IQUIQUE, ANTOFAGASTA, VALPARAISO, TALCHUANO and CORRAL (with transhipment to other SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS).

For further particulars apply to—
THE EAST ASIATIC CO., LTD., COPENHAGEN. Telegrams: "Orient."
UNITED KINGDOM—JAPAN and BANGKOK LINES: Escombe, McGrath & Co., London, Glasgow, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, Grimsby, Middlesbrough, Greenock, Immingham and Southampton.
JAVA, SOUTH AFRICA and AUSTRALIA LINES: J. E. HYDE & Co., London.
PACIFIC LINES: United Baltic Corporation, Ltd., 158 Fenchurch Street, London. Tel.: "Orientcake."
SHANGHAI.—The East Asiatic Co., Ltd.

THE NEW

COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA

TRIBUTE FROM THE MASTER MUSICIANS



Model No. 30a - £70.

Sir HENRY J. WOOD

"I consider this instrument the greatest contribution to the advancement of music since the original invention of the gramophone itself."

Dame CLARA BUTT

"I feel that you have in this invention easily placed the Grafonola several years in advance of any other known gramophone."

Sir DAN GODFREY

"There is something about it which is different to all other gramophones, to my mind, very natural and satisfying in its fidelity."

Mr. HAMILTON HARTY

(Conductor, Halle Orchestra)

"Your instrument, by comparison, makes every other gramophone old fashioned and untrue."

ROBINSON PIANO CO./LD.

FROM THE FOUR WINDS

AN ENGLISH WANDERER IN AMERICA

American Railways: Purely Running but Heavy Cost: America's Bewildering Mass of Gold: Inrush of Immigrants: Mr. Doheny and the Teapot Dome Inquiry

From Our Own Correspondent.

San Francisco, Feb. 24.

"We have to take off our hats to the Americans in the running of these things," said an old Shanghailander to me the other day, as he stepped off the train after a trans-continental trip en route from London to Shanghai again. And it is true. What the mercantile marine is to the British Isles, the railways are to America. They are without question the most efficiently run lines in the world.

While in Seattle the other day, however, I learned to my surprise—and it may surprise a good number of your readers also—that the railways of the northwest are not earning at the present time a fair return upon their property. They are doing a little better than they were during the disastrous days following the war, because the present law, though not as liberal as it might be, was intended to permit them to live. But a large percentage of thinking Americans are concerned about most of the main roads in the country. Railways, like any other business institutions, in this country or any other, cannot be operated efficiently unless this can be done at a profit. Nobody continues long to give something for nothing. Ever since the war American railways have been suffering from high costs that they cannot materially reduce and low income—and if this is not remedied it must result in nationwide misfortune. The first danger, of course, is that if the money invested in railways does not earn a reasonable return, no improvements can be made; nor can the property be maintained at a high level, for the simple reason that additional capital will not be forthcoming.

The second danger is that if the lines continue to run on a narrow margin of profit, or none at all, their demands as purchasers and employers will be so cut down as to ensure general calamity. And American railways employ more labour than any other industry. They employ some two million employees, with a wage demand of something between two and a half and three billion dollars annually. Then railways are also heavy purchasers. Their bill for supplies and materials is over one and a half billion. They also use one-third of the bituminous coal and approximately 40 per cent. of the iron and steel the country produces, and the same percentage of the national lumber supplies.

It is clear, then, that any diminution in this demand will bring progressive paralysis upon all industry.

A LOST CHINESE BANK NOTE.

At a club the other day I was introduced to a man who had just come over from China, and knowing that I had spent some time in that country, he told me that when last in Hankow he picked up a piece of "Chinese paper with some characters on it," and "as it looked as if it might be of some value, he put it in his wallet." Then he forgot it. He duly left China, arrived in America, and had not shown the peculiar document to anyone but myself since he had arrived home. I recognized it at once as a Chinese cheque—the familiar flimsy tissue, bearing the chop, as far as my nearly-forgotten knowledge of characters would allow me to determine, of a local Chinese bank at Tientsin. The amount was for Tientsin Tls 491·65. The cheque is now back on its way to China, and somebody up North will have a pleasant surprise when it is delivered to him.

The funny part of it is, that the man who showed me this valuable piece of tissue paper was himself a banker although he had not been in banking in China. He was well versed in the art in America, however. Indeed, he had for years been a teller in one of the largest institutions in New York, and was, moreover, a teller of some funny stories. One would interest the gentlemen who follow the business of the law round Yuenmiugyuen Road and in the neighbourhood of the British Post Office.

"You know," said the bank teller, "lawyers make more mistakes in drawing cheques than any other people. Not only is a lawyer likely to make a difference between the body and the figure of a cheque, and to forget to sign it, he is even likely to forget to endorse a cheque when he sends it to the bank to swell his credit." Hard lines on the lawyers, but very likely true!

BEWILDERING FIGURES IN GOLD.

Speaking of money, I am reminded of some astounding figures I was shown a day or two ago. I do not know whether they are as yet published. They refer to the gold position in America, and show that imports of gold from the beginning of the war to the end of December last, a period of nine and a half years, amounted to the staggering total of $3,562,000,000 an average of $375,000,000 a year against an average of $76,000,000 a year in the 10 years preceding the war. From July 1, 1914, to December 31, 1923, America's exports of gold averaged $166,000,000 per year. If your readers will bear with me a moment longer, I should like to say also that during the 9½ years, in addition to an excess of imports over exports of about $2,044,000,000, America produced from her own mines about $654,000,000 worth of gold. So that it will be seen that the United States could boast a net total of $3,698,000,000 of gold accumulations since the beginning of the war up to the end of 1923.

The reader will naturally be inclined to ask, "Well, what in the name of faith has become of this net total of this vast sum of money?" This is a question I cannot satisfactorily answer. But I see by the latest circulation report of the Treasury Department that the total value of coin and bullion in the country on Jan. 1 of this year was $4,247,000,000, while a similar statement for July 1, 1914, stands at $1,890,657,000, indicating an increase during the 9½ years of about $2,356,500,000. Then if you subtract this 9½ year increase of $2,356,500,000 of coin and bullion in the country from the net gain of imports plus production $3,698,000,000 during the same period, you find a total of $342,000,000 in excess of the amount added to the circulation. This corresponds rather closely with the annual estimate of the amount used in the industries and arts, since the Government records of "new gold" (exclusive of that obtained from old jewellery, plate, etc.) supplied to the manufacturers of the country by the New York Office, the Philadelphia Mint and a limited number of private refineries and banks averages about $38,000,000 per annum during the period in question.

It may further be of interest to note in this whirl of millions where the gold came from and where some of it went when it left America—I have figures only for 1923, however. Of the $322,715,812 imported last year.

$147,000,000 came from Great Britain
50,000,000 came from Germany
49,000,000 came from Canada
19,000,000 came from France
13,000,000 came from Netherlands
6,000,000 came from Mexico.

Of the $28,643,417 of gold exported.

$[illegible] were to India
[illegible] were to Mexico
[illegible] went to France
[illegible] went to Hongkong.

HEAVY IMMIGRANT RUSH EXPECTED

America is still regarded as the Eldorado of immigrant tendencies can be a guide. I see that vessels of 16 steamship companies are prepared for what is expected to be the greatest immigrant rush in the history of Canada and the United States since before the war. The movement is expected to begin about the middle of March. Starting with the present season, vessels of seven lines which formerly have called only at American ports will also make Halifax a port of call.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT WITH LETHAL GAS.

Some months ago a Chinese was sentenced to death for murder of a fellow country-man in the state of Nevada. He has just been executed, and had the distinction of being the first to meet death by a method entirely new—that of lethal gas. Newspapers have been giving some weird stories of the manner in which he met his death, but it is certain that this stoical Oriental passed out with much less physical suffering than he would have had it fallen to his lot to be executed in Nanking, for example. The State of Nevada is, therefore, the first state to adopt this merciful method of execution. "If sentences were made to be executed after a certain day," remarks one writer, "the 'condemned cells' arranged for the use of gas, and the murderer installed in them not knowing when he will die, the gas could be turned on as he goes to sleep for the night, and he would die without fear or suffering." Apparently that is the best that could be done.

DOHENY OF THE TEAPOT DOME SCANDAL.

Telegraphic reports will doubtless have kept your readers aware of the scandal in the oil world which is developing in what is called the Teapot Dome scandal. Whether this is a clever political move or not is not at the moment clear, and whatever comment I might offer at this time would probably be out of date by the time it reaches the "North China." But there is one feature which is extraordinarily interesting as showing the weakness of human nature. This is in the psychology of Mr. Doheny, the oil magnate, and the principal actor in this oil drama. Doheny is shown to be possessed of an inordinate passion for collecting ex-Cabinet ministers as other people might collect old masters. He has almost a mania for power. As one writer puts it, "he makes war on Great Britain in Ireland: he juggles a Mexican republic in one hand and an Irish republic in the other." All his power, however, appears to have suddenly crumbled about him, and for the first time he is facing an unpleasantly great power in the quizzing he is getting at the hands of the Government.

Doheny is a poor prospector who "struck it rich." He is a man who lends $25,000,000 to the President of Mexico: who lends, or gives, $100,000 to a Cabinet member from whom he expects a valuable lease: who sends about money in suit cases: who tears signatures from notes which he never intended to collect from high officials: who almost boasts that he will make a hundred million dollars from naval oil lands. All this is done because he has a mania for power. He "employs" ex-Cabinet officers for the sense of power that it gives to have ex-Secretaries of the Treasury, ex-Secretaries of the Interior and ex-Attorney-Generals working for him. If he is crossed in the slightest matter he flies into apoplectic. A man with 60 millions of dollars, and another hundred millions in sight, who deals with foreign governments on a level of equality is, after all, not in the habit of being crossed, and the Government inquiry is certainly rubbing him up the wrong way.

He suavely tells the investigating committee that he saw nothing whatever out of place in the things that he has done for the achievement of his ends, no matter what they appear to be to the public. But people with a mania for power, as you occasionally see in Shanghai, never do have a sense of the moral quality of their own acts. When he gives in an offhand manner $250,000 to the Irish cause it was probably simple love of the display of power. To him there is no difference in dealing with the American government, or the Irish government or the Mexican but neither must stand in his way. At the moment, however, it looks as if Mr. Doheny is unconcernedly facing a most miserable array of facts.

HOW THE PRESIDENT SPENDS HIS TIME.

In national affairs public interest is absorbed in the approaching Presidential election of 1924. President Coolidge will be returned, I believe. No matter what bubbles there may be on the surface of national life, it is perfectly clear that the average voter realizes that in the successor to President Harding the country has a worker, whose sincerity of motive in all that he does, eschewing the ordinary "political" method of doing things, is slowly winning him the admiration of all classes, even including political enemies. The most striking fact in his office is that he cuts out all non-essentials, and "toadies" to no class. I was interested in seeing what a variety of public questions he personally attended to during one month, things which might quite easily have been delegated to others, but which he evidently considered of sufficient vital importance as to be handled directly in the chief executive's office. They ranged from personal letters to important charities to the holding of receptions, where he had to shake hands with 4,000 people.

OUR PROSAIC AGE

The Post Office and Its Wares: Suggestion of Advertisement: Rhymes of the Times

From Our Own Correspondent.

London, Feb. 20.

This is a prosaic age! It is now suggested that the Post Office should advertise its wares. People do not realize what a wonderful organization it is, and if the thing were properly pushed, I feel sure that the sale of postal orders and dog licences would go up by leaps and bounds. For instance, who could resist something on these lines?

STAMPS! STAMPS! STAMPS!
ALL COLOURS AND PRICES.

Beautiful engravings of His Majesty the King in green, purple, and red.
Every edge is beautifully pinked and our gum is rich in vitamines.
Read what our clients say:—
Mr. B: Their flavour recalls the delicious fish glue of 40 years ago.
Countess X:—Your three-ha'penny ones are just too sweet.
Lord K:—Please send me three more.

Or perhaps a little lesson in economy would better attract the business man:—

Must you go to Wigan?
Can't you Write?
(See What We Save You).

3rd return to Wigan	43/9d.
Cab to Victoria	2/6d.
Smelling Salts	9d.
Hotel Bill	7/4d.
Tips, etc.	5d.
	54/9d.

Do it by post and save 54/7½d.
Letters delivered punctually in our own vans. Right to the very door.

Our prosaicness is even evidenced in our poetry. The point of immediate practical importance is the successor to the world-famous, but now moribund lyric, "Yes, we have," etc. I am able on unimpeachable authority to announce that the masterpiece elect is on the way, and that its appropriate title is "When it's night time in Italy it's Wednesday over here." The first verse is said to be the worst:—

When it's night time in Italy, it's Wednesday over here.
Oh, the onions in Sicily make people cry in California.
Why does a fly? When does a bee?
How does a wasp sit down to have his tea?

I am glad to think I have given you ample warning.

THE DEATH OF ROMANCE.

And romance is dead too. Strangely enough men do not seem to appreciate the medals that cost them most to win. I know only one who does. He was a flying officer, and he has the V.C., the D.S.O. and the M.C., without counting so many multi-coloured ribbons from foreign nations that he could make a patchwork quilt of them. I asked him one day to tell me about his decorations.

"I shall never forget the night I won this," he said, picking one up. "The rain was beating down, and I'd been soaked through for hours. Suddenly I felt a bite—"

"A what?" I said, thinking I had misheard. "What medal is this—the Croix de Guerre?"

"Oh, dear, no," he said. "It's one I got in a fishing competition at Southend."

Then he showed me another he'd won for being third in a pig show, and another he got for never having been found out in telling a lie at school.

"But what about the V.C., and all these others?" I said.

"Oh, them! Well, they're there. I can't even push them into a penny-in-the-slot machine. But I'll tell you what, I'd swap the whole lot of them for a decent job like the one I threw up to go to the Front."

GILBERT AND SHAKESPEARE.

I notice in the "Bolton Evening News" the following passage:—"I heard a very interesting discussion in the last few days as to whether Gilbert's words or Sullivan's music will survive the longer? I think there is little doubt the music will, because already many of Gilbert's caustic allusions are getting pointless to the present generation."

Of course, it is bound to come—someone will try and bring Gilbert up to date. It may be written in humour, but I notice the "Daily News" has been alluding to the fact that the railway staff of the Great Western are about to produce "The Gondoliers," and it suggests they might bring the libretto up to date on the following lines:—

Rising early in the morning
We despatch the workmen's trains
Then, most decorously yawning,
We retire to bed again.
After breakfast, if inclined,
We begin our daily grind,
First we stand in groups together
And discuss the awful weather,
And consign the latest Government to blazes,
Then if business isn't pressing
We agree it's most distressing
That the railway line is overgrown with daisies;
But, of course, that's really no concern of ours,
For it's not a porter's duty to pick flowers;
He has quite sufficient troubles which begin
When the nine o'clock for London ambles in;
Then we do our solemn duty,
With nice regard for Beauty,
And we lend a willing ear to any damsel in distress,
While the creatures of the male sex
And the plain ones of the frail sex
If they don't know when the train goes
Well, they've simply got to guess.
What though passengers bewail
When they're travelling by rail
There are pleasures for the porter and of troubles there are none
And the culminating pleasure which we treasure beyond measure
Is the gratifying feeling that the public has been done.

With a little ingenuity on these lines we could bring Gilbert and Shakespeare and everyone else well up to date.

RIGHT TO JURY TRIAL RESTORED

Lord Haldane's Bill

Provisions for dispensing with the holding of assizes in places where unnecessary, as a measure for saving expense and judicial time, are contained in the Administration of Justice Bill introduced in the House of Lords by the Lord Chancellor.

The first clause of the measure, based on the report of the Committee of Inquiry presided over by Mr. Justice Swift, gives power to the Lord Chief Justice, with the concurrence of the Lord Chancellor, to dispense with the holding of assizes on any particular circuit at any place in which there is on that occasion no substantial amount of business to be transacted. The permanent abolition of any assize town is not authorised.

Restrictions imposed as a war-time measure on the right to trial by jury in High Court civil cases are dealt with. The Act was criticised as restricting the right unduly and as being obscure in its terms. The present clause reproduces in the main the position as it was before the war, subject to the exception that trial without a jury may be ordered by the Court if in the opinion of the Court "the cause is more fit to be tried without a jury," but an absolute right to trial with a jury is preserved in certain cases.

THE REDDING PIT DISASTER

One of the Most Tragic in Coalmine History: Men Trapped by Inrush of Water: Heroic Rescue Work: Who Was to Blame?

By Our Trade Union Correspondent.

Manchester, Feb. 19.

The Ministry of Mines' inquiry into the causes of the Redding Pit disaster has just finished after a hearing lasting nine days. Sir Thomas Mottram, Chief Inspector of Mines, presided, and sitting beside him was Mr. E. Shinwell, M.P., the new Minister of Mines. The latter, at the time of the disaster, publicly stated that the miners drowned in the pit were murdered by the management. Mr. Robert Smillie, M.P., who cross-questioned the witnesses in the interests of the working miners, first obtained an assurance from the mineowners that no workman giving evidence should be victimized. The evidence given at the inquiry threw additional light on the causes that led up to the tragedy and on the desperate efforts made to rescue the various groups of men immured in those sections of the pit cut off by the water. The story of the catastrophe is one of the most moving in the annuals of British mining.

THE SCENE OF THE ACCIDENT.

Number 23 Pit, Redding, is situated about 2½ miles from Falkirk in ground honeycombed with the waterlogged workings of old worked-out mines. It is worked by Sir Andrew Nimmo & Co. The seams of coal lie beneath the old Coxrod Pit, a worked-out mine full of stagnant water. Between these and the Redding Pit there was a geological "fault" consisting of a natural sandstone barrier. The miners called it the "Universal Dyke." Some of them, and the managers of the mines, believed that this fault was a reliable barrier between the Redding Pit and the old water-logged workings. Others doubted it. The maps and plans of the old workings were known to be sketchy and imperfect.

The coal seams in the Redding Pit converged on the main shaft at an acute angle. The highest gallery was the Dublin section where the miners were stripping the coal away from the Universal Dyke. For a long time water had been coming through the roof of this section in increasing quantities. A witness stated that it ran down the main haulage way 2½ inches deep, and a special channel had been cut to drain it off. The under manager admitted that a fireman had called his attention to it and had also pointed out that it was foul smelling. He stated, however, that his sense of smell was deficient and he could not verify that. In his opinion at the time it was water from surface drainage.

Just before the night shift ceased work on the morning of September 25 a fireman gave a note to a 19-year old youth and told him to take it to the under manager's house. At that very moment the youth heard a "thump" in the distance and the air current reversed. The fireman walked off in the direction of the sound and was drowned. The youth delivered the note. It informed the under-manager that water had broken through into the Dublin section and was knee deep on the slope. The pumps could not cope with it, and would the under-manager come at once to the pit. In 30 minstes he was there, but on descending found 14 ft. of water at the pit bottom and the entrance to the main workings cut off.

A DESPERATE STRUGGLE.

Witnesses at the inquiry gave evidence of the desperate struggle for life that had taken place in the pit during the intervening half hour. Two or three men fought their way to the pit bottom, climbed the pit stair, and tumbled into the cage as it descended. Most of the others desperately raced up the slanting roads away from the rising waters. Brave men turned back to warn comrades and were drowned. Millions of gallons of dirty water poured down from the break in the Dublin section, raced through the Ball seam, and filled up all the lower portions of the mine, cutting off all means of ingress to the slanting galleries at the top of which the trapped miners took refuge. When the manager went down again an hour later there was 36 feet of water in the shaft and the ingress to all the workings was cut off. Ninety men were in the pit.

Some distance from the pit there was an old disused shaft in a potato field. Old workings connected to it were known to touch old workings in the Redding Pit. Miners went to it to see if it was possible to rig up tackle and commence rescue operations. They heard voices, speeded up their efforts, and in a few hours brought up 21 men. Kirkwood, a veteran miner, and a brother of the Labour Member of Parliament of the same name, had led them to safety. He had some idea of the lie of the old workings and had broken down an intervening wall.

SOME SPLENDID RESCUES.

The rescued men said they had seen other miners struggling through the rising waters to higher levels. The only way to reach them was by cutting a long passage from the old pit. Gangs of miners immediately started to do this, but the days passed, the job seemed endless, and most people thought that if any miners had escaped the water they would have long since perished with the deadly black damp. Still the rescuers carried on their task and nine days after the disaster their efforts were splendidly rewarded. A faint knocking was heard in the distance. More men were rushed down and 30 minutes later the rescued, a party of five, were shaking hands with their deliverers. In the last spurt, 25 yards of roadway had been excavated in less than 30 minutes; a world's record.

All the food the rescued men had between them was a half slice of bread yet they were in good condition and had under-estimated the length of their ordeal by four days. On reaching the pit head they remembered the farewell messages they had written on the walls and were insistent that they should be immediately erased. The wife of one of them had kept a copper of water hot for her husband from the day of the disaster, confident that he would be rescued.

THE FINAL TRAGEDY.

The finding of these men encouraged the rescuers to carry on their good work with more energy than ever. At one time there was almost a riot at the pit head, caused by the efforts of men to get down and take part in the good work. It was regarded as almost certain that two men, an uncle and his nephew, had reached a point above the water. Desperate efforts were made to reach them. Naval divers were brought from Rosyth, but were unable to push through the narrow galleries of the mine to the imprisoned men. Bottles containing food and good advice were released in positions below the water that might enable them to rise where they would be of use. It was of no avail. Nor was it possible to reach them by cutting a road. Pumping was the only method, and after a hundred million gallons had been pumped out the water in the mine only subsided eight feet. The rescuers got through on October 19, 24 days after the disaster. They found the two men dead of starvation and exhaustion. Footsteps in the mud showed how the doomed pair had followed the subsiding waters only to die a few days before the rescuers reached them.

The evidence at the inquiry revealed an even deeper tragedy. Witnesses told how, in another part of the mine, arrows were found traced on the dusty walls of old workings showing the way a party had gone. Following these guides the searchers came to 11 dead miners in an old gallery. They were without tools, and had cleared a passage with their bare hands 35 feet long into an old working, but starvation and exhaustion had killed them one by one until they were all dead. This evidence caused a great sensation.

OWNERS' POSITION.

It had been alleged that the management at the pit threw obstables in the way of the rescuers. The inquiry proved that these allegations were groundless. Everything possible was done to get the men out. Counsel for the dependants of the dead miners admitted this, but charged the management with culpable negligence in allowing the coal to be stripped from the face of the Dyke. Miners gave evidence that a huge piece of coal had been burst from the face of the Dyke several months before. They believed this was caused by the pressure of water behind. The pit management claimed that the Dyke, which was proved to be 14 feet thick, was a sufficient barrier to prevent flooding in the Redding Pit. They alleged that the cause of the disaster was the presence of an old sump in it, cut by the miners of the old water-logged pit and not shown in the plans of the workings. Had the existence of this sump been known, no disaster would have happened for they would not have stripped the coal from its face. They contended that the disaster was a pure misadventure.

Reference was made to an old suggestion that the owners of the pits in the area should combine to sink a shaft and pump the whole area dry. The miners in other pits in the vicinity were said to go in daily fear of their lives through fear of flooding. Much comment has been caused by a statement made by Sir Andrew Nimmo at the time of the disaster. He said that he was unable to understand it, as the pit was an abnormally dry one. Most of the evidence at the inquiry hinged on whether the notorious wetness of the pit arose from surface drainage, or percolation from the water-logged pit above.

MORE STRINGENT RULES NEEDED.

One of the witnesses called was Sir Richard Redmayne, the former Chief Inspector of Mines. In his opinion the only way to prevent a recurrence of the disaster was to pump out all the water from the disused workings above the Dyke. Mining M.Ps contend that there should be much more stringent regulations to ensure the safety of workers in British coal pits. Disasters of one kind and another are getting steadily more common and a good deal of the evidence given in the subsequent inquiries is very disquieting.

In the whole of this tragic story there is only one redeeming feature and that is the way in which the humble rescuers stuck to their self-imposed task when everyone else had abandoned hope. The measure of success that crowned their efforts will be a beacon in the future to all those who hope when hope is dead, and fight on undismayed when reason whispers that the battle is lost.

HUGE SEA MONSTER

Sea Serpent 30ft. Long and Head as Big as a Horse's Seen in Fiji

A message from Suva, Fiji, dated January 25, says:—Once again the giant sea serpent, so often seen, or reported in story and legend, has come to light. On this occasion there seems no reason to doubt the authenticity of the informants. Nurse Davis was on a professional visit to the Methodist Mission station on the island of Taviuni in October. At 2.30 on October 9, she was looking out over the Somo Straits, which lie between the island of Taviuni and that of Vanua Levu, when she was horrified to see a huge head, like that of a horse, rear itself out of the water. The head was followed gradually by a big burly body, thick, and of a dull brown colour, until some 30ft. of this fearsomt thing reared and swayed above the waves. Nurse Davis' cries brought the Rev. Mr. Lelean to the scene, and through his field glass he had an excellent view of the serpent. Slowly and silently the huge monster slid underneath the waves, while the spectators stood in awestruck silence. The lady was shortly afterwards removed on business to the Lau Group, and only lately had an opportunity of bringing the news to the capital. From the description the snake is very like that reported not long ago near Noumea by a sailing vessel.

WRITING DONE BY PLANTS

Wonderful Device of Indian Scientist

Sir Jagadis Bose, the famous Indian scientist, well known for his discoveries of the sensibilities of plants, has devised an apparatus by which the plant itself is able to write its own digestive history!

A "Daily News" reporter was privileged to inspect the apparatus in London. A section of a plant is contained in a small bottle of liquid, in which is carbonic acid gas. A glass pipe leads from the bottle and ends in a mercury valve. This is connected electrically with an automatic recording machine.

When the plant assimilates food it gives off oxygen. The oxygen forces up the mercury valve, establishes an electric circuit, rings a bell, and operates a pen upon a moving roll of paper.

The spectacle of a plant ringing its own bell after each mouthful of food is sufficiently remarkable, but the results which may come from it are more remarkable still.

WATCHING GROWTH.

At the Bose Institute in Calcutta experiment are being made with this instrument combined with a second apparatus which magnifies the rate of growth of the plant a hundred million times. Thus the exact effects of food on plants can be measured.

In this way it is hoped to increase the rate of growth of plants, to find manures which will increase fertility and food values. It is really an attempt to produce something like that which H. G. Wells imagined when he wrote "The Food of the Gods."

Photography shows the last words of a tree. It is the chart of the tree's heart-beat. An arrow shows where chloroform was administered. The heart suddenly stimulated beat faster at first; the dose increased, the heart beat slows down until the heart stops beating. The tree is poisoned.

HUNGER AND UNREST.

Sir Jagadis recognizes that the world's problem is largely one of food. Unrest is mainly hunger Any solution of the problem of the world's food supply must have a great effect on unrest everywhere.

Especially is this the case in India, where a single dry year means starvation for many hundreds of thousands. That was one of the reasons for the foundation of tht Bose Institute, where the fruits of research can be thrown open to the world free, where problems are considered as world problems, and their solutions made available to all.

Sir Jagadis is now busy on the proofs of a new book dealing with these researches. Soon he will return to India to carry on his search for the "Food of the Gods," or, as he more exactly puts it. "to discover some way in which science may help us to utilise the inexhaustible resources of India for the benefit of humanity."

THE HEART OF VOLTAIRE IN A PEDESTAL

Investigation of Paris Mystery

London, Feb. 20.

In the presence of the Minister of Fine Arts, a bronze plate bearing the inscription "the Heart of Voltaire," found on a pedestal designed for a plaster statue of the great French thinker in the National Library, was removed this afternoon and disclosed a hollowed space containing a small wooden box. This being opened, a large gilded wooden heart was found inscribed "Heart of Voltaire—died Paris—May 30, 1778."

When the receptacle was shaken a liquid was heard in its cavity, undoubtedly that in which the heart is preserved. The Minister refrained, however, from opening the wooden heart. The bronze plate bore an inscription indicating that the pedestal in which the heart was found was given to the National Library by the heirs of the Marquis de Villette, in 1864. —Reuter.

JAPANESE opinion on the action of the British Cabinet with reference to Singapore is well shown in the following extract from the "Yomiuri":—The abandonment of the Singapore naval base has shown that Mr. Macdonald is a courageous and able statesman. Although the Labour party is in a minority in the House of Commons, it has achieved a splendid work on such a great question. It is an object lesson to statesmen that even a minority can do anything if it is thoroughly determined.

The Daily Risk of Blood Poison

ZAM-BUK THE GREAT ANTISEPTIC HEALER.

HOW often do you hear of limbs being crippled and lives sacrificed through neglect or improper treatment of everyday injuries?

To promptly dress all cuts, scratches, wounds, etc., with Zam-Buk prevents dangerous complications. Zam-Buk is the powerful herbal antiseptic balm which kills and excludes disease-germs, and prevents festering and blood-poison. Other properties in Zam-Buk soothe away pain and grow healthy new skin in a wonderful way.

For eczema, heat sores, ulcers, ringworm, piles, bad legs, sore feet, abscesses, bites, stings, burns, etc., Zam-Buk is equally valuable. all dealers.

Zam-Buk

ZAM-BUK Alone Saved His Arm!

Mr. J. D. McCormack, 30, Egan St., Newtown, Sydney, says:—"Some time ago I slipped and fell, severely injuring my elbow, and gashing my forearm. Blood-poison set in and the arm became terribly swollen and inflamed. For eight months I suffered agony, but nothing would heal the wound. Hearing about Zam-Buk I decided to try the balm. It stopped the swelling and inflammation in a wonderful way, and soon had all poisonous matter drawn out of the wound. Zam-Buk's remarkable healing, without a doubt, saved my arm."

FREE FROM ALL ANIMAL FATS. I.Z. 400.

Agents:—Messrs. Wakefield & Co. (China), Ltd., S. Y. Sheng Building, Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

SPECIAL ARTICLES

RELIGION AND OUR MENTAL POWER

A Sermon Preached by the Rev. A. N. Rowland in Union Church Shanghai, on March 23, 1924

"(Jehovah) smote the men of Bethshemesh, because they had looked into the ark of the Lord." (1 Sam. 6, 19). "And the ark of Jehovah remained in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months, and Jehovah blessed Obed-edom and all his household." (2 Sam. 6, 11).

This is the first of a short series of talks on the faculties of our mind and their bearing on religion. Various powers contend or co-operate within us and two of [illegible] and Awe. One seems to gain at the other's expense, and true religion depends upon their equilibrium, each having its proper place and pull. The subject is illustrated in these mysterious stories of the ark, how it blessed the house of Obed edom because he treated it with reverence, how it brought a curse upon the people of Bethshemesh because they peered into it with curious eyes.

What then is curiosity? It is the desire of effort of the mind to find the whereabouts or wherefore of things: it prompts the eager questions of early boyhood, it leads youth on to the highroad of learning. By following the spirit of inquiry and experiment nations like the Greeks have proved to be the creators of civilization and the benefactors of mankind. But when curiosity has been neglected peoples have grown dull and idle and have sunk into decay.

FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

Curiosity then is an indispensable element of human progress, yet the Bible connects it pointedly with the root of sin. It was the curiosity of Eve that led her astray. "She saw the tree was to be desired to make one wise." She and Adam both longed to know the result of eating fruit that was forbidden to become wise in their own way and at any cost. The result was a knowledge they would have given anything to forget.

Even the Greeks, with their bent towards curiosity, had a legend akin to the story of Eden, how Psyche (the soul) was loved and visited by Eros, but forbidden to seek his face or to probe his secret. At length, however, she yielded to her curiosity and lit her lamp one night. Alas, her pleasant dream was shattered, her delight for ever lost. There is then a boundary to certain kinds of knowledge, which if we cross we come to harm. And the other side of that boundary is the realm of awe.

Let us look at Awe for a moment, that is called in Proverbs "the fear of the Lord." It is the consciousness that we are in the presence of a secret that is beyond the reach of curiosity where probing hands and peering eyes are out of place. Under the sway of curiosity we take off our coat to free our hands, but under the spell of awe we take off our hat and fold our hands instead. Our mind turns from the picture of Eve lingering by the tree and gazing at the thing forbidden, to the picture of the Seraphim who, in the presence of the Almighty, veil their eyes and feet in reverence. Human [illegible] known the presence of these [illegible] forces, and the taste and art of mankind is to give each its rightful place and function.

DANTE AND ULYSSES.

First a place must be allowed to curiosity. Though it may mislead us it can not be displaced for curiosity is the servant of reason and has God's own work to do for us. And may [illegible] by keeping the mind empty and unemployed. In primitive religions many things are taboo, are kept within the fiery circle of awe, and curiosity is counted sacrilegious. The Church has kept the ceiling up with its "dim religious light." Dante was a typical thinker of the Mediæval Church and he passed a characteristic judgment on the genius of the Greeks by depicting Ulysses among the crooked people in the eighth circle of the Inferno, the foul pit of Malebolge. It was his love of exploration that condemned him. No influence, no love of home and wife

> "Could overcome within me the desire
> I had to be experienced of the world,
> And of the Vice and Virtue of Man kind."

So he and his travel-worn company passed the point "where Hercules his landmarks set as signals that man no farther onward should adventure." Thus he came to a bad end. It was against this kind of prejudice that Columbus had to fight.

MORNING STAR OR WRECKER'S FIRE.

In the same spirit the Church of the Middle Ages checked research. When Wycliffe examined the doctrine of transubstantiation and inquired as to the primacy of the Pope, he was thought to be inspired of hell and his followers were burned at the stake. Where we see the morning star of the Reformation, his contemporaries say the deceitful light of the wrecker's fire. Later on the experiments of Galileo and the expositions of a Colet or Erasmus were alike counted for sin because they diminished the realm of awe.

It is plain enough to us now that these pioneers opened a way for the central and abiding truths of our faith to shine more brightly. They were wise in their curiosity, and our lesson is that it is dangerous to cover with a cloud of awe anything truth bids us deal with. For if our Godgiven reason is refused its rights it will revolt from awe as the minister of darkness and stupidity. Let us beware of meeting all religious questions with an answer of awe as if they were unseemly and unbelieving. It is by the full use of all our human powers that we most truly serve Him, Who gave them.

II.

But having vindicated the place of curiosity for a life that is balanced and full. I am anxious to remind you that it is only one of two keys to life's wisdom. There is a knowledge accessible to all, but only by the gateway of awe and the path of obedience. Life does not hold less mystery because we know more facts. Eternal Truth is like Immortal Love in Whittier's lines

> "Forever full, forever flowing free,
> Forever shared, forever whole
> A never-ebbing sea."

The path of science always leads to the brink of mystery. Just as the climber of the peak in Darien saw an expanse of ocean where he expected his goal and reckoned there was no more sea, so when the scientists arrived at the atom, expecting it to be the limit of creation, they found it brought them to the brink of another world.

SUPPOSE SCIENCE WINS.

Peak rises beyond peak in the realm of knowledge. But suppose [illegible] knowable in time; suppose curiosity were to win its complete triumph in the physical world and all the universe become an open book, each branch of science contributing its chapter, don't you see that the case for awe would be stronger than ever? For these two problems would be left for the thinking mind. (1) How do you account for the fact that the universe, being only partially within the sight and extent of the conception of man, is yet completely subjected to law; and (2) How do you account for the fact that the powers of thought within those fragile brains of ours correspond with these remotest parts of nature? How can unity be revealed in a manifold world unless it is the work of One? And how can we think God's thoughts after Him (to use the phrase of the astronomer Herschell) unless we are the sons of God?

A CONSUMING CURIOSITY.

Moreover, the moral life depends, as much as the intellectual, on the recognition of the rights of awe. The adolescent is moved by a consuming curiosity, and is tempted to the defiance of awe which leads on to the transgression of law. Dissatisfied with Eden he gives it up for a mere mirage. And there is many a man carrying remorse with him, like a perpetual shadow lying cold on his heart, because he paid the cost to satisfy his curiosity and determined to be knowing in regard to life's secrets. And this reminds us of the responsibility lying on parents and teachers to allay this inherent curiosity as far as may be by wise instruction. A little knowledge may be a dangerous thing, but too much awe is also dangerous. I mean that it does not make for chastity of mind to have the mysteries of nature cloaked by the false awe of prudish conventions. There is only one true defence, and that is to be awake to God and his righteousness as Joseph was, who protested in the hour of temptation, "How can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?"

LEADS TO MISCHIEF.

This brings us finally to the sphere of religion, for there alone is the realm of true awe. As I have said, there is a prejudice against religions in many minds on the ground that it has so often hindered the knowledge that is given in answer to curiosity. "Religion," says Dr. Reinach, "is a collection of scruples which impede the free exercise of our faculties." Hardly a wise word! For you might as well say that the S.V.C. is a service for keeping young men out of church, which is equally nonsense.

But let us look at the problem more carefully. We shall at once admit that in spite of all the gains to civilization from the satisfaction of curiosity, it has also brought an immeasurable loss of happiness and peace. The history of the world and its present situation bears witness to the fact that unfettered curiosity leads to a world of evil. What then is the philosophy of the Bible? The Bible bids us understand that beyond the many things that may be known there is One Who is to be obeyed. There were many trees in the garden of Eden for the use and delight of man, but one stood for a different kind of knowledge—knowledge of Him Who walked in the garden in the cool of the day. To know Him is life eternal, but the organ of this knowledge is not curiosity. We cannot by searching find out God. He comes to us Himself and we know Him by listening, receiving, obeying.

> "O yes, I deem that there are powers
> Which of themselves our souls impress.
> That we can feed these minds of ours
> With a wise passiveness."

Things that are hidden from the wise and prudent. Those who live by curiosity and reason, are revealed to babes—to the childlike, who are willing and happy to receive and obey.

The dictates of conscience, which is the organ of awe, have fully the same rights over us as the arguments of reason. Indeed, it is more important to be afraid of sin than of ignorance, for it is this makes us miss God's world, that shuts out the vision of God Himself. It was a wise Jewish Rabbi, Chananiah, who said, "Whenever in any man his fear of sin comes before his wisdom his wisdom endures, but whensoever a man's wisdom comes before his sense of sin his wisdom perishes."

THE HARMONIOUS LIFE.

I would plead this morning for the large, balanced life that gives due place both to awe and to curiosity, and gives full weight both to conscience and reason. The life that only cultivates awe may become empty and gloomy, but the life that depends on curiousity is sure to be shallow and hard. Happy is the man who is alive in both sides of his nature.

> "Let knowledge grow from more to more,
> But more of reverence in us dwell,
> That mind and soul according well
> May make one music as before,
> But vaster."

Here is the universe with its wonder to challenge our curiosity, and poor is the unresponsive life.

But far more impoverished is the life to whom this outward nature is all in all, who is untouched by the fact of God within and God o'erhead. The herald of His presence is the awe of our conscience, and He makes Himself known through the fellowship between His love and our obedience which is mediated by Jesus Christ.

"A TRIFLE TOO"

She was a pretty little sprite,
My dinner partner Tuesday night;
A trifle old for sweet sixteen—
In manner and in speech, I mean.

Her waist was cut a trifle low—
They're wearing them that way, you know;
Her skirt, perhaps a shade too high.
Such length of leg as met the eye!)

Her cheeks were just a bit too red—
The rouge had been thickly spread;
Her nose too white; her eyes too black;
A colour sense she seemed to lack.

Her voice was pitched a little loud,
To make it heard above the crowd.
She told me things that, really, well,
I blush to think of, much less tell.

It may be I am getting old—
I'm just about eighteen, all told;
But the young girls I've lately seen,
In social haunts where I have been,
Seem, as I pass them in review,
Each one to be a trifle "too."

G. K. D.

CHINA'S SKIES FOR APRIL

By Sirius.

2 Uranus in conjunction with the moon, 2 p.m. Uranus 1°.0 N.

3 Venus approaches the Pleiades.

4 New moon ●, 3.3 p.m.

5 Chinese festival of Pure Brightness, Ch'ing-ming 淸明.
Mercury in conjunction with moon, 5 p.m. Mercury 5°.8 N.

6 Jupiter stationary in the heavens, 9 a.m.

8 Venus in conjunction with moon, 1 p.m. Venus 8°.0 N.
Moon in apogee, 11.0 p.m.

9 Occultation of Aldebaran in Taurus, 3.59 a.m.

12 First quarter (moon) ☽, 6.58 p.m.

14 Mars in quadrature, 1 a.m.
Venus passes near Aldebaran.

17 Mercury at greatest elongation East (19°.52), 8 a.m.

19 Saturn in opposition to sun, 5 p.m. Distance from our earth 813,030,000 miles.
Full moon ○, 9.57 p.m.
Saturn in conjunction with moon, 9 p.m. Saturn 1°.7 S.

20 Sun enters Taurus, 4.59 p.m.

20-22 Meteoric showers in the Lyrids.

21 Moon in perigee, 4.1 a.m.

22 Venus at greatest elongation East (45°.40) 3 a.m. The planet henceforth approaches the earth.

23 Jupiter in conjunction with moon, 6 a.m. Jupiter 4°.1 S.

26 Last quarter (moon) ☾, 0.14 p.m.
Mars in conjunction with moon, 5 a.m. Mars 3°.8 S.

27 Mercury stationary in the heavens, noon.

28 Neptune stationary, 7 p.m.

29 Uranus in conjunction with moon, 10 p.m.

30 Meteoric showers in the Draconids.

PHASES OF THE MOON.

	Day.	Hour.
New moon	● 4	3.3 p.m.	Peking time
First quarter	☽ 12	6.58 p.m.
Full moon	○ 19	9.57 p.m.
Last quarter	☾ 26	0.14 p.m.
Moon in apogee	8	11. 0 p.m.
„ perigee	21	4. 1 a.m.

RISING AND SETTING OF THE SUN AT INTERVALS OF 5 DAYS.

	Rises	Sets
1	5.50 a.m.	6.18 p.m.
5	5.45 a.m.	6.20 p.m.
10	5.39 a.m.	6.23 p.m.
15	5.34 a.m.	6.26 p.m.
20	5.28 a.m.	6.29 p.m.
25	5.23 a.m.	6.33 p.m.
30	5.18 a.m.	6.36 p.m.

In this month the mornings increase 32 minutes (at Greenwich 62); and the afternoons 18 minutes (at Greenwich 48) making a total of 50 minutes for the month.

ASPECTS OF THE PRINCIPAL PLANETS.

MERCURY.—An evening star, visible for about 2 hours after sunset in the middle of the month. Well placed for naked eye observation.

In conjunction with moon on 5th; at greatest elongation East (19° 52′ on 17th; stationary on 27th.

Sets on 13th at 7.59 p.m.; on 20th at 8.04 p.m.
„ 27th at 7.47 p.m.

VENUS.—An early evening star, crossing Taurus (near Aldebaran on 14th), and increasing in [illegible] as it approaches its greatest Eastern elongation. Visible for over 3 hours after sunset, and setting at the end of the month a short time after 10 p.m.

In conjunction with moon on 8th; at greatest elongation East (45° 40′) on 22nd.

Sets on 1st at 9.52 p.m.; on 16th at 10.11 p.m.
„ 30th at 10.20 p.m.

MARS.—An early morning star; crossing Sagittarius, and reaching Capricornus towards the end of the month. Rises about 1 a.m., and becoming more and more brilliant.

In quadrature on 14th; in conjunction with moon on 26th.

Rises on 1st at 1.30 a.m.; on 16th at 1.09 a.m.
„ 30th at 0.44 a.m.

JUPITER.—A late evening star in Scorpio, rising a short time before midnight in the first part of the month, and at the close about 10 p.m.

Stationary on 6th; in conjunction with moon on 23rd.

Rises on 1st 11.32 p.m.; on 16th at 10.32 p.m.
„ 30th at 9.34 p.m.

SATURN.—An early evening star in Virgo, visible the whole night, and being near the earth may be well observed throughout the month.

In opposition to the sun on 19th, and near the moon on the same date.

Rises on 1st at 7.38 p.m.; on 16th at 6.34 p.m.
„ 30th at 5.32 p.m.

VENUS AT GREATEST ELONGATION EAST.

Venus, now crossing Taurus, will approach Aldebaran on the 14th. The planet attains its greatest swing to the East, or elongation (45° 40′) as it is called, on the 22nd. This circumstance makes Venus extremely brilliant, and as it sets later and later, about 3 hours after sunset towards the close of the month, it may be well observed in the evening sky.

After the elongation, Venus moves westwards, approaching nearer and nearer to our earth. It will maintain its brilliancy till early June, when it dims rapidly owing to its conjunction with the sun.

SATURN IN OPPOSITION.

Saturn rises this month in the early evening, and will be in opposition to the sun on the 19th on this date. it may be observed in the East, as the sun sets. Its distance from our earth is 813,030,000 miles, a little further away than in 1922 and 1923. During this month, the planet is visible throughout the whole night, its setting taking place on the 16th at 5.59 a.m., and on the 30th about 5 a.m.

CHINA'S FESTIVAL OF PURE BRIGHTNESS—CHING-MING 淸明

The cold, dreary atmosphere of winter has at last disappeared, and is succeeded by pure and bright skies, which rejoice the eye, and give you a touch of glorious Spring weather. This is known as the festival of Pure Brightness, and is celebrated with picnics, outings and gathering of peach blossoms throughout all China. It falls this season on the 2nd of the third Lunar month, corresponding to April 5 of the tropical year.

Modern schools take a holiday on the occasion, and plant trees, hence it is also known as "Arbour Day."

"TWINKLE, TWINKLE, LITTLE STAR"

(As it might have been written.)

"Scintillate, scintillate, globule vivific,
Fain would I fathom thy nature specific,
Loftily poised in ether capacious,
Strongly resembling a gem carbonaceous.

"When torrid Phoebus refuses his presence,
And ceases to lamp us with fierce incandescence,
Then you illumine the regions supernal,
Scintillate, scintillate, semper nocturnal.

"Then the victim of hospitless peregrination
Gratefully hails your minute consumation.
He could not determine his journey's direction,
But for your bright scintillating protection."

THE TRADEMARK BUREAU AT WORK

Allegations of Inefficiency Already Being Made: Complaints Both by Chinese and Japanese Firms: Instructive Notes from the Chinese Press

Herewith we reproduce a summary of various articles dealing with the Trademark Registration Bureau which have appeared in the Chinese newspapers. They speak for themselves, and a perusal of their contents must serve to emphasize the danger which foreign firms will run should they have to submit to the new Chinese Law. A summary of articles published in the "Shanghai Journal of Commerce" and the Shun Pao on March 25, calls first for attention. It is to the following effect:—

S. Suzuki & Co., Ltd., a Japanese firm, claim that they were granted patent rights in Japan (about 1910), and also in Great Britain, United States of America, and France, over a certain kind of food (powder sauce) called "Vi-Tsing," and that the Japanese Consul has certified that the trade mark "Vi-Tsing" has been in use in China for over 10 years. Suzuki & Co. also claim that the trademark "Vi-Tsing" was first put on the market by a Chinese firm—the Tienchu Manufacturing Co.—last summer.

In September the Tienchu Manufacturing Company applied to the Trademark Bureau to register its Trademark "Fu-Shou." The mark consists of a device and on it appear the words "Vi-Tsing" in Chinese and English. The mark was examined by the Bureau and passed, and was published in the Trade Mark Gazette dated November 15, 1923.

Some time in November Suzuki & Co. gave 24 names to their sauce powder, including the name "Vi-Tsing" and applied to the Bureau for registration of these names as trademarks. These so-called Marks—23 of which consist simply and solely of Chinese characters (varying from 2 to 5), were examined and passed by the Bureau and published in the Gazette dated February 15, 1924.

AN EARLY PROTEST.

In December Suzuki & Co. lodged a protest with the Bureau against the use of the term "Vi-Tsing" by the Tienchu Manufacturing Co. on the ground that the registration was a breach of Article 2 (5) and Article 3 of the Trade Mark Law:—

Art. 2.—Any of the following cannot be registered as a trade mark.

(5) Devices which are identical with or similar to a mark belonging to another person and generally known to the public as being used for identical goods.

Art. 3.—When two or more persons apply separately to obtain registration for an identical or similar trade mark which is to be used for identical goods, only that person who actually first used such trade mark shall be granted registration; but registration shall be granted to a person who shall first make application, provided that no one of the applicants has used such trade mark before or provided that a former user cannot be established. If the applications are of the same date, the mutual agreement of the applicants shall govern; if they do not agree, none of such trade marks shall be registered.

According to the "Shanghai Journal of Commerce" dated March 21, 1924, the Tienchu Manufacturing Co. have now protested to the Bureau claiming that "Vi-Tsing" was a special product of that company, that their trademark "Fu Shou" (in which the name "Vi Tsing" was incorporated) had been passed by the Bureau and published in the Trademark Gazette for November 15, 1923, and that they had applied for its registration before Suzuki & Co.

ALLEGED VIOLATIONS.

It is amusing to see, however, an Article on the same question which appeared in the "Shun Pao" on March 20, 1924. That paper quotes a letter sent by the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce (apparently on behalf of the Tienchu Manufacturing Co.) to the Trademark Bureau in which they state in effect:

That the trademark of the Tienchu Manufacturing Co. was "Fu-shou" and not "Vi Tsing," which being the name of a kind of food or commodity did not fall under the category of a trademark; that "Vi-Tsing" should not be registered as a trademark any more than the words "tooth powder" could be. They ask the Bureau:

(a) If the characters "Vi-Tsing" are to be registered as the name of a commodity, why did the Bureau violate Art. 15 of the Trade Mark Law (which provides that the effects of a trademark right do not extend to . . . . the name . . . quality or nature of the goods) by permitting Suzuki & Co. to register them as a trade mark.

(b) If the Bureau regard the characters "Vi-Tsing" as a trade mark why did it permit Suzuki & Co. to register them when they had already been examined and passed as the trademark of Tienchu Manufacturing Co.

YET FURTHER COMPLICATIONS.

But the comedy goes further when we read in the "Shun Pao" of March 25, 1924, what purports to be a letter addressed to the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce by the China Chemical Works (a Chinese firm).

To put it shortly, the China Chemical Works complain that on November 17, 1923, they applied to the Bureau for the registration of a Mark which consisted of the Chinese characters "Mei Vi Shu" in connexion with sauce powder. That they received a reply from the Bureau on November 22 refusing registration on the ground that the proposed Mark was "in plain characters and did not have a specially distinctive appearance, and as it was merely the name of a commodity it might be used by all who sold the same kind of goods. The Bureau advised them to change their mark. This the company did, and re-submitted the mark for registration on December 1.

On March 8, the China Chemical Company received a reply from the Bureau stating that the mark could not be registered because it was identical with a mark of Suzuki & Co. which had been examined and passed, and had been published in the Trade Mark Gazette for February.

The China Chemical Co. ask "how the Bureau interpret Art. 3 of the Trademark Law (above quoted) by approving an "identical trade mark used on Indentical goods of those people who first made the application."

It should be noted that Suzuki & Co.'s Mark, as advertised in the Gazette, consists of three plain characters, and is one of the 24 marks complained of by the Tienchu Manufacturing Co. before mentioned.

CHINESE COMPANY'S PROTEST.

In connexion with this case it is next of interest to read the protest of the Tienchu Manufacturing Co. with the Bureau of Trademarks which was published in the "Shanghai Journal of Commerce" on March 21. It reads as follows:—

The Vi-tsing of the Tienchu Manufacturing Company in port has won the favour of society since its appearance in the market. Last autumn, the above company applied to the Trademark Bureau for the registration of the exclusive right of using its Fu-shou trademark. The mark has passed an examintion made by the Bureau. In spring of this year, the S. Suzuki & Co. Ltd., a Japanese firm, applied to the Bureau for the registration of the term Vi-tsing and over 20 others as the associated trademarks of kind of food known as Ajimonoto. Without looking into the matter carefully, the Bureau passed all the terms as trademarks. Taking the Trademark Law as basis, the Tienchu Manufacturing Co. has lodged a protest, containing the following words, with the Bureau:—

"In order to show that our product was manufactured by ourselves, we submitted to you, in September last year, a picture of our trademark and the name of our product referred to as No. 44 class of goods under Article 36 of the detailed Regulations on the Trademark Law, and applied to you for its registration. In November, last year, we received from your Bureau an order (No. 158) granting our application and a paper of decision (No. 117). The Bureau has also published our trademark and the name of our product in the Trademark Gazette, dated November 15, 1923. We were surprised to find in the Trademark Journal, dated February 15, 1924, that among the trademarks that had passed the examination of the Bureau, Vi tsing was one which was used by S. Saito, an agent of a Japanese firm named S. Suzuki & Co. Ld., as the trademark of an article similar to our Vi-tsing. Vi-tsing is the name we use for a special product of this company. If the same two characters are used by that Japanese merchant as the trademark of the same kind of food, how can consumers distinguish one from the other? What that merchant has done is not only detrimental to our trade rights but also an act of swindling. To use fraudulently the name of a special product of other people as a trademark of a similar kind of commodity, will seriously affect the interests of the people concerned, so we cannot help protesting against it. We submit you this petition and request you to protect our rights and stop swindling by abolishing the Vi-tsing trademak of that Japanese Company."

THE JAPANESE PLEA.

Under the heading "Suzuki's agent protests against the use of the term Vi-tsing by the Tienchu Manufacturing Co." the "Shun Pao" of March 25 gives further details of the matter. A rough translation is to the following effect:—

On the following grounds, S. Saito, an agent of S. Suzuki & Co. Ld., has lodged a protest with the Bureau of Trademarks, against the using of the term Vi-tsing by the Tienchu Manufacturing Co.

"S. Suzuki & Co. Ld., were granted the patent right on Ajimonoto, Chomiseifun, and Vi-tsing (names of goods—Translator's note) by the Japanese Government in the 41st year of Meiji (about 1910). The same right has also been given to the company by Great Britain, the United States, and France. The trademarks of the above three goods have been used in China over 10 years. The Japanese Consul General has issued a certificate to the above effect.

"The trademarks of the above goods have been used for years, in China, and are well-known to the public, so in accordance with Clause 5 of Article 2 of the Trademark Law, no one shall be allowed to use any mark identical with or similar to any of the marks of the above company.

"Article 3 of the Trademark Law provides that when two or more persons apply separately to obtain registration for an identical or similar trademark which is to be used for identical goods, only that person who actually first used such trademark shall be granted registration. Wang Tung-yuan (proprietor of the Tienchu Manufacturing Co.) did not begin to use the trademark Vi-tsing (the Japanese merchant regards Vi-tsing as a trademark of Tienchu Manufacturing Co. -Translator's note) until last summer. So S. Suzuki & Co. Ld., used that mark first.

"Taking advantage of the provision of Article 15 of the Trademark Law, Wang Tung-yuan has used Vi-tsing, the name of one of the products of S. Suzuki & Co. Ld., as a trademark. But he should not have done it, because Vi-tsing is not only the name of that product but also its trademark."

(The above protest was lodged before the Tienchu Manufacturing Co. did, when the Japanese merchant found that the term Vi-tsing had appeared in the Trademark Gazette, dated November 15, 1923. He did not send the samples of his trademarks to the Bureau for registration until November 19, 1923.—Translator's note)

IS IT A TRADEMARK?

Next in order comes the protest of the China Chemical Works against the action of the Trademark Bureau with reference to the trademarks of Suzuki & Co. This is contained in a letter addressed to the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce which is published in the "Shun Pao" of March 25. A rough translation is a follows:—

"General Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai.

"All people in business and industrial circles appreciate your kindness in making efforts to protect their rights by sending the letter that appeared in yesterday's newspapers, to the Bureau of Trademarks. We have also been affected by the action of S. Suzuki & Co. On November 17, last year, we took all procedure necessary and sent five copies of samples and a cut of our Mei Vi Shu trademark to the Bureau for registration. On the 22nd of that month, we received an order from the Bureau, which quoted Articles 1 and 15 of the Trademark Law and said that the mark could not be registered because it was in plain characters and did not have a specially distinctive appearance and, as it was merely the name of a commodity, it might be used by all who sold the same kinds of goods. The Bureau advised us to have our mark changed. So we changed the picture of our Mei Vi Shu trademark and sent it to the Bureau on December 1 for registration. On March 8 of this year, we received an order from the Bureau, saying that our mark could not be registered because it was identical with one of the marks of S. Suzuki & Co., which had been examined, found agreeing with the Law, and published in the No. 6 Trademark Gazette, and advising us to change it again.

INCONSISTENCY.

"The Bureau has been inconsistent with itself. It would not let us register our Mei Vi Shu trademark because the mark was in plain characters, had no specially distinctive appearance, and was the name of a common article. But th Mei Vi Shu Trademark of S. Suzuki & Co., which is also in plain characters and a name of a common article, has passed its examination.

"Article 3 of the Trademark Law provides,

'When two or more persons apply separately to obtain registration for an identical or similar trade mark which is to be used for identical goods, only that person who actually first used such trade mark shall be granted registration; but registration shall be granted to a person who shall first make application, provided that no one of the applican's has used such trademark before or provided that a former user cannot be established.'

The first order, which we received from the Bureau, said only that in accordance with the Trademark Law the characters Mei Vi Shu could not be registered as a trademark. It did not say that S. Suzuki & Co. had applied for the registration of the same trademark. That is an evidence that we applied earlier than S. Suzuki & Co. did, for the registration of the Mei Vi Shu Trademark. How did the Bureau interpret Article 3 of the Trademark Law by approving an identical trademark used on identical goods of those people who were not the first who made the application? With regard to Articles 1 and 15 of the Trademark Law, what explanation would the Bureau make in passing the Mei Vi Shu trademark of S. Suzuki & Co., which is in plain characters, has no specially distinctive appearance either, and is also a common name of a commodity? The above action of the Trademark Bureau has violated the Trademark Law and will seriously affect the registration of trademarks, so we request you to send a special letter to the Bureau, asking it to explain its actions in accordance with the Law."

THE ALPHABET OF THE EAST

(From the point of view of a Shanghai-lander)

A are those useful old creatures the Amahs, whose clothes so resemble a pair of pyjamas.

B stands for Betelnut, Buffalo, Bar, and Boy without whom we can't get very far.

C are the Chits which we sign for our drinks, also Chop-sticks, and China—the land of the Chinks

D are the Dollars we're wanting to earn,
and the Drinks we partake of wherever we turn.

E is the East with the Eastern Exchange, where the dollar from two bob to six bob may range.

F is the Fighting we get every spring,
for the Tuchuns, you understand, must have their fling.

D stands for Gordius, eager to fight, though his bark, so 'tis said, is much worse than his bite!

H is the sect which we call Holy Rollers,
'tis also the Harbour of which we're controllers.

I is the Ice we have most of the year;
on the ice we put soda and water and beer.

J is the Junk—the Chinaman's home, and the Joss-house you see wheresoever you roam.

K is the Kerosene sold by young "fellers," and also the Kittysols, known as umbrellas.

L are the Loans for which China's the debtor,
Legations would also come under this letter.

M is the Mandarin, now but a name,
M's also the Mango of world renown fame.

N 's the North China, a jolly good rag;
in spite of her years, the "Old Lady's" no hag.

O stands for One o'clock, time to close down,
if you dance any later, our Councillors frown.

P is the Pumelo, tasty to chew,
Persimmon, Pagoda, and Paddyfield too.

Q is the Quorum which Parliaments lack,
and the Chinaman's Queue which we miss from his back.

R 'is the Republic of which there're two Presidents, and also the Race-Course, the pride of our residents.

S are the Sinologues, just a bit mad.
and Sapajou's drawings which really aren't bad.

T are the Tuchuns, of China the course;
yet our tramcars and telephones sometimes are worse!

U is the Uproar which sometimes is heard,
when we're told that the payment of loans is deferred.

V stands for Very, (or should we say "Velly"?)
'tis also in V that one finds Vermicelli.

W doesn't have much of a chance,
Wonk's about all I can find at first glance.

X is an Xception, I don't mind admitting,
I can't find a word that's in any way fitting.

Y is the Yamen, the home of officials, who place on a pass both their chops and initials.

Z stands for Zikawei, home of the priest,
where heavens are scanned by Wise Men of the East.

C.M.P.

THE BOOK PAGE

BOOK NOTES AND NEWS

For some years past the Bishop of London has been in the habit of recommending a book for special Lenten reading. The volume selected this year is "Personal Religion and the Life of Devotion," by Dr. W. R. Inge, the Dean of St. Paul's.

∴

A new book of essays by Mr. Augustine Birrell is to be published shortly, under the title "Last Obiter Dicta."

∴

Jack Hobbs, the Surrey cricketer, has written "My Memories." It is a book that will be eagerly looked for by enthusiasts of the game.

∴

It is half a life time since Mr. Fergus Hume thrilled the English reading world with his "Mystery of a Hansom Cab." He has been writing ever since, and now he promises us another story under the title, "The Whispering Lane," and it also is full of "thrills." It has a villain, who is a doctor, with a touch of black blood in him, and the heroine is a nurse whom this villain persecutes. For the rest, wireless and spiritualism provide a very up-to-date means of working out a very up-to-date plot.

∴

There is something of tragedy in the recent suggestion that that Whitaker of European royalty, "The Almanach de Gotha," will be published no more. The Habsburgs, the Romanovs, and the Bourbons have suffered greatly during the last decade, and the suspension of a publication that dealt largely with these personages would be a curiously dramatic event. A German production, it is printed in French, that being the lingua franca of royalty. Formerly the Almanach contained very fine steel engravings of sovereigns who had succeeded to their thrones during the year, but it is again significant that the last few editions have lacked these illustrations.

∴

"Reflections on the Napoleonic Legend" (Unwin, 15s.), is an entertainingly written and epigrammatic study of Napoleon as he was and as he forced himself on the imagination of the world. "A conscious fraud? A delusion? Who knows?" the clever author, M. A. L. Guérard, observes; and he suggests that the Napoleonic will in action "had the qualities of a bestseller: it was obvious and forcible." He earnestly prays that "if the Emperor were prancing again down the Champs Elysées, we might not be found among the shouting crowd."

∴

Mr. Frank A. Mumby, in "The Youth of Henry VIII." and other volumes, showed how fascinating history may be made when skilfully combined with biography and letters. Out of a mass of material he has pieced together in "George III. and the American Revolution. The Beginnings" (Constable, 21s.) a story which is told with such drama and conviction that the reader almost feels that he is a witness of contemporary events.

∴

Among the many compliments which have been paid to Sir Hall Caine in the course of his life, there is one on which he always looks back with a pardonable and romantic pride. As a very young man he was invited to a party, the guests at which included many of the most prominent literary men and women of the day. To use his own words, he was "sitting quietly and shyly in an obscure corner," when the door opened and Lord Houghton was announced. As he entered, the famous patron of letters happened to catch sight of the future author of "The Deemster," and disregarding the numerous friends who had risen to welcome him, walked across the room to where Hall Caine was sitting. "My young friend," he said, "I don't know what your name is, but you are the very image of the poet Keats!"

LOCKE FALLS OFF

By Achilles.

"Moordius & Co." is one and the same book as "The Lengthened Shadow," the former being the title of the latest novel of Locke in Great Britain, the latter in America. It is very confusing that a book should have two titles—doubtless a distinction with a commercial difference. Another example is the latest work by John Paris, author of the somewhat undeservedly popular "Kimono." His new novel has been advertised in some places as "Chopsticks and Rice," in others as "Sayonara."

"Moordius & Co." is a very non-committal title. There are many who will naturally like the book, and as they have started off to read it prejudiced in Locke's favour, will think it quite up to the high standard they expect from him. It is, nevertheless, an annoying book from some points of view. We feel that Locke is too complacent on some of the pages; we positively loathe the poser Moordius, who is even by the author admitted to be a "bad egg," despite everything he says in favour of this rascal; and there is a stupid use of French of the kindergarten kind, or, what is worse, of a banal sort, which is irksome, and also of easy Latin; this sort of thing: la pome forte et dure, fons et origo, a sic transit smile, jeune fille bien élevée, and fait accompli. It is perfectly all right to break into little variations like this, but is there any good reason why more direct phrasing could not be employed? The chief argument in favour of this linguistic trickery is that poetically, or by conveying an exacter meaning, it is a vindication of itself. "Origin" instead of "fons et origo," and an accomplished fact for "Fait accompli" are however, surely as good.

"Is it not very triste dining alone?" enquires Moordius. Comment on this is superfluous, but it is hard to resist the temptation to say in this connexion that absurd remarks like "I have lost my argent," or "My chi tan (eggs," in Chinese) were not to my liking this morning," are equally justified, even if it is generally accepted that "triste" is in the nature of an idiomatic synonym commonly permissible in the sense used. One feels, nevertheless, that Dr. Johnson, if he were a contemporary of Locke to-day, would say: "No, sir: I cannot support you in this practice." A "sic transit" smile sounds quite funny!

The character Timothy does not belie his name. Locke is fond of telling us that "Timothy did not know what on earth they were talking about." Suzanne and Moordius are discussing music, and have mentioned Meilhac and Offenbach. Timothy is not to be blamed or even pitied for not understanding, any more than is W. J. Locke to be laughed at for the natural ignorance he must have regarding many simple Chinese subjects. "The world is so full of a number of things" that we cannot possibly embrace half of them.

But Locke must be commended for this excellent statement he puts in the mouth of Moordius: That love is not the only romance, that just as there is the romance of love, so is there the romance of business, of ambition, of benevolence, of revenge. And as a Celestial friend of mine likes to add to this: Also the romance of truth. Philosophy and speculation may not sound romantic. They can be, nevertheless, as some of us knew.

Still, one cannot compliment Locke on the net result of his most recent labours. Wells may have deteriorated with his "Mr. Britling Sees it Through," as some people think. It is to be hoped others will not find that Locke degenerates with "Moordius & Co." This certainly is not the Locke of "Marcus Ordeyne" memories; not even the Locke of the "Usurper," and how far removed from the Locke of that adorable master piece, "The Beloved Vagabond!"

GERMANY'S REVENGE ON THE WORLD

The Present State of Germany. By J. H. Morgan. University of London Press.

This little book is a reprint of a lecture, with an introduction added, delivered at the London University last November by Brig-Gen. J. H. Morgan. who served for four years on the Inter-Allied Military Commission of Control in unoccupied Germany after the War. It is a compact survey of the political, economic and social conditions of present day Germany most interestingly and instructively presented by a trained observer who had unique opportunities of gaining his information at first hand all over the country and from the best possible sources. He attempts, as he says, to diagnose the maladies of a body politic by methods of clinical observation and experiment, and he undoubtedly succeeds in putting forward facts and opinions which are well worth the consideration of each one of us who takes any thought for the future. He endeavours to trace the steps by which the German national consciousness has reached the conviction that the Allies have sought and still seek her ruin. He attributes this conviction mainly to the Treaty which saddled Germany with unliquidated damages for a generation and more and to the economic exploitation of the Ruhr by the French; and he shows how the militarist and monarchist party, humbled as it was by the revolution which brought the republic into being, is now doing all it can to encourage and exploit popular feeling for its own ends.

The instrument of this policy has been currency inflation, one result of which — the ruin of thousands of their countrymen—is regarded with callous indifference by those responsible. Just as the people were made "cannon-fodder" during the war, so now they are "mark-fodder" during the period of reconstruction; and in both cases the sacrifice has been equally deliberate. Political convulsions produce new forms of national government but they do not change the character of a nation: under the republic there is the same ruthless disregard for the individual as there was under the monarchy; the same cynical belief that the end justifies the means.

TRADITION STRONGER THAN TREATIES.

The principal business with which the author had to do during his four years in Germany was disarmament; and his observations in regard to this phase of the Commission's activities are specially valuable. He points out what many of us fail to realize, namely, that the effective disarmament of a nation with a strong military tradition is a practical impossibility. Four years' experience have convinced him that you cannot hope, by anything short of military occupation of the whole country, to limit the military effectives of such a nation unless you carry the opinion of the people with you. After great efforts the Commission secured the abolition of conscription. They destroyed 35,000 big guns and some millions of rifles. They demolished fortresses and blew up powder factories. They dismantled Krupps'. They forced compliance with clause after clause of a covenanted treaty designed to crush the military spirit. And at the end of it all they find—what? The old Corps of German Officers —under another name, of course —the strongest caste in the world and the most proud, even down to its old regimental messes and its courts of honour: the cadre of N.C.Os: the regimental associations, numbering millions of men, organized on a mobilization basis and affiliated to the Treaty Army: bands of students all over the country marching in military formation: highly articulated secret or semi-secret societies which are one of the most disquieting features in Germany to-day. But with all their destruction and the lack of effective results obtained from it, there were three things the Allied Commission never succeeded in destroying, nor could destroy—men, industry, science. You cannot destroy men in times of peace. You cannot destroy science. And in these days, when war has become so technical; when every large workshop is a potential arsenal; every laboratory, every manufacturing plant a potential source of war material, can you destroy the industry of a nation that is an essential part of its armament for war? You cannot, of course; and so you cannot bring about its effective disarmament, for no nation is "disarmed" if it still retains its men, its science and its industry.

BACK TO BERNHARDI.

And so, the author thinks, while it may not be necessary for us to sympathize with Germany, it is of supreme importance that we should understand her. The sands are running out and every day makes her reconversion to the gospel of force more certain. For urging his plea of moderation the author makes no apology: he is naturally very far from being what is called "pro-German," but he speaks from a ripe experience which few others have had. In full sympathy with the difficulties of the French, he cannot agree with the view held by some of them that a state of anarchy in Germany will secure the peace of France or of Europe. He thinks that if the conditions imposed by the Allies are so harsh and unconscionable that Germany cannot fulfil them, it is idle to expect that any Government attempting to carry them out will remain long in power. In that case the new republic is doomed and the advent of an undisguised dictatorship, accompanied perhaps by a total repudiation of the Treaty, will not long be delayed. In the continuance of constitutional government in Germany, he thinks, lies almost the only hope of peace in Europe. But at the moment he sees Germany, like the captive giant in the Temple of Gaza of old, driven to desperation, putting forth her hands in agony to grasp the pillars on which European civilization rests, determined to drag all Europe down with her into the abyss. "Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just;" and when a great nation is animated like one man, with a common feeling that it has been grievously wronged and that its quarrel with the world is just, then the author sees in that nation one that may take captivity captive and, bursting the fetters which bind it, sweep all before it in the assertion of its right to live. Peace cannot be assured by treaty: nothing but a change of heart in the sons of men can achieve it. Material disarmament can never be certain or complete until moral disarmament has made it unnecessary; and it is, it would seem, principally in order to drive home this all-important, this vital fact, that this little book has been published. It is one cordially to be commended to thinking men of all nations: one which few can read without much profit to themselves.

A.H.J.

THE CHINESE ST. PAUL

Prof. Giles' Translation of Fa hsien's Historic Record

"The Travels of Fa-hsien." (399-414 A.D.). Re-translated by H. A. Giles, M.A., Cambridge University Press. 5/- net. Shanghai, Kelly & Walsh Ld.

The alternative title is "Record of the Buddhistic Kingdoms." The work has been translated several times and once before indeed by Professor Giles (in 1877). It is evidently a record which has a great appeal for him, as it must have for all students of Buddhism and of China. The present translation has attempted to correct all the errors of the former ones and, with experience of the painstaking work of Professor Giles, one cannot doubt that as a translation is as nearly perfect as an English record may be. There is a map at the end of the book which clearly shows the course of the "stupendous journey" of Fa-hsien and his friends. The object of the journey and its intended scope is shown in the first paragraph of the Record:—

"Formerly, when Fa-hsien was at Ch'ang-an, he was distressed by the imperfect state of the Buddhist Disciples; and accordingly in the second year of the period Hung shih, the chi-hai year of the cycle (A. D. 399), he entered into an agreement with Hai-ching, Pao-cheng, Hui-ying, Hui-wei and others to go together to India and try to obtain these Rules."

Their tremendous journey by land and sea is recorded in simple language, a journey which, as Giles says in his short introduction, was "a supremely dangerous expedition, in the glow of which the journeys of St. Paul melt into insignificance."

"For Fa-hsien, the hero of this adventure and the records of his own travels, practically walked from Central China across the desert of Gobi, over the Hindu Kush, and through India down to the mouth of the Hoogly, where he took ship and returned by sea, after manifold hair-breadth escapes, to China, bringing with him what he went forth to secure—books of the Buddhist Canon and images of Buddhist deities."

The fascination that has led Giles to re-translate the work is very easily understood. It is an enthralling record.

J.L.

A NOVEL OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

"Wine of Fury." By Leigh Rogers. (Grant Richards. 7s. 6d.)

Walking through the streets of Paris, one sometimes sees that the French, admirable window-dressers though they are, can make an odd mistake. In the middle of a window of astonishingly life-like artificial flowers they put a pot of cyclamen or a blossoming azalea. The softness and freshness of the living beauty make the clever imitations seem stiff and unnatural. Something rather like that happens in Mr. Rogers's novel about Russia, "Wine of Fury." Among the invented characters, David Rand the American banker, Naritza the dancer, Rodkin the spy, and Natalie the war-worker, two created characters, warm, living, touching and beautiful, appear. Foma Ivanovitch, the peasant soldier and unconscious revolutionary, Masha, his love, and their simple story makes the others, with their plots and intrigues, seem unreal. This would be a very serious fault if Mr. Rogers had not taken for his real hero that strange, formless, changing terror, the Russian Revolution. The stiffness of David and the others rather helps to make them symbols of the Russian and the American spirit, like the masks worn by the actors in Greek tragedy—the Revolution is like the Greek idea of Fate.

To have made the Revolution live is no small feat for a first novel. Mr. Rogers gives us scene after scene from the Petrograd streets which show admirably the changes caused by the Revolution and its ever-increasing effect. Some of the pictures of the dreadful, futile street-fighting will bear comparison with Stephen Crane's.

David Rand is the most damaging portrait of the American business man yet given us, even by his young fellow-countrymen. Babbitt is a hero beside him. He has great energy and common business honesty, but his lack of humour and imagination is so complete that he is able to break his word to the woman he loves, betray his assistant to the police, refuse a great opportunity to help the Russian people, and finally to abandon his beloved in Russia, and still think of himself as a fine fellow doing his duty and making the proper sacrifices to the great American idol, Business Success.

CHINA Journal of Science & Arts, edited by Mr. A. de C. Sowerby and Dr. J. C. Ferguson, is a bi-monthly, profusely illustrated magazine. It contains authentic articles written by experts on the Arts, Literature and Science of China. The annual subscription is $10.00 Shanghai currency, or $6.00 gold for U.S.A. and Canada. Office:—Room 102, the Ben Building, Shanghai. Central 3247.

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

SHANGHAI MOTHER GOOSE

By Elizabeth Pepys.

SHAMING YOUTH.

There was a little girl
Whose head was in a whirl.
A wrinkle in the middle of her forehead.
Said she: "This year
It's stylish to be queer;
And if you are good, it is horrid!"

PAST TIME.

Hickory, Dickory, Dock
They'll move the old Customs Clock
It makes us blue,
What shall we do
Without that convenient, kind Clock?

ACCURACY FIRST.

There was an Old Lady who lived on the Bund.
Of information she published a fund,
Correspondence, cartoons, too, and all realize
That she's the Old Lady who never told lies.

TO THE TOURIST.

Globe-trotter, Globe-trotter, where have you been?
I've been all over, the whole world I've seen.
Globe-trotter, Glober-trotter, was it worth while?
Bored me most awfully; but then, it's the style!

DREAM LORE.

Eeny, Meeny, Frenzied Freud
Calls your dreams, "sex, unalloyed."
If you show you are annoyed,
That just proves the truth of Freud.

PROHIBITION'S AGENTS.

Shanghai Simon met a dry man—
This was in the States—
Said the dry man to Shanghai Simon,
"Got whiskey at good rates?"
"Lots," said Simon, "but it's high, man,
Come through with the 'kale.'"
But the dry man, hateful spy man!
Clapped him into jail.

FOOLS: APRIL AND OTHERWISE

"Fools are my Theme."—Byron

By Elizabeth Pepys.

Since most of us may enrol with the "twenty-seven millions, mostly fools," of whom Carlyle wrote it is but natural that there should be a predilection towards foolery in the world. We may none of us fancy being "writ down an ass," but ever since school and college days, when to be assigned to the ranks of the studious as a "swat" or a "grind" was direst ignominy, we have side-stepped the imputation of unco wisdom or highbrowism, feeling with Selden that "no man is the wiser for his learning."

Fools and children are reputed to speak the truth, but that could hardly acount for the popularity of the simpleton. It may be that the buffoon gains the esteem of others because he adds to their superiority complex, it being a pleasing pastime to look down on those around one, but on the whole it is more likely to be a feeling of being among one's peers, those who because of some harebrained action of their own to-day will not too harshly judge one's own potential lapses of to-morrow.

Then too, we approve the practice of foolery as being in the long run the truest wisdom, and when we assume the cap and bells, sustain ourselves with quotations of "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," relaxing the bow, nodding Jove-like and the rest of it. Inspired foolery we all recognize as the height of humour, and who would own that he cannot understand or take a joke. Kipling has fittingly commemorated the "way-side jape," and Darwin declared "I love fools' experiments. I am always making them."

HEAVENLY FOOLS.

But dearest of all to us are those "fools by heavenly compulsion" who fly straight in the face of reason and fling away every practical consideration. We all know those honest fools who refuse to enrich themselves at the expense of others, even when it might be done quite safely. There are the altruistic fools who will not accept happiness while others are miserable, the clear-visioned fools who will not take the sham for the reality.

There are the fools who sacrifice everything for an ideal or a whimsy. How derided Columbus must have been! What preposterous idiot first advanced the theory that the world was round or that the earth moved round the sun? For the fools of all the ages, who have refused to believe the sensible, to act practically, to accept the comfortable, but have gone on estranging the world, wounding themselves, faithful only to the spark of divine foolishness which urged them forward, we are grateful and say reverently: "The fools, God bless them!"

THE VERSATILE SCARF

Ubiquitous and Uniformly Useful

"What ho," cried the efficient Shanghai girl, "worrying about clothes? Not a bit of it. My simple and saving inspiration is to rip off my belts and tie on some scarves in unexpected places and call it a wardrobe!"

Alas that spring outfitting is not as simple as that but much, very much may be done with the aid of printed silks, chiffons, woollens, or ribbons. As "Vogue" says:

"A gay wisp of nothing—that's a scarf. A thick, bundling length of soft wool—that's a scarf, too. And, between the wisp of nothing and the length of wool, Paris has taken all the silks of China, all the magic patterns of the loom, any—every—fabric that has struck her vagrant fancy, and we call them all scarves.

Scarcely ever has the scarf been long absent from the mode. Lovely ladies have worn them, in one version or another, languidly draped about their shoulders for almost as long as lovely ladies have existed. And why not? Nothing, unless it is the fan, is more truly feminine, more gracious, more exquisitely a part of the poise that is so essential a part of sophisticated elegance than the versatile scarf.

For a few years, to be sure, it was in darkest, deepest oblivion. Paris would have none of it. Then one day, or perhaps, one evening it reappeared, and, since then, it has once again assumed a definite, important place in the mode."

You may have a separate scarf which may be worn in various ways with different costumes, or one which is detached, and yet a part of one particular ensemble and again one which is an integral part of the dress. The dress-scarf traces its pedigree to Vionnet's fashion of finishing a frock with long ends tied carelessly across the shoulders, a variation of the bateau neck which has gone far.

Beginning with coats the scarf collar, drawn about the neck or flung carelessly back in cape style is capable of infinite variation, and the scarf tie to match the hat is a favourite spring device, and has been effectively used by Shanghai modistes. The sports scarf, bright bordered or vivid throughout, is effective, particularly with white frocks. It may be draped to suit its wearer or the necessities of the moment and is practical as well as distinctly ornate. Outlining the neck, with a bow on the shoulder and long floating ends, tight about the throat with an end on either shoulder, crossed in front and thrown back, fastened with some brilliant shoulder ornament or gardenia—its addition makes a new costume.

A RENOVATOR.

The resourceful Shanghai damsel quoted above has made over several evening gowns with the aid of some chiffon and georgette and her own clever fingers. For one she took a length and a half of wide georgette, letting it flare in a circular flounce at both ends, but leaving it a straight, plain panel from girdle to the square decolletage of the gown over which it was draped. Slashed at the throat to admit the head it flared out again in a cape effect falling to the waist line in back, and giving an entirely new effect to the dress. It should fall below the hem of the dress in front so as to give the floating effect so desired in ball rooms this season. A long plain scarf of a cleverly contrasting colour may be used in many ways, or a straight long piece perhaps 18 inches wide may be tacked to the top of the square decolletage or stretched from shoulder strap to strap with the ends floating free.

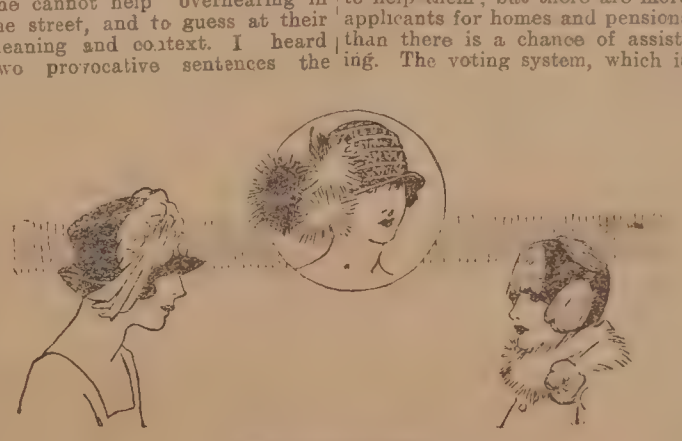
More elaborate arrangements suggested are to draw a narrow end of a scarf across one shoulder and let a wider length hang in a panel down one side, falling over the arm and attached at the hip. Or again, an afternoon dress may have a pleated front section added and a scarf trimmed with pleating at the back and ends may be knotted round the shoulders. A long scarf slit half-way up its length, tied at the throat, with the rest hanging in a cape-back effect alters the line of a frock, too.

E. P.

THE ELDERLY WOMAN

What Can She Do?

It has always amused me to notice the scraps of conversation one cannot help overhearing in the street, and to guess at their meaning and context. I heard two provocative sentences the other day. "She is sixty." "Oh! A bit on the old side."



EARLY SPRING HATS

I passed on, having decided to what they were referring. Of course they may have been discussing some lady of sixty who was "a bit on the old side" to undertake a walking tour from Land's End to John o' Groats, or to marry a young man in his twenties, or even to wear a white muslin frock. I could not possibly know. But I thought the most likely, the most obvious, explanation was that "she" was being recommended for some post by the one talker and dismissed as "a bit on the old side" by the other.

THE PROBLEM.

It set me thinking. Probably the one speaker was true enough. A younger person might have been better for the work she was considering; but oh, how it suggested the tragedy of dozens of lives in the present day! It is a tragedy which modern civilisation and modern philanthropy seem totally incapable of tackling satisfactorily. What are the older women to do in these days, when every post is given, if possible, to the young?

Short of deciding to pole-axe every woman of sixty who is not possessed of an ablebodied husband or a private income, I often wonder how we can solve the problem.

TRYING TO LOOK YOUNG.

I remember one brave little elderly lady, lacking any particular personal vanity, who regularly dyed her hair "because I should never get any work if they saw how grey I was." Hundreds of others have "official ages," and tremble for fear the real number of years they have lived in this often cruel world should be discovered by their possible employers.

WORK, NOT CHARITY.

Splendid efforts are being made to cope with the difficulty, but the most courageous helpers own themselves daunted by the impossibility of getting work for the average woman on the "shady side of fifty." The woman—and especially the educated woman—who has got any grit or pride in her composition wants "work, not charity," so long as she can drag her tired body about or force her weary brain to answer to her will-power.

It was for such a fine specimen of British womanhood that I sought help a few months ago. "She doesn't want money, she wants help to earn it," I explained to a sympathetic lady.

"But we so seldom have any openings for women over sixty." I recounted the number of languages she wrote and spoke fluently—I think there were eight—the work she had done in the past, her very considerable knowledge and attainments in many directions. "I know, it does seem hard, but her age is against her."

ADEQUATE PENSIONS.

Until the State can provide really adequate pensions for women of sixty—and we seem a long way off the probability of such an advantage—what is to be done? The world nowadays is for the young, the gloriously, splendidly young. Cannot there be a corner for the older people?

YOUTH AND AGE.

Youth is a wonderfully vital force; but are we not in danger of forgetting that age has a few advantages—wisdom, experience, and a keener sense of balance?

And the elderly women who are struggling now—what of them? Numerous excellent societies exist to help them; but there are more applicants for homes and pensions than there is a chance of assisting. The voting system, which is so largely employed, often means such long delay that death steps in before the goal is attained. I write from experience. The attempt to get help for elderly women, even in this charitable century, is absolutely heart-breaking.

FLORENCE PLAYER.

HIDDEN HUSBANDS

Indication of Suppression of Man Himself

Once upon a time, the unmarried female, the spinster Miss of any household, felt her maiden name to be no particular title of dignity—quite the contrary, in fact—and would accept the addresses of the first eligible man countenanced by her family rather than face a future in which she never wrote herself down "Mrs." As a middle-aged woman, she might even triffe with the temptation of pretending to such a title if she found herself in surroundings where its assumption carried weight. As a bride, she bore the name of her husband like a precious possession, proudly and tenderly. Most certainly, it would never have occurred to her that she lost distinction by so doing.

But to-day, among ladies both socially and professionally occupied, one often comes upon instances of the unused or the repudiated married cognomen, and, possibly, one is going to come upon them oftener. Bright stars in any artistic firmament are to be pardoned for publicly holding to appellations which they have made famous or otherwise. In the business world, brilliant heads of many departments, continue, quite uncriticized, to hold their under which they originally took them. But the fine lights of the Domestic Hearth—that sacred spot—seem less understandable when they decide to crash through the lanterns of their husband's patronymics. And crash they do, here and there, so that no man knows when splintered glass may be about to fall upon his cringing crest.

THE MAN'S REACTION.

Sometimes, of course, he does not cringe; he smiles, or he shrugs his shoulders, or he gallantly appears to admire his mate's spirit. Honestly and truly, does he like it? One wonders, in spite of the fact that some of the husbands of the most spirited have declared that they do and have defended the idea in its entirety. Others feel, reasonably enough from the great American trade point of view, that if their lady-wives make better going of it in business hours as Miss than as Mrs., they had better make it. Provided it is really Mrs. Placid who returns to her pleasant house, what, says Mr. Placid, need he care that, by her earlier designation of Miss Tempest, she has been stirring the office atmosphere into proper activity all day long? Not half-a-dozen perons who meet her professionally know of Mr. Placid's existence, but Mrs. Placid probably cherishes her married name all the more that she puts it on with her hat to go home. It is the woman who makes the leaving off of it a challenge, who has come to regard her single title as a banner worth flaunting just because it is hers, for whom we have, as yet, very little sympathy.

Lively uneasiness is occasioned in the breasts of passport officials (never the most trustful of mortals) when requested to furnish papers for ladies and gentlemen purporting to be married, yet travelling under separate names: and the feelings of steamship clerks (notoriously modest men) are harrowed by demands for staterooms where their emancipated occupants announce themselves to be Miss and Mister. Does any normal man look any other normal man in the eye and not feel like a fool when he has to say, "Yes, this is my wife, even though she does call herself Miss Carnivora Fandango or Miss Jane Anne Smith?" Of course, he doesn't. And he must suffer the torments of the derided, which are, if anything, worse than those of the damned, when attempting to register at a decent hotel.

"TORMENTS OF THE DERIDED."

For the three classes who put up with it—those who bow and bear, those who are too sophisticated to care, and those whose attitude of intellectual admiration seems a little ahead of the occasion—, there must be three times three who regard it as poppycock! They know that real individuality does not need to depend upon idiosyncrasies for notice in the world, that true freedom is not so concerned with wearing the red cap of liberty on its head as with thinking clearly and acting frankly beneath it, and that the ordinary young woman who is savagely determined to be known by the signature in her book instead of the family name of her children is, at the moment, just a trifle ridiculous in a country where family names are customary.

Perhaps, this will not long be so. The idea of wedlock is getting to be more and more the idea of a partnership of two entities continuing to be two entities, not the union of two halves to make a domestic whole. It may be for the best. It may be logically wiser to do away with the old notion altogether and adopt a new one in character with the ardent self-expression of modernity and its married maidens. Family-founding, as such, is no longer the ostensible end and aim of matrimony. If, then, the family is not to be the unit and the individual is, why bother about the family name? Why should not children be called after whichever is the important parent? And if this is, as it seems about to be, the mother, why mention the father at all? Why should he ever assume responsibility without authority? Let husbands remain hidden; it may very well prove their safest course. Let them remain hidden and be thankful that wives do not adopt the practice of the Praying Mantis and put an end to them altogether before their ancient spirit returns to them in all its ancient strength.

MAIL NOTICES

INWARD

Per H.A.L.S. Haverland Apr. 5
Per O.S.K.S. Alabama Maru „ 6
Per R.M.S. Emp. of Australia „ 7
Per A.O.L.S. Pres. Jefferson „ 7
Per N.Y.K.S. Iyo Maru ... „ 8

OUTWARD

For Marseilles, London, etc. –
Per N.Y.K.S. Haruna Maru Apr. 5
Per B.F.S. Glaucus ... .. „ 9
Per M.M.S. Amazone ... ... „ 10
Per L.T.S. Frume L. ... ... „ 11

For Japan, Canada, U.S.A. & Europe :
Per R.M.S. Emp. of Russia Apr. 5
Per N.Y.K.S. Kaga Maru „ 6
Per T.K.K.S. Korea Maru „ 11
Per P.M.S. President Lincoln „ 11
Per A.O.L.S. Pres. Jackson „ 12
Per O.S.K.S. Alabama Maru „ 17

For Manila, Australia and New Zealand via Hongkong :—
Per N.Y.K.S. Haruna Maru Apr. 5
Per R.M.S. Emp. of Australia „ 7
Per A.O.L.S. Pres. Jefferson „ 8

PASSENGERS

INWARD

Per N.Y.K.S. Katori Maru, March 28. From London.—Mrs. D. J. Ed[illegible] and five children, Mrs. D. F. Weston and two children, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Nowell, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Harris and child, Mrs. M. Munter, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Harris, Mr. W. S. O'Neill, Miss J. R. Goldman, Mr. K. Yebara, Miss M. U. Shields, Mr. F. M. Hood, Mrs. A. S. Parendtezen and child, Mr. L. G. Lamport, Mr. and Mrs. A. Riley and three children, Mr. G. Kennedy, Mr. H. R. Harling, Mr. R. S. Moore, Mr. M. Shinohara, Mr. T. Nishiyama, Miss S. M. Potterton, Mrs. T. A. Hamyn, Miss F. I. Fowle, Miss M. E. Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Lewis and child, Mr. and Mrs. Vanderborght and child, Miss E. Junod, Mr. J. Rees.

Per str. Hsinchi, March 28. From Ichchow.—Mr. A. Hetherington, Mrs. [illegible], Mr. Gowdy, Mr. [illegible].

Per str. Pakhoi, March 30. From Hongkong.—Bishop Scott.

Per str. Kingsing, March 29. From Chefoo.—Rev. C. E. Patton.

Per str. Tuckwo, March 30. From River Ports.—Mrs. W. C. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. F. Borgmann, Messrs. G. R. [illegible], N. F. [illegible], S. Cato, Mr. and Mrs. T. Isbell, Mrs. O'Brien Butler.

Per str. Kiangyang, March 31. From River Ports.—Mr. R. Scheibler.

Per str. Whangpu, March 31. From River Ports.—Mr. and Mrs. Rawlinson.

Per str. Fengtien, March 31. From Tientsin.—Messrs. A. Parkhill, L. Gresab, Bennet, Mr. and Mrs. Adlington and child, Mr. and Mrs. Murphy and child. From Chefoo.—Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Gillingham. From Weihaiwei.—Mr. H. P. Wilkinson.

Per str. Kutwo, April 2. From River Ports.—Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Bartlett.

Per str. Tatung, April 2. From River Ports.—Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard and Mr. Deas.

Per str. Kiangan, April 2. From River Ports.—Mr. and Mrs. Emeloff and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Arnoux, Messrs. P. Peterson, F. N. Divers, Messrs. Brown and Search.

Per str. Nanking, April 3. From River Ports.—Mr. F. Sennett.

Per str. Loongwo, April 3. From River Ports.—Master and Mrs. S. A. Vincent, Messrs. Schlenter, R. H. Bataza, L. Warren, J. H. Vogel, Miss M. Cornaby.

Per str. Sansing April 3. From Canton and Hongkong.—Mrs. A. C. Young, Bishop Banister, Rev. S. H. Littell, Rev. C. M. McDowall, Messrs. K. Amakai, Kishiyama.

Per str. Shuntien, April 3. From Tientsin.—Mrs. A. J. Heal, Mr. and Mrs. Martinek. From Chefoo.—Misses M. Polhill, V. Polhill, Messrs. N. T. Jeanes, A. Rouse. From Weihaiwei.—Miss M. C. Cooper.

OUTWARD

Per str. Wuchang, March 28.—For Chinkiang.—Mr. A. Leung.

Per str. Shantung, March 29.—For Tsingtao.—Mr. Gross, Mr. W. A. Adams.

Per str. Sinkiang, March 29.—For Hongkong.—Mr. J. B. Hongren, Mr. J. C. Wright, Mr. A. A. Krynoff.

Per str. Tungchow, March 29.—For Chefoo.—Mr. and Mrs. L. Kovalsko. For Tientsin.—Mrs. Stuck and two children, Mrs. A. M. Forrest and child.

Per str. Poyang, March 29.—For River Ports.—Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Bowen, Misses James, French, Messrs. Cazals, Mowat, Messrs. Cameron, Turner, Messrs. Allen, Power, Mr. and Mrs. C. Thorne, Miss A. Rothwell, M. and Mrs. Mackinnon, M. and Mrs. Amoreck, Messrs. Gratton, E. Hall, R. B. Sandner, G. W. Sheppard, J. L. Cafferata.

Per str. Nanning, March 30.—For Swatow.—M. L. H. Hemet.

Per str. Wenchao, March 31.—For River Ports.—Mr. D. H. Bunker.

Per str. Ichang, April 1.—For Canton.—Mr. J. W. Bassett.

Per str. Luenyi, April 1.—For River Ports.—Miss A. Leary, Mrs. Ginter and child, Mrs. M. Faure, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Langhland and child, Mrs. W. L. P. Cook, Miss Cook.

Per P. & O. S. Khyber, April 1.—For London.—Mr. and Mrs. N. Denison, Master Denison, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Walter, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. G. Tweedhe, Mr. L. Fernie, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Bowes-Smith and child, Miss M. D. Bowes-Smith, Mr. C. M. Billings, Mrs. K. W. Tribe and child, Mr. E. Thornton, Lt. Sandie, Mr. A. James, Cpl. Hodgson, Messrs. S. H. Peck, W. J. Hutton, G. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. C. Allen, Messrs. A. E. Seddon, C. W. Mumford, R. A. Gowen. For Marseilles.—Messrs. A. G. A. Jamieson, P. L. Hutchinson. For Singapore.—Mrs. T. Jones, Messrs. D. L. Cameron, J. Hodge, G. W. Petre, L. G. Lamport, W. G. Ball. For Hongkong.—Lady Stubbs, Miss Addis, Mr. T. J. E. St. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Perry, Mr. A. Baxter, Mrs. C. D. and Master K. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. B. I. Graves, Lady Hotung, Miss J. Hotung, Mr. S. J. Bum, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Rawlinson, Messrs. A. H. Ginman, H. W. Kingdon, H. J. R. Edmonds, S. M. Bhesania, R. S. Newawalla, J. T. Williams, T. Nishiyama, L. A. Blok, J. H. Underwood, Captain J. S. Mann, Messrs. J. C. Horner, I. B. Henfrey, T. T. Carter, S. Biggain, W. Williams, C. J. Pitts, J. C. Wright, R. S. Chuddley, A. R. Autao, F. J. Nock, A. Aziz, I. A. Fernandes, R. W. Skinner, P. Troller and N. Westwood.

Per str. Fengtien, April 2.—For Chefoo.—Miss T. Severin.

Per str. Wahsien, April 3.—For Ichang.—Mr. F. La Grande.

Per str. Changchow, April 3.—For Canton.—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Samples, Miss Samples.

Per str. Tatung, April 3.—For River Ports.—Bishop Banister, Messrs. Storey and Ibotson.

Per str. Chengtu, April 4.—For Antung.—Mr. and Mrs. Chipperfield, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard.

BIRTHS

HOWES.—On March 29, 1924, at Dr. Fearn's Sanatorium, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. J. Marvin Howes, a son, Lawrence Marvin.

LIDDELL.—On March 31, 1924, at 273 Avenue Haig, Shanghai, the wife of P.W.O. Liddell, of a daughter.

LOVELL.—On March 29, 1924, at Nanking, to Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lovell, a daughter.

MARTIN.—On March 29, 1924, at the Victoria Nursing Home, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Martin (née Florence C. Thompson), a daughter.

MEAD.—On March 30, 1924, at No. 6 Hu Pu Chieh, Peking, the wife of E. W. Mead, Central Salt Administration, of a son.

RATCLIFF.—On April 1, 1924, at the Victoria Nursing Home, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. William F. Ratcliff, a son (William Alexander George).

MARRIAGES

DUMBARTON—TRUEMAN.—On March 29, 1924, at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Shanghai, by the Very Rev. C. J. F. Symons, M.A., Nora, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Trueman, 547 Avenue Foch, Shanghai, to George Frederick, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Dumbarton, of Dulwich, England.

MACKINNON—SWEET. — On March 29, 1924, at H.B.M. Consulate-General, Shanghai, and afterwards at Holy Trinity Cathedral by the Very Rev. C. J. F. Symons, M.A., Norah, daughter of Mrs. F. Rayden, 25 Yu Yuen Road, Shanghai, to John MacDougall, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Mackinnon, Innellan, Argyllshire, Scotland.

MARTIN CAMACHO.—On April 4, 1924, at St. Joseph's Church, Shanghai, by the Rev. Father Macdonald and afterwards at H.B.M. Consulate-General by Sidney Barton, Esq., C.M.G., Mary Erwin, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Anthony Camacho of New York, to Arthur John, second son of Mr. T. P. Martin, of Muswell Hill, London.

MITCHELL—HIGH.—On March 27, 1924, at H.B.M. Consulate-General, Shanghai, and afterwards at Holy Trinity Cathedral, by the Very Rev. C. J. F. Symons, M.A., Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. High, Arbroath, to Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, Arbroath, Scotland.

POCK—ARNOVICK.—On March 29, 1924, at H.B.M. Consulate-General, Shanghai, and afterwards at the Union Church, Mary Magdalena Pock, second daughter of Mrs. Maria Pock, of Riga, to George Arnovick, of London.

QUIN—PATERSON.—On April 2, 1924, at H.B.M. Consulate-General, Shanghai, and afterwards at Holy Trinity Cathedral by the Very Rev. C. J. F. Symons, M.A., Kathleen, daughter of the late Robert Paterson and Mrs. Noble, Rock Ferry, Cheshire, to James Quin, of Shanghai.

DEATHS

CHRISTIE.—On April 2, 1924, at the General Hospital, Shanghai, Elizabeth Auguste Wilhelmine (née Schneider), beloved wife of H. Christie, Messrs. Butterfield & Swire, and mother of Mrs. Bruce S. Jenkins, aged 54 years.

CLOUGH.—On March 29, 1924, at the China Inland Mission, Yangchow, Emma Sarah Clough, from heart failure following on pleurisy.

D'ALMEIDA.—On March 29, 1924, at 4 Yuenfong Road, Shanghai, Milly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. d'Almeida, aged 4¼ years.

JOSEPH.—On March 30, 1924, at Dr. Fearn's Sanitorium, Shanghai, Isaac Joseph. Hongkong and Japan papers please copy.

LAVINGTON.—On March 30, 1924, at 116 Avenue Road, Shanghai, John Henry Stuart, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Lavington, aged 9½ months. Funeral on Tuesday, April 1, at 5 p.m., at Bubbling Well Cemetery.

FURLOUGH

Attention of intending travellers is drawn to the New Route Across Canada now available. Through most picturesque parts of the famous Rockies. New comfortable trains—specially constructed observation cars.

The Canadian National Railways operate from Coast to Coast in Canada—touch every principal city in the Dominion and many in the U.S.A.

SPECIAL FARES FOR MISSIONARIES

Through bookings—Any Steamship Line

Literature and full information furnished

The National Way

Canadian National Railways

GLEN LINE BUILDING

Shanghai Tel. C. 6973

SICCAWEI METEOROLOGICAL REPORT

Day of Month	Barometer 9 A.M.	Wind Att'ed Therm	Wind Direction 9 a.m.	Wind Force (1-12)	Hygrometer 9 a.m. Dry	Hygrometer 9 a.m. Wet	Thermometer in Shade Max.	Thermometer in Shade Min.	Weather conditions
Mar. 28	30.30	51.8	E	3	49.8	44.1	52.5	43.5	O.
„ 29	30.06	51.6	E	3	48.0	47.3	50.9	43.5	O. D. R.
„ 30	20.20	54.4	E N E	1	50.5	47.7	59.2	45.5	O.
„ 31	29.98	52.3	E	3	51.6	50.0	54.1	47.0	O. D.
April 1	29.62	53.6	S S E	2	57.4	54.8	62.8	50.9	O.
„ 2	29.77	54.1	N W	2	57.4	54.0	61.2	53.8	O.
„ 3	30.19	53.6	N	1	49.1	42.3	55.8	41.7	O. C.

Explanation

B—blue sky D—drizzle H—hail M—misty (hazy) R—rain T—thunder
C—clouds F—fog L—lightning O—overcast (dull) S—snow Z—calm

SHANGHAI THERMOMETER READINGS FOR THE WEEK

In the open air in a shaded situation in the Foreign Settlement

Date	Thermometer (Fahr.) Minimum 1924	Minimum 1923	Maximum 1924	Maximum 1923	Rainfall Inches 1924	Rainfall Inches 1923
Mar. 28	45.0	51.0	50.0	56.8	Trace	0.48
„ 29	44.2	47.0	50.0	62.0	0.79	Nil.
„ 30	46.0	46.8	55.0	61.5	0.01	Nil.
„ 31	46.0	45.0	55.0	62.0	0.03	Nil.
April 1	51.2	49.8	61.6	78.6	0.31	Nil.
„ 2	49.8	51.0	59.0	58.2	Nil.	Nil.
„ 3	43.6	47.0	53.6	55.0	Nil.	Nil.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's CHLORODYNE

The ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE

Acts like a charm in DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY AND CHOLERA

The Best Remedy known for COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

The Most Valuable Remedy ever discovered. Effectually cuts short all attacks of SPASMS. Checks and arrests these too often fatal diseases :—

FEVER, CROUP, AGUE.

The only Palliative in NEURALGIA, GOUT, RHEUMATISM, TOOTHACHE.

Convincing Medical Testimony with each Bottle.

Sold in bottles by all Chemists

Prices in England 1/3 and 3/-

Always ask for a "Dr. COLLIS BROWNE"

Sole Manufacturers:

J. T. DAVENPORT, LTD., LONDON, S.E.

THE SMALL INVESTORS, LTD.

41 SZECHUEN ROAD, Shanghai

Phone : C. 977 and 761

NOTE

CAPITAL INVESTED, with dividends or Interest payable every six months.

At 7 per cent. Doubles itself in 10 years
At 8 per cent. Doubles itself in 9 years
At 9 per cent. Doubles itself in 8 years
At 10 per cent. Doubles itself in 7 years

START TO-DAY TO DOUBLE YOUR CAPITAL

We are holders of large stocks of sound companies whose shares will yield
7 per cent. to 14 per cent. per annum

THE SMALL INVESTORS, LIMITED

Telegraphic Address: "Safeinvest"

DOUGLAS F[illegible]HING, [illegible]tor.

Printed and Published for the Proprietors of the North-China Daily News & Herald, Limited, at the office of the Company, 17 The Bund, Shanghai, China.

The North-China Herald

AND SUPREME COURT AND CONSULAR GAZETTE

WEEKLY EDITION OF THE NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS

Registered at the Chinese P. O. for transmission as mail matter under Class B.

(Tsz-ling-sing-chi-chow-kan 刊週期星林字)

VOL. CLI. No. 2957. SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1924. TAELS 12 PER ANNUM.

CONTENTS

CHINESE POLITICS—
147 Officials Uprooted in Tsingtao by New Governor ... 41
Spring Threats of War in China 41
Trademark Law 41
How Peking Ruined Its Chances with Soviet Russia 42
Lincheng Outrage, The ... 42
France's Warning to Peking ... 42
Russian Bank and C.E.R. ... 42
Finance Minister's Resignation 42
LEADING ARTICLES—
Redding Pit Disaster, The ... 43
Telephone Co. and Council ... 43
Waterworks and Council ... 43
Rue Du Consulat 44
Mussolini's Triumph 44
China and Famine Relief ... 44
NOTES AND COMMENTS 45
NEWS FROM THE OUTPORTS—
Chinese Government's Rebuke to the Soviet Envoy ... 46
American Patrol of Yangtze ... 46
American World Flight ... 46
Peking Octoroi and Bad Paper 46
How the Bolsheviks Have Loet Their Korean Pupils 47
Ominous Sign of War between Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu 47
Japanese Officers of Yihyang Maru 47
Pains and Penalties of Birthday Feasts 47
Tsingtao Governor's April Fool's Day Joke 48
Ningpo Missionary Association 48
Endless Taxation in Canton ... 48
Automobile Club of Tientsin... 48
Quick and the Dead in Hangchow 48
Beaten Armies of Szechuan ... 49
Embargo on Land Purchases ... 49
Curio Collector of Tientsin, A 49
Farewell to Hankow Harbour Master 49
Perils of Life on West River 49
Visit to Tokio's "Nightless City" 50
Tientsin Women's Club ... 50
Doctor's Gown, The 50
Armed Robbers at Ningpo ... 50
Going A-Fairing in Szechuan ... 50
First Chinese Nurses of Shansi 51
Missing Millions of Tsingtao... 51
Blessing the Silk Worms ... 51
Axe in Japan's Civil Service ... 51
Famine Prices for Kansu Wool 51
Sheep and Goats on Race Course 51
West River Pirates 51
Perils of the Post in Kansu ... 52
Mr. Liang Shi-yi in London ... 52
Arbor Day in Peking 52
Province Free of Bandits, A ... 52
Peitaiho Conference 52
Unaccounted Funds of Tsingtao 52
Students' Strike in Peking ... 52
Regeneration of China 52
Harbin Press's Latest 53
Szechuan Sees Hope of Peace 53
Educational Rally in N. Kiangsu 53
Sending Arms to China ... 53
SHANGHAI NEWS—
Mr. Widler, Prisoner of Chungking 54
Illegal Taxation in Shanghai... 54
Mieczyslaw Munz 54
Burglar in the Hongkong Bank 55
Weddings 55
American World Flight ... 55
Judge Purdy of the U.S. Court 55
Sunken Warren, The 55
Foreign Police Constable Shot 56
Oxford and Cambridge Society 56
What Made the Great Wall ... 56
Traveller to Tibet, A 56
Christian Educational Assn. ... 57
French Municipal Loan ... 57
Opposition to Press By-Laws 57
Motor Car Hotel Scheme ... 57
A. D. C., The 58
Paper Roads Movement, The ... 58
Customs Clock Lying in State 58
Obituary 58
Smart Discovery of Arms ... 58
COMMERCE AND FINANCE 59
COMPANY MEETINGS 62
CLUBS AND SOCIETIES 63
CORRESPONDENCE—
Education of Chinese Children 64
Prohibition 65
Kuling Coolies 65
Min River, The 65
SPORTS AND PASTIMES 66
MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS ... 67
LAW REPORTS—
H. M. Supreme Court—
Portuguese-Indian Partnership, A 68
Mixed Court—
Dangerous Gang, A 68
Mr. W. Wallace Convicted ... 68
FOREIGN TELEGRAMS ... ... 70—73
FROM THE FOUR W... ... 74—75
SPECIAL ARTIC...
Mr. C. K. Ch... ... 76
World of Wireless, The ... 76
Northern Asia the Cradle of Man 77
FOR PAGE 78
WOMAN'S PAGE 79

The new Governor of Kiaochou does not believe that the Treasury exists for the personal advantage of superfluous officials

147 OFFICIALS UPROOTED IN TSINGTAO BY NEW GOVERNOR

Kao En-hung's Drastic Reforms: No More Fat Jobs and No Work for Them: Dismay Among the Limpets and Tite Barnacles

Tsingtao, Apr. 1.

Mr. Kao En-hung, the new Tupan of Kiaochou Territory, received a royal welcome when his private car rolled into the Tsingtao depôt the other evening at the rear of the regular day express from Tsinan. Hundreds were at the station to greet him, including scores of school children, who waved flags and held aloft multi-coloured Chinese lanterns. They formed a lane through which the Governor smilingly walked. The police band also blared its welcome. Mr. A. G. Major, the British Consul, and many officials of the former administration also greeted the new Governor. A motor-car procession formed and proceeded to the Governor's residence, where a banquet was served.

Governor Kao was subsequently the guest of honour of the officials of the late régime of Governor Hsiung Ping-chi, about 50 occupying seats at the tables. Mr. Tsao Wen-wei, acting Tupan in the interim between the Hsiung and Kao administrations, was chairman of the affair. The Tupan voiced his pleasure in occupying his new post. He did not dwell on his plans, although indications pointed to a pretty general "shake-up" and all officials were somewhat anxious.

OFFICIALS BADLY SURPRISED.

On his first day in office to-day, Governor Kao shattered the peace and quiet of the long marble corridors of the Administration Building by wholesale ejections and new appointments. Many officials of the Hsiung Administration, lulled to a false sense of security by the misconception that friendship for the Shantung Tupan would avail them, were suddenly awakened to realities by the firm, but polite, announcement that their services would be no longer needed.

It was a decidedly exciting day in the yamên, quite the most interesting of its long existence under three flags.

Chief among the dismissed men were the 147 advisers and other officials of the Hsiung Administration. With the mere signature of his name to an order abolishing these places the new Tupan destroyed a pernicious system which last year cost Tsingtao more than $60,000 in salaries. The Governor took this drastic step not many minutes after his arrival at the yamên. It fairly took away the breath of the officials and attachés.

TRANSPORTATION CO. DISSOLVED.

Just previously he had dissolved the Kiaochou-Tsinan Transportation Company, acting as intermediary between the Harbour Department and wharf coolies. Local businessmen hailed this act with hearty approval. Harbour matters have been a thorn in the side of the native and foreign business communities. Governor Kao arrived at his desk promptly at eight o'clock, and five minutes later the Transportation Company, in which officials of the Harbour Department figured prominently, was a thing of the past.

"Why have a transportation company?" Governor Kao said to Reuter's correspondent. "Is not the Harbour Department qualified to handle its own coolies?"

Reports of the irregularities in the Harbour Department have been circulated frequently of late. The Tupan said that he had received scores of letters about the inefficiency of the Harbour Department, particularly with regard to handling cargo. He deposed the present head and appointed Mr. S. C. Yao in his place.

Other appointments announced this afternoon by Governor Kao to Reuter's correspondent are:

Director of the Waterworks, Mr. Chang Yang-fu; Director of the Telephone Department, Mr. K. Y. Yao; Director of the Finance Department, Mr. P. C. Hu.

ENERGETIC AND INDUSTRIOUS.

The new Governor appears to be energetic and industrious, and a man of quick and decisive action. His initial day at the helm of the territorial administration has left official circles fairly gasping.

He told Reuter's correspondent that he was determined to have efficiency and co-ordination in the conduct of affairs, no matter what the consequences.

"I intend," he said, "to see that the operations of the Finance Department are strictly supervised. I am going to see that all irregularities cease. There will be no occasion for the complaint that has arisen in the past. The saving to the revenue by the dismissal of the 147 advisers and other officials is no small one. The money can be used far better elsewhere. I am also going to see that our faithful employees are not compelled to wait for months for their wages. That practice has got to stop. Moreover, I intend to economize in many other ways. Of course, I am not well acquainted with general affairs yet, but I shall lose no time in acquainting myself with all that is going on."—Reuter's Pacific Service.

SPRING THREATS OF WAR IN CHINA

Chen Chiung-ming Asking for Money to Withstand Dr. Sun Yat-sen

WU PEI-FU ANNOYED WITH HUNAN AND SHENSI

Peking, Apr. 3.

According to unofficial Chinese reports General Chen Chiung-ming has made an application to the Military Council at Peking for funds to carry on his campaign against Dr. Sun Yat-sen. It is stated that this message has been referred to Marshal Wu Pei-fu for his consideration.

In other directions "Spring" movements are also reported. In Hunan, General Chao Heng-ti's failure to cancel the autonomy of that province creates a situation unfavourable to Marshal Wu's plans. It is reported to-day that Marshal Wu will shortly send some of his Loyang troops to Hunan, and that if General Chao does not quickly make up his mind on which side his interests lie, he will be driven out of that province.

From Shensi it is reported that Tuli Liu Chen-hua has not carried out Marshal Wu's orders for him to hand over to a subordinate the command of the division of Chen-sungchun, which he has retained since being appointed Tuli, but has been recruiting at Tungkuan to fill up vacancies in the division. Marshal Wu's chief object in depriving all provincial rulers of their individual military commands is said to be that of making them more dependent upon the Central authority and placing them in a position in which they can be easily thrown out if they fail to obey orders.

Reports of serious troubles facing the Northern forces in Szechuan have recently been as insistent as the late rumours of the death of President Tsao. Yesterday it was reported again that the Szechuanese had been supplied with arms and ammunition and were gathering in great strength to recapture Chungking. Foreign reports from Szechuan, on the contrary, indicate that the Northern troops are steadily carrying on their subjugation of the Szechuanese, and that the latter are principally concerned in avoiding the invading troops. —Reuter's Pacific Service.

Peking, Apr. 4.

It is reported that Gen. Cheng Teh-sheng, who is the present head of the forces to be used against Canton, has arrived at Loyang from Tayuling (Kiangsi border) to report to Marshal Wu. —Reuter's Pacific Service.

TRADEMARK LAW

Legations Cannot Advise Acceptance: Treaty Rights Must Be Respected

Peking, Apr. 7.

The Diplomatic Body, replying to the Chinese Government's Note of March 20, in a Note presented on Saturday evening said that the Chinese Government's Note was not sufficient for the Diplomatic Corps to advise their Governments to recognize the Chinese trademark law and advise their respective nationals to register their trademarks with the new bureau.

The Diplomatic Body point out that whether or not their nationals register, in case of complaints these will have to be dealt with in accordance with the stipulations of the treaties concerning the settlement of diputes between Chinese and Treaty Power nationals.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

HOW PEKING RUINED ITS CHANCES WITH SOVIET RUSSIA

Dr. C. T. Wang's Triumph in Negotiations Over Karakhan: Cabinet Interference Which Gave Soviet Envoy Chance to Escape by Means of a Diplomatic Rudeness

From Rodney Gilbert

Peking, Apr. 4.

Every morning the local English language papers here come out with two or three column headlines making the portentous announcement that the Russo-Chinese negotiations are still deadlocked. Every day there is a new account published of the Cabinet dispute over the Wang-Karakhan agreement and new motives are daily assigned to the Cabinet ministers who opposed the endorsement of this document. Interest seems to be unflagging and no one tires of making wild guesses, but in spite of the interest displayed by all and sundry, there appears to be less hope from day to day of any sort of an agreement between Karakhan and the Cabinet which will not entail a great loss of face to one party or the other.

Those who share the writer's opinion that Mr. Karakhan sent in his ultimatum of March 16 because Moscow would not endorse the "general principles" that he and Dr. Wang had agreed upon see no hope of a resumption of relations unless a new Cabinet is formed with the express purpose of knuckling under and giving Russia unconditional recognition. Dr. C. T. Wang himself says that no theory can possibly account for the ultimatum, so-called, which Mr. Karakhan sent him two days after the initialling of the agreement, except that Moscow was displeased with the terms and ordered Mr. Karakhan to break off the agreement if possible. As he says, if he had not got very much more from Mr. Karakhan than the latter had intended to give, the Soviet Government would not only have been content to wait patiently for ratification but would have gone to no little pains to coax ratification from the Government no matter how long it took.

KARAKHAN'S ONLY ESCAPE.

Karakhan must have known that to force the issue could only culminate in forcing a breach, and all sensible observers are bound to assume that he deliberately forced a breach because Moscow felt that he had yielded too much. In other words, Dr. C. T. Wang registered a victory on tactics which was really brilliant but which the Cabinet threw to the winds by giving Karakhan time to get in his ultimatum.

The writer reported some days ago on what he thought was good authority that the principle difficulty in the Cabinet discussions was Mr. Wang Ko-ming's effort to protect the security of the 11th Year bond issue and the issue of treasury notes secured on the Russian Boxer Indemnity. It now transpires that this dispute played no part in the final feud which broke down the Wang-Karakhan agreement. Dr. C. T. Wang himself says that he settled this point definitely and to the complete satisfaction of Mr. Wang Ko-ming and the other members of the Cabinet. Mr. Karakhan recognized that it would be most embarrassing to undermine the security for these domestic loans and agreed that they be given a position among the claims upon the Russian Indemnity prior to the assignment of the indemnity to educational institutions. Mr. Wang Ko-ming, as Minister of Finance, therefore had no further ground for objecting to the preliminary agreement.

THE FRENCH INTERESTS.

From other Cabinet officials the writer has learned, however, that both Mr. Wang Ko-ming and Dr. Wellington Koo did raise the most strenuous objection to the agreement on their own famous "three points." While Dr. Koo has made a very strong case for himself in his latest note to Karakhan and has made the latter look like the petulant child which he probably is, this is only expert camouflage in the sight of the majority of the Cabinet members. Upon this Dr. C. T. Wang has refused flatly to comment, but various members of the secretariat say that it was obvious throughout all discussions of the Wang-Karakhan agreement that Mr. Wang Ko-ming's sole interest was the protection of French interests while Dr. Wellington Koo was concerned solely with the task of discrediting C. T. Wang so that he himself might carry on and complete the negotiations and thereby pave his way to the premiership.

This explanation of what happened is undoubtedly the one accepted by all the provincial militarists and accounts for the storm of telegrams which have been coming in supporting C. T. Wang, denouncing Wellington Koo and Wang Ko-ming and insisting upon the Government's endorsement of the Wang-Karakhan draft agreement. A few of the Chinese papers have been remarking lately that Wu Pei-fu and his satrap colleagues had cooled down a bit and were taking less interest in the subject. The writer learned yesterday from an official in close touch with the Presidential Palace that was not the case. Wu Pei-fu is wiring more frequently and in stronger terms than ever and the reason that we hear nothing of these wires is that they are so strong and so violent in tone that the President dares not give them out for publication.

DR. KOO'S FACE-SAVING.

Meanwhile it has developed that Dr. Wellington Koo's excellent note to Mr. Karakhan was a face-saving device. Dr. Koo, having got Dr. Wang out of the way, proposed to sign the Wang-Karakhan agreement after a few days of bogus negotiation. The representative of the ultra imperialistic Union of Socialist Soviet Republics took pleasure in reiterating his former statement that nothing short of unconditional recognition could reopen negotiations. It was therefore up to Dr. Koo to put the Russian in the wrong by making fresh demands upon him publicly which would make him look foolish and this Dr. Koo did in masterly style. It forces Karakhan to admit, by refusing to consider further proposals, that he was badly taken in by C. T. Wang, that his Government will not endorse his terms, and to announce that China has lost a splendid opportunity to take advantage of his simplicity and inexperience.

At the same time Dr. Koo is admitting publicly that having wrecked the Wang-Karakhan agreement so that he could sign it himself he cannot get it signed, which exposes him to the violent wrath of the militarists and seals his fate so far as Wu Pei-fu and Ch'i Hsieh-yuan are concerned.

Karakhan cannot now save himself. Neither can the Cabinet. The Russian envoy has received the most peremptory telegraphic orders from Moscow to carry on no negotiations whatever on the basis of his agreement with Dr. C. T. Wang. Wu Pei-fu insists with reiterated violence that Koo must get a document endorsed which Karakhan can no longer endorse. When it is clear that the Russian cannot sign the agreement which the Cabinet refused to ratify, what will be Wu Pei fu's attitude towards the Cabinet?

CHANG TSO-LIN EQUALLY ANGRY.

The Chinese papers have grasped the fact that an explosion is imminent. Mukden will be as angry as Loyang. Chi Hsieh-yuan is in complete sympathy with Wu Pei-fu in this, if in nothing else. The Chinese papers are therefore already guessing about the personnel of the next Cabinet. They say C. T. Wang will be Premier. Sun Tan-lin will again be Minister of the Interior. Pai Chien-wu, the famous Machiavelli of Wu Pei-fu's camp, will be Minister of Education, and so forth. The writer has got from Dr. C. T. Wang a flat denial that he has been offered or is contemplating the premiership. It is also reported in the Chinese papers that he is going away. He denies this rumour flatly. He says that his major ambition at the moment is to demonstrate his detachment from the whole squabble. He gives no interviews, makes no statements and deplores the fact that he has been kept busier with callers and telephone calls since the failure of his negotiations than before. He hopes to stay here in retirement and hopes for nothing else. In short he is "fed up," as anyone else who has done a good job and has seen his work shot to pieces would be.

In the sight of the Chinese militarists, the Wang-Karakhan agreement is something to be revived and endorsed. In Moscow's sight it is something to be buried and forgotten. Wellington Koo's fate and the fate of the Cabinet depend entirely upon having this agreement exhumed and revivified. The best judges of such things in Peking feel that this is out of the question. Floral offerings for Dr. Koo and his political colleagues are therefore in order.

Moscow Weary of China's Delays and Demands

Peking, April 6.

M. Karakhan has received a reply from Moscow regarding Dr. Wellington Koo's Note of April 1. It is understood that it amounts to refusal to accept the Chinese suggestions. M. Karakhan has not yet communicated with the Waichiaopu in that connexion and there is reason to believe that further communications are passing between M. Karakhan and Moscow.

Meanwhile, it is reported that M. Karakhan will visit Canton prior to returning to Moscow if the negotiations finally terminate but it seems likely that further efforts will be made before he acknowledges complete failure.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE LINCHENG OUTRAGE

Compensation Claims $363,301: Outstanding Eight Months: No Sign of Payment

Peking, Apr. 4.

The Diplomatic Corps last night forwarded to the Waichiaopu a written inquiry as to their claim to indemnity in connexion with the Lincheng outrage.

The estimates of the indemnity as laid down by the Diplomatic Corps in their Note dated August 10 of last year amount to $354,220, including sums from $143,639, which is demanded by the United States and is the maximum of all the amounts claimed by the six Powers whose nationals fell victims to the Lincheng outrage, down to $6,799, which is demanded by Denmark.—Eastern News Agency.

Official Figures of Claims

Peking, Apr. 7.

Reuter's Agency is informed that the previously published lists of the claims made by the Powers concerned in connexion with the Lincheng agreement are inaccurate, and has been requested to issue the following authoritative statement:—

United States of America.
A.	$91,389.20
B.	52,250.00
Total	$143,639.20
Denmark.
A.	$6,299.85
B.	500.00
Total	$6,799.85
France.
A.	$14,147.20
B.	11,650.00
Total	$25,797.20
Great Britain.
A.	$13,352.50
B.	52,700 00
Total	$66,052.50
Italy.
A.	$99,769.17
B.	9,500.00
	$109,269.17
Mexico.
A.	$4,543.50
B.	7,200.00
Total	$11,743.50
Total A.	$229,501.42
Total B.	133,800.00
Grand Total.	$363,301.42.

—Reuter's Pacific Service.

FRANCE'S WARNING TO PEKING SHE IS NOT TO BE IGNORED IN SINO-RUSSIAN NEGOTIATION

Her Claims to Be Consulted Over Disposal of Russian Concession at Hankow: Soviet News Agency's Indignation

Peking, Apr. 4.

Prefacing the publication of the Note from M. A. J. de Fleuriau, the French Minister, to the Waichiaopu regarding the Russian Concession at Hankow (the first report of which first appeared in the "Far Eastern Times"), the Rosta News Agency says, in connexion with the official denial by the Waichiaopu on March 29 regarding the French Note, that the Russian Mission states that the French Legation communicated the Note to M. Karakhan through the French Military Attaché. The Mission fully appreciates M. Fleuriau's personal courtesy, but it holds a different opinion with regard to this step of the French Legation. "There is no doubt that France, having sent a second Note regarding the relations between Russia and China, is endeavouring practically to obstruct a rapprochement between Russia and China."

The French Minister's Note says that he feels it a duty to invite the attention of the Chinese Government to the status of the Russian Concession at Hankow. The territory of this Concession was originally a part of the territory which the Chinese authorities in 1864 promised to France, but by virtue of the agreement between China, France and Russia in 1896 it was divided between the French and Russian Concessions. According to general usages, agreements thus entered upon cannot be modified without the consent of all the parties concerned. As early as October 8, 1920, the French Consul, on the strength of instructions received by his Legation, called the attention of the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs to the matter. The Commissioner of Foreign Affairs probably communicated with the Waichiaopu on the subject. The position of the Russian Concession at Hankow (continues the French Minister's Note) cannot be changed without the consent of the French Government. Therefore, beforehand, I make reservations regarding all stipulations affecting the territories of the Russian Concession at Hankow which would take place between China and Russia without the French Government being consulted.

Tht Waichiaopu's denial was given on the morning of April 2 and the "Far Eastern Times" publishes to-day a statement by the Secretary to the Waichiaopu to the effect that M. Fleuriau personally handed the above Note to the Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs in the evening of April 2.

The "Far Eastern Times" comments caustically on "Governmental institutions issuing blanket denials without being aware of the facts of the case."—Reuter's Pacific Service.

RUSSIAN BANK AND C. E. RAILWAY

Waichiaopu's Reply to French Memorandum of Protes Against Change of Railway Management: Concurrence of Russian Bank Not Necessary:

Peking, Apr. 10.

The Waichiaopu, in reply to the French Minister's Memorandum of March 29, points out that China contributed Tls. 5,000,000 to the establishment of the Russian Bank, the nationality of which was Russian. The constitution and management of the Chinese Eastern Railway was entrusted to that Bank under the direction of a Chinese President. In 1920 a revised agreement was reached between China and the Russian Bank, whereby China took over control of the C.E.R. pending China's recognition of the Russian Government and the agreement between China and the Russian Government regarding the Railway. The present negotiations between China and Russian are strictly in accordance with the 1920 agreement, which, the Waichiaopu points out, contains no provision requiring previous concurrence of the Russian Bank in any agreement concerning the C.E.R. which may be reached between China and Russia.

The Waichiaopu further points out that the said Bank is a purely Russian concern and no other country has a right to interfere in its affairs. If, owing to the political disturbances in Russia, the said Bank has been placed under French protection, the Waichiaopu in 1920 gave the French Legation reasons why China could not recognize such protection.

Only Chinese and Russians Concerned.

The French Memorandum declared that the French Government would protest against alteration in the existing management of the C.E.R., but, according to the agreement of 1896, Article 1, stocks of the C.E.R. can only be held by Chinese and Russians. The renewed agreement of 1920 makes a similar provision. If any other party has any dealing with the Russian Bank, it is a matter of their own concern and the Chinese Government regrets that it cannot accept such a protest.

The French Memorandum refers to Dr. Wellington Koo's declaration at the Washington Conference regarding the C.E.R. The Waichiaopu points out in that connexion that such declaration referred to China's position from the point of view of China's legitimate sovereign rights and China's responsibilities. In short, the C.E.R. is an enterprise in which Chinese and Russians only are concerned. This is provided for in the agreements and the Chinese Government is acting in accordance with these agreements and believes that the French Minister will appreciate its position.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

FINANCE MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Mr. Wang Ko-ming Going

Peking, Apr. 10.

Mr. Wang Ko-ming, the Minister of Finance, resigned this afternoon.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

OTHER CHANGES.

At yesterday's Cabinet meeting, says the Eastern News Agency, it was decided to appoint Mr. Chang Kuo-kan as Minister of Justice and Dr. Wang Chung-hui, the present Minister of Justice, who is now travelling abroad, as Minister of Education.

LEADING ARTICLES

The North-China Herald
Published every Saturday evening.
PREPAID SUBSCRIPTION
(INCLUDING DELIVERY):
Shanghai ... ...Tls. 12 per annum
Other parts of China „ 13 „

All communications should be addressed to the Secretary, NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS & HERALD LD., to whom all remittances should be made payable.

THE REDDING PIT DISASTER

Apr. 7.

The story of the Redding pit disaster, which we published in a letter from our Trade Union correspondent last week, is one of the most poignant in the long record of mining tragedies Modern industry is built on a foundation of coal; commerce is linked with industry and on these two depend world progress and civilization. Coal is the foodstuff on which manufactures feed and a dearth of coal is almost as terrible in its consequences as one of the great famines that periodically depopulate whole tracts of territory in India or China. We grumble at the cost of the fuel for our domestic comfort but the price paid by the collier who, in his own expressive phrase, "wins" the coal from the bowels of the earth is terribly illustrated in our news columns. Scarcely a week passes in which we have not to chronicle a mining disaster in some part of the world and the heart would be callous indeed that did not thrill with pity for the poor fellows entombed in the mine and threatened with inevitable death by one of several dangers, all of which are but a choice of horrors.

The writer was travelling between Glasgow and Edinburgh while rescue operations were proceeding at Redding pit. "There were four men in the carriage and we were the usual quaternion of unsociable stoics that travel in British trains; each was ensconced in his corner, engrossed in his own concerns and not one had stolen a second glance at his neighbour. Suddenly one man jumped up and, pointing excitedly, said "That is Redding pit!" We were all on our feet in a moment and, crowding round the window, caught a fleeting glimpse of an ordinary pithead around which some fresh scaffolding had been erected. We were wideawake now and our fellow traveller told us that he was a manager of a mine in the north of England and had been summoned to Scotland to assist with his counsel in the rescue operations. Five men had been brought to the surface a few days previously, alive and well, after having been nine days entombed. Being without means of judging the passage of time they had guessed the number of days they had been incarcerated by the growth of beard on their chins and, what astonished us most, was that the highest guess was five days or just about half the actual period. They sat in the highest part of the workings their backs against the wall and the hungry water lapping at their feet: now advancing an inch or two—they measured it by placing bits of coal a span's length from the edge and tested it from time to time by the breadth of their hands—and then slowly receding as the pumps drained it off. It seemed to us that every day passed in that black darkness should have been an eternity but strangely enough the men were amazed when told they had been nine days in the pit. They did not suffer much from hunger and had a super-abundance of water at hand to quench their thirst.

Our friend was a religious enthusiast and showed us a photograph of one of the rescued men who told him that when they had given up hope of rescue they knelt and prayed together. When they had risen from their knees one remembered that there was an old roadway behind the seam of coal against which they leaned their backs. On the off chance that that passage might be free of water and someone possibly in it they knocked with their picks at stated intervals on the wall. It chanced that a mine inspector had penetrated into this part of the working and was wading thigh deep as far as it was possible to go. He heard the knocking and signalled back that rescue was near. Our informant held that it was a certain miracle and none of us was inclined to question the assertion. One could wish that an artist had sketched the scene at the pithead where there was always a crowd of volunteers standing in their "graith," eager to descend the shaft and fight their way to the help of their mates. These men knew the perils they were facing. They had to work at clearing away the silt, in a narrow passage, waist deep in mire, and conscious that the removal of some obstruction might release an inrush of water that would fill the tunnel up to the roof and drown them in its inky flood. Yet not only was there no flinching but when the management declared that no more workers were wanted as they would only impede the labours of those already at work they angrily declared that those in authority were not earnest enough nor willing enough to take risks for the sake of the men below. Ordinary rough colliers they were, but surely heroes though they would have poured derision on any man bold enough to apply that term to them in their presence. And she was surely fit to be a hero's wife who kept her kettle boiling for nine days that her man might have his tea when he came—as at last he did come—to the surface.

TELEPHONE CO. AND COUNCIL

Apr. 8.

THE supplement to the Municipal Gazette issued last Saturday and dealing with the affairs of the Telephone Company deserves to be carefully studied by ratepayers, because it contains the germ of an idea which might govern the Council's relations with all public utility companies. In December last the Company wrote to the Council explaining that they were anxious to substitute the automatic telephone throughout Shanghai for the manual; that this, however, would involve considerable capital outlay; and that, as the franchise possessed under the agreement made with the Council in 1907 constituted the principal security for the shareholders, they would request an extension of this franchise beyond the year 1937 in which it expires. Further correspondence deals with the appointment of a representative by the Council to discuss the question with the Company, with evidence supplied by the latter that the automatic telephone has thoroughly proved its utility in other countries, and with a request by the Company for the most prompt decision possible, in order to avoid expense that must ensue from any protracted uncertainty as to which system, manual or automatic, is to prevail. It may here be emphasized that the correspondence shows that all negotiations have been conducted in the greatest amity, the Council expressing themselves as "much impressed by the conciliatory spirit shown by (the Company's) directors and officials throughout."

In the concluding letter published we come to the gist of the matter. The Council agree to the automatic telephone, to the extension of the franchise and to revision of the tariff. But they also desire to revise the agreement in other particulars. It is, the letter says, > the Council's considered opinion that the agreements under which the public utility companies of Shanghai at present operate do not allow for an adequate measure of control being exercised by the ratepayers' representatives over certain vital matters of financial and general policy.

How this control might be secured is set out in a memorandum whose main principles are to identify the directors' interests with those of the Council; to provide adequate interest for shareholders and maintenance of property; and to make the subscriber's interest and not the shareholder's the incentive for economical running—obviously a difficult matter if the shareholder's dividends are to be limited. The attached memorandum shows that the tariff would be so revised as to secure to shareholders a dividend of eight per cent., while building up an equalization of dividends account and a reserve account (under certain limitations). The yearly surplus would be transferred to an account which would accumulate during five-year periods, at the end of each of which the tariff would be revised, it is hoped in a downward direction. Quarterly reports would be submitted to the Council and the Company's books would at all times be open to their inspection. They would also nominate one director. The agreement would be revised for periods of ten years at a time, at the end of any of which the Council would have the right to buy out the Company on a fair valuation, arbitrators to be called in if necessary.

Now there can be no question that most people will agree with the principle laid down in the paragraph quoted above in small type. The Council must control the doings of the public utility companies. We are not wholly prepared to say that any very great degree of mischief has as yet arisen from the present position of affairs; but there has at least been an insupportable amount of friction and, with the continuous growth of the Settlement, ratepayers may well wish that the Council's authority should be more clearly defined. At the same time we believe the general feeling is against purchase outright. The success made by the Electricity Department affords no analogy. For that undertaking was built up by the Municipality from very small beginnings. If the Council had, from the beginning, put in its own water supply, trams and telephones, the case would have been quite different. To take over any of these concerns now would not only mean enormous outlay—and we have quite enough loans outstanding—but might very well entail actual loss, for, in the case of the Waterworks Co. at least, there are profitable side lines which the Council would have to pay for but which it might very likely not be allowed to operate, through fear of unfair competition with private firms. Therefore the desideratum is control without purchase. Does the memorandum secure it? In the case of the Telephone Company it might do so, because that is a "mutual" concern and only two years ago, we think, at the annual general meeting objection was raised by one speaker to the size of the dividends on the ground that all earnings beyond a certain sum ought to be used for a downward revision of the tariff. But with other public utility companies, the prospect of an immovably fixed dividend, however much the business of the concern increased, might be discouraging. It may be said that this matter is provided for by the Council's having a director on the board. But it has first to be ascertained whether the Company, whatever it was, would accept the whole arrangement as set forth. The memorandum unquestionably contains the nucleus of a good scheme—the best yet advanced. But we do not feel altogether certain that, as it stands, it would secure what it is meant to achieve, if the party of the other side were inclined to be contumacious.

WATERWORKS AND COUNCIL

Apr. 9.

FOLLOWING so closely upon the Council's scheme as regards the Telephone Company that the two are clearly part of one comprehensive idea, another supplement of the Gazette has been issued dealing with the Waterworks. Seven years have elapsed since the terrible controversy between this Company and the Council began; both sides are utterly weary of it, and so, assuredly, are the public. But now at last there appears a real prospect of settlement. Both parties have offered forms of compromise which have sufficient in common to afford hope of agreement. What is, perhaps, even more important, they have got to the point of a round-table conference. There are, we may hope, to be no more letters, which really, in cases of this kind, are, far more than money, the root of all evil.

It is not necessary to go further into ancient history than the Council's letter of January 18 to the Company and the latter's reply of February 22. In the former the Council quoted the opinion of two eminent barristers to support their contention that a price based upon the net maintainable income of one year would be a fair sum to pay for the purchase of the Company. The latter replied with the opinion of two other barristers, possibly even more eminent (at least, one of them has since been made a judge), that such a suggestion was farcical and showing that, whereas the Company ask for some fifteen millions, the Council's offer would mean less than eight. At the close of their letter, however, the Company suggest a compromise in the form of profit-sharing, a fixed rate of interest being secured to shareholders, the Company to be permitted to instal meters and charge for its water by them and the Council to be represented on the Board of Directors. Now we come to the supplement issued yesterday. The Council object to the Company framing any scheme of compromise on the lines just mentioned > for the reason that the questions at issue are so numerous and serious and the viewpoints so dissimilar that any scheme prepared by your Directors would be unlikely to fully provide for the requirements considered necessary by the Council.

Those requirements, as stated yesterday in connexion with the Telephone Company, are that the Council must, in ratepayers' interest, exercise an adequate measure of control over the operation of public utilities. The Council, therefore, enclose a memorandum "continuing the undertaking as a Limited Company subject to control by the Council over certain essential matters," very similar to that sent to the Telephone Company. The shareholders in the Waterworks would be guaranteed nine per cent. interest; special provision is made to meet difficulties arising from the fact that the Company's capital is in gold but their revenue in silver; the plumbing and fittings department would be transferred to a subsidiary company; and the Council would have two nominees on the Board of Directors. The desired charge by meter is accepted.

Of this scheme we would repeat what we said yesterday in connexion with the Telephone Company, namely, that it appears by far the best arrangement yet put forward; it would ensure a large measure of control by the Council; and all that is necessary for its success is a reasonable amount of goodwill on each side, which it is sincerely to be hoped will be born when the two parties actually meet in conference instead of bombarding each other with letters. And this hope is supported by the fact that the Council's scheme and that suggested by the Company are not, on broad lines, violently discrepant.

One point, however, in the Council's letter calls for comment. Early in it we read that the Council will at the forthcoming Ratepayers' Meeting again ask for authority to proceed with the purchase negotiations, fully realizing that this will result in the submission of the question to arbitration.

At the end we find that, as an alternative to the purchase resolution, an alternative clause will be introduced at the forthcoming ratepayers' meeting, > requesting authority (as an alternative to purchase) to proceed with the negotiations for revising the Agreement of 1905 on the lines indicated in the Memorandum (summarized above).

Now there cannot be the slightest necessity for the Council to seek powers to negotiate. What else does it exist for? Certainly it must ask the ratepayers' approval for any line of action it wishes to take as the result of negotiation: but the preliminary discussions are entirely a matter for its own discretion. On the other hand, the proposed pur chase resolution appears to us highly dangerous. We do not for one moment think that ratepayers desire to buy the Waterworks; it is very much open to doubt whether they can afford to do so; the one certainty about arbitration is that it would fix the purchase price higher than what the Council offer; and it is always on the cards that a snap vote would compel the Council to buy. We strongly urge that the purchase resolution be dropped. Matters have reached this point that all the wearisome correspondence of the past seven years can be pitched into the waste-paper basket; the two parties are to meet in conference, and each one is prepared with a scheme of compromise sufficiently alike to give hope of agreement. We cannot see that for the present anything more is needed.

RUE DU CONSULAT

Apr. 10.

A year or two ago when traffic problems of the Settlement were being discussed in these columns, a correspondent wrote suggesting that if the buildings on either side of Nanking Road were arcaded, a great deal would have been done to solve the difficulties of the case. The principle was that by this method a convenient means of passage for pedestrians would be provided and by removal or at any rate curtailment of the present pavement space more room for vehicular traffic would be available. Nothing has come of the suggestion so far as Nanking Road is concerned, and although one well-known establishment has since arcaded its frontage the proportions of the arcade indicate that it was done with the object of improving the amenity of those desirous of inspecting its shop windows rather than as a way of offering a solution of the traffic problem. It will further be realized that unless carried out along the whole distance of the thoroughfare no real relief would come about. In view of the suggestion then made, it is interesting to learn from the Bulletin Municipal that the French Municipal Council means to put it into force in the case of one of its main traffic arteries, the most important one, Rue du Consulat. The matter of communication with their western areas has been the subject of as much hard thinking to the French authorities as to those of the Foreign Settlement, and it has been obvious that Rue du Consulat is the thoroughfare where the spending of money will be productive of the best results.

Rue du Consulat is in a distinctly more unfavourable condition than Nanking Road. Except at a very few points there is enough room in the Maloo for motor cars and rickshas to pass the tramcars, and it only requires the demolition of a few properties to make that condition general over all its length. This is not so in the case of Rue du Consulat, and there are whole stretches where all traffic is limited to the speed of the tramway and has practically to stop when it stops. How to obviate this has been a matter for the gravest consideration. The ideal scheme would be to undertake road widening on an heroic scale—a scale calling for wholesale expropriation of property belonging to owners of street frontages on either side, but it would require such an enormous sum to do so that hardly a set of Councillors would be found to suggest it. Yet something has got to be done, and for some time past the French Council has been at work on this scheme of arcades on both sides of the street from the Bund to Boulevard de Montigny. A short notice in the Bulletin Municipal last week gave the information that the plan had been approved, and now comes the further information that the Council has come to an agreement with the proprietors concerned for its accomplishment. The result will eventually be that the present pavements will be abolished, thus making room for the heavy vehicular traffic which Rue du Consulat has to bear, and every building will be provided with an arcade of like breadth and height, thus affording a covered-in passageway for pedestrians. The height of the arcades will be twenty-one feet which will make them light and airy, and when the scheme has been completed it should make Rue du Consulat quite an attractive thoroughfare. Even if it does not turn out to be picturesque, though very probably it will, as apart from the arcade there will be no limitation to the design of buildings, it will prove a boon to all traffic.

In view of the fact that a similar suggestion has been put forward for Nanking Road the details of how the agreement between the Council and the proprietors has been reached will be found of importance to those on this side who are interested in civic matters. The agreement stipulates that as compensation for landowners who thus surrender what would otherwise be part of the ground-floor frontage of their buildings, the Council will make a payment to the amount of one-third of the assessed value of the land called for and will reduce the taxation to that extent. Furthermore, the Council will bear the cost of the erection of the arcades. This seems a perfectly equitable arrangement, and doubtless the Council will recoup itself as time goes on in the way of an increased assessment owing to the improvement in property values. One great regret there will be, in that the alteration cannot be brought into force all at once: it will only be possible to do it by degrees as the present buildings are demolished and new ones erected in their stead. And so before it is completed it is likely that about ten years will elapse. Meanwhile, wherever a new building goes up an arcade will appear, and it is understood that we are to see the first instalment in the course of a very few months. This will be at the west end of Rue du Consulat in the vicinity of Boulevard de Montigny. Building operations are also shortly to be undertaken opposite the French Consulate at the Bund corner, and under the new regulations this will have its arcade, and once these examples are before the public it should gain in popularity and hasten rebuilding. Meanwhile as the French Council has not changed the name of any of its streets for about six months, a witty Frenchman suggests that there is now a fitting opportunity for a pursuit of this popular pastime and that Rue du Consulat might fittingly be named Rue d'Arcade or Boulevard des Arcadiens.

MUSSOLINI'S TRIUMPH

Apr. 11

As a result of the Italian elections which have just been concluded Signor Mussolini may look forward to a five years' term of office in which to bring his many schemes to a condition approaching fruition. It is very important for Europe that the elections should have resulted in this way, for Italy to-day is one of the leading Continental Powers and her attitude on every question of international politics makes its effect felt. That the Fascisti with Signor Mussolini at their head would again be returned to office was generally accepted; nevertheless there must be a feeling of thankfulness that no untoward event has occurred to impair their power, and we may rest assured that in European politics Italy for the coming years will be all for sanity and moderation. The reason for the elections just concluded was that Mussolini, notwithstanding his majority, felt that the Italian Parliament did not represent the people, and with an honesty and courage all too rare in politics but of which Mr. Baldwin, the late British Prime Minister, gave an example, he went to the country. He has fared better than the Conservative leader in Britain, and he deserves his success. In an article written a few months ago, Lord Rothermere alluded to Mussolini as the saviour of western Europe from Bolshevism, and the facts of the case bear him out. When the Fascist movement took shape Italy was in process of being painted a revolutionary red, and it required the efforts, often unconstitutional, of the Fascisti to put that manifestation down. It was not, however, killed until Mussolini himself went to the electorate and with his band of young men marched into power at the head of the polls.

The amazing thing is that Mussolini is not a politician as such, and in fact wants to eliminate politics as much as possible. He does not want a Parliament of professional office-seekers to do his behests, but he wants a Parliament of experts representing the different industries and classes in the country. How far he has succeeded in doing this we do not as yet know, but we may be certain that he has gone some distance along this path, for all the Fascist candidates have been chosen by him personally because of their qualifications in the direction mentioned. He did not insist that the majority at which he aimed in these elections should be purely Fascist, but intimated a preference for a party that would follow him representing the broad national spirit of Italy. Thus it was that he brought Signor Orlando into his fold and persuaded Signor Salandra, another ex-Premier to accept the Fascist point of view. Fascism required support in Sicily, for instance, and Signor Orlando, who is a native of the island, influenced people there as well as in southern Italy where the movement was of slow growth. It was not that support alone that he wanted, but to get all the best elements of the country under his wing. It was an ideal which statesmen in other countries have aimed at but failed in achieving, but he succeeded in it. But he did an almost better thing: he declined to tamper with the Socialist and kindred parties in the country. No support was asked from them; rather it is believed that he considered that they would provide a thoroughly useful opposition which would direct a searching scrutiny on all his work. In this he was very wise, for nobody in power to-day in any country would wish to be without his opposition. Its actions give homogeneity to a party without which it would probably disintegrate and the dissatisfied themselves provide a much more inconvenient force against which to contend.

In a necessarily brief review of what Signor Mussolini has done since assuming office we find first of all a striking improvement in Italy's financial condition. The incidence of taxation in Italy formerly was very unequal, some people paying hardly any taxes and others being overtaxed. Mussolini introduced no new taxation, but revised the whole principle and generally increased the revenue. On luxuries the imposts were enlarged, and an improvement in the national balance was effected by a wholesale dismissal of unnecessary government officials. His first year of office saw a saving of a milliard and a half of lire, and the budget deficit for the year ending next June (1923-24) will, it is expected, be no more than seven hundred million lire. The 1924-25 budget is expected to balance. This is being done notwithstanding a heavy deficit on the railways and the interest on a large internal loan floated to relieve the inhabitants in the devastated districts. Nor is this all, for to reduce the price of bread the former profitable tax on imported wheat has been removed, while succession duties for those in direct descent have been abolished. This latter is one of the most striking manifestations of the policy of the man. As in England to-day, death duties were formerly so heavy in Italy that a son upon succeeding to his father's estate generally found himself compelled to sell out after paying them. Mussolini was in his early days a Communist, but he has travelled far since then, and it is not surprising to see a great patriot realizing the tragedy of the break-up of families in this way. Accordingly between father and son, brother and sister succession duties have been abolished, although where property goes out of the direct line they still exist. But for the removal of these duties the budget in the past two years would have been readily balanced, but, having seen the great estates of Great Britain gradually pass away, often into the possession of war profiteers, we can readily sympathize with Signor Mussolini's feeling in the matter. It will help to keep the country together, and a Premier with a policy of this sort will command the confidence of Europe.

If Sun Yat-sen is not actually embracing Bolshevism, some of his supporters are dangerously flirting with it. The old saw of "playing with fire" has equal force in this case, for recent developments are widening the rift between capital, as represented by the merchant classes and landed gentry, and labour as represented by the Guilds. It had not inspired confidence in the merchants to realize that in the work of propaganda for the spread of this cult a prominent part is being taken by Tse Ying-pak, a notorious Marxist who has taken no trouble to conceal the fact that he is essentially antagonistic to capital.

CHINA AND FAMINE RELIEF

Apr. 12.

With its vast area of over 4,000,000 square miles and with means of communication between one district and another still in a very primitive condition, except for two or three lines of railway, it is not surprising that China should be frequently visited in one part or another by famine. The usual causes are prolonged drought, floods, hail, frost and locusts. During recent years the disasters of nature have been aggravated by brigandage and lawlessness generally. Appeals for help to the destitute are made by various charitable associations and always meet with a generous response from foreigners. In 1921 the principal of these associations combined to form the China International Famine Relief Commission. Its purpose is not only to relieve the hungry multitudes but also to prevent the recurrence of famines. The Commission has now published its second annual report. It is a pleasure to note that the various financial statements are given in full and have been properly audited. It would be well if the same care were exercised by every department of the Chinese Government, and by all Chinese public companies and benevolent associations.

The greatest amount of relief work done during the year was in the province of Chêkiang, where three typhoons in rapid succession had devastated the country-side and brought death and desolation in their train. At one time it was estimated that 250,000 people were face to face with starvation, whilst 400,000 others possessed insufficient means of subsistence. It has been found by experience that by far the best way to relieve the famine-stricken is to spend immediately all the money received in the purchase of maize, which is then distributed. This method is superior to money doles as it prevents leakage and steadies the price of food stuffs. Food is given freely to the aged, infirm, and to children and widows without support. All others have to work for their food. Praise is given to the Shanghai Committee for the energy it displayed in organizing and conducting a campaign to raise the needed funds. Altogether it collected the generous sum of $1,009,252.10. Of this amount, $713,252.10 was raised by public subscriptions, and $296,000 was allocated from the Maritime Customs surtax. In the provinces of Honan, Shansi and Shensi there were also districts which suffered from drought, but in each province the situation quickly improved.

Human nature being what it is, as soon as the worst was over, there were new difficulties. Numerous Chinese made requests for aid because of losses not always traceable to famine. The local committees stood firm, refusing to swerve from the original purpose of the organization, especially as they knew that to grant money doles would only have a demoralizing effect on the recipients. In its provincial report the Honan Association writes:—

"After three years' work in the famine relief in Honan, this Association feels that the situation at the present time calls for very serious thought. We have organized on a permanent basis, which means that the Association should be constantly functioning along the line of its objects, viz. famine relief and famine prevention. But we now begin to see that having a permanent committee for famine relief means that for every little setback through rain, hail, frost, drought locusts, bandits or soldiers, appeals from all districts are received requesting help. There seems to have developed a spirit of dependency upon the Association, which is almost akin to a pauper spirit. In view of this, we are strongly in favour of refusing to function for famine relief, except in cases of very great urgency, which should be determined by the Commission in Peking; and, on the other hand, we should as a permanent agency, concentrate our efforts upon famine prevention only."

The Commission now intends to devote its energy mainly to engineering projects for the prevention of famines. The most important of these is the Huai River Conservancy scheme, which it is expected will bring under cultivation 50,000,000 mow of land, capable of producing rice to the value of $375,000,000 yearly, in addition to the 62,000,000 mow of land inundated a year ago which resulted in a loss of rice production amounting to over $613,000,000. Hence it is said to be "one of the world's biggest conservancy schemes." Many influential Americans are interested in it and it has been suggested that the whole, or a part, of the balance of the American share of the Boxer indemnity, amounting to some $15,000,000 (U.S. currency) should be devoted to this purpose. Unfortunately there are Chinese who do not regard the scheme with favour if the expenditure of this fund is to be under foreign control. The motive of some of these objectors we may be certain is not pure and disinterested; they do not care for the poor but they would like to "carry the bag." Others are very sensitive and think they will "lose face" unless Chinese have full control, and rather than "lose face" they would prefer to see the whole of the money disappear as the dew on a summer morning (according to a Chinese proverb, "there is dew for every blade of grass,") without conferring the slightest benefit on their land or people. Whatever the motive, this opposition exists. The American Chamber of Commerce in its recent report makes the statement :—

"It has come to the attention of the Board that an organized campaign is being conducted in America to obtain remission of this fund to be administered by a committee, the majority of whom are non-Americans."

Its own opinion is, that any expenditure of this Indemnity fund should be closely supervised by an American committee composed of representatives of the United States diplomatic or consular services and of the American business and missionary organizations in China. We are certain that nearly all foreigners in China will heartily agree with the American position. The Chinese have not yet learned that public office is a public trust. Until they do learn, full confidence cannot be felt in their control and disposition of public funds. It is very discouraging to see a magnificent scheme for the permanent benefit of thousands of Chinese people, imperilled by cupidity, foolish pride, and indifference to the sufferings of the poor.

BUCHAREST, Apr. 6.—Prince Naruhiko Higashikuni has left for Paris.—Reuter.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Prohibition Results

A correspondent has sent us the following extract from the report of the Washington Convention, on the results of prohibition in the United States, during its first four years of operation.

The first four years of prohibition, in spite of the organized resistance of the outlawed liquor traffic, have brought these encouraging results:—

Over 873,000 lives were saved by the reduction in the death rate during the four years of prohibition, giving to insurance companies a "gain in mortality" of $678,769,000.

The ratio of drunkenness arrests to population has fallen throughout the nation to a point equivalent to 500,000 fewer such arrests in 1923, or a decrease of 2,000,000 in the four dry years.

Penal institution commitments have decreased, as shown by the lower ratio per 100,000 population, by 20,000 in the four dry years.

Reports from typical charity societies indicate that $74,000,000 is available for constructive welfare work from funds formerly used to care for destitution caused by drink.

Industrial accidents have decreased by a quarter of a million annually, lowering production costs and adding to human values.

The billions of dollars formerly spent destructively for liquor are now turning many mill wheels of industry and business.

Over $5,000,000,000 were expended for automobiles in 1923. Over 4,000,000 new automobiles were made and sold during the year in this country. Alcoholized drivers of these machines would have made our roads into shambles of death if prohibition had not intervened.

Over a billion dollars was added to our saving accounts and over eleven billion dollars to our insurance policies during 1923 alone.

Home building in 1923 averaged 2,000 more new homes per month than in 1919, in spite of labour costs.

The churches have known a new Pentecost on each of the 365 days of 1923, adding 2,500 new members per day to their rolls.

High schools and colleges are unable to care for the throngs of youth able to seek higher education since the saloon drain on the family purse has been eliminated.

The outlawing of 177,790 licensed saloons which sapped the health, drained the ambition, emptied the purses of their victims, has made possible much of these gains.

Prohibition does not claim the entire credit for all of these results but only a nation that was sober could have experienced this uniform development of all helpful things or the accompanying decrease of the harmful forces.

These are just the first fruits of prohibition. They have come in spite of the imperfections of enforcement. When wet politicians are no longer allowed to place accomplices in appointive positions, when propagandists of liquor are no longer allowed to incite men to violate the Constitution, when law and order are supreme, then in wealth, health, character, power and achievement America will show the world to what heights a self-governing people can rise when freed from the chains of alcohol.

That the condition of big cities like New York is no indication of the state of the country as a whole, we may well believe. And we should be the very last to deny the benefit of bringing up thousands and millions of children never to know the taste of alcohol. Yet we cannot get away from the feeling that prohibition is a vicious infringement of liberty and a confession of weakness. It appears to be a case of doing evil that good may come and in this instance at least we have not yet lived long enough to see the final result.

Prohibition

The letters received to-day on the subject of prohibition reveal the usual inability of enthusiasts to think clearly. We are told that if we remove the embargo on alcohol we must equally allow people to steal, to be cruel, to be loose-livers. But there is no analogy whatever between these and taking alcohol. To be loose in sex relations, to steal, to be cruel, are either anti-social, immoral or both. But there is nothing whatever morally or socially wrong in taking alcohol. If there were, should we find in the Bible the miracle of Cana in Galilee, and St. Paul distinctly recommending Timothy to drink wine? We hesitate to bring in sectarian considerations. But the Roman Catholic Church, than which no institution has more closely studied questions of public and private morality or has stricter laws concerning them, has never prohibited alcohol. Again, whether alcohol is a sedative or a stimulant has nothing whatever to do with the case. The one is not more injurious than the other if taken in excess. And that is the whole point of the question. The old, old distinction between moderate drinking and drinking to excess, which applies with almost equal, sometimes greater, force to practically everything that man does. We called the prohibition enactment a vicious infringement of liberty because we think it is. What we choose to do as a matter of our own convictions is our own affair. But we have no right to force those convictions on other people where neither crime nor immorality is concerned. To do that is tyranny and if tyranny does not deserve to be called vicious we do not know what does; and tyranny, even if exerted for good ends, is apt to breed its own crop of evil results. The Washington Convention claimed 873,000 lives saved in four years by reduction of death due to prohibition: to-day, a correspondent in America quotes insurance records of 200,000 deaths annually from drinking bootleg whiskey,—in other words, attributable to prohibition. Let it not be thought for one moment that we defend drinking. As we said above the fact that millions of children are being brought up ignorant of the taste of alcohol is a great good. The sorrow that drunkenness brings does much to convert one to prohibition. But not all. Intolerance appears to be a foible of America judging by the extent to which it is castigated in American plays, books and films. The parent of prohibition, it is also directly fostered by it and we have yet to see in what other directions it will break out. This was what we meant by saying that we have not yet lived long enough to see the final result of prohibition.

More Piracy

An interesting note on "a new form of Chinese piracy" appears in the "Textile Mercury" of February 23 and deserves that attention should be called to it. The item is as follows:—

Morals are considered by some philosophers to be relative. Certainly humanity has no fixed standard and what to one people is highly moral conduct is to another race the final depth of infamy. Brigandage is in some Christian countries still looked upon by many as a highly respectable means of livelihood. Not so many centuries ago many of our ancestors were following highly esteemed professions which to-day would undoubtedly be described as piracy. We are inclined to think that the admiration so many have for the gentlemanly brigand or pirate is not altogether without substantial moral foundation.

To-day there are other forms of piracy, which have no redeeming feature. The piracy of ideas by underhand, or any other, means is something that cannot be tolerated. Most countries have laws specially made to prevent such a form of theft so that to-day in nearly every civilized country there are patent and copyright laws. The Chinese have always had a very high standing for their commercial integrity; the more experience one has of Chinese as a class the more one comes to admire their strict honesty. From information we have received this week it would appear that Chinese are running a grave risk of losing their reputation for honesty.

Messrs. Youlten Openers, Ld., have been demonstrating their new machine in China, and have given every facility for the machines to be tried on Chinese cotton, even to the extent of allowing their machines to be erected on approval in local mills. Evidently some unscrupulous Chinese have taken advantage of such generous treatment, and after making complete measurements of the machine have now commenced to manufacture pirated copies. The extraordinary feature of this moral backsliding is that a local Shanghai paper describes this as "A Chinese Enterprise."

The "Textile Mercury" mentions the name of the Chinese firm concerned in this matter and the paper which reported so favourably on their work. We do not propose to advertise such enterprise, but those who want the information may find it in the "Textile Mercury."

Wireless on Coasters

The subject of fitting wireless aboard ships trading on the China Coast is revived by the news of a scheme in Hongkong for training Chinese as operators. Two of the leading shipping firms there are supporting the project to establish a training school, and we may trust that all shipping firms may sooner rather than later see their way to do likewise. Once a school for Chinese operators has been set going and is turning out competent men in numbers adequate to the demand, there will be no excuse for any of the local coasting vessels not possessing wireless communication. This is a matter which has been the subject of much animadversion for the past few years, and one argument used against its introduction was the expense which shipping companies would have to bear in employing foreign operators. Even so, the leading firms considered generally that this was desirable and have gradually been moving in the direction of providing the larger of their steamers with the necessary apparatus and personnel. In the case of the smaller craft, however, it has not hitherto been found feasible. The difficulties in the way will surely now be largely removed by the provision of trained Chinese, hence we may look forward to seeing it adopted on a large scale. A very well-known officer on the China Coast, writing in these columns shortly after the Hong Mow disaster on the Lammocks, described wireless as the finest life-saving device ever invented, and there is no doubt that he was right. We see it to-day in the case of the pilgrim ship Frangestan whose passengers but for that must have been in a sore plight.

South African Politics

Genuine disappointment appears to be felt by all political parties in South Africa upon the news of the postponement of the Prince of Wales's visit. When the political crisis arose and Gen. Smuts suggested the postponement in question, the matter seemed to possess a very grave significance in view of the political atmosphere in the country. One section of the populace is frankly separatist and their policy is to drop out of the British Empire whenever a convenient opportunity occurs, while another is said to be Bolshevist in a very wholehearted way. Against these two is the party formerly led by Gen. Botha and now under the command of that very able statesman and soldier, Gen. Smuts. A defeat of this latter party might always provoke serious consequences in the country, and the possibilities of the case could by no means be overlooked, and in such a condition of affairs a visit by the Prince of Wales would be unthinkable. Mr. Hertzog, the leader of the Nationalist Party, has now made it more or less clear that no matter what party is returned at the coming elections, the invitation to the Prince will be renewed, and it is very satisfactory to hear this expression of sentiment. It must go a long way to allay the fears which from time to time have been expressed concerning South Africa.

Chinese Education

While the correspondence on the education of Chinese children shows signs of petering out, it may be well to recall people's minds to a point which was overlooked in Mr. Lockwood's letter and has continued to be overlooked by most advocates of universal education for Chinese children by the Council ever since. Most of them write as if the Education Commission had reported against the Council's doing any more in this direction. It did exactly the reverse. It suggested to the Council "that their aim should be to make good citizens of the Chinese," and it advocated a scheme of grants-in-aid to Chinese schools on the same lines as the grants given to St. Francis Xavier's and some other schools: and further than this we read that the Commission is "strongly in favour of a school for Chinese girls, a school of higher primary and middle grade. As schools for Chinese boys have been instituted and stand as models for future schools that may be instituted by the Chinese themselves it is desirable that a Chinese Girls School should also be established as a model, provided that the Chinese themselves cooperate with the Municipality as they have already done in the various schools for Chinese boys that already exist." These quotations are enough to show that the Commission considered the question of Chinese education very carefully and was in favour of the Council's doing considerably more than has yet been done. But it stopped short at any idea of Council schools for all Chinese children in the Settlement, certainly not fewer than 150,000, possibly twice that number. The Commission took strong exception to the assumption that "it is the duty of the Council to see that primary education is within the reach of the children of all ratepayers" whether foreign or Chinese. And those who realize the difference between the Council's position and that of other governing bodies will probably agree with it.

Trademark Law

Great satisfaction and relief will be felt by business men generally at the strong tone adopted by the Diplomatic Body in their latest note to the Waichiaopu on the Trademark Law. Whereas at the beginning of February they appeared prepared to accept the Law on "three considerations and one essential condition," none of which, however, touched the all-essential point of the preservation of extraterritorial rights, they have now written to inform the Waichiaopu that its note of March 20 is not sufficient to enable the foreign Ministers to advise their Governments to recognize the law. Furthermore the Diplomatic Body point out that, whether or not their nationals register, any case of complaint "Will have to be dealt with according to the stipulations of the treaties concerning the settlement of disputes between Chinese and Treaty Power nationals." This is really the whole crux of the matter. Insistance on this point at once invalidates the projected system under which appeals from the Trademark Bureau were only to be heard by Chinese courts and no diplomatic representation could be made in respect of them until the process of all the three designated Chinese courts had been exhausted. So much, we feel bound to add, for the advantages of publicity. There is little doubt that the Diplomatic Body had not, at the beginning of February, been perfectly informed by their advisers as to the full bearings of the Trademark Law. The tremendous agitation conducted in Shanghai and prosecuted at considerable expense in London, supplied them with a point of view which had not up till then been put before them and at the same time strengthened their hands in rejecting the specious subterfuges of the Waichiaopu.

The Invisible Ray

The invisible ray discovered by German and British scientists which is claimed to be able to bring motor cars and aeroplanes to a standstill must now be claiming the closest attention of military authorities throughout the whole world. If it is found workable it means that tanks and a great deal more of the paraphernalia of the late war will be now obsolescent. That, however, will not put an end to war. As soon as the principles of the invisible ray are fully known it will be the business of other scientists to find means to neutralize it, and inevitably an antidote will be produced. It will then be once more the old contest between the heavy gun and battleship armour which has never ceased, although the Washington Conference may have for the time being reduced its intensity. Further, it will make war still more a business for scientists than ever before, and no doubt will have a very great effect on its character. It is thus given us to speculate anew as to whether Sir Percy Scott may not now justify himself in his contention that the capital ship is antiquated. Hitherto he has worked on the theory of the coming supremacy of the submarine, but these new invisible rays may prove infinitely more potent when once developed.

NEWS FROM THE OUTPORTS

CHINESE GOVERNMENT'S REBUKE TO THE SOVIET ENVOY

Karakhan Accused of Deliberately Raising Technical Points so as to Escape Further Discussion: China Always Ready to Negotiate Treaty on Three Essential Stipulatons

From Rodney Gilbert.

Peking, April 2.

I have received from the Waichiaopu the following translation of the full text of the Chinese Government's reply to Mr. Karakhan's memorandum of March 24, which was forwarded last evening:—

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has received the Memorandum of the Extraordinary Plenipotentiary Representative of the U.S.S.R. to China. In reply, it desires first of all to refer to certain points of misunderstanding which may have been the cause of his failure to appreciate the sincerity of the Chinese Government for an early restoration of normal relations between China and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics

1. Without the least intention of drawing the Soviet Envoy into a discussion of the authority of the Chinese Representative, the Ministry wishes to call the attention of the Soviet Envoy to the fact that the communication of March 28, 1923, upon the strength of which Mr. Karakhan signed the preliminary texts of certain agreements with the Chinese Delegate, merely stated that Dr. Wang was authorized by Presidential Mandate to prepare for, and carry on, the Sino-Russian negotiations. There was nothing in the communication to warrant Mr. Karakhan's assumption that the Chinese Delegate had authority to sign.

The Soviet Envoy has rightly admitted in his memorandum that the documents so signed on March 24 are preliminary texts of the agreement subject to the approval or rejection of the Chinese Government. But the Ministry cannot share his view that such preliminary texts should be looked upon as precluding all possibility of modifications. For, as Mr. Karakhan well knows now, the termination of such negotiations by signature on the part of the Chinese Delegate was not authorized.

KARAKHAN SEEKING ESCAPE.

If Mr. Karakhan should persist in declining further discussion on the ground that all negotiations have been terminated, it would seem that he was bent more upon taking advantage of an incident in the course of the negotiation than trying to avoid a possible impasse in the settlement of Sino-Russian relations.

Moreover, the position of the Chinese Government is all the more justifiable in view of the fact that the negotiations between Dr. Wang and Mr. Karakhan had been in the nature of informal conversations, as Mr. Karakhan had insisted on avoiding all formal negotiations.

2. The Ministry is gratified to learn from the memorandum of Mr. Karakhan under reply that the three-days limit was not meant to be an obstacle to getting a settlement, but to hasten such a result. But it is most surprising that the Soviet Envoy, after having set the time-limit, should turn round and blame China for not having asked an extension thereof. The view of the Chinese Government is that it was a mistake on the part of the Soviet Envoy to have set a time limit at all, for it appears to be an unprecedented procedure for one party to set a time limit to the other in the nature of a threat when both were engaged in a common task of establishing friendly relations. The Chinese Government did not ask to prolong it, because they could not recognize that the Soviet Envoy had any right to impose a time limit to the Chinese Government.

THIRD PARTY INTERFERENCE.

3. As regards the assertion on the part of the Soviet Envoy concerning the alleged interference of a third Power in the negotiations for the re-establishment of normal relations between China and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, it is entirely beside the point. The Chinese Government must decline to discuss with Mr. Karakhan China's relations with other Powers. It would suffice to reiterate here what the Ministry had already stated in previous communications that the Chinese Government will not permit its policy vis-à-vis of the Sino-Russian negotiations to be interfered with by any outside influence.

4. The Ministry desires equally to point out that the Chinese Government had not disavowed any agreement formally concluded, as Mr. Karakhan himself had admitted that the signed documents are but preliminary texts of the proposed agreements. If he should refuse to discuss such modifications with a view to the completion of the proposed agreements and insist upon returning to the position of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics at the beginning of his conversations with Dr. Wang, it would merely be another proof that the responsibility for the delay rested with the Soviet Government and not with the Chinese Government.

ESSENTIAL MODIFICATION.

5. As regards the proposed agreements, the Chinese Government are ready to approve and sign them provided the following modifications be effected in the preliminary text of the proposed agreement on general principles:

(a) In paragraph 2 of Article 4 of the preliminary text of the proposed agreement, it is apparent that there is a serious omission concerning the obligations of the U.S.S.R. While the Chinese Government declare all treaties, agreements, etc., between China and any third party or parties affecting the sovereign rights or interests of the U.S.S.R. null and void, the obligation of the Soviet Government concerning the same principle is limited only to those treaties, agreements, etc., concluded between the Tsarist Government and any third party or parties. No mention is made of treaties, agreements, etc., between Russia since the Tsarist Government and any third party or parties affecting the sovereign rights and interests of China. It would certainly conform to the principle of reciprocity and equal treatment if the Chinese and Soviet Governments should make reciprocal renunciations of the same nature and scope. This is a point to which Mr. Karakhan can have no serious objection for it is in full harmony with the policy of the U.S.S.R. as enunciated in the two Declarations of the Soviet Government.

(b) The withdrawal of Soviet troops from Outer Mongolia should be made a more definite undertaking on the part of the U.S.S.R. It should not be made conditional, though necessary details to carry out the withdrawal may be arranged later at the Conference. In other words, the wording of the said provision should be so modified as to make it clear that there is no intention to prejudice the principle of inviolability of territorial sovereignty.

(c) As the Government of the U.S.S.R. have not yet furnished the Chinese Government with necessary information concerning the size, nature, number and location of the different Orthodox Churches in China, the proposed exchange of Notes providing for the transfer of the church properties to the Government of U.S.S.R. ought best to be left in abeyance; the question can be more fully discussed at the Conference. A fuller discussion of this question is the more necessary in view of the fact that the holding by foreign Powers or individuals of landed property in the interior of China is prohibited

These are the three points which the Chinese Government wish to discuss with the Soviet Delegate with a view to a satisfactory readjustment. They cannot believe that Mr. Karakhan, if he is really sincere to re-establish friendly relations between China and the U.S.S.R., can have any objection to reach an agreement with the Chinese Government on these points. Should Mr Karakhan see insurmountable difficulties in modifying the preliminary text of the proposed agreement on general principles the Chinese Government, animated by the spirit of conciliation and an earnest desire to see the early re-establishment of official relations between China and the U.S.S.R., are prepared to agree to having these modifications effected through a supplementary exchange of Notes to be signed along with the agreements.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS.

6. As regards the question of the re-establishment of normal relations as a preliminary step the Chinese Government wish to draw the attention of Mr. Karakhan to the fact that the very first article of the proposed agreement on general principles provides for the immediate restoration of diplomatic and consular relations between China and U.S.S.R. The completion of the draft agreement, with the proposed modifications and by formal signature of duly authorized representatives, would at once achieve the object which Mr. Karakhan has most in view and which the Chinese Government are equally desirous to see fulfilled. The inauguration of such relations is not an end in itself. The essential point is that such relations should be re-established on a new basis of friendliness and good understanding. The present texts of the proposed agreements can serve as a basis if the three points to which the Chinese Government are attaching great importance can be given adequate consideration and suitable changes are effected, either by revision of the texts or through additional exchange of Notes.

AMERICAN PATROL OF YANGTZE

Six New Shallow-draft Gunboats for Upper River to Keep Desperadoes in Order

From Rodney Gilbert.

Peking, Apr. 2.

A recent despatch from America, quoted by various news agencies, conveyed the disappointing information that the United States Government had reduced the naval appropriation for river gunboats in China so that, instead of six shallow draft boats for the upper river, the Yangtze patrol was to get two only.

Later advices have happily proved that this is too gloomy an interpretation of what happened in legislative circles in Washington. The appropriation, it would appear, was not reduced by the Appropriations Committee in Congress but was rejected altogether because the appeal for funds to build six new boats had not come from the proper routine source. The bill should have passed through the Navy Committee and been endorsed by it before going to the Appropriations Committee. Through some oversight the Navy Committee, which is already wholeheartedly pledged to six new gunboats, was not given an opportunity to pass upon the bill, so it was rejected quite properly, but purely as a matter of form, by the Appropriations Committee.

Not only is it likely that six new boats will be built for the upper river, but there is now hope of getting a 60-foot motor patrol boat, lightly but effectively armed, for the Chungking-Suifu run, since trade is pushing further west and the need of adequate protection travelling with it.

When these new ships have arrived the shallow draft boats now on the upper Yangtze will be sent to the West River and the two mine-sweepers which are being fitted up as gunboats but draw too much water for the rivers will be added to the coastwise patrol.

HUAI RIVER CONSERVANCY

Peking, Apr. 4.

After consideration by the Cabinet of the despatch from Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan pointing out the necessity for immediate attention to the Huai River Conservancy, a mandate was issued last night appointing Marshal Chi Tupan of that conservancy work, as a concurrent post. —Reuter's Pacific Service.

AMERICAN ROUND THE WORLD FLIGHT

Interesting Information as to Personnel, Machines and Itinerary

Peking, Apr. 1.

The official start of the American round-the-world flight is due to be made from Seattle to-day, and the four aeroplanes engaged in it are expected to reach the China coast toward the end of next month. Their first stop in China is to be made at Shanghai, and after resting there and overhauling their machines, they will fly south to Amoy on their way to Calcutta. Some interesting details of the flight were obtained this morning from Lieut. M. S. Lawton, who has come from Manila to supervise arrangements over that section of the route lying between Shanghai and Calcutta. Lieut. Lawton arrived here yesterday, and will return to Shanghai to-morrow.

The American expedition is not a military one, although the pilots and mechanics have been furnished by the Army. Its objects are purely scientific, the intention being to explore the possibilities of air transit between Europe, Asia and America, and to study flying conditions over the route covered. The party consists of four pilots and four mechanics, under the command of Major Frederick L. Martin, the three other pilots being Lieuts. Lowell H. Smith, Eric H. Nelson and Leigh Wade. They are to make their journey in four Douglas aeroplanes, machines of a commercial type with a wing-span of 50 feet, a useful load of 4,500 lb. and a flying radius of 2,000 miles. From Seattle to Calcutta, these aeroplanes will be equipped with pontoons for landing on water, but from this point onward they will carry landing-gear, as much of the journey from there to London will be done overland. The radio equipment which they were originally to have carried has been removed for the sake of saving weight.

THE ROUTE.

The itinerary, which has been divided into six sections for the purpose of organization, is roughly as follows:—Leaving Seattle, the party will hug the Canadian coast as far as Alaska, and then turning west will follow the Aleutian Islands to their western extremity. From here a long "hop" must be made across the North Pacific to Cape Lopatka at the southern end of the Kamchatka Peninsula, and this promises to be the most hazardous part of the journey across the Pacific. Once Kamchatka is reached, the expedition will alter its course again, and follow the Kurile Islands down past Hokkaido to the coast of Japan proper. A stop will be made at Yokohama, and another at Nagasaki, when land will once more be left behind in a straight flight for Shanghai. This is an alteration of the original plan, which was to include Chemulpo and Tsingtao. From Shanghai the party will fly, viâ Amoy, Hongkong, Haiphong, Touraine, Saigon, Bangkok, Rangoon and Akyab, to Calcutta. Thence they are to cross Northern India, viâ Delhi, to Karachi, and their course then leads them northwest to Bagdad, Bucharest, Belgrade, Vienna, Paris and London. Continuing up the east coast of England and Scotland, and leaving Kirkwall behind, they will proceed to Iceland, thence to the east coast of Greenland, and thence, viâ Labrador and Newfoundland, to New York, for their final lap across America to Seattle.

CARE OF THE MACHINES.

The task of preparing for the care of the planes on their long journey is one of no small magnitude, particularly across the North Pacific, where they will have to rely on their own personnel for any work to be done at the depots. These depots in the Pacific will consist of stores of fuel, provisions and spare parts, deposited at suitable harbours where the machines can land and overhaul in safety. In the Pacific, the Navy will co-operate and destroyers will be stationed between landing-points to safeguard the airmen against loss at sea. Once this continent is reached greater facilities for repairs will be available and even new machines are being distributed along the route in case they are needed.

It has, naturally, been impossible to make any close estimate of the time the flight will occupy; it will probably require the entire summer. In the course of it the airmen will pass through three continents and 22 countries. Every possible provision has been made against mishap, and the organizers are confident that it will be carried out successfully.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

New York, Apr. 6.

A telegram from Seattle states that the aeroplanes engaged in the world flight have left for Prince Rupert.—Reuter's American Service.

Prince Rupert, B.C., Apr. 6.

The American world-fliers have arrived at Prince Rupert.

Apr. 7.

Pending repairs to two struts of his machine, which were broken as he alighted here, Major Martin is at present unable to name a date for resumption of the world flight.—Reuter's American service.

DESTROYERS TAKING SUPPLIES TO KURILE IS. BASE.

Tokio, Apr. 10.

The American destroyers Pope and John D. Ford (Commanders Frost and McLaren) have volunteered for the trip to the Kurile Islands and left Yokohama to-day with supplies for the American aviators who are flying round the world.

The John D. Ford will go to Kashiwabara Bay in Paramushir Island, while the Pope will go to Bettoboi in Yetorofu Island.

Both destroyers carry Japanese military and naval officers, the latter acting as pilots, and also American language officers, as well as journalists.

Four Japanese destroyers are leaving the naval station of Ominato for the same destination.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE PEKING OCTROI AND BAD PAPER

Dismay Among Holders of Treasury Notes: Who Is Making Money

From Rodney Gilbert.

Peking, Apr. 4.

The Peking Octroi is a gate tax of three per cent. to which no reference has ever been made in any known treaty. It is therefore a tax which the Chinese authorities are entitled to raise and lower as they like but which they cannot abolish because certain foreign loans are secured upon it. The various institutions which have lately come to feed upon this source of revenue are the President's Office, the primary schools, the Christian army, the unhappy police, the emaciated gendarmerie and a few other lesser groups.

Among the holders of Chinese paper none has ever been so nervous as the holder of a Treasury Note of the Republic of China. Treasury notes were once particularly good; then after Li Shih-hao's occupation of the Ministry of Finance they became particularly bad. The writer knows of a case in which an official actually had to pay the dustman to gather up his vast collection of bad paper and trundle it off the premises. Then, thanks to the Octroi, it went up a bit.

For a long time past the Octroi has served the Government and the public by accepting 20 per cent. of all payments in treasury notes at face value. The notes so taken were destroyed. The Chinese and foreign importers profited because they bought up these notes at a fractional figure —something like 15 or 20 cents on the dollar—and paid them in at face value when they had to clear incoming consignments. Naturally the Chinese came out with an unannounced order on the night of March 31 saying that from that date no more treasury notes would be accepted in payment of Octroi. Some one is, of course, making money out of the collapse which followed, and the legitimate trader is of course paying through the nose as usual.

HOW THE BOLSHEVIKS HAVE LOST THEIR KOREAN PUPILS

Extraordinary Tale of Red Gold Expended Among Korean Revolutionaries: Converts to Communism Turned to Bitterest Hostility by Soviet Treachery

From Rodney Gilbert.

Peking, Apr. 3.

That the Soviet agents are amateurs in diplomacy has never been more clearly shown; and their devices have never been made so transparent than in their dealings with China. They are all clever men of course, but no one is so sure of it as they are. They are so sure of themselves that they walk on their own feet in their haste to take time by the forelock. They go so fast and surely after their objectives that they meet themselves coming back and bump with a crash. But in no part of the world have they made as fine a mess of their diplomacy by propaganda and subversion as they have with the Koreans. They have disillusioned no other people to whom they have offered the Red blessing so completely.

KOREAN INDEPENDENTISTS.

The Korean independence movement is of course as much alive as it ever was. The recent statement made by an American missionary bishop that it was dead was more than absurd, as the Japanese would most cheerfully testify. The Korean revolutionaries have not been wasting their strength, but have been looking for friends and in their search for friends it was inevitable that a certain number should turn to Soviet Russia, the advertised saviour of oppressed peoples, and should pin their hopes upon the Communists. It will be remembered that about three years ago the Bolsheviks established a bureau in Irkutsk, well endowed with gold, with the avowed purpose of overturning, through propaganda, the existing orders in Mongolia, Korea, China and Japan. Korean agents were sent into China and Manchuria with generous supplies of Russian gold and the usual line of Communist patter at the end of their tongues. One of them, Kim Lip, was killed in Shanghai after having disposed of something like $400,000 of Russian money. The level-headed Korean leaders looked askance at Red propaganda but a number of enthusiasts in Shanghai, Peking, Manchuria and Siberia accepted the Soviet's half promises as definite pledges of help against Japan and were very eager to have the Korean revolutionary movement put under the red flag. This went so far that at an interminably long conference in Shanghai last year, the old Korean revolutionary organization there was broken up, a communist government was formed and Pak Yung-man, who was not in attendance and who was bitterly opposed to the whole manœuvre, was elected the Lenin of the supreme executive committee.

RED TREACHERY.

In Siberia the Reds made more headway with the Koreans. After the Japanese invaded the Hunchun district and patrolled it with gendarmes, thousands of Koreans poured across the Russian border, taking their arms with them. To these the Reds were at first hostile but later very conciliatory. They promised them strong support in a revolution against Japan and cajoled them into participating in the campaign in the Maritime Province. Twenty-five thousand Koreans were under arms in the campaign in which Harbarovsk, Iman, Nikolsk and Vladivostok were taken. The Russians participating in the campaign were very few. Several thousand of these Koreans were native Siberians and had served with the Russian armies on the German front. The rest were from Fengtien and Kirin.

When the fighting was all over the Russians brought in their own Red troops, split up the Korean units into small detachments, distributed them as widely as possible and then, without warning, disarmed them and disbanded them, turning them adrift without pay, food or clothes.

YET MORE PROPAGANDA.

Still the propaganda among the Koreans in China and Korea went on and gathered strength. One of the chief agents in this work was Mr. Slepak, director of the Rosta Agency in Peking, who has just gone to Japan to dole out propaganda there. Everywhere it was being hinted to the Koreans that if they would get together with the Soviet folk they would be supplied with money, arms and ammunition in unlimited quantities for a revolutionary movement against Japan. Some believed this and some did not, but when a definite invitation was finally issued to all the leaders of all Korean factions, to assemble in Vladivostok and talk it over, the conservatives were persuaded by the radicals to attend and practically every Korean political faction, religious body, secret society and clique from every part of the Far East was represented. All those Korean leaders whose names are well known to foreigners in the Far East were there. A certain percentage of them professed to be communists, others were ready to be converted and others were radically opposed. The conference lasted about a month, opening about the middle of January and closing about the middle of February, with the result that there are at this moment no Korean revolutionary leaders above the sod who have any use whatever for a Red Russian or any of his doctrines. The only tangible result of much talk with the Soviet agents and much more talk among themselves was the drafting of a resolution imploring Great Britain, America and China not to recognize the Soviet Government. This, of course, could not be got past the censorship.

THE WORM TURNS.

The result of the conference was nil. The more important delegates were met at Pogranitchnaya by communist agents, were provided with special cars and were taken to Vladivostok in ambassadorial state. Once there they were turned over to a certain Mr. Fineburg, a Hebrew communist who was born and raised in London and whose English was much better than his Russian. This Mr. Fineburg was head of the Bureau of Korean Affairs in the representation of the Third International in Vladivostok.

After the 20 odd Korean delegates had assembled Mr. Pak Yung-man was elected chief of their council and Mr. Fineburg called upon him and opened negotiations. In conventional Soviet fashion the Koreans were presented with a fixed set of demands, or rather conditions. They were told that Russia would sympathize with them if they would sign a certain document in which they pledged themselves to certain policies. It would be impolitic to publish this document at the moment; but it can be stated definitely that the first Russian condition was that the Korean revolution should be declared a communist revolution, and that Red propaganda should go ahead of the independence movement.

All the promises of help with money and arms which had previously been made became very vague and intangible indeed at this conference and the whole Red energy was expended upon shoving a Bolshevist revolutionary programme under the noses of the Korean delegates and upon forcing them to endorse it. The same tactics were adopted as in the Karakhan ultimatum to Dr. C. T. Wang. The Koreans have not much to stand on, but they do have sufficient backbone to resent bullying. The would-be communists, the near communists and the anti-communists in the Korean delegation promptly united on the only possible stand, that they could not have their programme dictated to them. After all the good gold that had been spent upon the subversion of the Korean revolutionary movement, Mr. Fineburg thought it very unreasonable on the part of the Korean delegates to take such a stand. But after much dispute he wired to Moscow to Mr. Voijinsky, who is the head of the department of Oriental Revolution, and asked him for advice. Mr. Voijinsky wired back that if the Koreans would wait for him, he would take the next train for the Far East.

ALL KOREANS EXPELLED.

All of this sounds like a hashish dream but it is literally true, as the writer can prove if need be. After Mr. Voijinsky's telegram had been received the Koreans were of two minds. Some were so thoroughly sick of Bolshevik perfidy that they voted to get out before they were obliged to deal courteously with another professional deceiver, and others—particularly soldiers who had served with the Russians on the German front—were inclined to wait and give Voijinsky a chance to prove himself.

The disgusted ones prevailed, however, and on February 17 the bigger leaders got their passports and left. This was of course reported to Moscow and, on February 20, an irate mandate came back to Vladivostok ordering the local authorities to turn all the Koreans in that part of Siberia out of the country. As a result thousands of Koreans are pouring into Manchuria over diverse routes and all of them are so anti-Bolshevik that all the Russian millions spent upon revolution in Korea are sheer waste. Communism as a Korean faith is so thoroughly dead that no force can revive it. It never did amount to much any way. Among 16,000 Koreans along the railway from Pogranichnaya to Vladivostok the recently dissolved Korean committee managed to find about 80 professed communists.

FREE SHOOTING AT VLADIVOSTOK.

According to their account, it is easy to tell a communist from an ordinary human being. The communist is not only permitted but is encouraged to carry arms, so all communists carry revolvers and execute their enemies when the whim seizes them. While the Korean diplomatic committee was sitting in Vladivostok, no less than 15 Koreans were shot by agents of the Cheka and their bodies so disposed of that they were reported "missing." All Japanese are under police surveillance and are to all intents and purposes prisoners. The Chinese are making money in every community as expert smugglers, not of opium and arms, as in the motherland, but of cotton goods and food. A foot of cotton cloth in Vladivostok is worth more than an ounce of opium. The Soviet administration has announced that opium growing will this year be free and unrestricted except for a trifling tax, the proceeds of which will be, according to official estimate, Gold Roubles 10,000,000 in the Maritime Province. The member of the communist party, entitled to carry weapons, never fails to avail himself of his right. Teachers in primary schools work at the blackboard with Mausers strapped on them and when they meet a stranger in the streets whose complexion they do not like they have a pot shot at him for which no court can call them to account. "No government, no law, no justice!" say the Koreans who rode in special cars to Vladivostok under Red auspices.

JAPANESE OFFICERS OF YIHYANG MARU

Still Captive: Ransom Money of $50,000 Demanded

Peking, Apr. 3.

The two Japanese officers are still in the hands of the Szechuanese forces. Payment of $50,000 for their release was arranged by the Japanese Consul at Chungking and the representative of the Central Government with the Szechuan leader. This sum was to be paid by the Chinese authorities, but local officials pleaded inability to provide that sum and asked for it to be forwarded from Peking. This caused some delay and it appears likely that the Japanese will have to advance the money if they want the officers to be released soon. As the captors demand ready money further delay will occur in transporting the ransom from Chungking.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Eng.-Capt. H. S. Garwood, who is appointed to the light cruiser Coventry, flagship of the Atlantic Fleet destroyer flotillas, as squadron engineer officer, served from May, 1921, to last July in the Hawkins, flagship of the China Station as fleet engineer officer.

OMINOUS SIGN OF WAR BETWEEN CHANG TSO-LIN AND WU PEI-FU

Coolies Emigrating to Manchuria Held up and Forced to Choose between Enlisting in Wu's Army or Returning Home

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsangchow, Chihli, Apr. 4.

A recent trip through the neighbouring counties of Yensan, Ching-yun and Laoling revealed an interesting indication of the preparations afoot for the anticipated outbreak of hostilities between Chang Tso-lin, and Wu Pei-fu, despite assurances to the contrary in the native Press.

As is generally known, immediately after the Chinese New Year holidays, there is a great exodus of coolies from their homes in Shantung and Chihli to the Manchurian provinces, where labour is plentiful, and wages good. Special cheap excursion trains are run by the Peking-Mukden line for the benefit of these emigrants, and these are patronized by hordes of coolies, in some cases accompanied by their families.

Large numbers appear to have passed through Shanhaikuan safely, and proceeded on their journey until a date about three weeks ago, when suddenly all the travellers were held up, and collected into big enclosures by Wu Pei-fu's troops, guarding the barrier. They were given the alternative of enlisting in the army, or of returning home. The younger members accepted the offer, and exchanged their civilian kit for a uniform and a rifle, reluctantly handing over their wadded quilts and miscellaneous belongings to the military authorities. Others of more mature age returned home, grumbling bitterly at the fruitless expenditure of so much of their hard-earned savings. They state that it is now impossible to proceed to Manchuria by any of the recognized routes, either by sea or land, and that those who have already succeeded in passing through Wu Pei-fu's lines have been pressed into military service by the rival commander. This certainly looks like business, and it was not surprising to find the country-side humming with excitement at the impending clash.

The price of labour in Manchuria is likely to be pretty high until this renewed struggle between Chang and Wu is over, and decisively settled. For the moment Wu has scored in securing tens of thousands of young and strong recruits for his armies, but it is doubtful whether, in their raw condition, they will materially affect the situation. Meanwhile considerable hardship is inflicted upon the labouring classes in the villages of north China, who have been debarred from their annual excursion to Manchuria. If this uncertainty or the actual conflict is prolonged into the summer, an intolerable strain will be put upon literally millions who are living near the hunger line in these Northern Provinces, a fact which may eventually have some bearing upon the political situation.

PAINS AND PENALTIES OF BIRTHDAY FEAST

Hupeh's Tuchun on the Morning After: Arbor Day and Trees That Invariably Die

From Our Own Correspondent.

Wuchang, Hup., Apr. 1.

Our respected Governor was (to put it politely) "upset" after his birthday feast last week. However, western medical skill was called in to put right what had been caused, (in all probability) by western concoctions, and the Tuchun was soon upon his feet again, having fitly crowned by this escapade his first half-century of glorious life.

The next public excitement will be the planting of trees at the season of Ch'ing Ming, which since the Republic has become the national Chinese Arbour Day. The road that leads out to the ground, a mile or more outside of the city, where the trees are planted, has been, according to annual custom, given a little furbish-up by the simple means of having a few coolies chuck down piles of earth or ashes and spread them roughly over its surface. As usual, a fall of rain has succeeded the accomplishment of this meritorious deed, and the last state of the highway resembles more a pigstye than a main-road. Along this well-prepared avenue, next Saturday the carriages of our Governor and all his chiefs of department will roll, and the grand ceremony will be duly performed in the presence of many of the leading citizens, and schoolboys from the government schools in the city.

Unfortunately, this tree-planting in former days has not been an unqualified success. In fact most of the trees have died, and autumn comes to see the ground more conspicuous with the whitepainted wooden pillars, bearing the names and titles of the celebrities who have put into the ground the shrivelled and decaying remnants of what should have been trees. This year, an effort is being made to bring the people to realize more what is the purpose and ideal of an Arbor Day. Notices posted up around the city exhort the people everywhere to follow the example of their officials, by putting in trees whenever and wherever they can, and especial advice is given to the farmers, instructing them about the value of trees and the necessity of preserving them as well as planting them, and ways in which this can be done. All this is excellent, and will bear good fruit in time, if only the inertia and subservience to old habit can be overcome.

The (Wu-Han Athletic Sports, which were to have been held last Friday and Saturday, had to be postponed because no preparations had been made. Two or three days before the date fixed for the meeting, the only signs of preparation to be seen on the ground, were a small group of women and girls just beginning to weed in one corner of the vast campus. Coolies were bringing burdens of large stones and dumping them in piles half way across the ash running track,—for what purpose was not apparent.

Another official notice posted in the city warns the populace that certain Japanese warships which have come up the Yangtze are going to have some target-practice, but the merchants need not therefore conclude that their native land is being invaded.

The Hankow International Recreation Club has awarded and just signed the contract with Cheng Chong & Co., contractors for the construction of a two storey reinforced concrete grandstand and a two storey jockey and club house. The Pacific Trading Co., are the engineers, and the work will be under direct charge of Mr. Go Khek-ghee B.SC. (Glasgow) A.M.I.C.E., who served his time with Walker & Duncan, C.E., Aberdeen, and was some time with Warren & Stuart, C.E., Glasgow, and Sir William Arrols Ld., Kilmarnock.

TSINGTAO GOVERNOR'S APRIL FOOL'S DAY JOKE ON SUPERFLUOUS OFFICIALS

The Peculiar Swindle of the Kiaochou Transportation Co: Too Many Leeches

From Our Own Correspondent.

Details of Mr. Kao En-hang's root and branch policy have already been published, but the following message expands them and throws much light on their importance.

Tsingtao, April 1.

The biggest April fool joke ever perpetrated in this country is undoubtedly the product of Mr. Kao En-hang, the new Director of Kiaochou Territory, whose arrival here from Chefoo was reported by telegraph in the "North China Daily News." Shortly after assuming his post officially at eight o'cock this morning, Mr Kao dispatched to 147 advisors and officials attached to the former administration a notification of dismissal. It is considered highly improbable that the recipients of this circular notification will appreciate this colossal joke in the same light as the outsiders. Another April-fool joke of Mr. Kao, which just took five minutes to accomplish, was the dissolution of the coolie monopoly hitherto held by the Kiaochau Transportation Company. This latter concern had a most extraordinary working arrangement with the Harbour Department, which caused not a little inconvenience and no end of losses to shippers and shipping companies. Under this arrangement, the company had the monopoly over the loading and unloading operations of ships in port, charging the Harbour Department so much per ton, the latter in turn charging a different figure to the shipping companies, and pocketing the difference. Protests from the shipping companies elicited no satisfaction, until finally the respective consuls were appealed to for aid, but before the old Administration could come to a definite understanding with the protesting business community, the political broom swept it helter skelter out of power. It was felt that the whole process would have to be repeated from the ground up but Mr. Kao belied all expectations. He walked into his office at eight o'clock this morning, scanned the protest previously sent in by Mr. Major, the British Consul, and at five minutes past eight an order was signed, dissolving the coolie monopoly. Before nine, the transportation company had heard the worst. It was quite a good joke indeed, so far as business men were concerned.

WHAT DID THEY ADVISE?

In regard to the dismissal of the 147 advisors and officials, the new Director General said he had failed to ascertain what was the nature of the advice proffered by the advisors, and just what were the duties of the officials. Through this wholesale crop of dismissals. Mr. Kao expected no end of antagonism but affirmed he did not not mind it at all. In an interview which he granted to your correspondent this afternoon, he said the trouble with the old Administration was that it had too many leeches sticking around. They drew from $200 to $400 a month. "Think of it!" exclaimed the new Director General. "Why: it has cost the old Administration at least $60,000 annually in the support of a bunch of people who did nothing!"

A special department will be inaugurated for the purpose of keeping track of all lands disposed of by the former regime. "My predecessor caused the disposal of countless plots of ground and it is feared that many transfers of property have not been registered. We propose having all title deeds either registered for the first time or re-registered, free of cost to the holders. This is the only way to inaugurate a system of efficient recording."

MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION FORETOLD.

The opinion of the foreign community seems to be now somewhat favourably inclined towards the new Administration, although it is not doubted that friction between the Japanese and Chinese over the matter of the Railway revenue will from now on become acute, for whereas the former Administration was largely composed of pro-Japanese officials, the present regime is influenced by Wu Pei-fu, between whom and the Japanese there is'nt much of an olive branch.

The interview which Mr. Kao granted to foreign newspapermen is considered significant in that it was granted on the very day he assumed official charge of the Administration. Throughout the interview, Mr Kao spoke freely on his plans, and his secretary, Mr. T. C. Kuo joined in the discussion of pertinent matters. A significant remark was to the effect that the question of Municipal Government will be forthwith investigated, so as to bring into effect the provision in the Washington Treaty that foreign representation "in matters that may directly affect their welfare" will be secured. The other points which the new Administration will solve have been outlined as follows:—

(a) Riesha traffic control, (b) Public works, (c) Salt monopoly, (d) Port facilities, (e) Police reorganization.

It is now learnt that amongst the officials replacing the old departmental chiefs are Mr. Chang Ying-fu, who becomes Director of Waterworks, Mr. S. C. Yao, who becomes Director of the Harbour Department, Mr. P. C. Hu, who becomes Director of the Finance Department and Mr. K. Y. Yao, who becomes Chief of the Telephone Department.

NINGPO MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION

Pleasant Meeting and a Successful Concert

From Our Own Correspondent.

Ningpo, Apr. 4.

The Ningpo Missionary Association held its spring gathering on Tuesday in the home of the Principal of the Methodist College. The Rev. W. P. and Mrs. Bates proved most genial and hearty as host and hostess.

The programme was musical throughout, and gave unqualified satisfaction. The following were the chief items rendered: Pianoforte duet "Dussek's Sonata," Miss F. Honey and Mr. Bates: musical reading, Mr. Wilcox: solo "The nightingale's Song," Miss Stewart: pianoforte solo, Miss Honey: vocal duet "Gentle Spring" by Mrs Bates and Miss Stewart: cornet solo by Miss Hill: solo "Rejoice Greatly" by Mrs Bates, Pianoforte duet "Stabat Mater" by Mrs Shoemaker and Miss Stewart: double trio by Miss Bates, Mrs. Wilcox, Mrs. Benjamin, Miss Cressey, Mrs. Decker and Miss Hill: trombone solo by Mr. Benjamin: solo "O Thou that Tellest" by Miss Stewart: solo "O Lovely night" by Mrs. Bates: pianoforte solo, Grand Offertoire, in F minor by Mr. Bates: vocal duet "Stars of the Summer Night" by Mrs Bates and Miss Stewart: pianoforte duet, selections from "Il Trovatore" by Miss Honey and Mr. Bates: comic item by Miss Cressey. It would be invidious to name any one person when all were exceptionally good. The President, the Rev. Wm. Tremberth, expressed the thanks and deep appreciation of the gathering for such a varied and inspiring programme and thanked Mr. and Mrs. Bates who had not only prepared for our comfort, but had borne such a large share of the music.

On Sunday morning Ningpo welcomed to her new home Mrs. Handley Derry the wife of H. M. Consul, Mr. F. H. Handley Derry who succeeded Mr. Savage about 12 months since. Their two boys have been left behind at school in England.

ENDLESS TAXATION IN CANTON

Protests from Merchants and Bankers: Landed Property a Costly Investment

Canton, Mar. 29.

For the past few days, Dr Sun Yat-sen's followers in Canton have been celebrating the reported success of Gen. Chang Ching's army at Changchow in Fukien. It is believed that Gen. Chang has come completely over to Dr. Sun and that his success will affect the situation on the eastern front in Kuangtung. There has been fighting for the last few days on the eastern front between Gen. Chen Chiung-ming's troops and Dr. Sun's forces, but so far there has been no important engagement. The Yunnanese are now being replaced by Hunanese on this front.

M. Borodin, the Soviet representative in Canton, who is now visiting Peking, has telegraphed to Dr. Sun stating that the concessions made by Russia in the preliminary agreement, signed by M. Karakhan and Dr. C. T. Wang, are in accord with the foreign policy of the Kuomintang and that the unwillingness of Peking to ratify the pact must have been brought about by the influence of outside imperialistic Powers. All the Kuomintang newspapers advocate recognition of Russia on the basis of this agreement.

Pressing of coolies and the poorer classes into the military transport service is again taking place, in spite of the assurance, given recently by Dr. Sun's reconstruction committee, that persons buying an exemption ticket for $1 would be freed from forced labour.

Gen. Hsu Chung-chi has recently returned to Hongkong from Shanghai, but has not resumed his command of the Cantonese troops here.

BANKERS SUSPENDING BUSINESS.

The native bankers in Canton, numbering about 350 firms, will suspend business on March 31 as a protest against a recent Government order requiring them to use stamped paper for their business transactions. The Government expects to realize $50,000 a year out of this new duty. The native bankers claim that they are already paying $52,000 a year in likin and should be exempt from further taxation. Moreover, the syndicate, to which the tax has been farmed out at a large margin of profit, are seeking the privilege of making an investigation of the transactions of the native banks in order to enforce the order, which is strongly resented by the bankers and others concerned.

The Government Department of Finance is not only unpopular with the bankers, but has also aroused great antagonism on the part of the merchants. A recent order requires all persons carrying more than $50 from the port of Canton to obtain a permit, the rate charged being 1½ per cent. of the money carried. The silk merchants are most affected by this order, as they have to pay for their goods from the silk producing districts in silver, millions of local currency being transferred to these districts every season.

Another new tax, levied this time by the Municipality, is one of 1 per cent of the value on soda-water. The Municipality expects to raise $15,000 a year by this tax, the remainder of the money raised being profit for the syndicate to which the tax-collection has been farmed out. The object of the tax is stated to be popular education.

Landlords in Canton have been asked for the fourth time in the past ten months to surrender a month's rent to Dr. Sun's war pected to amount to about $1,-200,000.

LANDOWNERS HEAVILY PENALIZED.

An investor in landed property in Canton in these days, though he will prove his eagerness to help his Government, is looking for trouble for himself. For every stage in the transaction the Government has a duty fixed. When completing the purchase of the land, the deed must be registered and certified by the Government and two taxes must be paid, one for the seal of the Bureau of Finance and the other for registration of the deed by the District Court. There is also the fee for the duty stamp on each of the documents. Before building can be undertaken, plans must be submitted to the Municipal Department of Public Works and another fee paid. On completion of building, a tax of 4 per cent. is charged for improvement, or the value of the house built on the land. In addition to the foregoing, seven and a half per cent of the rent collected each month goes to the Government as police tax, besides 5 cents to $2 a month to the Department of Public Health for a sanitary tax. The landholder may have to pay a tax of 2 per cent. on the investment as a business tax, if it is his business to buy lots for building. After all his trouble, too, he may find his rents seized by the military authorities as a contribution to the war funds.

But the fate of the land investor is lighter than that of the man raising hogs for the market, who has to pay more than 15 different kinds of taxes.

Firewood probably holds the record for being the most taxed article in Canton since the return of the military rule. Some 50 forms of likin and tribute have to be paid to troops and bandits before the wood reaches the market. Firewood selling at 30 cents a picul on the hill-side costs $2.50 a picul in the Canton markets.

OPIUM OFFICIAL IN TROUBLE.

Mr. Yang Saae-arm, who was known as Mr. Yang Wei-pin when Chinese Consul in Honolulu, has been dismissed by Dr. Sun from the post of Director-General of the Opium Bureau on charges of corruption, filed by Mr. Wang Nan-mie, an assistant director of the Bureau. It is alleged that Mr. Yang has been guilty of usurpation of authority,, appropriation of public funds, keeping loose women in the official quarters, and extorting heavy fines from alleged offenders under the anti-opium regulations without referring the case to the courts for regular trial, and other offences. The Anti-Opium Bureau, in spite of its name, is really an agency for the sale of the drug and not for the suppression of the traffic.

The Kuomintang are organizing branches amongst the farmers as well as amongst the labourers and students. Policemen and soldiers will also have Kuomintang clubs.

The assets of the Canton branch of the Bank of China, which was recently forced into liquidation by an order of Dr. Sun, will be taken over by the Government, regardless of the claims of local depositors and creditors, according to a statement by Mr. C. Y. Chen Kiewoon, the Canton Municipal Commissioner of Finance, who has advised the creditors that he, as liquidator, will dispose of the bank's assets to cover the Government's claim, leaving other claims to be settled between the bank and its creditors.

A DENIAL OF BOLSHEVISM.

Dr. Sun, through his private secretary, Mr. Eugene Chen, has issued a denial that Bolshevism will be adopted as the economic and political system of Canton, at least for the present. For a time it was thought that Dr. Sun would yield to the instances of the Bolsheviks now working in South China. Mr. Chen also denied that Dr. Sun had received any financial aid from the Russians.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

News has reached the Colony, says the "Hongkong Telegraph" of the suicide, at Canton, on March 30 of Mr. E. K. Vizer, second officer of the B. & S. str. Liangchow. The deceased shot himself through the head with a revolver about 11.30 in the morning, shortly after the ship had berthed. He was carried to the Canton Hospital, where he died about a quarter past seven the same night. An inquest was held on board the next day, and the verdict was "suicide during temporary insanity." The deceased, who was quite a young man, was buried at Canton the next evening.

AUTOMOBILE CLUB OF TIENSIN

1,000 Owners But Only 75 Members: How to Control the Elusive Chauffeur

Tientsin News Service.

Tientsin, Apr. 3

The North China Motor Club held its annual general meeting last night in the Gordon Hall, electing officers for the coming year and discussing matters pertinent to the interests of motor-car owners in Tientsin. The Secretary's report showed that of the thousand residents owning cars registered here only 75 were members of the Club and the meeting decided upon efforts to interest non-members in the benefits of the Club and to aid it in bringing about progressive measures. It was decided that a badge of membership would be an excellent thing to place in a conspicuous position on the cars of members and would be an inducement to others to join. Badges for chauffeurs were also considered.

The question of control of chauffeurs was discussed. It was stated that the British Municipal authorities had objected to the Club exercising control over drivers. The B.M.C. had pointed out that it was impossible for any organization to control chauffeurs unless they also had powers properly to investigate their records, register them and administer punishment for breaches of regulations and law. The B.M.C. Police Department have an elaborate system of checking up past records of chauffeurs, by co-operation with Shanghai, Hankow, Harbin and other ports. They have 2,800 photograph plates on file, complete with finger-print records and lists of any offences committed by chauffeurs. Drivers, whose licences have been suspended or revoked in other ports on conviction for breach of regulations are thereby unable to transfer themselves to Tientsin to carry on their activities until such time as they may resume driving in their original port. Inasmuch as this system was conducted in co-operation with the Police departments in other ports it was considered impossible for an organization such as the Motor Club to exercise sufficient, if any, control.

The meeting elected the following to serve for the ensuing year: Chairman: Dr. O'Neill; Secretary: H. St. Clair Knox; Committee: L. O. McGowan, Major Garibaldi, J. Elliott, Lieut-Colonel Ralph Lulu.

QUICK AND THE DEAD IN HANGCHOW

All Motor-Cars Prohibited Because One Runs Down a Pedestrian

From Our Own Correspondent.

Hangchow, April 5.

The motor cars have again been running over the stupid and ignorant who as yet do not believe in the "quick and the dead," and as a consequence the cars have been forbidden to run for the present, and so for one man's carelessness many have to suffer.

The tufei have been busy lately near the Five Cloud Mountains. They are sent from Shanghai by the Dzen Yizn residents there. They are after the spoils of the pilgrims, who are visiting the temples in thousands these days adorned in their Sunday best with lup of gold rings and Earongs etc.

This is "pure brightness" Ching Ming—and many trees are to be planted near Tien Tsoh. Unfortunately it is not bright but cold and rainy. Wang Yong Dzien and an American railway magnate are here on a visit just now. The Hon St. Main Forester has just been paying his old friend Dr. Duncan Main a visit. He left to-day for his work amongst the Chinese students in Japan.

BEATEN ARMIES OF SZECHUAN

A City Full of Disorganized Soldiery: Robbers Adding to General Dismay

From Our Own Correspondent.

Luchow, Sze., Mar. 14.

In my letter of February 21 I spoke of the siege of the city by the first army. It lifted two or three days after that when the first army, owing to shortage of ammunition, retreated to Hoziang and vicinity. Since then there has been considerable fighting along the big river between here and that city and all kinds of rumours have been afloat. At one time the second army were apparently very hard-pressed, for they retreated in haste into the city, crossing the river in a constant stream all night long. Apparently only the timely arrival of divisional commander Tang and his men from Fushuen saved the city from capture by the first army.

Since that, more soldiers have been pouring in and now the city is literally packed with them. This city is being made the base of the second army operations. Tang arrived about a week ago from Fushuen, having come in a circle viâ Suifu from Yiunning, where he has been since the defeat of the second army last October. General Yuan arrived from Chungking with his Kueichow forces only a couple of days ago—the Kueichow men are easily distinguished from the Szechuanese soldiers by the German-style soft hat which they wear. To-day they are preparing for the arrival of no less a personage than Liu Hsiang, one of the three chief supporters of the northern cause in Szechuen, during the past year. Some say he has come to take charge of the Luchow district, others say that he is simply coming to direct the attack against Hsiong Keh Wu. Time will tell. If all the soldiers of both sides, and the robbers, in this little corner of the province could be numbered, they would number a vast host. I would not like even to venture a guess, but certainly it would be well over 100,000.

THE OLD FOX OF SZECHUAN.

Hsiong is evidently in rather a tight corner for rumour has it that his way is not open into Yunnan. From past experience one wonders whether they will really block his retreat if he decides to go and even if they do decide to try to trap him, the old fox of Szechuan will not be easily trapped. He has been in many a tight corner before and has always managed to squeeze out, so one imagines that he will be able to do so again if and when he feels that further resistance is useless for the time being.

Meanwhile the local robbers continue their depredations throughout the country districts, keeping the people of certain localities in constant alarm. Rumour is always rife, but rumour is always many times worse than the actual conditions. One of our outlying market towns was reported to have been burned to the ground by robbers, but when I had occasion to visit it a few days ago I found that, while considerable damage had been done and quite a number of houses burned, still the town was there. The people were not despairing but were building mud towers in the outskirts, behind the walls of which they intend to ward off further attacks by the marauders. At another place, where I spent the night, my host filled my ear with tales of impending attacks on the town and of loss of sleep through anxious waiting. In order to ensure rest for me he told me just before I retired that an attack was expected that very night and that when it came I must get up and dress. I slept, nevertheless, and neither heard nor saw a robber.

Making all allowances, however, for unnecessary scares and for exaggerated stories, the people in the outlying places are in constant dread of the soldiers passing through and helping themselves to whatever is handy and of robbers coming and either taking their goods or carrying their children or themselves off for ransom.

EMBARGO ON LAND PURCHASES

Curious Phenomenon in Central Kiangsu Recalling Years Before Boxer Rising

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsinkiangpuku, Apr. 4.

The older missionaries in this section say, that conditions now compare favourably with those obtaining in 1898 and '99. Not in outward gestures against foreigners, but a possible undercurrent. One thing is in itself significant. For the past two years persistent efforts have been made to purchase property in various parts of the city, and we have been willing to pay more than a reasonable price to obtain land. Many of the tracts desired have been owned by very poor people, and yet, not one piece has been purchased and there does not seem the slightest hope of getting any in the near future. The "middle men" who are approached on the subject try earnestly to put through a deal, then quietly seem to lose interest and stop. I am sure there is something behind this and I believe it would be interesting to hear reports from other parts of this and other provinces.

With other parts of China as disturbed as they are, your correspondent takes pleasure in reporting that conditions here seem normal. Seasonable weather has given a good prospect for the wheat and while bandits are active north of us, they seem to be in smaller bands than for several years past. The saving element in the situation in this part of China, humanly speaking, is the flat country, making it impossible for large bands to secret themselves with their captives and plunder, as they do in Hunan and other provinces.

Any danger which may be lurking in our section, and I do not believe it is negligible, comes from the soldiers themselves. To the average observer it would seem that the local soldiers are under less control than formerly. The prestige of the local defence commissioner is certainly lessened, and it would take only a sufficient pretext—war in other sections for instance—to cause a revolt here.

NEW BUILDINGS.

A great deal of building is being done here among the Chinese and foreigners. A new building for the mission Girl's School is now under construction, and a new dormitory for the Boy's School starts this week.

The biggest single advance is being made by the General Hospital. At the present time a tubercular ward is under construction, to which we will admit patients affected with tuberculosis, and try to teach them how to take care of themselves, and protect others. Plans are now about complete for two new large buildings, to be known as the "Houston Unit" of the hospital. This will consist of an Administration building containing offices, laboratory, X Ray rooms, a complete operating suite with two operating rooms, and a large chapel, and a new Woman's Hospital with four wards and a number of private and service rooms. These buildings are made possible by the gift of the members of the First Presbyterian Church in Houston, Texas. When completed this will give the hospital a modern plant with about 175 beds.

A wooden case, landed recently at Kowloon from the str. Aachen, a German vessel from Hamburg, was found on examination by Revenue officials to contain 118 Mauser automatics and 13,800 rounds of ammunition. At the Magistracy, Mr. Hamilton made an order for their confiscation.

A CURIO COLLECTOR OF TIENTSIN

Lo the Poor Indian: And the Still Poorer Holders of Numerous I. O. U.'s

Tientsin News Service.

Tientsin, Apr. 4.

R. K. Surman, a native of India, and sponsor, founder and sole proprietor of the "International Commercial Museum" (China Section) recently left Tientsin. Before leaving he managed to bring into being a number of interesting museum relics. Holders of these specimens of antiquity, both commercial and otherwise, have spent a good deal of time recently in comparing the value of each article. They seem to have come to the conclusion that the value of each will not improve with age.

At present it appears that the total value of the specimens approximates $1,000, among which may be mentioned a hotel bill of $190; a promissory note for part payment of a printing and advertising bill worth $150; an employee's monthly salary account of $150; a tailor's bill for $80 and a rent bill for about Tls. 195.

As to the International aspect of this museum, there can be no question, for Chinese, Japanese, Americans, French and British are all interested. Some of the less permanent relics are a prospectus for a 25 cent. Guide to Tientsin and an Important Announcement that Mr. Martin is coming with a large assortment of commercial relics. "When Martin Comes," if his arrival should be anything like that heralded in a well-known funny story by that title, he should meet with a profuse welcome.

Perhaps the principal relic in the Tientsin Section of the International Commercial Museum, is a telegram from the Bombay branch of a large India Bank, which was given as a guarantee and which upon being questioned by cable, replied "International Commercial Museum Quite Unknown To Us."

FAREWELL TO HANKOW HARBOUR MASTER

Parting Presentations from Foreign and Chinese Colleagues

A pleasant gathering of members of the foreign executive staff of the Hankow Customs took place at the Customs Club on the 29th ultimo on the eve of the departure of Mr. E. Hubbard, Chief Tide-surveyer and Harbour Master, when he was presented with a gold wristlet suitably inscribed. A letter signed by the members was then read and handed to him, reading:—

Sir,—In asking you to accept this small gift on the eve of your departure for Antung, we wish you to know that one and all have been actuated by sincere esteem for yourself and through this means wish to acknowledge many kindnesses received during your period as Chief Tidesurveyer at this port.

While wishing you Godspeed and all happiness, we trust that good fortune may again favour us with renewed experiences of mutual co-operative service in the near future.

Mr. Hubbard replied that he very much appreciated the gift but much more appreciated the spirit in which it was given. He regretted not having been with them longer and was pleased to be able to say that, during his 12 months in Hankow he noticed that the executive staff co-operated heartily with him in carrying out the various duties pertaining to the department. He hoped to have the good luck to meet some if not all of those now present before he was retired.

Another gathering of the Chinese members of the executive staff took place in the Chief Tidesurveyer's office, when he was presented with a silver shield suitably inscribed, mounted on blackwood also a letter reading:—

Dear Sir,—We the undersigned members of the Chinese outdoor staff beg to bring forth before you a small gift as a token in memory of the time we have been under your leadership, and hope that you will be pleased to accept same which you have won from us. We cannot express in words our admiration of your fairness in dealing with our duties, and we are at a loss to see that the man whom we respect so much is going to part from us.

We sincerely hope that you will enjoy yourself at your new port and that prosperity will go along with you.

Mr. Hubbard replied that although he did not place much worth in gifts he would be very pleased to accept this token (Shih ching chi, pu shih tung chi as the Chinese say) but what appealed to him more was the wording of the letter just handed to him. He was glad they appreciated his fairness, that if he couldn't be fair he wouldn't be anything else.

He wished the native officers every success and hoped to have good news of them. He emphasized the fact that a good steady officer doing his duty conscientiously was bound to get on in the service and that on the other hand the one who did not stick to the straight path would sooner or later come to grief as they have had occasion to see.

PERILS OF LIFE ON THE WEST RIVER

Death-trap Steam-Launches: Overloaded, Underpowered, with Cabins None Can Escape from: How Bad Government Makes Matters Worse in This Too

From Our Own Correspondent.

Liuchow, Si., Mar. 13.

The Kuangsi military launch Number 6 while coming down the West river from Tsinchow was wrecked on the Kuyung rapid and went down with some ten of the passengers and crew on board. The river here is not considered dangerous but the cross currents are treacherous and it was in one of these that the launch was caught. The helmsmen tried to steer the launch out into the open stream, but the launch would not respond to the rudder and as she listed heavily she took in water and went down.

The authorities are now using every effort to refloat the launch. Native junks have been secured and a large gang of men are daily at work, but it is a slow process and as yet only the funnel is to be seen protruding through the water.

THE DANGER OF LAUNCH TRAVEL.

Launch travel on the West river and its various branches is very dangerous. Not only are the cross currents hard to determine, but they change continually with every rise or drop in the water so that a spot which on one trip presents no difficulties, on the next trip abounds with danger. Seldom a year passes without its serious wrecks and toll of lives lost. Last year the motor launch Tungming while transporting Yunnan soldiers from Liuchow down to Wuchow went down with nearly everyone on board. Later the Tungloh met a similar fate with a heavy loss of life and since that time there have been other wrecks with less serious consequences. These yearly wrecks with their accompanying loss of life can be attributed largely to the present form of government, or lack of government as the case may be.

TAXATION MAKES MORE DANGER.

Extortionate likin customs and heavy military dues are levied all along the river. Since the disorganization of a proper government increased customs stations have been opened at various places, and other customs stations have been sold out to the highest bidder. This increases the "Squeeze" as the manager must make a comfortable living for himself, relatives and retinue and at the same time lay aside something for a rainy day or a change in the administration. One would think judging from the way the duties are levied that the proprietor is preparing for, not a rainy day, but a rainy season. This excessive taxation forces the launch owners to put on the launches loads which they were never made to carry and in addition a tow boat or two is pulled along behind. These launches with their tows are loaded down to the gunwale so that the least lurch causes them to take in water and go down. Moreover the loads of the launches are so heavy that the strength of the engine is taxed to its limit to make the rapids or ascend where the current is extra swift. Consequently, often ropes must be used to capstan the launch up the stream. Occasionally when half way up the rapid and the boatmen are straining every nerve to make the grade, the huge towline breaks and down the launch is carried in the grip of the current. At such times a wreck is almost inevitable. If the launches were not loaded so heavily the engine could drive her up the stream without the help of ropes, or if ropes were used there would be less danger of breaking. Moreover if the launches were not loaded so heavily and the ropes did break their own engines would have power sufficient to keep them under control.

Carelessness is also a noticeable feature that enters into some of the wreck. On some launches that ply the West river the crew are not allowed to gamble on board while the boat is running and this makes carelessness less liable to occur. On the majority of launches, however, gambling is the order of the day, and night too. Watching a gambling game instead of watching the channel has been the cause, on more than one occasion, of a boat getting into difficulties. At other times the launch gets into trouble before the boatmen who have gambled all night are wakened and called to their posts.

LAUNCHES AS DEATH TRAPS.

When wrecks occur no matter what the cause may be, the construction of many of the launches adds greatly to the loss of life. The openings along the sides and the windows in the cabins are so small that it is almost impossible for many to crawl out and escape. When the motor launch Tungloh went down those in the tiny cabins lost their lives like rats in a trap. Some of the recently constructed launches have made noticeable improvements along this line. The cabin windows are large and can be opened easily in cases of emergency while the larger room in which the bulk of the passengers travel are also arranged so that escape is possible in cases of real danger. If all launches were built in this way, and a law were passed, as in Hongkong, and other enlightened and well governed, ports, forbidding overloading and caring a little for the lives of those who must travel, the loss by drowning on these rivers, which has to be reported so often, would be brought down to a minimum.

SMUGGLING AND SLOW TRAVEL.

A few years ago a journey which took but from five to eight days is now lengthened out to ten days or two weeks. The increased customs stations and the extra red tape where the customs are rented out to private individuals has much to do with this slow travel, but the practice of smuggling by members of the crew and the private business carried on by many is a big factor in many of the delays. The launch anchors early, because the boatmen say, "There is no place to anchor if we go further," when in reality they have private cargo which they want to take on board and which will need all the evening to carry down to the boat. This form of smuggling and private enterprise not only causes innumerable delays along the road, but increases by hours the time taken to pass the various customs stations. The customs men know there is smuggling cargo on board and in order to find it and receive the fees which its discovery will bring, the launch is often held up for hours while a regular search is made. Recently a journey which in the balmy days of peace and quietness could be made in less than three days has come to occupy as much as 18. And this without a break or a mishop. How the various shipping firms can rectify this is a matter which has not yet been solved.

MR. G. M. Young has been appointed a Director of the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation in the place of Mr. G. T. M. Edkins.

A VISIT TO TOKIO'S "NIGHTLESS CITY"

The Yoshiwara Rebuilt and Flourishing: Public Opinion Awakening: Buddhist Teaching Outraged

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, Mar. 25.

People have expressed astonishment at the rapid manner in which Tokio has been, and is being, rebuilt. These, however, have referred to the business and residential portions of the city. They must, however, pay a visit to the Yoshiwara (Tokio's main red-light district) and their astonishment would increase a thousandfold. Even to a few of us Tokio residents for years, who had seen reconstruction develop from day to day, the rehabilitation of the Yoshiwara was astounding. There is no part of destroyed Tokio that has been resurrected so artistically, so effectively and so thoroughly as the Yoshiwara.

To re-locate the spot gave us a great deal of trouble. To be sure it is behind the famous temple of Kwannon, the Japanese goddess of mercy, but once there we were still at a loss as to where the entrance to the "Nightless City," began. The curious looks and supercilious smiles that accosted us made us certain that we were in the neighbourhood of the place and finally we decided to ask a diminutive policeman who, in his cage-like "police box," was warming his hands over a hibachi (Japanese fire-box) although it was a rather warm day in early Spring. He condescended to leave his official shelter and, with a broad grin occasioned perhaps by the thought that these queer foreigners visit "Nightless Cities" by day, walked with us to what was formerly the main entrance to the officially segregated district. Here he bade us goodbye and ventured the hope that we would have a merry time.

WHERE HUNDREDS WERE BOILED.

Our steps first took us towards the large pond, situated in the shadow of multifarious tutelary gods and goddesses sacred to the courtesans, where hundreds of these girls perished on that terrible afternoon of September 1 last year. Those women who escaped from the crashing houses and the devouring flames sought shelter in this shallow pool, perhaps some 50 feet by 30 feet. There was soon hardly elbow room. The flames continued to rage. The water became tepid, then hot, then rose to a temperature far above the boiling point. When, the following day, squads of soldiers and workmen came to gather the bodies, that portion above the surface of the water was charred black, while the parts below the water surface were cooked. The pond had become a seething cauldron in the conflagration.

A granite stone, with Chinese ideographs carved on it roughly, recalls the tragedy to those able to read the characters. On the stone is a brazier and the smoke of incense rises intermittently—let us suppose it is a tribute to those unfortunate girls.

FINE HOUSES: GOOD STREETS.

The houses in which are now quartered other courtesans—there seems to have been no especial difficulty in securing women for this degrading "necessity"—are some of the finest in Tokio, certainly much finer than the domiciles erected for the people. The "barracks" put up for the homeless are worse than pigs' styes compared to these. The wooden floors have been polished until one can see one's reflexion in them; trees have been planted giving the place a sense of quiet and dignity; the streets are straight, clean and broad—something that important portions of commercial and industrial Tokio haven't got. The houses are artistically constructed, with that blending of Chinese and native Japanese architecture that makes Japanese houses so picturesque. Inside are miniature landscape gardens as in the days before September, 1923, with little altars where a lantern or a candle is burnt by devout or superstitious—it is hard to distinguish between these words—oiran (courtesans) to solicit the favour of the gods. Everything seems to be the same as before, the only innovation being that zinc plates have been used for the roofing of the houses instead of the heavy tiles.

From the windows kimonos of all hues are spread out to dry. The shrill falsetto of a musically-inclined courtesan comes from some hidden room. Street vendors of all sorts of things—from gaudy tinsel to raw fish—peddle their wares from door to door, dwelling eloquently on the radiant looks of the women who now come out and telling them how much more beautiful they would be if they only had this or that ornament affixed to their hair or their clothes, the while the oiran drinks in all the flattery apathetically.

"BUSINESS" FLOURISHING.

In front of each house sit two men zealously warming their hands and scanning every passer-by with furtive eye. The glance of one rests on us. Won't we come in? Yes, the women here are the best; they only came yesterday. We talk Japanese. Ah, then, the honourable strangers have been for some time in Japan! Aren't foreigners clever to talk a language so well in such a short space of time?

A few deft questions and a liberal offering of cigarettes inspires one of these keepers to talk business."

"Yes," he says, "everything is now flourishing, for we are giving the public what they want. We have been able to get all the houses to agree to a flat rate of Y.1.50 an hour, and many a fine young fellow has to leave regretfully because of lack of accommodation."

BUDDHISTS AWAKENING.

It must not be imagined that all the Japanese endorse this manner of re-building the capital—of beginning with the Yoshiwara first. The Buddhists are beginning to ask—happy augury—whether it is necessary that the task of clearing society of the evils of alcohol and prostitution should be left to Christians alone, for these were two of the weaknesses of mankind that the Buddha condemned in no less peremptory and condemnatory a manner than did Jesus Christ. Just at the present time, when keepers of these dens in Kioto and Osaka have summoned a meeting to discuss what steps should be taken to prevent Christians and Christian missionaries from jeopardizing their "trade," a union of zealous Buddhists and fervent Christians to rid the land of recognized public prostitution, which works infinite harm to the spiritual and educational culture of the Japanese, is especially desirous. Questionable hotels—quite apart from the licensed places of which the Tokio Yoshiwara is a model—abound in every city of Japan, and a large number of the people are rightly connecting this lowering of tone with the State-recognized Yoshiwara.

THE TIENTSIN WOMEN'S CLUB

Flourishing Institution of 16 Nationalities: Annual General Meeting

Tientsin News Service

Tientsin, Apr. 4.

A membership of 201, representing 16 nationalities, and a credit balance of about $500 at the end of the first working year are the more substantial facts disclosed at the annual general meeting of the Tientsin Women's Club yesterday.

After hearing reports of the various department and executive secretaries the meeting elected officers for the coming year as follows:

Executive Board: Mrs. E. K. Lowry, President; Mrs. E. C Young, Vice-President; Mrs. A. G. Robinson, Recording Secretary; Mrs. A. E. Capstick, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. J. B. Wolfe; Treasuurer; Member-at-large for one year, Mrs. G. E. Nathan; Member-at-large for two years, Mrs. Paul Young.

Balloting Committee: Mrs. F. W. L. Dreckmeier, Chairman (also ex-officio member of the Executive Board); Mrs. R. H. Chandless, Mrs. R. C. Guernier, Mrs. F. S. Williams, and Mrs. Dan Chung.

Departmental heads of the four main divisions will be elected later at meetings of those departments.

Among new business it was decided to inaugurate a series of special study circles in subjects not covered by the four main departments, each circle to have a minumum of eight members. Such subjects as Physical Culture, Drama, Parliamentary Law, will hereafter be conducted under this scheme. It was also decided that the Executive Board shall appoint a special Entertainment Committee to conduct programmes not regularly coming under any of the main departmental activities, such as promotion of membership drives, campaigns and the like. Hereafter every Tuesday will be club day, either the entire club or one of the departments meeting on that day.

From the report of the Executive Board, drawn up by last year's Recording Secretary, Mrs. Robinson, some of the more interesting facts have been extracted as follows: The Tientsin Women's Club was formed in the spring of 1923 after several meetings of those interested, including members of the then existing Mothers' Club. The constitution was drawn up and officers elected at a meeting in the Gordon Hall on May 30, when 51 signed the original constitution. The new club then invited about 300 ladies of the port to join, arranged to rent the Masonic Hall for meetings, and bought various furniture, tea service, etc., and planned out a Club programme for the year. During the year the Club held seven monthly meetings, with an average of 100 present at each, a Christmas Party for children at the Gordon Hall, a luncheon at the Astor to hear Miss Kendall, a Valentine Book Tea, a reception to meet Dame Adelaide Anderson and a mahjong party and dance at the Gordon Hall, which incidentally netted $200 towards the building fund.

The report further states that the 16 nationalities include 1 Dutch, 1 Japanese, 1 Swiss, 1 Italian, 1 Norwegian, 1 German, 3 French, 5 Russian, 18 Chinese, 62 British, including English, Canadian, Australian, Scotch and Irish, and 107 American.

The enrolment in each department is: Home and Children: 131; Social Service: 70; Music Study: 50; Literature: 142.

Among things planned for the coming year are a Rummage Sale at the end of April, an open evening by the Music Study department in May, Chinese Shadow players' entertainment, very shortly, as well as the regular operations of each of the four departments and the newly planned circles.

THE DOCTOR'S GOWN

An Ingenious Theft by Bogus Patient and a Cold Tea Party

From Our Own Correspondent.

Wusih, Ku., April 3.

The following incident came to my ears to-day and seems fully worthy of the Mixed Court in Shanghai. An old lady took a dollar to a Chinese doctor and asked him to follow her for the purpose of treating her master. She took the doctor to a tea house in the public garden and generously supplied him with tea. There she also communicated to him the intelligence that her master did not wish his family disturbed by a knowledge of his illness, and therefore preferred to meet him in the tea house. Saying that she would now call her master, she left the doctor to enjoy a prolonged wait. Instead of going for her master she hastened back to the doctor's house and told his wife that, the weather being colder than her husband anticipated, he urgently needed his long squirrel fur gown and a warm wadded jacket. These the good lady gave her, but took the precaution of sending a slave girl to carry them for her. The wary old lady led the way to a photographer's shop, where remarking that the doctor was upstairs, she kindly relieved the slave of the garments. After remaining some time upstairs, she came down and gave the girl 20 cents, telling her to take a ricsha home, and that her master would follow shortly.

In the meantime the doctor having enjoyed a fruitless period of waiting, consoled himself with the thought that at least he had earned a dollar, and went home. In consequence of the circumstantial evidence produced by the dovetailing of his and his wife's narratives, a hurried search was made among the pawnshops, in one of which the missing garments were found, having been pawned for $18. The resourceful old lady is still missing.

ARMED ROBBERS AT NINGPO

Chinese Officials Evading Responsibility by Forbidding Foreigners to Travel

From Our Own Correspondent.

Ningpo, Apr. 4.

This city, riding on the crest of a "peaceful" wave for a long time, suffered a severe shock a few days ago by the visit, in a gray afternoon, of a small band of roobers. It seems that a particular family living outside the West Gate, and marked for attack, is known to be rich. The men were well dressed, and they aroused no suspicion anywhere until they boldly entered the house, asked for the master, and demanded money. The alarm was raised, and the street watch were soon on the spot. It was then found that the men were armed, they shot right and left and four of the wounded have since died. A young man and a boy were caught, and carried off by the robbers before 200 people who dared not lift a hand to rescue the victims for fear of being shot down. At Passan, later, a watchman attacked the robbers single-handed. He was speared badly and has since died. A letter has been sent from the bandits' hiding place demanding a ransom of $30,000, but no address is given. So Ningpo is sharing the fellowship of suffering

The Chinese authorities are pursuing the usual course of asking foreigners not to travel in the affected areas. The Consul has sent a circular letter round to British subjects stating that he has told three officials that they cannot divest themselves of their responsibilities by merely closing certain areas. No foreigners to our knowledge have been molested, in any way in this district as yet. It is stated that the Defence Commissioner is taking steps to put down the robbers.

GOING A-FAIRING IN SZECHUAN

Another Tale of Glory Departed: The Romance and Business of Twenty Years Ago

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mienchow, Sze., Mar. 17.

The story of the looting of the Mission Hospital at Mienchu was not correct. It had, however, a foundation in fact, as there has been considerable looting in the vicinity.

For the first time in three years the Tsetong fair has come to Mienchow. It is an ancient institution, and everyone looks forward to the excuse for a day off, and a chance to spend some money on a few needs for the year that can only then be conveniently supplied. There are of course many of the things that one can always buy.

The fair, however, is hardly more than a pious effort. We went as usual and sought things in their accustomed haunts, but they were not to be found. Twenty years ago we went with an elegant scholar of local fame to a large temple where ink-slabs and such-like things were sold. I see again in imagination the experience and dignity with which he tapped and scratched among the various slabs till he found one that he thought might do for a would-be scholar.

A DEGENERATE AGE.

Those days are far away, and so are the flourishing, crowded fairs that then were the fashion. I could find no ink-slabs, and have met no one who did. After 20 years one manages to dispense with a teacher's help; but the gain is not unmixed. Gone is the new and vivid curiosity which all things Chinese then aroused: but there remains a placid interest in everything, and if the spirit with which I can "kan kuei" partakes somewhat of that of the Chinaman, that is all to the good.

Twenty years after! The kind of things one sees at the fair are the same, except the soldiers. There is the same capacity to harangue the people from poster and proclamation. One large proclamation says: "Things are now in better order, and all officials are intending to do their duty. Let everyone help to establish the country!" Another said awful penalties would be meted out to those who, contrary to the treaties, persist in growing opium.

The rice market looked fairly well supplied. Trade of all sorts was brisk and everyone seemed busy. One man's signboard seemed to strike a familiar note: "The one and only Liu" he called himself. I remember how full in those far away days the stalls and temples were of silks, pictures, flowers, shrubs, and pens and books, aye, and ink-slabs! After 20 years I wanted a new ink-slab but found none in the proper "fair" style—hundreds spread out in array. I might have fumbled around, and scratched and tapped as my friend did 20 years ago. But who wants to buy things in a shop on "fair" day? Not I!

SOME OF THE PRICES.

We found the shrubs after much searching, hidden in an out-of-the-way temple. It may interest Shanghai people to know what we paid up here for some things we bought. For a blossoming japonica we paid 45 dollar cents; for a Buddha's hand tree and a pink flowering hibiscus 25 cents each, and for a small oleander 20 cents. Iron hoes were selling at 800 cash per catty. Large native scissors sold at 320 cash each. A kind of iron dibble for gardening cost 320 cash. We bought scroll pictures very cheaply. For instance: eight scrolls depicting the 24 examples of filial piety sold at 40 cents. The dollar is changing at 3,100 cash.

THE wedding of Mr. Duncan Millar, of the Chartered Bank, and Miss Gwen Forbes will take place about the middle of next month, says the "Straits Echo."

MOTOR-BUS COLLISION IN HONGKONG

Four Passengers Killed and Six Injured

Hongkong, Apr. 7.

A serious collision between two motor-buses occurred yesterday afternoon in the New Territories. One of the buses contained a party of boy scouts of the Seventh Saiyingpun School troop, who were proceeding to their camp. The buses, which were travelling in opposite directions, met head on on a long bridge. Ten persons, all Chinese, were killed or injured. Two boy-scouts received fatal injuries and one girl and one woman were killed.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE JAPANESE NAVAL COLLISION

Tokio, Apr. 4.

It is understood that the Nagato, which at the time of the collision was engaged in towing the Mutsu was only very slightly damaged. No details are at present available.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

FIRST CHINESE NURSES OF SHANSI

Local Product of Which the Province Is Justly Proud

From Our Own Correspondent.

Taiku, Shan., Mar. 29.

To-day an event unique in the history of Shansi has occurred here. It was the graduation of a class of six nurses, men, from the Nurses' Training School of the Smith-Barton Hospital of this city. This is, I believe, the first class of nurses ever to finish training in this province. Four of the six young men passed with credit the examinations of the Nurses' Association of China and received the diplomas of that organization as well as those of the local school. Great credit for this result must be given to the head of the training school here, Miss Alma M. Atzel, R.N., and to her colleague, Miss Helen Dizney, R.N., as well as to the medical men on the staff of the Smith-Barton Hospital, Dr. W. A. Hemingway, Dr. W. P. Tien and Dr. C. L. Wen. All these workers have co-operated in the training of these young men, some of whom have spent six years in preparation.

The address to the graduates was given by a veteran Shansi missionary, Dr. E. H. Edwards, who has recently returned to Taiyuanfu from his home in England. The address was a clear and helpful exposition of the function of nursing in mission medical work, and was aptly illustrated by stories of early medical work in Shansi, in which Dr. Edwards himself was one of the pioneers. The representative of the graduating class, Mr. Chao Yi, R.N., gave a remarkably effective statement as to the real place of the trained nurse, in his relation to the medical staff, to the patients, to the technical work of the hospital, to the home and to society. The graduating exercises were also enlivened by several appropriate musical numbers.

It is gratifying to learn that all six of the young men who were graduated to-day have positions awaiting them, and, indeed, the demand is in advance of the supply. The promoters of this training school have a right to feel that it is meeting a real need in Shansi.

MISSING MILLIONS OF TSINGTAO

Officials of Old Regime Held Up and Compelled to Render Account

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, April 5.

One sensation now follows on the heel of another, the latest being the frustration of an attempt on the part of Mr. Tsou Wen-wei, the former Director of General Affairs, to slip out of town unobserved. He has been under surveillance ever since the advent of the Kao Administration although he was in all probability unaware of it. In any case, when he attempted to slip out of town on the evening of the 3rd, he was politely requested not to do so again.

The present Administration intends to hold Mr. Tsou strictly responsible for the millions which have disappeared from the Treasury here. When the archives of the old Administration were taken over, the chief of each department thought it was only necessary to hand over the existing records together with whatever money was available, without giving a strict accounting. Mr. Kao En-hung apparently thought otherwise, for he required the old records to be fully gone into.

As already reported, there have been wholesale dismissals, only a couple of men of the old régime being taken over by the new Administration. They include Mr. D. Y. Lin, the Chief of the Agriculture and Forestry Bureau. This is, undoubtedly, a wise decision, for Mr. Lin is not only an expert in his line and well acquainted with the foreigners here but a strictly honest official.

He has had to encounter no end of difficulties as a result of his refusal to mortgage the trees under his jurisdiction. In fact, just prior to the Chinese New Year he had to escape to Peking in order not to be compelled to sign a mortgage on all trees in this district. Mr. Tsou Wen-wei at that time called together the chiefs of the various departments and required them to raise money the best way they could, so as to tide over the critical period; but Mr. Lin strenuously objected, affirming that inasmuch as he had no part in the process of making millions disappear he saw no reason why he should worry over the financial situation.

The new Administration begins work each day at eight in the morning and does not terminate before that hour in the evening. This is certainly an improvement upon the old system under which the various department chiefs rarely turned up before one in the afternoon.

BLESSING THE SILK WORMS

Seeking Luck at Feast of Pure Brightness: Wusih's Big Loss in Recent Years

From Our Own Correspondent.

Wusih Ku., Apr. 3.

The Tsing Ming, or annual feast of spirit worship, comes this year on April 6. The Wei Sun, or Sacred Mountain, is a famous goal for pilgrims at this season, and if the weather is good the worshipers will probably number between five and six thousand. The pilgrims invariably include an astonishing number of women, many of them of the upper classes, whom one would believe to be physically incapable of the steep climb to the summit of the mountain. Seen from the city the mountain presents, on the principle day of the feast, the appearance of an ant hill with its columns of tiny figures moving up and down it.

An interesting feature of this festival is that the raisers of silkworms put the eggs into their clothing and thus enable the embryonic worms to make the ascent with them. It is to be expected that this ceremony will be observed with unusual care this year as it is believed to bring good luck to the cocoons and the silk market has been particularly short of that commodity during the past year. As a matter of fact the average loss sustained by each silk filature last year amounts to $20,000. The reason given is that the worms were underfed and ill cared for, and therefore produced an inferior quality of silk. It is feared that the number of merchants coming to buy in Wusih will be much smaller this year than formerly. Therefore in addition to the pious pilgrimage of the eggs, the country people are being carefully instructed in the best possible methods of sericulture.

SERIOUS ILLNESS OF GEN. SUN LIEH-CHUN

Peking, Apr. 6.

A Fengtien dispatch reports that Gen. Sun Lieh-chun is seriously ill and fears are entertained of his recovery. Gen. Sun is said to be suffering from consumption. As he is too ill to attend to his official duties, Marshal Chang Tso-lin is consulting with the Kirin Provincial Assembly regarding the temporary appointment of a Deputy-Commandant of Peace Preservation in Manchuria, the post given to Gen. Sun after the Chihli-Fengtien war. It is expected that Gen. Pao Kuei-ching will be given this post. Reuter's Pacific Service.

INQUIRIES made by the Tientsin News Service at the Kailan Mining Administration elicit the information that the bodies of 50 men recently entombed by a cave-in, have not yet been recovered and that some time will elapse before the operators can reach the place where they were buried.

THE AXE IN JAPAN'S CIVIL SERVICE

Superfluous Bureaucrats Fearful of Discharge: Y. M. C. A. Plans of Rebuilding

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, April 2.

Since 1920 when Japan felt the full force of the reaction following the war boom, the civil servants of the Empire have been haunted by the spectre of the retrenchment axe. The number of civil servants had grown out of all proportion during the days of the European war and armies of clerks were employed in the existing Government departments and bureaux and in the large number of new ones that were then established. The depression of 1920 brought Japanese realists in the Treasury Department face to face with the need for immediate retrenchment and furnished ample opportunities for the Government to dismiss a large proportion of the army of civil servants, oportunities that the authorities were not slow to take advantage of. Then came the Washington conference which resulted in the economy axe cutting deeper furrows. The earthquake of last September has again made it imperative to deflate the civil service once more and Viscount Kiyoura is credited with a firm determination to cut down expenses wherever such can be done

The tendency to increase the number of government employees has been a prominent evil in this country. As a new Ministry comes into power jobs are sought for its supporters and the dependents of its supporters. The earthquake gives the Premier, Viscount Kiyoura, ample excuse for sweeping out the non-indispensable elements in the Government service, but how far he will carry his retrenchment policy is not known yet.

It is generally believed that the Premier will wait till after the general elections before he takes any extensive step in this direction partially because the dismissal of Government employees, possessing the franchise might result in these out-of-office men throwing the weight of their support on the side of Opposition. What is definitely known of the retrenchment programme of the Premier is that he proposes to effect not merely a reduction of expenses, but also to justify the dismissal of employees by showing an increase in efficiency. The Government's scheme includes a thoroughgoing reorganization of the administrative machinery, one of the outstanding points in this plan being the unification of the administration of all departments pertaining to transportation by creating a new Department of Transportation. It is also reported that the Government proposes to unify the departments of War and Navy under one new Department of National Defence.

Y.M.C.A.'S IN JAPAN.

"The Beautiful God Village" is the new name given by Japanese to the temporary location of the Tokio Y.M.C.A. The Y.M.C.A. organizations of Tokio and Yokohama lost all their buildings in the September catastrophe, but from almost the very hour that people regained a measure of normality these organizations have been alleviating distress and aiding reconstruction.

The former gymnasium of the Tokio Y.M.C.A., of which only the shell is remaining, is the abode of a group of 75 refugees who have called their temporary home "The Beautiful God Village". The old bowling alleys in the Tokio gymnasium have been transformed into a night school, attended regularly by 375 students, while the Y.M.C.A. city association in Yokohama is one of the busiest spots in the rapidly-reviving port city.

Japanese business men have long ago discovered the value of the Y.M.C.A. organization and have pledged all possible assistance in the efforts made to resurrect these institutions. The reconstruction programme will require about Yen 3,000,000, and it is proposed to erect an even better structure than existed prior to the catastrophe. All the buildings connected with the work of the Y.M.C.A. in Tokio were burned, including the national headquarters of the city association and central auditorium, the gymnasium, the Y.M.C.A. building in the Imperial University grounds, the Japanese student building, the Chinese Student Building and the Korean student building.

All the buildings of the organization in Yokohama were swept by the fire, the frames of reinforced concrete stood intact and a few days after the calamity afforded places of refuges to homeless people. No less than 450 persons found temporary homes in this manner.

The manner in which the Y.M.C.A. got to work to succour the sufferers has just won praise from the Government and municipal officials. Amongst the relief work done was the distribution by Y men of milk for 2,000 children for many weeks following the disaster. The milk was supplied by the Tokio municipality. The tents that the Y had also assisted many refugees to find their relatives, for which special bureaus were established. Employment agencies and bureaus to provide free legal advice to small property owners regarding landown ership rights are still being conducted under the aegis of the Y. M. C. A.

The emergency following the earthquake proved to be a test through which the Y. emerged with flying colours and the respect in which these organizations have ever been held in Japan has increased all the more to-day.

The rebuilding fund for which Yen 3,000,000 will be needed is to be raised both in Japan and in the United States. Contributions already made in Japan amount to Yen 250,000, but the campaign has not commenced in earnest as yet.

The new city building planned for Tokio is to be a much larger one than the building destroyed and is to cost, according to present plans, about Yen 1,000,000.

FAMINE PRICES FOR KANSU WOOL

Prospective Bankruptcies When the Usual Slump Comes

From Our Own Correspondent.

Sining, Mar. 19.

News has arrived that a certain wool agent of German nationality travelling in Tibet has been attacked by robbers and two of his escort killed.

Two years ago wool could be bought at $5 per picul, now it has run up to Tls. 20 and some as high as Tls. 22 per picul and at this price it is quite probable that some will find themselves nearly ruined when they come to dispose of it again. There are about 40 different agents this year buying wool in Huang-yuen and it is a harvest-time for the Tibetans. In Sining three Russian firms have opened up agencies. About four years ago wool ran up to Tls. 28 and Tls. 30 per picul; many of those who purchased were ruined. The following year little wool was bought because the old firms would not give the price, and their competitors failed to come back the next year, so the Tibetans had to keep their wool until they were willing to come down to the price of the buyer.

This inrush of new agencies is a curse to the steady trading which has been going on for some scores of years, and it is quite possible the older firms, disgusted with the fluctuations, may transfer their energies to more hopeful fields. To do so would be a great blow to these border cities which have become accustomed to the yearly incoming of tens of thousands of taels. Over Tls. 10 million catties of wool are sent from this district every year. Just now scores of carts are carting the wool down to this city every day, whence it is sent down to Lanchow on rafts and from there on a larger rafts to Paot'ou and Tientsin.

MANILA, April, 5.—Justices Elias F. Johnson and William S. Johns of the Supreme Court are passengers on the President Jackson for the United States.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

SHEEP AND GOATS ON RACE COURSE

Tientsin Classifying All Ponies as Pure China or Half Breeds

Tientsin News Service.

Tientsin, Apr. 7.

Consternation, modified slightly by the leaven of inevitableness, and all that sort of thing, reigns in racing circles here to-day as a result of the classification of old race ponies this morning into the "sheep" and the "goats"; otherwise into China ponies and half-breeds.

Fifteen men, elected by the "voting" members of the Tientsin Race Club gathered early this morning at the course and stood in solemn judgment on the ancestral lines of most of Tientsin's famous quadrupeds.

Fourteen ponies, among them Champions, ex-Champions and many times winners, passed provisionally into "B" Class, and will remain there permanently unless very good gencalogical proof is forthcoming within 24 hours, to obtain revocation. They are The Rambler, Champions winner last spring and second to Rolls Royce in the autumn; Capella Eyes, winner of the last Kiangwan Leger and third in the last Kiangwan Champions; Kismet, winner of three races last season; Touchsand, Meeko, Arab, Oklahoma, Silver King, Sunbeam, Sunset, Gobi Son, Kavoshima, Etamim and Bellatrix.

Hereafter, these half-breeds are condemned to participate in but two races on each day of the coming Spring Meeting, and to remain out of the premier race, the Champions. They will not have even a Champions event of their own.

A few old ponies have not yet been brought to judgment, notably Symphony, which is perhaps the fastest three-quarter mile pony in the north, and which was expected to break the all-China record this spring. There are those who think this pony will also suffer exile to "B" Class. The new string of 1924 "griffins" have yet to be judged, and from what we are able to discover, there will be some excitement when decisions are given.

No little surprise was caused this morning when the judges declared Kismet to be a half-breed, and not the least surprised was the owner, who is an ardent advocate of the exile. The pony stands only 13.1, which is about what a China pony should stand, but there was possibly something uncanny in Kismet's consistent winning, or a nasty, "horsy" look in his eye. An even smaller pony, Arab, measuring only 13 hands, was also declared of mixed parentage. Possibly the Mendellian theory was operative in this case.

WEST RIVER PIRATES

Portuguese Steamer Assailed: Captain Wounded: Three Guards Killed

Macao, Apr. 5.

The Portuguese steamer, Seixal, was pirated to-day near Kaukong in the West River district. The captain was wounded and three of the guards were killed. The port of registry of the steamer is Canton.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Honkgong, Apr. 6.

The three guards killed by the pirates on board the Seixal were all Indians. Another guard was wounded by two gun-shots and was taken to hospital at Macao. Captain Assis was wounded in the head by the butt of a revolver besides being severely beaten. The Portuguese chief engineer, Mr. Jorge, had a narrow escape, a bullet grazing his face. The loot taken by the pirates consisted of over $8,000 cash besides cargo and passengers' belongings valued at over $30,000. Some Chinese passengers were taken to be held for ransom. Collusion between the pirates and the crew of the Seixal is suspected. A gunboat has gone to Samshui from Macao.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

PERILS OF THE POST IN KANSU

Couriers Killed by Goloks: Revenge for the Drubbing of Two Years Ago

From Our Own Correspondent.

Sining, Mar. 19.

Since the opening of Jyegundo as a Postal Station, owing to the loneliness of the way and the danger in passing through the Golok country, three men are sent together with the mail. The men, though paid by the Post Office, are soldiers belonging to the General. During the last journey the Goloks waylaid them, shot two of their horses, and wounded one of the men.

It will be remembered that, over two years ago, a large expedition was sent against the Goloks and they were badly beaten and had to pay a heavy indemnity. Some of them escaped and refused to submit. It would have been a wild-goose chase to pursue them in such a vast country where no food can be procured and to be harassed continually by small bands of fugitives hidden in the mountains.

The reason of that expedition was to punish the Goloks for stealing 5,000 yaks belonging to the High Commissioner.

It is an 18 days' journey from Jyegundo to Sining, and the greater part of the way lies through the Golok country. It now remains to be seen what punishment they will receive for this attack on the couriers.

ANOTHER COURIER WOUNDED.

Two years ago the route from Sining through Huang-yuen, Ch'a-puh-ch'a Dulan-sz to Chang and Barong was considered quite safe for merchants, explorers, etc., and postal couriers have been running regularly, but a courier has just been waylaid, his horse stolen and himself wounded somewhere between Dulan-sz and Huang-yuen. Not having turned up at the proper time, another courier was despatched with the mail, and on the way came across the wounded man. He went for help, but before help arrived the man was dead. In future, probably it will be necessary for the postal authorities to send two men at a time, instead of singly, as in the past two years. No matter how carefully this route is guarded there are sure to be attacks made now and again on travellers, as the distances between places are so great that before help arrives the robbers can be miles away.

C.P.O. A BOON TO MERCHANTS

Our first Chinese Postal Commissioner has asked leave for a year and is going to take a world tour, visiting the chief places in England and America. This is his first holiday since entering the Post Office over 25 years ago. He was one of the first few young lads that entered the Post Office at the commencement and by faithful service has risen from the ranks to be one of the First Chinese Commissioners. We wish him a very happy holiday and a real pleasure trip wherever he goes.

The New Commissioner is Mr. Doodha, Mr. Doodha is a native of India, a Parsee I believe. We give him a heartly welcome to this far off province. A letter came through from Shanghai the other day in 14 days. Quick work. Not so very many years ago, letters took two months.

When in the border city of Huang-yuen the other day I saw a great pile of bundles containing furs ready to be sent off to Peking. The merchants find it is to their advantage to send their furs through the Post Office, paying customs and likin here, for it ensures their quick transit down country. The Post Office is a real boon to the merchant also, who gets his supplies from Shanghai or Peking.

ADMIRAL WEN'S NAVY

Distribution of the Fleet

Peking, Apr 6.

According to Chinese reports, the vessels of Admiral Wen Chou-teh's squadron will be distributed between Tsingtao, Chefoo and Chinwangtao, the Haichi remaining at Chinwangtao, the Chowho at Tsingtao and the remaining five vessels at Chefoo. The marines will be stationed in the forts at Chefoo.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

ANNUAL INSPECTION OF SHANTUNG RAILWAY

Peking, Apr 6.

The first annual inspection of the Shantung Railway since its restoration by Japan has just been ordered by the Ministry of Communications. Mr. Chuan Liang, with two foreign experts and a staff of assistants, left Peking by a special train yesterday afternoon and were due at Tsinanfu to-day. It is stated that all details of equipment and administration will be examined. Reuter's Pacific Service.

MR. LIANG SHI-YI IN LONDON

China's Need of More Railways: Foreign Capital Welcome on Certain Conditions

London, Apr 5.

Mr. Liang Shi-yi, the former Chinese Premier, interviewed by a representative of Reuter's Agency to-day on questions dealing with Chinese finance, said that foreign capital would be welcome, but only on conditions which must benefit both parties and not be one-sided. He expressed the opinion that preference should be given to Chinese products, but he did not object to the employment of suitable labour from abroad. Mr. Liang Shi-yi advocated that the Government should build railways and that the people should provide rolling stock and locomotives. Thus, even with their present capital, the Government could construct twice the present length of line and save time.

A banquet will be given in honour of Mr. Liang Shih-yi by the Legation and by Chinese students.

He will stay six weeks in England, make a tour of the Continent, and return home via America.—Reuter.

ARBOR DAY IN PEKING

Tree-Planting Ceremony at the Temple of Heaven: Address by Dr. W. W. Yen

Peking, Apr. 6.

Yesterday being the feast of Ching Ming, the annual tree-planting ceremony took place at the Temple of Heaven, Dr. W. W. Yen, Minister of Agriculture, officiating on behalf of the President. The Premier was represented by Mr. Wang Chi-tseng, Chief Secretary of the Cabinet, and Dr. Wellington Koo by Mr. Shen Jui-ling. Most of the other Ministers were present in person.

As Dr. Yen planted the tree, the national anthem was rendered by the Presidential band. Dr. Yen then gave an address, in which he dwelt on the significance of the ceremony in a country whose chief industry had been agriculture for centuries. It signified also, he said, the support which the Government intended to give to agriculture and he pointed out the importance of co-operation among all classes in this important sphere of national activity. In conclusion, the speaker cited several classical illustrations of the prominent part played by hubsandry in China's history.

Presidential guards of honour were furnished for the occasion by the police and gendarmerie, and the streets along which Dr. Yen and his escort passed on their way to the temple enclosure were lined with guards. The public were admitted, and quite a number of visitors were present to witness the ceremony. The Department of Agriculture and Forestry was represented by its Chief, Mr. Huang Hsi-yi.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

A PROVINCE FREE OF BANDITS

And Where Soldiers Do Not Fight Each Other: Some Good Points in Kansu

From Our Own Correspondent.

Lanchowfu, Kan., Mar., 22.

I suppose readers at the coast come to weary of our inland conditions, where banditry, opium-growing and other evils are so prominent. So that for a change let me tell of a few of the good things we come across in our province. At the same time, I must report that opium-growing, on a scale even larger than last year, is in full swing, and prices are steadily rising in consequence, whether for food or wages.

We are practically free of bandits throughout the province. It is not easy to tell why, considering the fact that the rulers of our different districts are largely independent, and frequently defiant of each other. Recently we heard that M. Vinokouroff, of the Harbin firm of that name, was killed by Moslem robbers, who took Tls. 5,000 of booty. However, it is all a mistake. It was not the merchant but his servant who was attacked, and slightly wounded. Still, in any part of China, especially on the Tibetan border, it is advisable not carry Tls. 5,000 in specie about with you, unless you want to create and invite robbers.

Our soldiers do not fight each other. This is the second great advantage of Kansu. The thoughtful reader may imagine that they do not fight each other because they do not fight at all. This is quite a mistake. In all China, Kansu soldiers, especially Moslem ones, are regarded with respect because of their courage and soldierly qualities.

Then again it is planned to have a provincial university here, to be known as the "Northwestern University." Kansu has a number of educated men, keen as can be on the welfare of the people. The late Mr. Wang, of Kongchang, who died in England a couple of years ago while on an educational mission to the West, was one of them. A memorial school is to be put up now to his memory in his native city. He was one of the nicest men we knew.

Everyone knows, let us charitably suppose, that our communications with the outer world are bad. High mountains, and sandy wastes, hem us in on most sides. But various of our more enterprising leaders are determined to end this state of things. It is no easy task to build good permanent roads through loess clay, or over the mountains. But there seem reasonable hopes that a motor road will shortly connect us with the railway, or to Shanchow on the Lunghai line. A motor-car has just been brought up for Governor Luh. He does not like it, though it is the first car in Lanchow, for he fancies a limousine, and this is a touring car. But what will you? With roads such as Kansu possesses, the choice is really between a Chinese springless cart and a bicycle. And, oh, the glory that shines even round this mudspattered, road-battered car that has made such a trip as this to Lanchow.

CHIHLI PROVINCIAL ASSEMBLY

Distant Districts' Desire for Separation

Peking, Apr. 4.

Finding that the Chihli Provincial Assembly was an unwieldy body, and in response to a desire in some of the distant districts for separation, the districts of Jehol, Chahar, Suiyuan and the Metropolitan Area are to be separated, each to have its own District Assembly. Mr. Liu Meng-kung, Governor of the Metropolitan Area, held a meeting yesterday, which was attended by the Chairman of the Peking Chamber of Commerce and a number of influential residents, to discuss measures to prepare for this separation.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

PEKING BUREAUCRATS' PLEA FOR SOME MONEY

Peking, Apr. 3

It is reported that the staff of the four bureaux under the Cabinet Office are planning to approach the Premier to-morrow with a request for the payment of arrears of salaries.

At to-day's meeting of the Cabinet the Minister of Finance reported that he had raised $2,900,000 toward the Government's expenses for February, and that the allotment of this money would be made shortly.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

UNACCOUNTED FUNDS OF TSINGTAO

Ex-Director-General Called on to Explain the Whereabouts of $3,000,000

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, Apr. 4.

The former Director General was stopped at the station last night when, it is said, he was trying to slip out of the town, by officers of the new Administration, who demanded that he should account for $3,000,000 of which it is alleged there are no records.

All of the former officials have now been dismissed by the new Governor, Mr. Kao En-hung, except the Chief of the Forest Bureau.

PEITAIHO CONFERENCE

Arrangements for the Housing of Visitors: Programme for the Month

A Conference for foreigners will be held at the Conference House at Peitaiho from July 16 to August 13. Three main buildings are equipped for housing guests. The buildings are plain, but comfortable. The grounds consist of about 55 mow with an ocean frontage. Fine trees and vegetation afford delightful surroundings. The kitchens and accessory buildings are screened; and the necessary sanitary measures have been provided. The auditorium affords a fine cool place for meetings in summer. There is no charge for accommodation, but a daily rate of $1.25 is charged for board. There are some rooms especially set aside for families; so that a limited number of children may also be accommodated. We hope to have a special programme for children, including music and games. Children under ten years of age are charged half price for board.

The programme for the month is divided into three sections of one week each, with intervals of two days for rest, so that those for whom this is an only holiday may not become too tired. There will be a special theme for each section, and all of the meetings of the day will bear upon that theme. The messages will be planned so as to minister to the personal spiritual need, and also to give inspiration and suggestion along the lines of service.

There will be four sessions daily:—an early period of united intercession before breakfast; two periods in the morning, one of which will be for Bible study; and an inspirational message in the evening. There will be no afternoon sessions. Much time will be left free for exchange of thought and experience which was one of the most helpful and delightful features of the Conference last year. Speakers from abroad will be present, and missionaries in China will also assist in the Conference programme.

A committee, consisting of Dr. J. Walter Lowrie, Miss Bess Combs, and Miss Ruth Paxson, have charge of this Conference. All correspondence concerning the Conference should be addressed to Miss Ruth Paxson, 9 Ave. Petain, Shanghai.

As the accomodations is limited, registrations will be made in the order of application. Arrangements can probably also be made for those who signify their desire to remain for a period after the Conference closes.

STUDENTS' STRIKE IN PEKING

Demand for Investigation of Administration of Peiyang University

Peking, Apr. 7.

It is now three weeks since the students' strike at Peiyang University commenced, and no settlement has yet been reached. The trouble followed the dismissal of four of the students' representatives by Mr. Feng Hsi-yun, acting President of the University, with whose administration during the past five years, the students express great dissatisfaction.

The students, the majority of whom are in Peking, state that they have succeeded in arousing much sympathy here in educational and parliamentary circles and have been given liberal support. They further assert that the Chihli Provincial Assembly is considering an investigation of Mr. Feng's administration, and that the students of the National University, Tangshan University, the Technical University, the Conservancy University at Nanking, and other institutions have declared themselves in sympathy with the strikers at Peiyang. The China Students' Union at Shanghai and the Peking Students' Union are said to have issued circular telegrams to the same effect.

Thanks to the support they have received, the students declare that they will disregard the acting President's ultimatum that any of their number who had not returned by to-morrow would be struck off the roll, and will refuse to resume work while Mr. Feng remains in office. A number of senior students who had remained to complete preparation for their graduation have now, it is said, decided to join the strikers if the petition submitted to Dr. Wang Ching-wei four days ago is not granted.

Interesting developments are expected in the near future.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT & CHANG TSO-LIN

Peking, Apr. 4.

Regarding the report of a conference to be held between representatives of the Central Government and Marshal Chang Tso-lin, it is stated in reliable quarters that Marshal Chang will be offered the post of High Commissioner (Ching Lueh Shih) of Fengtien, Kirin, Heilungkiang and Jehol, the last-named region to be included on condition that Marshal Chang recognizes the control of the Central Government over Outer Mongolia.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE REGENERATION OF CHINA

An Interview with Sir Robert Ho-tung

London, Apr. 7.

Sir Robert Ho-tung, interviewed by a representative of Reuter's Agency on his latest efforts in furtherance of his scheme for the regeneration and unification of China, expressed the hope that the idea would prove successful, but recognized that it would take time, as all of China's principal men realized that the task was one of the utmost difficulty. A very influential body were carrying on the work in China while he was here.—Reuter.

MARSHAL WU'S BIRTHDAY

Peking, Apr. 7.

Gen. Chang Hsi-yuan, Tutung of Suiyuan, Gen. Ma Fu-hsiang, Tutung of Chahar, and Gen. Teng Ching-lin, Assistant Tutung, who arrived in Peking yesterday, will leave here for Loyang to-day to offer personal congratulations to Marshal Wu on the occasion of his birthday. It is understood that the situation in Outer Mongolia will be discussed with Marshal Wu. Reuter's Pacific Service.

HARBIN PRESS'S LATEST

Public Fooled on April 1: A Radio Canard: Clerk of the Weather Has Joke Too

From Our Own Correspondent.

Harbin, April 2.

Yesterday was the first of April, and as usual one of the local Russian papers played a joke at the expense of the public, which however was not so successful as it might have been owing to a bigger joke played by the clerk of the weather, in the form of a heavy snowstorm falling all day long.

Some little time ago there arrived in Harbin the French Rear-Admiral Masset who is connected with French radio companies and who has made a trip to the Far East in order to link up the radio-stations out here with those in France. The papers had already announced that the French officer had pourparlers with the director of the local radio-station with regard to the receiving of French news that is now being broadcast from Paris, Bordeaux, Lyons and other French stations. Hitherto the local radio has given but little French news, but a great deal of German propaganda from Nauen. Following these conversations, Admiral Masset left for Mukden, the headquarters of the Administration of the Manchurian Radio Stations.

The "Kopeika" in its issue of yesterday announced that the gentleman has just returned and had installed for the convenience of the public a specially equipped radio-telephone in the office of the Wagon Lits Co. The paper said that arrangements had been made for the public to make use of this radio-phone for speaking with their friends in public from noon yesterday at a charge of $3 for five minutes conversation, and that Mr. Ostroumoff, General Manager of the C. E. Rlwy., Mr. Buianoffsky, Manager of the Russo-Bank and Mr. S. L. Skidelsky, a local magnate, had announced their intention to converse with Mr. Poutiloff, the head of the Russo-Asiatic Bank in Paris. It was further stated that at one o'clock at the same place the public would have the opportunity of hearing music rendered by the band of the Yenesei Regiment broadcast. Had it been fine weather no doubt large crowds would have collected at the Wagon Lits, and no doubt the staff would have been worried more than a little by a great crowd of curious people.

The hoax is nearly as good as that one penetrated on the public a few years back by the "Novosti Zhizni," which announced that a Japanese torpedo boat fleet which was at Habarovsk at the time would arrive in the Sungari early in the morning of the 1st, and on which date literally thousands of Russians made their way to the banks of the river to see this sight and waited in vain.

RECORD SNOW FALL.

Snow has fallen continually for the last 30 hours in Harbin and along the C. E. Rlwy. According to the local meteorological station a new record has been created, as 28 centimetres of snow has fallen during this period, the former record being on April 16, 1911, when 11 centimetres was registered. A strong wind accompanied the snowstorm and made things generally unpleasant. Snow drifts are reported at certain points along the railway and there have been blocks in the railway traffic. The temperature at Hinghan fell to—12° R.

A 10-YEAR WALK.

Sergius Saburoff, aged 35 and a former Lieutenant-Colonel of the Imperial Russian Army is to set out in a few days on a round-the-world walk, his object being to beat the French record. Saburoff who was born in the Altai Mountains district, has already had considerable experience as a mountaineer in Russia. He speaks fluent French, German and a little English. He expects that it will take him 10 years to accomplish his task and will support himself by the sale of post-cards and giving lectures on his experiences

SZECHUAN SEES HOPE OF PEACE

Hsiong Keh-Wu' Reported to Haye Gone to Canton to Confer with Dr. Sun

From Our Own Correspondent.

Luchow, Sze. Mar. 19, 1924.

Since my last letter was sent off a few days ago things seem to have cleared up here politically. The local branch of the Commercial Press, which has been carrying on business behind boarded-up windows and partially-closed doors for months, is full open for business this morning.

The persistent report, which would appear to be true, is that Hsiong Keh-wu and his faithful henchman Dan Mung-hsin have left the province with a small bodyguard for Yunnan or Kueichow and most likely ultimately for Canton to confer with the Kuo min-tang chieftains who have so lately declared in favour of the Soviet system. They have left their men, it is said, under charge of Lai Hsin-huei, Cheo Hsi-chen and the other first army generals. The second half of this same persistent rumour is that there has been a conference between these generals and Liu Hsian and his second army generals and that an agreement has been reached, supposedly whereby the remnants of the first army turn over to the northern party.

If all this is true, then peace would seem to be assured for a while at least, if the victors do not immediately begin to quarrel over the spoils of battle, as has so often happened under like circumstances in all lands where there is lack of stable government. Of course Hsiong is expected back and the most sanguine only allow for two years of peace.

The river, which has been very low this winter, is now rising and we are expecting and rather anxiously awaiting the arrival of the little steamers—we have had none since before the New Year. It is now reported from Chungking that one of Mr. Barrie's boats left yesterday for our city. It cannot come too soon, for there are four foreign ladies have been waiting here for more than a month to get to Chungking and from thence to Shanghai and home. They wisely did not care to trust their pretty little furlough souvenirs and nicknacks to the tender mercies of the "gentlemen of the road" (and river) who have reigned so supreme between here and Chungking all winter. Allow me to repeat what your Junghsien correspondent so naively remarked a few weeks ago: "Small chance of running away from stations in Szechuan anywhere west of Chungking, especially in winter."

FRENCH FLIGHT TO JAPAN

Tokio, Apr. 10.

According to a Paris despatch, the French Army has decided to carry out a through flight between France and Japan, and the flight will be made by a Lieutenant and an engineer aboard a military aeroplane. In this connexion, the French Embassy officials in Tokio state that the French aviator believes he can easily complete his flight over the distance between Paris and Tokio in 20 days.—Eastern News Agency.

A strong tide setting down the Hongkong harbour was responsible for a collision in the early hours of March 1, which was happily without serious results. The str. President McKinley was being towed from Taikoo Dock to buoy A 27, at 4.30 a.m., and in spite of all efforts by the tugs manoeuvring her, the tide swung her so as to strike the Blue Funnel liner Perseus rather heavily aft. As a result the poop railing and deck fittings of the Perseus were rather badly damaged. The damage to the McKinley was small and she sailed the same evening.

EDUCATIONAL RALLY IN N. KIANGSU

Movement to Find Volunteer Teachers for Province's Illiterates

From Our Own Correspondent.

Hsuchowfu, Ku., Apr. 5.

The past week has been a gala one for the student population of Suchowfu and vicinity, the occasion being an educational rally in which all of the schools of the eight districts in this section were asked to participate. There were more than a thousand people in attendance. All the high schools in the city gave holiday for the week in order that their teachers and students might attend the conference. Many schools from other places sent teachers and groups of students.

The delegates began to arrive in the city on Monday March, 31, the conference opening next morning. It will continue until April 6. The meetings have been held in the Wu School.

Perhaps the best known speaker on the programme was Mr. Hwang Yen-p'ei, who has several times been head of the Educational Association of the province. There were also speakers from Southeastern University, as well as a number of speakers from the Provincial Education Board.

As an out-growth of the meeting there is already under way a campaign to set up the Popular Educational Movement in this city and vicinity. It is hoped that hundreds of the students will have caught the spirit of service and will be willing to give their time to the teaching of illiterates among their own people.

IN THE SOOCHOW HILLS

Only a little violet,
Only a butterfly blue,
Only a bright spring morning,
But the colour scheme is true.

Only a town-worn vagrant,
Only a change of air,
Only a tired man's fancy,
But the breath of life is there.

Only a country ramble
O'er hill and dale and field,
Only the world's bright gladness,
Its freshness aye must yield.

So let's away to the hillside,
Where butterflies are blue,
And the violet blooms in springtime
Its message ever true.

Arthur de C. Sowerby.

SENDING ARMS TO CHINA

Attempts to Persuade British Shippers to Transport Munitions

London, Apr. 10.

In the House of Commons last night in reply to questions, Mr. Arthur Ponsonby, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, stated that he was aware that attempts were being made to ship from a European country large consignments of arms and ammunition for war purposes in the East and that attempts had been made to persuade a British shipping company to transport these munitions. The attention of Lloyd's had been drawn to the China arms embargo.—Reuter.

LONDON, Apr. 6.—A man's heartbeats, broadcast from Pittsburgh, have been heard in London.—Reuter.

LITTLE PIMPLES ON BABY'S HEAD

Became Sore Eruptions. Hair All Fell Out. Lost Rest. Cuticura Heals.

"When my baby was a month old his head broke out with little pimples which became large, sore eruptions. The hair around the eruptions all fell out. He lost his rest at night on account of the irritation, and I had to tie his hands to keep him from scratching.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the first application he got relief so I purchased more, which healed him." (Signed) Mrs. Louisa Harris, 47, Orchard Pl., Poplar, London, E. 14, England.

Cuticura Soap to cleanse, Cuticura Ointment to soothe and heal.

Soap 1s., Ointment 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. Sold throughout the Empire. For sample each free address: F. Newbery & Sons, Ltd., 27, Charterhouse Sq., London, E.C.1. Also for mail orders with price. Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

THE SMALL INVESTORS, LTD.

41 SZECHUEN ROAD, Shanghai

Phone: C. 977 and 761

NOTE

CAPITAL INVESTED, with dividends or Interest payable every six months.

At 7 per cent. Doubles itself in 10 years
At 8 per cent. Doubles itself in 9 years
At 9 per cent. Doubles itself in 8 years
At 10 per cent. Doubles itself in 7 years

START TO-DAY TO DOUBLE YOUR CAPITAL

We are holders of large stocks of sound companies whose shares will yield
7 per cent. to 14 per cent. per annum

THE SMALL INVESTORS, LIMITED

Telegraphic Address: "Safeinvest"

DOUGLAS FLEMING, Managing Director.

During February, 50 per cent. Discount for each while they last!

Our Annual Januray Stock-taking brings to light this compendious

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

A Grand Miscellancy—1,500 Titles

From every corner of our stores and godowns

Your choice of good reading in Fiction, Essays, Religion, and the Teaching Branches at

HALF PRICE

Send for complete lists

EDWARD EVANS & SONS, LTD.

30 N. SZECHUEN ROAD, SHANGHAI 127 VICTORIA ROAD, TIENTSIN

SHANGHAI NEWS

MR. WIDLER, PRISONER OF CHUNGKING

Arrival in Shanghai After Six Months Imprisonment and Barbarous Usage in Szechuan: Repeatedly on Verge of Death: Life in a Chinese Gaol

Mr. Elly Widler, of Chungking, who had been a prisoner in the hands of Gen. Yang Sen's First Szechuan Army for more than six months, during which time he received most barbarous treatment, was released on March 14 and arrived in Shanghai a few days ago. In an interview with a representative of this paper, Mr. Widler gave a brief account of some of his experiences and of the treatment he received while a prisoner.

Born in China 35 years ago, Mr. Widler for the past 12 years has carried on business in Chungking as an export and import merchant and latterly was also the proprietor of the Cosmos Club there. About 10 a.m. on September 10, 1923, a number of soldiers of the Second Army, accompanied by some of the staff of the Foreign Office, entered the Cosmos Club and arrested him. He was taken to the Foreign Office and afterwards bound and taken across the Small River to the Magistrate's Yamen in Chungking City. There he was unbound and put into a room, where he remained for five days. He was told that he would be shot for having assisted the First Army, under Gen. Hsiung Keh-wu. After five days' confinement he was taken before the local Magistrate, Yu Shing-fu, and when questioned protested that the court had no jurisdiction over him, as he was under Swiss protection. The Magistrate said that did not matter; he could have the prisoner bambooed or shot, as he thought fit. Then noticing Mr. Widler's keys attached to his belt, he demanded possession of them, giving his personal guarantee that his property would not be molested. He was told that he was charged with rendering assistance to the First Army, and replied that even if that were so, he had rendered far greater assistance to Gen. Yang Sen, who was his personal friend. The Magistrate, producing a telegram, asked, if that were so, why had Gen. Yang Sen ordered his arrest. Mr. Widler was then marched back to his cell, a filthy hovel.

A FIERCE BATTLE.

On September 22 the First Army attacked Chungking and there ensued one of the fiercest battles in the history of Szechuan. The First Army had been reinforced by 12,000 Yunnanese troops, armed with modern guns, and these were posted on the hilly side of the River, opposite the City, which was bombarded from Futukuan fort, about 15 li to the north and on the road to Chengtu. The firing usually lasted from 2 to 4 a.m. and thousands of men were killed. Finally the Second Army ran short of ammunition and had to make bayonet charges. In the meatime Mr. Widler was transferred from one yamên to another, his captors fearing that if he remained too long in one yamên he might get on friendly terms with the gaolers and bribe them to allow him to escape. He was given no food, but managed to obtain some through the kindly offices of one of his servants, who was on friendly terms with some of the soldiers.

Early in October he was taken to Gen. Yang Sen's headquarters to attend a court-martial held in camera by the chief of staff, named Li, a deserter from the Yunnanese army. The court room was lined with soldiers and Mr. Widler was practically forced to answer questions. Finally, Li announced that he was sentenced to be shot for assisting the First Army. Mr. Widler pointed out that he was a friend of Gen. Yang Sen, but was told that did not count. It was pointed out to him that in Chinese military affairs, as well as in politics, there was always a way out, and it might be possible to avert the death sentence on certain conditions. He had been in business for 12 years and was reputed to be a very wealthy man, in fact a millionaire. By paying a large sum of money or supplying the Second Army with large numbers of arms, it might be possible that the sentence of death would be revoked. Mr. Widler replied that he had no money and no source of supply of arms. He was then handed back to the guards and placed in the military prison at headquarters.

THE RETREAT FROM CHUNGKING.

On one occasion he was moved to the yamên of the head of the police for a period of six days, and whilst there a military Lieutenant came to see him and told him that his case was hopeless, that he might be shot at any moment. He suggested that Mr. Widler should pay a ransom of $200,000 at once and offered to convey a note to the latter's friends. Mr. Widler suggested that a telegram to the Swiss Consul in Shanghai would be better, but the Lieutenant replied that that would cause too much publicity.

Then came the day of the retreat from Chungking. At 3 p.m. on October 16 he heard sounds of men running and shouts of excitement. Soldiers entered his cell and bound his hands tightly behind his back. He was then taken to the courtyard and was afterwards marched out of the City with the retreating army. Ten minutes later the First Army entered Chungking. He was taken over the Small River by a bridge of boats and on the other side the soldiers lined up in the form of a hollow square. There was also a firing party. Gen. Yang Sen was present and advanced towards Mr. Widler as though he were about to speak to him. At that moment members of the First Army appeared on the City wall and began to fire. There was a brief conference between Gen. Yang Sen and Generals Liu Hsiang and Yu Tsu-ming (Kueichow) and meanwhile men were dropping right and left. Then the order was given for the retreat down river. They marched that day from 3 p.m. to 3 a.m. without a rest, and every day there was a forced march.

A FAMOUS AMAZON.

There was no food, for the army groups under different leaders numbered 60,000, including 4,000 under the famous woman leader, Lieut. Lan Liu-tsang or Lan Da Jo Ba (Big—natural—Feet).

Mr. Widler remarked parenthetically that Lan Da Jo Ba is a robust and attractive woman, 30 years of age, and of very strong character. She travels in a two-men chair and is always accompanied by her daughter, aged 15, who runs alongside and is armed with a Mauser pistol. The latter is a very beautiful girl, of strong and healthy appearance, due to her outdoor life and vigorous exercise.

On the third day of the march Mr. Widler became very weak and his ankles were badly swollen. He lay down on the road and absolutely refused to proceed any further. The soldiers prodded him with the butts of their rifles and threatened to shoot him, but he told them that he would be glad if they would do so and put him out of his misery. Some of them said, however, that he was too valuable a prize to lose. The Captain of the unit which was guarding him at last took pity on him and lent him the use of his litter, whereupon the soldiers jeered at the prisoner, shouting, "We lost Chungking through you." "We lost the Yihyang Maru and our arms and ammunitions through you."

Throughout the retreat to Wanhsien they slept in paddy fields and were generally without food, except when they came across farmers' huts. These had been deserted by the men, only the women remaining. The soldiers commandeered pigs, fowls and anything upon which they could lay their hands, promising payment the next day and pointing out the fact that they had a foreigner with them was a guarantee that they were honest men. This led to Mr. Widler being pestered by the women for payment, and he had to explain to them that he was a prisoner in the soldiers' hands. On one occasion he became very depressed. He was clothed only in a ragged shirt and pants, it was winter time, and it was pouring with rain. So miserable did he feel that he begged of the soldiers either to shoot him or to take him to Gen. Yang Sen to have him shot. This was reported to Gen. Yang Sen, who replied that the prisoner must be taken to Wanhsien.

ILLNESS AT WANHSIEN.

The retreat to Wanhsien lasted 10 days, and on arrival there Mr. Widler was placed in a temple under guard. He was then moved to the Magistrate's yamên and put in a room together with Yang Sen's guards. For food they used to bring him dirty, black rice, containing some gritty substance. He refused to eat this, but was told that he would get nothing else. During his confinement there, Gen. Yang's staff officers used to come and converse with him. They advised him either to pay something or to supply arms. Gen. Yang's brother-in-law (Tsen) was friendly disposed to the prisoner and supplied him with a sweater and some provisions. He also promised to try to get him free, but said that if he succeeded in doing so the other Generals would suspect him of having received a large bribe. Mr. Widler said that it would be impossible for him to give them money or supply arms unless they set him free, but the reply was that if he were set free he might again assist the First Army.

Mr. Widler contracted dysentery and was so ill for four or five days that he begged for foreign medical aid. Finally the Rev. Darlington, of the China Inland Mission, was allowed to attend him. Mr. Darlington insisted upon the prisoner having better food and better treatment. Then orders came from Marshal Wu Pei-fu for the advance upon Chungking again. Gen. Yang Sen left Wanhsien and left Mr. Widler in the charge of the Magistrate (Lai Hung-tsao), from whom he received more humane treatment. Mr. Widler asked if he could be put into a room in the yamên, but the Magistrate said that he dared not take the risk. If his prisoner escaped, he would lose his head.

INNER LIGHTS ON CHINESE.

Mr. Widler saw no more of Gen. Yang Sen or any of his army and thenceforward until the time of his release was confined in a common prison. Among the prisoners were ex-officers, ex-officials, and the scum of the criminal class. The prisoners conversed with each other freely and during the three months he was in this prison Mr. Widler says he learned more of Chinese methods than in the whole of his 15 years of travel in the interior of China. One of the prisoners was the son of wealthy parents and had been imprisoned because the people of his village had been unable to supply the soldiers with rice. He was seized by the soldiers and imprisoned and a ransom of $20,000 demanded. $8,000 was paid at once, but the man was kept in prison until the balance was paid. No food was supplied to the prisoners, but they could buy from the hawkers who came to the bars of the cell. Those without money could starve. It was the custom, however, for the prisoners to share their food, and as Mr. Widler had no money during the first two months of his incarceration here, he was indebted to the young man held for ransom for his daily sustenance. When, after two months, he received $50 from friends, he felt like a prince and was able to return the previous hospitality of his fellow-prisoners. The women prisoners, in another cell, had mostly been imprisoned for various trivial offences. Those who could not buy food were often supplied by outsiders who then claimed them, body and soul, in return for the money they had expended.

FREE AT LAST.

At 8 p.m. on March 14 of this year Mr. Widler was taken out of prison by two runners, who conducted him before the Magistrate. The latter said that he had received a telegram from Gen. Yang Sen ordering his unconditional release, and from that evening Mr. Widler was a free man. After remaining in Wanhsien a week, in order to recover his strength, Mr. Widler came to Shanghai, arriving here on the 1st instant. To whom or what to attribute his release, Mr. Widler does not know. It might have been due to the efforts of the lawyer engaged on his behalf, to the efforts of his friends in Chungking and Shanghai, or to representations from the Japanese Government, for Gen. Hsiong had threatened that if any harm befel Mr. Widler he would put to death the two Japanese officers from the Yihyang Maru whom he was holding for ransom.

ROBBED OF ALL POSSESSIONS.

In spite of the personal guarantee of the Chungking Magistrate that his property would be kept intact, $3,000 was removed from the Cosmos Club, $4,000 worth of wines, a quantity of valuable curios, a number of Keystone watches and clocks, and 20 rolls of ruberoid; while when he was in prison at Wanhsien he learned from Gen. Yang's little son that the General was wearing his gold watch and chain with gold medal attached—the medal being one that was presented by the late Queen Victoria, through her representative, Sir Scott Moncrieff, to the late Mr. David Widler (Mr. Elly Widler's father) for self-sacrificing labours in aid of destitute Jews in Palestine. The little boy also told Mr. Widler that they had in the house one of Mr. Widler's most valued possessions—a gold canary, said to have been at one time the property of the late Tsar of Russia and stolen from his palace at the time of the revolution.

In previous articles we have described briefly the filthy conditions of the cells in which Mr. Widler was confined and the inhuman treatment to which he was subjected. In our interview he mentioned especially the enormous number of rats that infest the cells and eat the food even when it is placed in a basket suspended from the ceiling by a string. These rats have no fear, for it is understood in the prisons that to kill one brings bad luck.

An assistant laodah who arrived in Shanghai last Friday reported that the junk on which he was employed, when within easy reach of the Huangpu, on a voyage from Fukien, was captured by 40 or 50 pirates in three boats. They took off the whole of the valuable cargo and also carried away the chief laodah, for whom they said they would demand a ransom of $1,000.

ILLEGAL TAXATION IN THE TREATY PORT OF SHANGHAI

Cigarette Merchants Reported Willing to Accept Compromise on Tax Offered by Kiangsu Authorities

During the week-end the struggle between the Tobacco Dealers' Guild and the provincial authorities of this province in regard to the cigarette tax appears to have reached a temporary compromise. The members of the Guild are reported to have agreed to buy stamps for the goods that they sell, and the authorities to provide them with stamps at a discount of 55 per cent. A nominal tax of 20 per cent. will thus amount in practice to about 9 per cent., and even that 9 per cent. will be evaded wherever possible. No tax is likely to prove very effective in China when it is known to be contrary to the law of the land as well as to the treaties with foreign Powers and to various contracts concluded by the Government of China.

The compromise has been received with a great deal of ridicule, and the prestige of the Kiangsu authorities in Shanghai, which had already been considerably weakened by recent events, will not be improved by this arrangement, especially as the Guild is reported to have refused to accept the verbal promises of the Governor and to have delayed acceptance until it received a written pledge in regard to the discount on stamps.

The tax cannot, of course, be enforced inside the Settlement, but every effort is being made to make it effective in the Chapei, Nantao and Paoshan areas which are part of the Treaty Port of Shanghai. The decision to enforce this illegal tax in the Treaty Port itself shows a cynical disregard of China's national obligations which will not be lost upon her neighbours and is likely to have an unfortunate effect upon her credit. Some relaxation of the immunities and safeguards now attaching to the Settlements and Treaty Ports is constantly being urged. But the Chinese business community is not likely to lose sight of the fact that the Shanghai Settlement is a place where national obligations and private contracts are still binding, and where security and credit can accordingly be found. The provincial authorities of Kiangsu will no doubt continue to meet with constant opposition to this illegal tax, which cannot prove a financial success in the face of organized opposition. It will greatly weaken the prestige of the Nanking authorities, and also of the Chinese Government, which is apparently unable to make good its obligations even in so conspicuous an area as the Treaty Port of Shanghai, with one of its own adherents—the Tuchun in Nanking.

MIECZYSLAW MUNZ

We are certainly in the way of becoming spoilt in Shanghai. we have an orchestra giving such concerts, for a quite nominal entrance fee, as are only to be got in the biggest towns of the West; and in the past two years we have heard some of the greatest musicians in the world—Kreisler, Zimbalist, Elman, Heifetz, Godowsky and Pavlova, who is indeed to be reckoned with them as being music made visible. To this unforgetable list is now to be added Mieczyslaw Munz, who gave his first recital at the Town Hall on Tuesday. He chose an extraordinary programme, most of it unfamiliar, all out of the usual run. But it fitted his nature well. For a Pole he is more quiet in his methods than most musicians of that nation, but he is a perfect master of the piano. In nothing was this better shown perhaps, than in Lizt's "Sonetto Valse" a piece of appalling difficulty, of which many pianists make, in the main, a test of their listeners' nerves. Munz took it at prodigious speed yet with exquisite delicacy and clearness. His touch is beautiful and caressing and there is something of the same hypnotic quality that is so marked in Mischa Elman. The piece "Naila" was a conspicuous example of this and the third encore given at the end of the programme a most eerie and appealing piece of music. In the first part of the programme Sgambati's melodious Gavotte was naturally very popular and M. Munz's own arrangement of Kreisler's "Liebesfreud" which is very bright and joyful. Among the encores, of which M. Munz was generous, one recognized a great favouritd Godowsky's "Alt Wien." The older musician knows the younger one well and thinks as highly of him as the latter deserves. M. Munz's technique is quite beyond description; Rosenthal himself could not exceed it. There can be nothing of which the piano is capable too much for his amazing hands. But he uses his powers very quietly. His playing is mature beyond his years and he never attempts to turn the piano into an orchestra. Altogether it was a very finely rendered programme, rich and varied and yet always with a certain sense of restraint, a suggestion of many things left unsaid though fully realized. Perhaps the best item of all was the second of the two Chopin Etudes. It augured much for the Chopin recital promised for Saturday.

The audience were enthusiastic. And as one has seen at one or two previous recitals, at the end of the programme nobody moved. They sat until they got some more.

A BURGLAR IN THE HONGKONG BANK

Early Morning Entry and Exit Through Windows and an Exciting Chase

A highly sensational drama was enacted in the vicinity of the Bund at an early hour last Friday. A Chinese burglar gained entrance to the premises of the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation, and being seen by the watchmen on duty made a very hurried exit. He followed this up with a wild attempt at escape but before going very far was intercepted in his flight by the police.

The burglar selected his point of entry at a spot where he considered he would best escape observation. This was a window on the north side of the building where the wall of the Customs compound would assist him in eluding the notice of police and watchmen. Apparently he did his work rapidly, for before anybody was aware of what was happening he had cut a piece out of a plane of glass, inserted his arm and opened the window. The moment that he set foot in the banking hall, however, Nemesis awaited him. His information as to the possibilities of successfully robbing a bank seems to have been badly at fault, for he quite overlooked the fact that the bank in question is not only patrolled outside but watchmen and detectives are stationed in the interior.

INTO THE FOWLER'S NET.

No time elapsed between the burglar's entry into the bank and his presence being spotted by the guard. The latter were immediately on his track, and then ensued on the part of the intruder a desperate attempt to flee and an equally hot chase after him.

The burglar apparently knew the bank premises well, and instead of doubling back he made straight for the compradore's department which lies to the rear of the banking hall. A door with glass panels barred his access to it, but the man either dived through one of the panes or had a hammer which enabled him to smash the glass and then pass through. He seems to have been a very athletic individual, for counters and desks were taken almost in his stride, and he reached the north wall of the bank. This is close to Messrs. Caldbeck, Macgregor & Co.'s premises and here a passageway gives on to Foochow Road.

The fugitive repeated his previous performance with one of the windows here, dived through and was at length out in the open. What is more he had passed through the broken glass unscathed.

CHASE AND CAPTURE.

His pursuers were hard on his heels, and now he had in addition the outside patrol of the bank to contend against. He bolted into Foochow Road and at top speed made his way westward along the street. A Sikh policeman, however, had caught sight of him and set off hard in pursuit, meanwhile blowing his whistle as loudly as possible.

The end now came. A Chinese constable on duty at the corner of Foochow and Szechuen Roads responded to the Sikh's whistle, intercepted the man's passage and between the two he was firmly collared. In his possession, it is understood, was found a long knife which he is said to have concealed in his sleeve. He was duly taken to the police station.

AT THE MIXED COURT.

Later in the morning the accused man appeared before Mr. Ferrajolo, Italian Assessor, and Magistrate Kuan in the Mixed Court on a charge of office breaking, in that he did enter the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation's building on the Bund with intent to commit a felony.

Det.-Sgt. Tinkler told the Court that the accused was brought to the Police Station at ten minutes past four in the morning in the charge of a Chinese constable. He had obtained entry into the bank by means of a window and while he was in there the Sikh constable on duty heard a noise but could not locate it. He was joined by a Chinese constable later and together they searched the premises chasing the accused into the compound. Here he made a dive for the compradore's office. There he broke another window and dropped into Foochow Road where he was arrested by the Chinese policeman.

Mr. Stephenson, custodian at the bank, told the Court that it was at first thought the accused was an employee of the bank's contractor but subsequent inquiry proved that he was not employed by the bank at all.

On application of the police a remand of two weeks was granted. The accused is stated to be wanted on charges of breaking into Medhurst College, the Chinese Post Office in Peking Road and a number of other offices.

The automatic telephone throws on the subscriber responsibility for any mistakes in making a call, which, in cosmopolitan Shanghai, may be disastrous.

WEDDINGS

Moore—Benson

A very pretty wedding took place on Thursday of last week in Holy Trinity Cathedral, The Very Rev. Dean Symons and the Rev. T. W. Hall officiating, when Miss Helen Margaret Benson, daughter of Mr. C. Benson, of Lyme Regis, Dorset, became the bride of Dr. W. B. A. Moore of the Hongkong Government Medical Service. The bride, who was given away by Sir Skinner Turner, looked charming in a blue silk marocain trimmed with beige lace and hat of a deeper brown lace, and carried a sheaf of lilies. Masters Colin Paul and Roderick Moffatt, dressed in white sailor suits, acted as pages. The bridegoom was attended by Mr. W. A. Willis as best man. The honeymoon will be spent in Peking.

Martin—Camacho

A very quiet but pretty wedding was celebrated last Friday morning at St. Joseph's Church, Father Macdonald officiating, when Miss Mary Erwin Camacho, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Anthony Camacho of New York became the bride of Mr. Arthur John Martin, second son of Mr. T. P. Martin of Muswell Hill, London. The bridegroom is the Senior British Assessor of the Mixed Court and a member of the Consular Service.

The bride, who was given away by Mr. C. T. Birdwood, wore a charming gown of white ivory satin, made in moyen age fashion, with puffed hip paniers, with an apron effect of silver brocade lace and long floating sleeves. The long silk net veil was caught with orange blossoms and the shower bouquet was made up of orange blossoms and roses. Mrs. C. T. Birdwood, who acted as matron of honour, wore black chiffon velvet with a grey cloche and carried a shower bouquet of roses and carnations. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Christopher Hodgson as best man.

The official ceremony at the Consulate-General, at which Mr. Sidney Barton, C.M.G., officiated, took place after the church service and was attended only by intimate friends. Mr. Barton gave a bridal tiffin for Mr. and Mrs. Martin at which the following guests were present:—Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Birdwood, Mr. Christopher Hodgson, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Moss, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dollar, Mr. F. L. Cudlip, Mr. H. J. Brett, Mrs. T. J. Eldridge, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Whitamore, Mr. E. C. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. H. Osborne, and Mr. Kuan Chun, Senior Magistrate of the Mixed Court.

The honeymoon will be spent in a housebcat trip about Ningpo. The bride's going away dress was a sports costume of beige embroidered jersey with a hat to match.

Byrne—Keily

On the 3rd instant, in St. John's Church, Hankow, the marriage was solemnized of Sylvia May, daughter of Mrs. and the late Henry A. Keily, to Mr. Ernest Godfrey Byrne, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Byrne. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. C. S. Trivett, M.A., B.D. The church was beautifully decorated with marguerites and bamboo, with arches of apple blossom in the chancel. The bride was given away by Mr. H. C. Pearce, and wore a charming ivory crêpe georgette grown, heavily beaded with crystals. Her hat was of georgette and lace. She carried a large bouquet of white carnations and fern, and her only ornament was a diamond and platinum pendant, the gift of the bridegroom.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Pearce, 15 Wha Cheong Road. Mrs. Pearce wore a three-piece gown of burnt sienna morocain. When the coatee was thrown back the beautiful brocade top of the dress was seen. Her hat was nigger brown with a large two toned plume.

Among the guests were Mrs. E. T. Byrne, of Shanghai, gowned in pleated tan georgette trimmed with red; Mrs. Cyril Bell, in heavy silk embroidered silver grey coatee and pleated georgette skirt; Mrs. Maze, in silk net lace and grey georgette with touches of apple green; Mrs. Trivett, in burnt orange silk jersey trimmed with squirrel; Mrs. Perry, in dove grey silk morocain with small hat to match, and Mrs. Frazer, in cocoa brown lace and small gold hat.

The health of the bride was proposed by Mr. Keed and suitably responded to by the groom. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Byrne left for Peking, the bride going away in a smart canna crêpe georgette frock with small hat to match.

The groom was supported by Col. E. C. Fry. The ushers were Mr. L. T. Beddow, Mr. F. C. Keed, and Mr. W. H. Lovatt, Mr. H. F. Baker officiated at the organ.—"C. C. Post."

AMERICAN AVIATORS' WORLD FLIGHT

Arrangements for Landing and Overhaul in Shanghai

The American aviators in their round-the-world flight will arrive in Shanghai about the end of the month, said Lieutenant Lawton, advance agent for the squadron, to a representative of the "North-China Daily News" on Monday afternoon. "It is highly probable" said Mr. Lawton, "that the flyers will remain in Shanghai at least 36 hours and it may be that engine mechanics will require that their stay shall run to over two full days and nights. All along the route, at principal points, we have provided spare motors which can be installed if the need be apparent, and after their long Pacific flight it may be necessary to give the machines a thorough overhaul in Shanghai."

After a survey of the local situation with reference to landing places, the officer stated that it was almost certain that Black Point on the Pootung side would be utilized for that purpose. The weather at this time of the year will be such that this spot can be used with facility, while its proximity to the oil installation stations adds a noteworthy adjunct to the usual requirements. As the machines are equipped with pontoons and it is much safer to land on water than on land, no matter how ideal climatic conditions may be, this site has been selected as the best of those inspected. Lieut. Lawson was of the opinion that unless unforseen circumstances arise, the final choice would be Black Point.

Captain W. I. Eisler has been appointed local representative, to complete such arrangements as Lieut. Lawton will be unable to make and to take active charge of the squadron on its arrival in the Huangpu.

THE American Consulate-General will be pleased to receive any information as to the present whereabouts of Mr. Frank Leo Kaliski, who was in Shanghai on or about September 1,

JUDGE PURDY OF THE U. S. COURT

Arrival in Shanghai: What is the Real Meaning of Extraterritoriality

When seen on Tuesday afternoon at his temporary apartment at the Astor House, Judge M. Purdy, newly appointed to the U.S. Court here, told a representative of the "North-China Daily News" that he had been the most voracious reader imaginable on things Chinese, but as he steamed past the Bund on Tuesday morning on the str. President Garfield, he could hardly believe that this was Shanghai as he had seen it before.

But getting to the question of extraterritoriality, which was the first one propounded to Judge Purdy, the conversation took up a definite, yet most vague turn for he said, "That is not for me to say, You know in law schools, every student knows that somewhere he has heard someone say something about this, but what it really is, he does not know. Since my appointment several months ago, I have read treaties, treatises, books, journals, articles; yes, I have studied what Judge Lobingier has written, but I must confess that I am very vague, though I am approaching my stay in Shanghai with an open mind.

"You know, I believe my first experience with this subject of extraterritoriality came when I was Assistant District Attorney in Minneapolis 30 years ago. It was my duty to enforce the new dairy law, which required that farmers outside the city limits must permit inspection of premises by city inspectors before their product could be sold in the city. This was an application of law outside the actual jurisdiction of the municipality—yes it was extra-territorial."

TRIBUTE TO JUDGE LOBINGIER.

Judge Purdy was most eloquent in his praise of Judge Lobingier who left for Japan, en route to America last week. "His decisions show a remarkable clarity of legal vision and precision, all the more significant because he had no precedent to fall back on. It is his interpretation of treaties, thought out with a marvellous clearness that has advanced the Court to its present status, ranking as it does above the similar bodies in America. All his work was done, though it is not finished, during a formative period. We who are here must work without legal assistance on the part of our fellow jurists and one must work single-handed."

Judge and Mrs. Purdy will take up their quarters in the Court building as soon as the renovation has been completed.

THE SUNKEN WARREN

Hopes of Salvage

Hopes are entertained that the str. Warren, which turned turtle and sank alongside of the International Dock in the Huangpu in the early hours of the morning of March 20, can be salvaged and refloated. Negotiations are in progress with the owners and the Tokio Salvage Company, whose agents in Shanghai are the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha Line, for the work of raising the vessel, and divers have been down over the week-end, together with a couple of engineers from Japan, to gauge the extent of the damage. What has been the result of their efforts is not known precisely, but we understand the company have every hope that salvage will be possible. Application has been made to the Harbour authorities for permission to block up that particular side of the Pootung Channel while the work of salvage is in operation.

The Warren, our readers will remember, has had a most unfortunate career recently, fire and wreck following each other in the Huangpu in quick succession. What damage has been caused by the last disaster or what was the cause of it is not yet known.

Mr. William Kerr, of Ilford, marine engineer, formerly commodore engineer of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, left gross estate of the value of £31,055, with net personalty £31,024.

A FOREIGN POLICE CONSTABLE SHOT

Search Party's Exciting Duel with an Armed Gang: Several Chinese Wounded

Another desperate affray with armed Chinese robbers occurred on Saturday evening, affording further proof of the great dangers following upon the sale of arms to the Chinese and the immense risks run by members of the Municipal Police. As a consequence of this affair, Police Constable Bennett is in the General Hospital with several nasty wounds and one bullet in the head, but fortunately it is expected he will recover, whilst several Chinese also are receiving treatment for pistol shot wounds.

A gang of robbers, believed from the information available to number at least seven men, whom some of their victims declare to be Shantungese, started operations about 7.30 p.m., when they broke into a rice shop in the Chodahkoh village, on the bank of the Soochow Creek, off Gordon Road. The plunder was small, for only a little over $70 went into the robbers' possession. However, the robbers met with unexpected resistance as they were leaving, when the proprietor and some of his assistants attempted to detain them. Shots were fired and the proprietor was badly wounded. In spite of the confusion caused by this incident and the whole village being alarmed, the robbers burst into another shop, where they collected $20, scaring the people there by firing a shot into a wall, but not injuring anyone. Yet a third place then was broken into —another rice shop—shots again were fired into the air, and whilst the employees were held up against pistols, a safe was rifled of $100.

Such a number of people by this time had collected and, encouraged by their numerical superiority, were assuming such a menacing attitude, that the gang took to flight, turning several times to fire in the general direction of their pursuers, but it is said that no one was hit. The robbers turned into a path running along the creek and, crossing Gordon Road, got into Haiphong Road. It happened that a search party of three Sikh and three Chinese policemen, in charge of P. C. Bennett, were combing the district that evening, and the robbers had a shock when they ran straight into the party.

Before any of the policemen could do anything, one of the robbers standing only a few feet from Bennett, fired a pistol at him point blank. The constable had a miraculous escape, for the bullet smashed into his pistol holster and remained embedded in the pistol. Profiting by past experiences and coming to a quick realization of the circumstances, the police immediately dropped to the ground and brought their carbines into play. The robbers followed suit and for a few minutes there was a brisk exchange of shots, during which Bennett got a bullet in his head. Later on, when he was examined in hospital, he was found to have several wounds on his head and body and he is believed to have been hit four or five times, but only one of the bullets remained in his head. Soon the robbers, realizing that, between the armed police and the many Chinese who were waiting in convenient shelter, ready to rush them when opportunity occurred, they had very little chance, sprang up and bolted. They went individually in different directions, but with the willing assistance of the outraged villagers the police were able to arrest three of them, all without weapons.

P. C. Bennett and several Chinese who had been wounded in the final duel promptly were taken to hospital and it is reported that all are making good progress to recovery.

Seven Men Arrested After Desperate Encounter

On Tuesday, members of a gang believed to have participated in the Gordon Road affair were traced to a house in Yates Road, and the place was raided by a party of Chinese officers under the direction of Chief [illegible] appearance of the police, and it was only by the merest chance that further casualties have not to be recorded. One of the gang attempted to shoot the Inspector at point blank range, but fortunately the weapon—the usual automatic pistol—jammed, and the man behind it got a blow which effectually put an end to further part in the struggle. Other men drew revolvers but were prevented from using them, and after a strenuous fight the police were successful in arresting four of the men. Later in the day, another raid was made in the [illegible] district, and three more members of the gang were captured.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE SOCIETY

Annual Boat-race Night Dinner

The members of the Oxford and Cambridge Society met for their usual dinner on Boat-Race Day at the Shanghai Club on Saturday evening. Thirty-two members were present and the guests of the Society was Mr. Stirling Fessenden, Chairman of the Municipal Council.

In the absence of Mr. Duncan McNeill, the President, the chair was taken by the Very Rev. Dean Symons, who performed the duties of his office to everyone's satisfaction. Many thanks are due from the Society to Dr. Goode, who lent for the occasion a quantity of very valuable brass and other ornaments, and the table really looked charming. The colour scheme was appropriately worked in violets and forget-me-nots. The latter, it must be confessed, were rather more like spinach than the Light Blue; but everyone felt that Dr. Goode had done his best and was not responsible for Nature's contrariness. He also ordered an excellent dinner. When speech time came on, it was decided to send a message of remembrances and good wishes to Mr. Duncan McNeill, the President, and Sir Havilland de Sausmarez, the former President. Special mention was also made of what the Society owes to the late Mr. Bathurst Walker, to whose initiative and energy the whole idea and foundation of the Society in 1909 is due.

The toast of "Alma Mater" was proposed by Mr. O. M. Green, that of the "Guest of the Evening" by Mr. Mossop, and "The Proctors" by Mr. Mansel Reece. Mr. Fessenden proved himself as usual a prince of after-dinner speakers. He regretted that he was "compelled to speak in the American language which was never spoken and only imperfectly understood in the cultured atmosphere of Oxford and Cambridge;" and after much excellent wit he went on in more serious vein to press for unity and co-operation between the English-speaking peoples of the world. He told the story of the founding of Harvard University by 70 old Cambridge men in the early seventeenth century and he quoted from Cecil Rhodes's will, to illustrate how the influence of Oxford and Cambridge Universities had extended to America. It was a great speech.

Before the evening ended, through the kindness of Reuter, the results of the race were known, but they occasioned no bitterness. It was always practically a certainty that one or other side must win.

With Mr. Fessenden as guest, those present were:—

Very Rev. C. J. F. Symons, Mr. M. Jaffee, Mr. J. A. Cresswell, Mr. H. F. Buchanan, Dr. W. L. New, Mr. Tycho Wing, Mr. C. Hastings, Mr. J. L. Hutchison, Mr. H. C. Pope, Mr. C. H. Arnhold, Mr. M. R. Harris, Mr. R. F. S. Gregson, Mr. H. E. Ward, Dr. G. E. Goode, Mr. T. Addis, Mr. J. L. Beaumont, Dr. C. L. Moore, Mr. A. D. Bell, Mr. H. W. P. McMeekan, Mr. J. E. Baddeley, Mr. H. P. Wilkinson, Mr. V. Priestwood, Mr. P. Gold-ring, Mr. C. M. Reece, Mr. F. A. Long, Mr. Shao Ying-ch'ih, Mr. A. G. Mossop, Mr. R. Ross, Mr. C. T. Shen, Mr. C. S. Chen, Mr. S. P. Simpson, Mr. R. A. P. Hill and Mr. O. M. Green.

WHAT MADE THE GREAT WALL

American Scientist's Discovery Between Its Bricks: Why Egyptian Paint Lasted So Long

Dr. Maximilian Toch, an American gentleman of a singularly versatile nature, has been in Shanghai this week on his way to Peking at the invitation of the Chinese Government to give a series of lectures at the Peking Technical College. Dr. Toch is the vice-president of Messrs. Toch Bros., the well known New York manufacturers of paints colours and varnishes, and he also is the Cooper Union Professor of Industrial Chemistry, and an expert in photography and cement processes. Formerly he was president of the New York Chemists' Club and his attainments have gained him recognition also in Great Britain, where he is a Fellow of the Royal Photographic Society, a Fellow of the Chemical Society, a vice-president of the Paint & Varnish Society of London and a vice-president of the London Society of Chemical Industry.

Even those not particularly familiar with commercial matters will know that one of the most valuable of China's products is wood oil, or, to give it the proper name, tung oil, one of the component parts of Messrs. Toch Bros'. wares. China's exports under this head average $100,000,000 a year, but, as is the case with so many things in China, the industry is managed in such a crude way that it is on the road to extinction. Already, in America, experimental areas have been established with a view to transferring the industry to that country, but the Chinese, for once showing a degree of advancement, have appealed to Dr. Toch, who wrote the first treatise on the subject, to explain to them the most up-to-date methods of clarifying, refining, shipping and everything else to do with the industry. Dr. Toch says that there is no doubt that, unless the Chinese acquire some such information and act upon it, they will lose this industry. He has no intention of establishing a branch paint and varnish factory in this country. He has been invited to do so, but says that the sources of the necessary raw materials are so widely separated and the means of transportation so slow and uncertain that the finished product can be shipped from other countries more speedily and cheaply than it could be manufactured here.

FROM COLOUR TO CHEMISTRY.

In Peking Dr. Toch will lecture on colours and pigments, cement, photography, rubber, varnishes, oils and industrial chemistry. So far no arrangements have been made regarding Shanghai, but Mr. J. J. Keegan, the firm's special representative here, hopes to arrange with engineering and other societies for a course of lectures. Dr. Toch also proposes to investigate the Chinese cement industry, in which he is greatly interested. During the interview a casual remark happened to be made regarding the curious effect China mud seems to have on motor car mudguards, apparently eating into them. Dr. Toch was all in terest in a minute and said he would make some experiments under that head also.

During the Great War, Dr. Toch was appointed chief of the United States camouflage service and he superintended the camouflaging of one-fifth of the American ships and all the fortifications. He tells some very interesting stories of this work and says that he would not have exchanged that 18 months experience for all his previous life, as it was the most fascinating employment he could imagine.

ANALYSING THE GREAT WALL.

During a momentary lapse in the conversation, the Professor exclaimed, "By the way do you know that the Great Wall of China has been analysed in our laboratory? A sample of the mixture was sent to us and I applied chemical agents to it and found that it was originally dolomite, not the American compound which contains two or three per cent. of iron, but without a trace of the metal. To the layman it might be styled burnt dolomite or magnesium, but the chemist would more readily recognize it as (CaCo2MgCo3-), one molecule made up of all the elements. The artificial slackening process brought about by the addition of water (H2O) and carbon dioxide Co2 broke down the single molecule into two more complex substances—CaOH20 or Ca(OH)2 and MgOH20 or Mg(OH) 2 plus Co 2, on the outside from the air.—as it now is. This remarkable compound, made up dissolubly, accounts for the stability of the Chinese Great Wall." Prof. Toch was not pressed for an opinion of the Chinese chemistry of that period, but he did give them great credit for what had been done in those days.

EGYPTIAN PAINTS.

As far back as 1914, Professor Toch was asked to conduct investigations into the composition of the paints found on the Tomb of Perneb, an ancient Egyptian potentate who died 4,500 years ago. This mausoleum had been brought to New York, but strange to say did not undergo the same deterioration as did the marble pillar of the time of Cleopatra. The latter of solid stone was affected by the moister New York weather. When the paint protected the contents, curiosity was aroused and it was due to his efforts that the metallic composition of the original materials was determined. "It was a very simple laboratory test, purely qualitative, in which the results were published in a rather exhaustive treatise, but I may say that the white was common limestone, the black charcoal or burned bone, the blue turquoise, the red ovide of iron (Hematite) and the green nothing but copper. It seems that white of egg or slackened lime was the liquid which carried the ingredients." Pressed as to how the paint had been applied Prof. Toch stated, "One of the brushes is in the Metropolitan Museum and it was given me to scrutinize and I found under the red paint, wood fibre, and what do you suppose, bamboo, still in a good state of preservation."

NINGPO VARNISH TOO.

As all residents of the Orient know, Ningpo Varnish is such a pest and trouble to many who are affected by the proximity of it, and as Prof. Toch is primarily a paint man, the question was put, "Why is this substance poisonous, how can one avoid being afflicted with sores and rash?"

"I examined and analysed Ningpo varnish, known in Japan as Irisha as far back as 1906 and really found that if one wore gloves when applying it, no poisonous after-effects would be experienced. As you know the oil of varnish in drying breathes as does the human being, absorbing oxygen and exhaling carbon dioxide. It is this gas that makes people ill. If one is unable to survive a surplus of this compound, the varnish in drying will affect them. Sometimes the odour affects others after months; it is supposed that formaldehyde, a poison, though this is not sure, is the basis for the ill feeling."

Professor Toch, with Mrs. Toch and Miss Maxime Toch, left for Peking on Wednesday, but will return to Shanghai within six weeks by way of Hankow, and on his return he has been requested to deliver a lecture by the Engineering Society on the "Corrosion of Iron and Steel." They will then continue on their way round the world, which though Mr. Toch has made 54 ocean voyages, crossing the Atlantic no less than 12 times, will be the first time he has visited that continent by way of the Orient.

Mr. Percy Cox returned to Shanghai by the R.M.S. Empress of Russia on Saturday after an absence of between two and three years, principally spent at Hongkong. He is taking charge here of the office of the Canadian Pacific Steamships as general agent, as Mr. N. Lees-Smith is proceeding Home on April 21 by the Empress of Australia.

A TRAVELLER TO TIBET

American Explorer in Shanghai: Up-to-Date Ways of Conquering the Wilderness

Among the passengers by the Dollar Line str. President Garfield who passed through Shanghai this week were Mr. and Mrs. William F. Alder, Mr. Alder who is a regular contributor to the "Century Magazine" on travel subjects and who has written many books on the little known regions, among them the "Isle of Vanishing Men," treating of the cannibals of New Guinea, and "Men of the Inner Jungle" and the "Artificial Empire," is now on his way to the City of Lhasa. His expedition is scientific and he proposes to survey the vicinity and make topographical maps of the roads, paths and waterways as well as secure a mass of photographic evidence, taken both with still and motion cameras.

When asked on Thursday by a representative of this paper whether he would have any difficulty in getting into this forbidden section of the world, he said that the American Government had taken up the matter with Downing Street and that he expected a smooth and easy way ahead of him.

Mrs. Alder, who usually accompanies Mr. Alder on his trips, is proceeding as far as Darjeeling, where she proposes to await his return. The party will be rather large and to secure safe transit for his many instruments, including sextants, theodolites, transits, and chronometers with further special meteorological appliances, in addition to the cameras, he proposes to engage a force of 100 natives. Usually, in the past, expeditions of this nature have been out of communication with the civilized world for a time, but science is coming to the fore and a high-power wireless set is included in the equipment and at no time will they be more than a second or two from Calcutta, from which station Mr. Alder will receive daily reports so as to set his chronometers for weather research.

When asked, "Don't you ever have any thrills on your searching parties, such as falling from a precipice and being rescued in mid air by the ever convenient aeroplane?" he said "We do not allow them to happen. I would just love to have a thrill, but on a properly organized expedition they do not occur. I crossed Borneo, (through all the wild men) with but a single white companion and never had a thrill."

"But something out of the ordinary, not in every-day life, must take place?"

"Well, when in 1920 we were approaching Borneo, the ship struck a reef about a mile from shore, so we just got in the dinghy and were rowed to land. It's all in the day's work."

Don't you sometimes run short of food or water when cast on desert islands?" came the query.

"No, I always take along enough provisions to last me twice as long as I expect to be stranded."

If we may be permitted to comment, either Mr. Alder was not in a reminiscient mood or he is no Baron Munchausen, or he is too modest. But we will await his new book on Tibet with interest.

Further Chinese "public" bodies have recorded their indignation at the rumours of the proposed extension of the Foreign Settlement and the proposed increase of wharfage dues. The appeal is in every case the same—that China's sovereign rights are being impaired and that any extension of the sort proposed, and any increase of taxes would be of incalculable harm to Chinese merchants and businessmen. Among the bodies concerned in the outcry are the Shanghai Commerce Maintenance Association, the Fukien Road Street Union and the Canton Road Street Union. The latter union considers that any extension of the Settlement would mean that Shanghai would be placed in the same position as Korea, India and Formosa, and that the freedom of the Chinese press would be injured.

CHINESE CHRISTIAN EDUCATIONAL ASSN.

Series of Important Meetings in Shanghai: Additions to the Staff

Educators from all parts of China gathered in Shaghai last week to consider the problems of Christian education. They met in connexion with the annual meeting of the China Educational Association, which represents the Christian schools and colleges organized in ten provincial associations. The meeting was one for reporting and planning for the work in these institutions. There were no public gatherings; all the time was spent in business sessions.

At the recent College Conference in Nanking, a Council of Higher Education was appointed. Its first organizing meeting was held on April 1. In the absence of the Chairman, Dr. Harold Balme, Tsinan, Dr. T. H. Lee, President of Futan University, took the chair. The chief matter discussed was a plan to standardize the Christian colleges and to bring them into closer relation with the Government institutions. There are at present nearly 20 institutions of college grade under Christian auspices with an enrolment of 3,700 students. In order to avoid undue competition and to secure better results in teaching through the restriction of departments and the possible federation of institutions in the same area, this Council plans to study the whole field. It has no power over any institution, but being representative of the colleges, its proposals will undoubtedly carry much weight. The services of a well-known Christian leader are being sought as secretary for the Council.

On April 2 and 3 the Advisory Council of the Association met at 20, Museum Road. The President, Dr. F. L. Hawks Pott, gave a valuable historical sketch of the Association. It began as far back as 1877, as a "School and Text Book Series Committee," which later developed into the present Association in 1880, with Dr. C. W. Mateer as its first President. During the 34 years of its history it has held a number of important triannual meetings. It has published text books, which in their time have had great influence in the development of modern education in China, and for a time it led in the preparation of modern terminology in Chinese. It has for a number of years published the "Educational Review," which is the only journal in China published in the English language that is devoted to education. From 1905 to 1912, the Rev. J. A. Silsby acted as General Secretary of the Association. Since 1912 the position has been filled by the Rev. F. D. Gamewell, LL.D., to whose untiring energy and ability is largely due the present influence of the Association throughout the country.

GOVERNMENT AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATORS.

An interesting address was give by Dr. W. T. Tao, Director of the National Association for the Advancement of Education in Peking, on the subject of relationships between Government and Christian educators. Dr. Tao spoke of the co-operation during the past year in the National Survey of the intelligence and educational achievements of school children which was conducted jointly by the National Association for the Advancement of Education and the China Christian Educational Association. It was financed by the former body and the Director, Prof. E. L. Terman, is connected with the Christian University in Peking. Teachers in Government and Christian schools worked together to make a success of the survey. At the present time a proposal is before both bodies for the organization of a Science Commission to draw together teachers of science in China for a common study of their problems and the improvement of science teaching. Dr. Tao also referred to the proposal that a Chinese Associate General Secretary be secured for the China Christian Educational Association. He believed that such a step would greatly increase the opportunities for co-operation with Government educators.

ADDITIONS TO THE STAFF.

During the past year the staff of the Association has been strengthened by the coming of Dr. E. W. Wallace, who has had experience is union educational work in West China. The Advisory Council sanctioned the securing in addition of a Chinese Associate General Secretary, and also of a secretary of religious education.

Thanks to a generous gift from the Institute of Religious and Social Surveys in America, and the contributions from mission boards, the Educatiosal Association is enabled to enlarge the sphere of its usefulness by securing these additions to its staff. These secretaries will make special studies of different phases of education in their application to the conditions of the Christian schools and colleges in China. They will also, as in the past, spend much time in the field, visiting institutions, conferring with principals and teachers and holding special conferences. If Christian education is to serve the Church and the Chinese people, it must keep abreast of the best developments in educational work in China and in other lands. During the past year the General Secretary, Dr. Gamewell, has spent some months studynig education in India. Other members of the staff have also made special studies in this country. A beginnisg has been made of the publication of "Educational Bulletins." The Association co-operated in the holding of a special conference in Shanghai during the last week in March to consider special problems in religious education.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION.

A report was given of an important conference on agricultural education that was held in February under the auspices of the Association. Sixty persons were present, representing agricultural missions in all parts of China. Reports were given of special schools that have been organized to meet the needs of country children. A text book is in process of preparation to teach children in primary schools the principles of gardening and farming, in order to enable country boys to receive an education that will interest them in farming and make them satisfied to spend their lives on the farm. The work of the extension department of the agricultural colleges, particularly in the elimination of silk worm disease and the remarkable improvement in the grade of cotton raised, is performing a remarkable service in raising the economic conditions of farmers. The country church is being made the centre of this welfare work and the farmers are beginning to look to the church as their best friend. At this meeting it was reported that the latest movement is to enlist the co-operation of doctors in mission hospitals in making surveys of health conditions in rural districts in preparation for campaigns for better sanitation and health conditions. Remarkable results have been achieved through the use of exhibits in farming villages and of simple dramatic performances. These carry to the illiterate farmers in all parts of the country the message of modern improved agriculture and home conditions.

Valuable reports presented by committees on curriculum, religious education, and adult and extension education will be fully reported in the "Educational Review." The Commercial Press was the host at tea on one afternoon and the manager, Mr. H. H. Wong, gave an interesting account of what the Press is doing for education.

On April 4 the Executive Secretaries of the ten provincial associations met for a day's conference to plan their work for the coming year. Through such common planning, rather than by any attempt to legislate, the educational work of the missions and of the Chinese church is approaching common standards and is greatly increasing its effectiveness.

The officers of the Association for the coming year are:—President, Rev. F. L. Hawks Pott; Treasurer, Mr. M. P. Walker; Recording Secretary, Rev. D. C. Baker, Taian. The Executive Secretaries are the Rev. F. D. Gamewell, General Secretary, and the Rev. E. W. Wallace, Associate General Secretary.

THE CARES OF CONSERVANCY

Dr. Chatley Wonders Why the Woo Sung Whangpoo

FRENCH MUNICIPAL LOAN

Coming Flotation of a Million Taels for Extraordinary Budget

It is learned that the French Municipal Council intends shortly to float a loan of about a million taels. Details of the flotation have not yet been made public, nor has the rate of interest been fixed, but the required particulars will be given out in due course.

The greater part of the sum mentioned is understood to be required for the completion of projects of improvement in the Concession which have been embarked upon in previous years. Certain new roads have to be brought to completion, these including Avenue Petain which will be carried as far as Siccawei. It is not contemplated to open up further roads for the present.

Another matter for which the Council hopes to use the loan is Koukaza. Here are situated barracks, established in the Boxer year by the French Government for the accommodation of its troops, and which are now used to house soldiers of the Tientsin garrison when passing through Shanghai. Negotiations are proceeding with the Minister of War in Paris for the acquisition of the barracks and land, the proposal of the Municipal Council being to acquire land elsewhere upon which new barracks can be constructed and to make use of the land at Koukaza for the enlargement of the French Park. It is hoped that the negotiations may be brought to a successful issue at an early date.

A further scheme which the Council has in view is the establishment of a plant for the manufacture of asphalt-concrete, so that it will be able to make its own road material.

While these are the principal objects for which the loan will be utilized, the Council is considering the advisability of erecting a plant for the destruction of household refuse. The problem of the disposal of this refuse has now become one of great magnitude, the amount in two years having risen from 40,000 to 107,000 tons, and at present considerable payments have to be made to Chinese contractors for its removal. The question at issue is whether the establishment of an incinerator for burning it would not be cheaper. It will not be possible to reach a decision on this matter for some months yet—not until the arrival of estimates—so that the scheme will hardly come within the scope of this year's extraordinary budget. Should the incinerator plan be adopted, the heat generated will be duly utilized, and an electric plant of about 600 K.W. be installed in conjunction with it.

OPPOSITION TO PRESS BY-LAWS

Chinese Publishers' Deputation to Council Secretary

A deputation consisting of representatives of the Commercial Press and the Chung Hwa Book Co., and the secretary of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce on Thursday morning called on Mr. E. S. Benbow Rowe, acting Secretary to the Shanghai Municipal Council, to present their side of the case with regard to the suggested new Press Licensing By-laws, namely, that they would be unjust and would inflict hardship upon those represented by the deputation.

The delegates said that they had made a very minute examination as to the meaning which should or could be placed upon every clause of the proposed regulations, and they took strong exception to the provision requiring that "any person who should cause to be printed, etc.," which they held would constitute an undue restriction as to the authorship of various articles.

It was explained in reply that the Council in no way wanted to control the writers of articles, but that it was necessary to have registration of those who published articles.

Another objection included the possibility of printing work being done outside the Settlement and distributed within it. It was explained that it was precisely to cover this and similar points that the regulations were drawn up. In the course of the interview the deputation were reminded of the Presidential Mandate governing such publications in Chinese districts, which contains possibilities of a drastic nature, inasmuch as the police are given full and complete power over all publications and the manner of their distribution, whilst the registration of the press and the compulsory inclusion on printed matter of the name of the publisher would be regulations of a very mild character compared with those which obtain in practically all civilized countries.

BY-LAWS NOT TO BE RE-DRAFTED.

At the close of the interview it was made clear that, whilst the Council would not at the present time alter the proposed new by-law as the result of the representations made by the deputation, none the less hereafter if those interested considered that they suffered any hardship in the matter of the registration of printers, the Council was at all times ready and willing to listen to any grievances and, in accordance with its policy of governing the Settlement in a liberal and fair-minded spirit, would take steps to rectify any legitimate cause of complaint.

MOTOR CAR HOTEL SCHEME

Mr. Maurice Benjamin in Part to Carry Out Mr. C. R. Burkill's Suggestion

The suggestion that a huge garage be constructed for the daily housing of cars which are at present parked on every available inch of space in our all-too-narrow streets has met with a prompt and practical response, a scheme of this character having been conceived by Mr. Maurice Benjamin and being now well advanced in its preliminary details. The new garage will be part of a big scheme for developing the Ben property which has its main frontage on Avenue Edward VII and Rue Montauban, and the whole of the buildings now standing on this extensive area will be demolished to make way for the modern structures which have been designed. On the Avenue Edward VII front it is proposed to build a hotel of five of six storeys, with flats on the upper floors and arcades on the ground floor.

The motor garage scheme is not so ambitious as that suggested by Mr. Burkill at the Automobile Club meeting, which would call for a very considerable outlay and a very extensive area of land, but still it is sufficiently comprehensive to afford some relief from the present parking congestion. Plans have been completed for the construction of a garage of six storeys in the back area of the property. A lift measuring 10 by 10 ft. will convey cars to the various floors, each of which will have clear garage space of 26,720 ft., and it is estimated that 200 cars can be accommodated. The roof will be occupied by repair and painting shops, which will offer additional convenient facilities for users of the garage.

The place will be available for daily or permanent use, and it will be possible so to arrange matters that owners will be able to get their car at a few minutes notice at any time of the day. In every respect, the scheme promises to be an extremely useful one, and it is an idea which is sure to have developments if this initial enterprise meets with success. The number of cars which can be accommodated is, of course, but a tithe of the mass which is crammed into the Settlement every day, in such number that one might almost describe every street in the Central District as a motor garage. The new scheme will not cope with the whole problem, but it will show the way to a simple method of easing the acute traffic problem. In another respect, also, use of the garage should commend itself to car owners, since it will put an end to the activities of thieves who are fond of walking off with a spare wheel and a bag of tools now and again.

It is believed that the general public will appreciate this enterprise. The idea has certainly been received with considerable favour, and an indication that it is engaging the interest of ratepayers is contained in the following communication which has reached us:—

At a meeting of the Shanghai Fabian Society held last Thursday evening, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—"That we heartily approve of the suggestion made by Mr. C. R. Burkill at the meeting of the Automobile Club of China on March 31, that the Shanghai Municipal Council should erect a huge centrally situated garage with numerous floors and elevators, in order to avoid the additional congestion in the streets caused by parking and ranking motor cars. That we urge the Council to obtain consent for this at the forthcoming Ratepayers' Meeting."

It has been urged that the local American Chamber of Commerce, along with other Oriental American Chambers, extend an invitation to Mr. Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, to visit this section.

The str. Frangestan, which has just burned to the water's edge near Port Soudan and whose passengers were saved under most exciting circumstances, was in Shanghai last month. While in port she was surveyed by Messrs. Eisler, Reeves & Murphy, who stated yesterday, that she was in perfect condition.

THE A. D. C.

"Fanny's First Play

CAST.

Count O'Dowde ...Mr E. R. Monsarrat.
Fanny, his daughter ...Miss Marjorie Serebriannikoff.
Mr. Gilbey .....Mr. Leigh Turner.
Mrs. Gilbey .....Mrs. Graham-Barrow.
Bobbie (their son) ...Mr. Lawrie-Smith.
Mr. Knox .....Mr. A. J. Daniels.
Mrs. Knox .....Miss Guiston.
Margaret (their daughter) ...Miss Eileen Millard.
Dora Delaney ...Mrs. Chris Wingrove
M. Duvallet .....Mr. Louis Lienard.
Juggins (a footman) ...Mr. Herbert Langley.
Savoyard .....Mr. J. J. Keegan.
Gunn .....Mr. F. G. Renwick.
Flawner Bannal ...Mr. C. F. Ashton.
Vaughan .....Mr. Donald Stewart.
Trotter .....Mr. S. F. Mackenzie.
A footman .....Mr. R. Rhyss Jones.

Act 1 and 3—a room in the house of Mr. Gilbey.

Act 2—a room in the house of Mr. Knox.

Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Jack Raynes.

Furniture by Messrs. Weeks and Company.

Stage manager, and scenery, Mr William Armstrong.

The play produced by Mr. E. P Graham Barrow.

To the producer it must always be a question of how much G. B. Shaw an audience is prepared to stand. In comparison with him Barrie may be called universal, whereas Shaw is invariably Shavian. When "Fanny's First Play" was produced in London, a certain amount of the epilogue—so we are informed—was cut out. The producer felt that the play was at an end, the audience were ready to go off to supper, and there should be no hindrance to their departure. For a variety of reasons the same procedure was adopted by the A. D. C. on Saturday night.

As we have said, "Fanny's First Play" is Bernard Shaw throughout. To start with, the curtain rose at 9.15 p.m. promptly, but for the succeeding minutes Shanghai and not Shaw was in the ascendant. The audience continued to troop in while the prologue was being recited, and so most people missed its all important points. At the end of the play is the epilogue—a coterie of critics discussing the show—and as produced on Saturday it was much less than the book would have it. Mr. Graham Barrow doubtless felt impelled to follow a lead given elsewhere and minimize this part. Unless perfectly done it would drag and that would be fatal to the success of the piece. As it was, however, there was a distinct success scored, so he was justified. Whole-hearted admirers of Shaw may suggest that the omission of the full epilogue means that the play is no longer as the author would have it, and such being the case it might be worth while to try it in full. It is an experiment but it is not to be attempted rashly.

The production of "Fanny's First Play," judged by its reception on the part of the audience, can only be regarded as a highly successful effort on the part of the A. D. C. The cast was well chosen, and outstanding among the ladies was Mrs. Wingrove in her part of Dora. There could be no question about her talent and, as has been noted on many an occasion previously, she gave a wonderful pourtrayal of an interesting part. Miss Eileen Millard made her first appearance in a "big" part in Shanghai and it is with pleasure that we congratulate her. She will certainly advance in the ranks of amateur theatricals, but one point must be noted. A more extensive use of arms and hands in the way of gesture would add greatly to her work and remove a very slight awkwardness which is at present somewhat noticeable. Miss Guiston as Mrs. Knox gave a very fine performance, indicating a rare insight into the requirements of a not by any means easy rôle.

The grumbling shopkeeper, Gilbey, was played by Mr Leigh Turner with a distinct amount of skill. Gilbey is one of the very ordinary people whom Shaw loves to write about and whom he shows up in the worst middle-class light, and for the average man this is one of the most difficult parts imaginable. Mr. Turner succeeded in it, and conveyed to the audience the notion of a commonplace grouser—the type of man who exists in large quantities the word is used advisedly—in this imperfect world of ours. Mr. Langley was excellent as the footman, and another of the cast who must be mentioned was Mr. Lienard as Duvallet. He was particularly good in the difficult task of a speech on Anglo-French relations in the third act—an interesting piece of satire.

We understand that the play was of necessity curbed in its rehearsals by the presence of the "Quaints" in Shanghai, and there is no doubt that additional rehearsals would have been all to the good. For instance a gap occurred at the end of the second act which spoilt the finale there. Another thing has to be pointed out. The play is brimful of good stuff—very funny things cropping up all over it—but the actors hardly gave time to the audience to enjoy them. Rather they were on to the next sentence or piece of repartee while a murmur of appreciative laughter was drowning their voices. This laughter was so keen and spontaneous throughout the whole evening that there could be no question of the delight of the audience regarding the piece and how it was played, and there is no doubt that all concerned in the production must be congratulated.

Hongkew bookbinders struck on Wednesday for higher wages. Some 400 men and boys, employees of nine establishments, state that they have been earning an average daily wage of 40 cents for piecework, and desire that the price be raised to enable them to make a further 20 cents.

THE PAPER ROADS MOVEMENT

The Settlement Isolation Party Sheds its Skin and Returns in Disguise: Vast Totals of Letters and Pamphlets, but an Absence of Roads

Any man with two good ears, if he lives in the Settlement, will hear every day of his life in the one ear, "Shanghai is not what it used to be for it has grown out of all recognition. In my day there were no houses beyond Thibet Road" (or Hungjao Road, according to whether Mr. Brodie Clarke or a griffin arrived by the Empress of Australia is telling the story). And in the other ear he will hear, "China is the great country of the future, but what she wants is roads." Only last week two exclusive radio services received here announced that Mr. Henry Ford had declared, "My eyes are on China. It is the big country of to-morrow." Mr. Ford manufactures "motor cars, automobiles, or whatever you call them," as K.C.B. once wrote, and roads are essential to his further prosperity, so it can be imagined what he will tell China if and when he comes here.

Many people have talked about building roads, several have collected money for that purpose, and a few in our neighbourhood have put down some rather splendid bridle paths which would be quite good for ponies if ponies were allowed on them. About the only people who steadily have continued to build real roads to the limit of their resources have been the International and French Municipal Councils and they would have done a great deal more if unsurmountable obstacles had not been put in their way. One must refer again to one or other of the very oldest inhabitants in order to find out when the Road to the Hills was first discussed, for it was before the time of all but a very few now living here. The Municipal Council always have been willing to build that road and still are, and arrangements have gone so far that the work could be commenced almost any day, but it is impossible because of the opposition of the Chinese. Other similar instances could be noted.

THOSE SOVEREIGN RIGHTS.

It will be remembered that a year or more ago a body styled the Good Roads Movement earned somewhat unenviable notoriety, at least amongst the foreigners in whose Settlement it was functioning, by working on the startling suggestion to build a Chinese road around the Settlement. The good roads movers were an estimable body of gentlemen who were highly perturbed and the heads of Municipal departments were alleged to be spending most of their time wandering about the outskirts of the Settlement looking for stray sovereign rights temporarily left about by honest folk, who for the moment were engaged in armed robberies, fomenting strikes, worshipping before the photographs of deceased Russian Communists, etc. A road round the Settlement would effectually protect all the sovereign rights and as the foreigners were not attempting to prevent the Chinese squeezing them out of the foreign Settlement, the eventual result was obvious—soon there would be no one left to go searching for sovereign rights.

It sounded easy; but unfortunately the wrong sort of publicity was given to the plans of the Good Roads Movement and it died a natural death. A few weeks ago, we received a form inviting admission that we were male or female and asking other impertinent questions, all of which were a part of an oath ever more to act in "compliance with the constitution and by-laws of the National Road Construction Association of China." Nothing much else was asked, except that one should pay a trifle in the way of an annual subscription on the following scale:—Common member, $1; special member, $5; assisting member, $10; approving member, $20; maintain (sic) member, $50; honorary member, $100. Surely any one of the titles is worth the price! Chekiang was said to be the strongest branch, with 44,000 members and funds of $60,000, which suggests either that the treasurer had been unable to collect many subscriptions, or else very few wanted even to be special members. As a whole the association only claimed 97,000 members and funds of $110,000, so "maintain" members must have been very few. The main trouble appeared to be that someone wanted cosy headquarters, there being an urgent appeal for something more than $110,000, for the existing headquarters had various defects, "regardless of its unsanitary effects during summer time and unprovided with a board room, exhibition room, deposit room, parlour, dinning room, etc." The "djnning" room presumably being where all the noise was invented. So one was asked for "any help financially or spiritually from you or anybody who feels willing to purtake this big enterprise."

BUT WHAT ABOUT ROADS?

Such a touching appeal could not be pigeon-holed. Inquiries were made and it transpired that this new association is but the old road round the Settlement concern under a new name. Its chief is Mr. C. T. Wang, who was prominent in the Shantung negotiations, who has been trying to bring about the deal with Karakhan and who was the head of the Good Roads Movement. This concern now has sent in a report of its activities. One notices singularly little about the actual building of roads, but it is recorded that the association circulated more than 116,000 copies of new and old constitutions (which ought to be about enough, as there are 97,000 members), received 127 foreign letters and 13,700 Chinese, but only answered 7,300 of the latter, although it sent out 230 English letters, and also despatched 78,000 parcels, of printed articles and 23,000 letters to members.

One might hazard the suggestion that a better start would have been made had all this wasted money been spent on helping the Municipal Council to build the Road to the Hills. The scattering of paper broadcast over China will not build roads, and if one has a taste for receiving letters and pamphlets, they can more easily be obtained for $100 a year than by becoming an honorary member of the National Road Construction Association of China.

THE CUSTOMS CLOCK LYING IN STATE

Dismembered Parts on View in the Compound: Sold for Re-erection in Peking

A disciple of Hood proclaimed on Thursday that the Customs clock had "lost face." It might have been better to say that its dismembered parts held a public reception, or possibly that they were lying-in-state. Any way, various portions of Shanghai's famous old friend spent the day scattered about the Customs compound, and scores of people dropped in to have a closer sight of them than they ever have had. One of the dials, somewhat damaged in its descent, rested against a wall and was an object of great wonder to the Chinese. A foot rule was not available, nor any official statistics on the subject, but at a guess, as judged by one's own height, the clock face is quite 10 ft. in diameter, which may be small as compared with Big Ben, but is not bad for what Shanghai was when the clock was put up. In another corner of the compound were the bells—a big one some 2 ft. high and about as much across its mouth, and three lesser ones. An inscription showed that they were cast in 1893 by Gillett & Johnston, of Croydon, England, and all were in perfect condition. Elsewhere reposed an intricate arrangement of wheels and levers more suggestive of a big launch engine than the works of a clock.

The old clock was put in the Customs tower in 1894 and has been running faithfully ever since. To-day it is pronounced to be in as good condition as ever and it is to be commissioned for further services. The purchasers were Messrs. Dominic & Co., and it is understood that they already have sold the clock in Peking, one rumour being that it will grace the tower of the Waichiaopu building.

Meanwhile, The Bund is timeless and the public much inconvenienced. The authorities recognising this, have decided to fire the time-gun from the Customs Pootung signal tower at noon every day, instead of at noon on Mondays and Fridays only. In the old days it was customary to fire this gun whenever a mail boat entered the port, but mailboats became so numerous that the gun would have been going all day if the practice were kept up, so it was discontinued.

OBITUARY

Mr. A. C. Z. Frisenette

An esteemed member of the Danish community, Mr. Adolf C. Z. Frisenette, died last Friday in the Isolation Hospital, the cause of death being spinal meningitis. The deceased, who was 45 years of age, joined the Great Northern Telegraph Co. in Denmark 25 years ago and arrived in China in 1901, remaining on the Shanghai station for the greater part of his service. He was a very popular member of the staff and had many friends among the foreign community, particularly as a member of the Shanghai Club.

Major M. W. Buck

We deeply regret to announce the death of Major M. W. Buck, R.E. (T), who passed away on Wednesday in the General Hospital at the early age of 43. He died of peritonitis following on an operation.

Major Buck, then a Captain in the Territorials, came to the Far East, to Hongkong, first in 1912 for the firm of Siemens & Co. He was an electrical engineer. On the outbreak of war he was called up to the Royal Engineers in Hongkong where he served all through the war and was one of the most popular officers in the garrison. After the war he joined the China Mutual Trading Co. as a director, which company had to close in consequence of the collapse following the short post-war boom. In March 1922 he joined Sulzer Bros. & Co. where he had been acting manager for the last six months. He was a Lieutenant in the Maritime Co., S.V.C. He was a Freemason of high rank, a Past Master of Victoria Lodge, Hongkong, and of Cosmopolitan Lodge in Shanghai, and D.G.J.W. of the District Grand Lodge of Scottish Freemasonry in North China. Major Buck was one whom everybody that knew him most deservedly liked and his death will be deplored by many friends.

Mrs. W. H. Poate

On April 8, at Wykcham House, Stanmore, England, Mrs. W. H. Poate, another of Shanghai's old residents, passed away.

Mrs. Poate, as Miss Clara Gilfillan, came to Shanghai in November, 1887, for work in connexion with the London Mission. On January 6, 1891, she was married to Mr. W. H. Poate, of Messrs. Mackenzie & Co.

Until she and her husband left Shanghai in 1907, Mrs. Poate made their home here a centre of much kindly hospitality. She was interested in all movements for the welfare of the less fortunate in our midst, and was from the first, and for many years, treasurer of the Children's Refuge, continuing her practical help even after leaving Shanghai.

In England, Mrs. Poate, among other activities did much work for her old school, Milton Mount, as its treasurer. For years she also took a personal interest in baby welfare work in the East End of London, regularly visiting the mothers in these poorer districts.

Her thought was constantly of others and many here will deeply mourn her loss and miss the welcome she always gave to her friends visiting the homeland.

Much sympathy is felt for her husband, her sisters and members of the family in Shanghai.

SMART DISCOVERY OF ARMS ON RIVER

Pistols and Ammunition Thrown Overboard for Drag Boat: An Astute Watchman

A gun-running venture was scotched by the River Police on Wednesday. Whilst patrolling the river shortly after 9 a.m., Sgt. Benson observed two small Chinese drag boats, on the Pootung side near Jardine's west wharf, followed by a sampan in which was a Sikh watchman from the str. Celtic Prince. The watchman cried out that the Chinese had arms and ammunition on board, and without more ado the Sergeant got the Chinese craft to the police hulk, where a search revealed several hundred rounds of revolver ammunition.

The watchman gave information that about 8 a.m. on Wednesday he saw a Chinese leave the galley of the Celtic Prince, go to the side and throw overboard two suit cases and a sailor's bag, and these being supposed to contain arms and ammunition, police were set to drag the river near the ship's side. One of the suit cases was bought up and found to contain 22 long-barrelled revolvers of .38 calibre and bearing a mark of Spanish manufacture, and another package recovered contained 8,900 rounds of revolver ammunition. The Chinese members of the crew were afterwards lined up, but the watchman failed to identify the man who threw the cargo overboard. It has been noted that one man who went ashore during the day without permission, leaving a considerable sum of money behind him, has not yet returned.

The trick of dropping contraband overboard and afterwards dragging for it is an old one, but on this occasion was not performed with customary neatness.

IMPURE BLOOD
brings on Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Eczema, Boils, Pimples and Eruptions, Piles, Rheumatism, Gout. To obtain complete and lasting relief, the blood must be thoroughly cleansed. Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly expels the impurities, that is why so many lasting recoveries stand to its credit.
Clarke's Blood Mixture
Of all Chemists and Stores.
"Everybody's Blood Purifier"

COMMERCE AND FINANCE

Money and Exchange

OFFICIAL RATES.

Shanghai, Apr. 11.

Bank's Demand Selling Rate for £1 at 3/2⅜=Tls. 6.25 at 71.7=$8.72
Bank's Demand Selling Rate for G.$100 at 69¼=Tls. 144.40 at 71.7
Mex. Dollars, market rate	71.925
Native Interest	05
Copper Cash	262,000
Bar Silver	33
Bank rate of Discount	4%
Paris on London	Frs. 72.25
New York on London	G.$4.33¼

BANK'S OPENING SELLING RATES.

	Per Tael
LONDON—
Telegraphic Transfer	3/2¼
Demand	3/2⅜
NEW YORK—
Telegraphic Transfer	69
Demand	69¼
PARIS—
Demand	1163
INDIA—
Demand	227½
HONGKONG—
Demand	74
JAPAN—
Demand	60¾
BATAVIA—
Demand	191
SINGAPORE—
Demand	73½

BANK'S OPENING BUYING RATES.

LONDON—
Demand	3/2 7/16
4 m/s. Credits	3/4¼
4 m/s. Docs.	3/4½
6 m/s. credits	3/4⅝
6 m/s. Docs.	3/5¼
NEW YORK—
Demand	70½
4 m/s. Credits	72½
4 m/s. Docs.	73
PARIS—
4 m/s. Docs.	1240
Closing business done at
London T.T.	3/2 7/16
New York T.T.	69½

CUSTOMS EXCHANGE RATES FOR APRIL

Hk. Tls. 5.49 at 3/3¼	£1
,, 1 at 1631/8	Frs. 18.17
,, 1.28 at 69⅞	Gold $1
,, 1 at 62⅜	Yen 1.79
,, 1 at 233½	Rupees 2.60
,, 1 at 1.50	Mex. $1.50
,, 1 at 16.35	It. Lire 18.21
Marks and Roubles no quotation

Sino-Italian Bank Quotations

Selling Rates, Apr. 11.

It. Lire 15.50	Tl. 1
Swiss Frs. 3.92	Tl. 1
It. Lire 9.30	Y. 1

Week's Exchange Notes

Apr. 12.

At the close of business on the 9th instant the stock of silver in Shanghai was Tls. 32,931,000 and $44,960,000.

These figures include Tls. 8,840,000 and $28,210,000 in Chinese banks in which there were 933 bars.

BAR SILVER.

Arrivals were:—
1,086 bars from America
929 ,, ,, London

2,016 bars

Shipments were:—
15 bars to Hongkong

SYCEE.

There were no movements of sycee during the week

DOLLARS.

Arrivals were:—
$100,000 from Soochow
100,000 ,, Chinkiang
50,000 ,, Wenchow

$250,000

Shipments were:—
$50,000 to Tungchow

SILVER.

The price came yesterday as 33d. ready and forward, showing rises of 1/16d. ready and ⅛d. forward, compared with last week's prices. The market has been reported generally as quiet. India bought and China is reported both as a buyer and a seller.

Bars in stock 4,331, including silver yen 10 lakhs. The stock is 2,000 bars higher than last week. Stocks of sycee and dollars are estimated at Tls. 309½ lakhs and $447½ lakhs, and show increases during the week of Tls. 20 lakhs and $2 lakhs.

The price of dollars has risen to 71.925.

EXCHANGE.

Exchange left off last week at T.T. 3/2½d. where it still remains. The market during the week was quiet and steady, with forward quotations at times higher than for early delivery.

Banks generally would sell T.T. 3/2 7/16d. for April/June delivery, 3/2½d. forward; Gold $ T.T. 69½ April/May and 69⅝ June forward. And 4 m/s. L/C paper offering could be placed at 3/3⅛d. and Gold $ 71¼. Business is very dull.

LONDON BULLION

Samuel Montagu & Co.'s Report

In their report of February 27 on the London bullion market Messrs. Samuel Montagu & Co. state:—

The Bank of England gold reserve against its note issue on the 20th instant amounted to £126,270,560, as compared with £126,259,895 on the previous Wednesday.

Nearly all of this week's moderate supplies of gold was shipped to the United States of America.

In our letter of the 6th instant, we referred to the relief which would be given to the congestion of gold in the United States of America if greater encouragement were given to imports of goods. The following extract from a lecture on "American Dependence upon Foreign Products" by Professor A. P. Brigham of Colgate University, U.S.A. delivered on the 25th instant before the Royal Geographical Society, as reported in the "Times" yesterday, is worthy of note:—

"Through most of the 19th century, American attention was turned inward upon themselves. The 20th century was changing all that. They were getting a new understanding of the philosophy of trade. They were rid of the delusion that trade could be one-sided. They began to know the fallacy of the so-called 'favourable balance of trade.' There must be mutual advantage and service."

The Southern Rhodesian gold output for January, 1924, amounted to 48,979 ounces, as compared with 55,268 ounces for December, 1923, and 56,603 ounces for January, 1923.

Indian trade figures (private account) for January, 1924, are as follows:—

(in lakhs of rupees)	Exports.	Imports.
Merchandise	3,695	2,261
Gold	½	230
Silver	10	233½
	Net Exports.	Net Import.
Merchandise	1,434	—
Gold	—	229½
Silver	—	223½
	Total Net Exports	981.

Owing to rather sharp fluctuations in the U.S. as well as the China exchanges, the market has been disposed to vacillate. The fact that most of the buying came from bears, and varied in amount considerably on different days, naturally increased the irresolution of the market. America was inclined to sell freely yesterday and the tendency of prices to be checked at any marked advance is evident. The Continent is not at present figuring as a factor.

The following illuminating passage occurs in an article in the "Engineering and Mining Journal Press" of New York alluding to the London silver market:—

"It is those three machinery appliances—cheap money rates, exchange centralization, and superlative brokerage organization (largely the first) that made, make, keep and will keep London in control of the world's silver market. Her imperial trade necessities require that she keep a grip on the silver exchanges, via silver. Similarly, the London market rules wheat, cotton, and other commodities which Britain does not produce, but which the machinery of British finance and cheap money permit Britain to 'carry,' and dominate."

Miss O'Reilly, assistant to the Director of the Mint, in her evidence before the U.S. House Committee on Appropriations, when reverting to transactions under the Pittman Silver Purchase Act, said that when the United States sold to Great Britain 259 million standard silver dollars, the Government not only collected the price of the silver at a dollar an ounce, but charged England an additional 1½ cents per ounce, which has been used for recoining silver dollars. England was also charged for the cost of copper in the transaction, and the fund therefrom has amounted to $3,333,000.

SHANGHAI MARKET REPORT

Overtrading In Woollens for the Spring Trade: A Heavy Bankruptcy

Apr. 12.

All markets are more or less stagnant, and interest seems to centre in the bankruptcy of a Chinese woollen merchant whose liabilities are believed to be heavy.

A slight improvement has again been shown at the piece goods auctions, but other business has been dull.

All branches of exports are in an uninteresting condition.

PIECE GOODS.

A very small amount of business has been registered in piece goods this week, but orders have been coming in only in driblets, these consisting principally of Greys and Whites for Hankow and Ningpo. Owing to the increasingly great scarcity of stocks, prices for these are rather firmer, but Fancies are entirely neglected. The Manchester market is very strong on account of the ascertained shortage of cotton, and manufacturers are in a very healthy position owing to the reduction of hours to 26½ per week. They are therefore more or less in a position to dictate to consumers, but as China declines to buy the result here is not apparent.

In woollens the market is very quiet, and the principal feature appears to be the bankruptcy of a Chinese dealer who had large commitments to meet. For the Spring trade there has been undoubtedly over-buying, and this appears to have brought about the present condition of stagnancy. The Home market remains strong, and no new business worth talking about is taking place with China.

As far as the auction business is concerned there is little change to note. The undertone remains strong, and while actual demand for Italians has fallen away the speculators are now again active so that the probabilities are all in favour of an appreciation of prices. The demand for Greys and Whites continues to be extremely good, and stocks are decreasing rapidly. The Changsha market appears to be the strongest for Whites, but all other centres are as a fact interested. The recent dock strike at Home has had this effect on the situation that exports from England have been curtailed, and at a time when heavy clearances are expected arrivals of cargo are going to be very small.

COTTON AND YARN.

China Cotton—China cotton has advanced about a tael during the past week, and mills have been buying only for their immediate requirements, this at prices which show a heavy loss on yarn. The complaint is made that cotton becomes steadily poorer in quality and the added moisture is increasing. It is now said to be 17 per cent. whereas the natural moisture should be about 8 per cent. On the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange, where remark is made on a shortage of supply, the prices are as follows:—April 47.80; May 47.35; June 46.65; July 46.20; August 45.05; September 41.70 Spot quotations are as follows:—Tungchow 48.50; Shanghai 45.50; Shensi 47; Hankow 45.

Yarn—A certain amount of business is proceeding in yarn at prices which show a slight improvement here and there. Stocks are very small indeed and any big demand will find the spinners in a very strong position in regard to price. So far, however, this demand has not manifested itself, and the result is that while several Chinese mills are closed, foreign mills are considering a further curtailment of output. Cloth has been lifeless during the week. On the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange prices advanced on shorts covering and bulls trying to change over from the near months' position to far months' deliveries. Quotations on the Exchange are as follows:—April 178; May 176.80; June 175.20; July 174.30; August 173.20; September 171.90.

SILK.

The silk market appears to be dead both in Lyons and New York. The local market is weaker and lower prices are expected.

Some of the Chinese dealers are anxious to contract for new season's silk, but are unable to find buyers.

PRODUCE.

The produce markets remain stagnant, and there is nothing of interest to report. Local prices continue high and beyond the ideas of Home buyers. The easier exchange rates prevailing during the past week have not affected the volume of export business to any extent.

QUEENSLAND LOAN

Particulars of London Flotation

London, Apr. 4.

The first Queensland loan issued in England since December, 1919, is being underwritten for conversion of the 3½ per cent. 1924 Loan of £4,765,000 and also of the 4 per cent. loan of £7,939,000, which is due on July 1.

Holders of these loans are offered in exchange 5½ per cent inscribed stock, redeemable in 1926 to 1929, on cash payment of 10 shillings per cent. Cash applications will be received at 99½ per cent. on payment of 10 per cent. on application and 89½ per cent. on July 1.

This is a sequel to the success of the efforts of Mr. Theodore, Queensland's Socialist Premier, to raise the embargo on Queensland loans since the passage of the Queensland Pastoral Leases Act of 1920, which, British financial concerns having large property holdings complained, was inimical to their interests. The concessions made by Mr. Theodore with regard to the offending statute have removed all differences.—Reuter.

Dutch Internal Loan

Amsterdam, Apr. 5.

The "Handelsblad" understands that a bankers' syndicate in Holland have offered the Government a loan of 60,000,000 guilders with interest at six per cent., issuable at 97 per cent. The paper adds that there is every likelihood that the Government will accept the offer.—Reuter.

Japan's Trade With China

Tokio, Apr. 7.

The Finance Department announces that for the month of March, Japan's trade with China amounted to Y.30,887,000 in exports and Y.12,009,000 in imports, the balance being Y.18,878,000 in favour of exports.

Coal Output

The total output of the Kailan Mining Administration's mines for the week ending March 29 amounted to 93,108 tons and the sales during the same period to 106,878 tons.

SUN LIFE OF CANADA

Important Arrangement with New York Life

Arrangements have just been completed under which the business in the United Kingdom of the New York Life Insurance Co. will in future be administered by the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada. This follows on a similar arrangement made a few months previously under which the business in the United Kingdom of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York was reassured and taken over by the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

Under the recent arrangements made between the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada and the New York Life Insurance Company, and also between this company and the China Mutual and Shanghai Life Insurance Companies, the assets of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will be increased by about G.$25,000,000, making the total assets G.$240,000,000.

U. S. Freight Rates

New York, Apr. 5.

The American Continental Steamship Freight Conference confirms that rates will be advanced from 15 to 25 per cent. as from May 1.—Reuter's American Service.

FOR SALE

Petrol Electric Light Plants.

1 Plix Electric Light Set: 32 Volts, suitable for 65 Lamps each of 20 Watts, including full set of storage battery. Set not quite new but in guaranteed good working condition. Recently overhauled.

1 Entirely new Lumen Electric Light Plant: 32 Volts, suitable for 50/48 Lamps, each of 20 Watts, including full set of storage battery. Measurement: 39 c.f. New York's Invoice price=G.$554.68 c.i.f. Shanghai.

Selling both Plants (each separately) very cheap. BEST OFFER ACCEPTED. Must reach on or before May 18. Terms: cash, ex godown Shanghai. Forwarding expenses for Buyer's account.

Apply to Standard Machine Supply Co., 123 Szechuen Road. Tel. Address: "Stanmasup."

THE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE THROUGHOUT THE EAST

WHO'S WHO PAINT

Varnishes, Enamels, etc.

Large Stocks Kept in China

Wilkinson, Heywood & Clark

SHANGHAI—HONGKONG

SOUTHERN RHODESIA

SOUTHERN Rhodesia which was inaugurated as the youngest self governing Colony of the British Empire on October 1, 1923, and which had previously for 33 years been ably administered by the British South Africa Company possesses one of the finest climates in the world with long hours of sunshine, breezy temperate days and cool nights. For those who wish to take up farming or ranching in order to make the most they can of their capital, energy and technical knowledge, or for those who wish to retire from strenuous business or professional life and make a home, Rhodesia offers many advantages unequalled elsewhere. The business, social, sporting, educational and medical facilities bear favourable comparison with those of other countries. Native labour is plentiful and when properly managed is cheap and efficient. Taxation is light. Good land in healthy surroundings and amidst fine scenery is plentiful and not expensive.

Full information is obtainable on application to The Secretary, Southern Rhodesia Settlers' Board (attached to the Government of Southern Rhodesia), P. O. Box 372, Salisbury S., Rhodesia.

The giving of advice to prospective settlers will be facilitated if applicants will advise the Board in detail of their circumstances and the amount of capital they would be prepared to invest in a suitable venture.

COMPANIES NOTICES, MEETINGS, ETC.

The Anglo-Java Estates, Ltd.—The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Monday, April 14, 1924, at 4 p.m.

A final dividend of 30 cents per share will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 7 to 14, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Java Consolidated Rubber & Coffee Estates, Ltd.—The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, April 17, 1924, at 4.30 p.m.

A final dividend of 75 cents per share, making Tls. 1.25 per share for the year will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 12 to 17, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Bute Plantations (1913), Ltd.—The 11th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 2 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 15, 1924, at noon.

The Chartered Bank of I. A. & C.—At the approaching annual general meeting of shareholders the Directors will recommend that a dividend be declared for the past half year at the rate of 14 per centum and a bonus of 6s. 3d. per share free of income tax (equal to 20½% per annum).

The Dominion Rubber Co., Ltd.—The 10th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 2 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 15, 1924, at 4 p.m.

To pay a dividend at Tls. 0.10 per share will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 7 to 15, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Sua Manggis Rubber Co., Ltd.—The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 33 Peking Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, April 17, 1924, at 11.30 a.m.

A dividend of 7 per cent. will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 14 to 20, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Cheng Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The Transfer Books will be closed from April 10 to 16, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Shanghai Malay Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The 14th Annual General Meeting will be held at No 23 Peking Road, Shanghai, on Monday, April 14, 1924, at 11.45 a.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 10 to 11, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Shanghai Horse Bazaar & Motor Co., Ltd.—The 21st Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 36 Bubbling Well Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 15, 1924, at 5 p.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 8 to 15, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Gordon & Co., Ltd.—The 8th Annual Meeting will be held at No. 7 Peking Road, Shanghai, on Monday, April 14, 1924, at 5.30 p.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 7 to 15, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Semambu Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The 11th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, April 24, 1924, at 11.30 a.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 16 to 24, 1924, both days inclusive.

Share Report for Week Ending April 11, 1924.

No. 24/14

J. P. BISSET & CO.

Telegraphic Address: "BISSET SHANGHAI"
Codes in use: A1 Code
A.B.C. 5th and 6th Editions
Bentley's Complete Phrase Code
Telephone Cent. 171 & 174.

Members of Shanghai Stock Exchange.
Land, Estate & Insurance Agents.
Hongkong & Shanghai Bank Building,
1st The Bund
Post Office Box No. 244, Shanghai.

The local share market has been very quiet and depressed during the week with very few transactions recorded of any consequence. "Rubbers" are a stagnant market as a result of the continued low price offering for the raw product. Hongkong & Shanghai Bank shares have steadily improved and are quoted in London at £132½ business done. "Langkats" (Combined) have again changed hands for both cash and forward delivery but at a considerable drop in price. All sound local investment stocks are wanted but not easy to secure at present quotations.

London interest quotations have ceased of slightly since last week and the following are the latest prices quoted us by cable this week:—

Chinese Govt. 5% Reorg. Loan 1913. B.I.	£ 71. 10. 0	(Middle Price)
" " " " " " F.I.	69. 10. 0	"	ex B.R.I.S.
" " " " " " R.I.	65. 3. 9	"
Chinese " " Lung Tsing U. Rai Rly	51. 10. 0	(Sellers)
Chinese Engineering & Mining Co., "B"	3. 3. 0	(Middle Price)
Gula Kalumpong Rubber Estates, Ltd.	1. 10. 3	"
Shanghai-Nanking Railway & Tramways, Ltd.	0. 3. 0	(Sellers)
Pekin Syndicate, Ltd. Ord Shares	0. 10. 3½	(Middle Price)

Sterling Quotation.—The opening T.T. Rate on London to-day is 3/24.

Shanghai, April 11, 1924.

Following is the official business recorded on the Shanghai Stock Exchange:—

APRIL	5th Cash	5th June	7th Cash	7th June	8th Cash	8th June	9th Cash	9th June	10th Cash	10th June	11th Cash	11th June
RUBBERS
Consolidated Rub. Co., Ltd. Tls.	2.27½	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Kali Gilidik Coffee Est., Ltd. "	..	..	0.15	..	..	..	..	..	12	..	..	..
Kroowook Rub. Est., Ltd. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
MISCELLANEOUS STOCKS
S'hai Dock & Eng. Co., Ltd. Tls.	..	..	95	..	6½	..	..	..	..	6½	..	6½
S'hai Loan & Invest. Co., Ltd. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Mutual Tel. Co., Ltd. "	..	..	..	..	7½	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Lanekats (combined) .. .. "	..	..	..	..	26½	..	..	..	..	26	..	..
Hall & Holtz Ltd. .. .. $	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	7	..	7	..	..
S'hai Exploration & D. Co., Ltd. Tls.	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	11	..	20½	..
Chinese Eng. & Mng. Co., "B" "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
COTTONS
DEBENTURES
S. M. C. 6% 1905 Debs. .. Tls.	97	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
" 6% 1923 " .. .. "	99	..	..	105	..	105	..	..	..	..	105	..
" 7% 1922 " .. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..

FORWARD SETTLEMENTS FOR 1924.

CLOSING QUOTATIONS, APRIL 11, 1924.

STOCK	Last business done.		Buyers	Sellers	No. of Shares	Authorized Value	Reserve, etc.	Financ. year ended	Last Dividend etc.	Paid or Due
BANKS.
Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Cor.	$ 1160	1165		61)	400,000	H $125	(a H $3,350,212	Dec.	Final £3 & Bonus £2 (mkg. £3 1923) less I/T	25-2-24
Chartered Bank of I., A. & C. ..London	£ 19				600,000	£5	(b H $65,123,831	Dec.	Final 7s. & Bonus 6s. 3d. (mkg. £1 0s. 3d.)
							(a £222,201
							(c £3,800,000	Dec.	free of I/T, 1922	5-4-24
INSURANCE.
Union In. Society of Canton, Ltd.	H $ 240			55)	200,000 d	£4	(ar £437,386		Final 16s. (mkg. 19s.) ex 1921 Work. a/c.
							(b £69,500	Dec.	Interim 24% & Bonus to Contributors, 20%.	20-3-24
North-China Insurance Co., Ltd.	T 138				10,000 e	£5	(c £3,374,054		ex 1922 Work a/c
							(ar T61,887	Dec.	Final 15s. (mkg. 35s.) ex 1921 Work. a/c. and
							(e T4,782,885		Interim 15s. ex 1922 Works. a/c.	30-6-24
Yangtsze Insurance Association, Ltd. ..	$ 27	28½		21)	250,000	$10	(ar $1,921,666
							(au $2,108,636	Dec.	$2 (or T1.40) ex 1922 Work. a/c. payable in
							(c $4,663,242		Taels at Exchg. 75	30-5-24
Far Eastern Insurance Co., Ltd.	T 22			1)	50,000	T20	(ar T519,346
							(au T201,193	Dec.	T1.20 ex 1922 Work. a/c.	30-5-24
							(e T9,361
Canton Insurance Office, Ltd.	H $ 720				10,000	f H $100	(ae H $2,172,899	Dec.	Final H $22 (mkg. H $40) ex 1921 Work. a/c.,
							(e H $6,649,892		and Interim H $18 ex 1922 Work. a/c. ..	11-3-24
Hongkong Fire Insurance Co., Ltd. ..	H $ 550	525			8,000 g	H $50	(au H $1,103,105	Dec.	H $35 ex 1922 Working a/c.	28-3-24
							(c H $1,547,811
China Fire Insurance Co., Ltd.	H $ 145				20,000 h	H $20	(ar H $1,328,926	Dec.	H $7 and Bonus H $3 ex 1921 Work. a/c.	23-3-24
							(c H $5,523,650
Assurance Franco-Asiatique	F 500				14,000	F500	(a F101,368	Dec.	None, Floated 1918	....
							(e F3,784,330
SHIPPING.
Inst. China S.N. Co., Ltd. .. (6% cum. pref.	H $ 38	38½		2)	120,000	£5	(a £2,167
(def. ord.	H $ 110			2)	120,000	£5
							(c £2,103,182	Dec.	Prof. 6s. at Exchg. = $2.4 London Warrants
									less I/T a/c., 1922. Def. Ord. Nil	15-6-23
Shell T'sport & Trading Co., Ltd. .. (ord.	'B'		£24:13:0	£4:16:0	56) 30,000,000	£1
(6% cum. pref.	£				28) 300,000	£10	(a* £2,029,050	Dec.	Interim 2s., free of I/T, Coupon 12	5-1-24
(7½% cum. 2nd pref.	£				57) 10,000,000	£1	(c £5,000,000
S'hai Tug & Lighter Co., Ltd. (ord.	T 85				20,000	T25	(a T23,571	Dec.	Final Ord. T1.50 (mkg. T1, 1923)	11-3-24
(7% pref.	T 51½	52½			10,000	T50	(c T410,000		Final Pref. T1.75 (mkg. T3.50, 1923)	11-3-24
DOCKS AND WHARVES.
Shanghai Dock & Engineering Co., Ld. ..	T 95		95	47)	55,700	T75	(a T102,335	Apr.	T7.50, 1922-23	27-7-23
							(c T1,948,660
Hongkong & W'pao Dock Co., Ld	H $ 155			‡	60,000	H $50	(a H $10,750	Dec.	Final H $5 (mkg. H $9, 1923)	21-3-24
							H $4,061,625
New Eng. and Shipbuilding Works, Ltd. .. .. .. (ord.	T 5½	5¼		42)	500,000	T5	(a T25,500		Ord. T0.25, 1923	10-2-24
(8% pref.	T 4.95			65)	500,000	T5	(b T300,000	Dec.	Pref. T0.40 1923	10-2-24
							(c T1,311,015
							(a T3,480
Shanghai & H'kew Wharf Co., Ld.	T 132½		121	131)	40,000	T100	(b T200,000
							(c T1,075,231	Dec.	Final T10 (mkg. T13, 1923) H	4-3-24
H'kong & K'loon W. & G. Co., Ld. ..	H $ 168		167		80,000	H $50	(a H $290,819
							(b H $300,000	Dec.	H. $6 & Bonus H. $3, 1923	26-2-24
							(c H $59,240
MINING.
Oriental Consolidated Min. Co., Ld. ..	$ 12/-			24)	500,000	G. $10	——	June	G $0.50, 1920-21	26-7-23
Chinese Eng. & Mining Co., Ld. (Bearer).	T 20½	20½		†364)	2,000,000	£1	(a £10,537	June	Final 3½% (Coupon No. 23) free of I.T.
	£	£3:7:3	£3:10:9				(c £252,000		1922-1923	11-12-23
London
Raub Australian Gold Min. Co., Ld. ..	H $ 5				200,000	£1	(a £23,613	Mar.	1s. 2d., 1909-10	21-5-10
							(c £4,875
LANDS AND HOTELS.
Shanghai Land Investment Co., Ld. ..	T 118			‡)	78,000	T50	(a T34,410
							(b T275,000	Dec.	Final T3 & Bonus T2 (mkg T8, 1923)	21-3-24
							(c T2,276,317
H'kong Land Invest. & Agcy. Co., Ld. ..	H $ 117		117		240,000	H $25	(a H $157,536	Dec.	Final H $1.50 & Bonus $2 on 200,000 shares
(New Reg.)							(b H $250,000		(mkg. H $5, 1923) H $2.50 on 40,000 new shs.	28-1-24
Humphreys Est. & Finance Co., Ld. ..	H $ 24				150,000	H $10	(a H $158,299
							(b H $50,000	Dec	H $0.80 and Bonus H $0.80, 1923	9-2-24
							(c H $121,153
Weihaiwei L. & B. Co., Ld.	T 6				3,674	T20	(a T2,946	Dec.	T1.20, 1923	13-2-24
							(c T7,000
							(a T9,269
Anglo-French Land Invest. Co., Ld. ..	T 115½			‡23)	18,000	T100	(b T20,000	Feb.	Final T4.50 (mkg. T5, 1923-24)	3-4-24
							(c T375,000
		2s old						Dec.	Final H $0.75 & Bonus H $0.50 on 375,000
Hongkong & Shanghai Hotels, Ld. ..	H $ 13 new			33)	500,000	H $10	(a H $85,238		shares (mkg. H $2 (old) & H $1.75 (new),
							(c H $4,953,767		1923)	14-2-24
Carlton, Ld.	T 53			14)	10,000	T50		Mar.	Floated April 1, 1922
Asia Realty Co., Inc.	G $ 100			‡18)	10,000	G $100		Dec.	Incorporated under the laws of Delaware
									1922, 7%	4-1-23
Haven Trust Co., Inc. .. .. .. (ord.	G $ 15	12½			100,000	G $10
(pref.	G $ 10	10				G $10	(		Ord. Pref. 1st gr. 1923, 1½%	4-1-23
PLANTATIONS.
Alma Estates, Ld.	T 5½		6		70,000	£1 at T9	a T28,940	Sept.	T0.50, 1922-23	19-12-23
New Amherst Rubber Estate, Ld.	T 0.25	0.20		‡62)	500,000	T1		Oct.
Anglo-Dutch (Java) Plantations, Ld. ..	T 2.15	2		12)	100,000	10s.	a T30,242	Dec.	T0.20, 1923	1-4-24
Anglo-Java Estates, Ld.	T 5.85			4)	500,000	10s.	(a T129,151	Dec.	Interim T0.25 a/c. 1923	14-9-23
							(c T378,570
							(a T16,223
Ayer Tawah Rubber Co., Ld.	T 21			27)	30,000	T10	(b T22,000	Sept.	Final T2.00, (mkg. T2½) 1922-23	28-12-23
							(c T80,960
Batu Anam (Johore) Rub. Ests., Ld. ..	T 0.75				400,000	T1	a T22,777	Dec.	T0.05, 1923	11-1-24
Bukit Toh Alang Rubber Ests., Ld. ..	T 1.12½	1.02½			500,000	T1	a T20,402	Mar.	Final T0.25 (mkg. T0.50, 1916-17)	29-7-17
Bute Plantation (1913), Ld.	T 0.75				300,000	T1	a (Loss)T13,076	Dec.	Final T0.05 (mkg. T0.10, 1916)	29-3-17
Clonee United Rubber Co., Ld.	T 0.35				400,000	T0.90	(a T17,973	Dec.
							(c T12,000		Final T0.05 (mkg. T0.10, 1923)	3-1-24
Chempodak Rub. & G'bier Est., Ld. ..	T 4½			39)	35,000	£1	a (Loss)T13,435	Oct.	2nd Interim, T0.50, (mkg. T1, 1916-17)	16-10-17
Cheng Rubber Estates, Ld.	T 1½				135,000	T5	a T4,120	June	T0.20, 1916-17	1-11-17
Consolidated Rubber Estates (1914), Ld..	T 2.12½			25)	500,000	2s.—T0.75	a T16,988	Dec.
							(c T60,000		Final T0.15 (mkg. T0.21, 1923)	9-4-24
Dominion Rubber Co., Ld.	T 1.05			19)	350,000	T1	a T13,813	Dec.	T0.40, 1919	18-5-20
Gula Kalumpong Rubber Ests., Ld. ..	T 8			†48)	750,000	(21;450,000	(a
						(5s; 200,000	(c		2s. less I/T 4s. 7½d in £ (Coupon 21) .. — ..	15-4-24
Jaya-Consolidated Rubber & Coffee, Est., Ld.	T 11			8)	85,000	£1 at 2/3½	a T54,465
Kali Gilidik Coffee Estates, Ld.	T 6.15	5.90			70,000	T5	c T650,113	Dec.	Interim, T0.50 1923	3-9-23
Kapayang Rubber Estates Co., Ld. ..	T 9.40			35)	15,000	T10		....	Incorporated 1923	....
							(a T6,977		(T0.50, 1922	19-4-23
Kasan Rubber Estate Co., Ld.	T 4				25,000	T10	(c T4,023	Dec.	(Interim 1923, T0.50	17-7-23
							(a T3,008
Kota Bahroe Rubber Estates (1921), Ld. .	T 0.75				390,000	T1	(b T30,000	Mar.	T0.60, 1922-23	1-6-23
Kroowook Java Plantations, Ld.	T 12			20)	70,000	£1 at T8.60	a (Loss)T28,203	June	....	....
					50,000	T10	(c T13,246
Rasah Rubber Co., Ld.	T 2½				200,000	T10	(c T48,200	Dec.	T1 (mkg. T1.50, 1923) .. —	8-3-24
							(a T4,139

The following telegraphic advices have been received:—

Singapore, April 10, 1924.

Spot or April	... ...	42¼ cents
May/June	... ...	43 ,,
July/Sept.	... ...	43¾ ,,
July/Dec.	... ...	45 ,,

Market steady at the decline.

DEBENTURES.

LOANS	Term in years	Last business recorded		Loan Amt.	Int %	Payable
S'hai Municipal Council	1905	6 to 20	5-4-24	T97	d 320,000	6	June-Dec.
	1907	do.	24-1-22	T94	500,000	6	do.
	1909	do.	11-3-24	T99	670,000	6	do.
	1909	do.	13-3-23	T99	300,000	6	do.
	1910	do.	11-5-23	T99	313,800	6	do.
	1911	10 to 30	3-4-24	T99	350,000	6	do.
	1912	do.	3-1-24	T99	310,000	6	do.
	1913	do.	3-5-23	T100	756,300	6	do.
		10 to 50	8-5-22	T78	500,000	5½	do.
	1914	10 to 30	11-4-24	T89	900,000	5½	do.
	1915	do.	11-3-24	T94	800,000	5½	do.
	1915	do.	11-4-24	T98	1,100,000	6	do.
	1916	do.	18-10-23	T103	507,300	7	do.
	1918	10	4-12-23	T104	1,703,300	7	do.
	1919	10	8-4-24	T103	2,240,000	7	do.
		10 to 30	29-3-24	£104	£750,000	6	do.
	1921	do.	18-2-24	$110	$1,000,000	8	do.
	1921	do.	4-1-24	T110	T5,096,400	8	do.
	1922	do.	8-4-24	T105	T8,000,000	7	do.
	1923	do.	11-4-24	T99	a T6,000,000	6	do.
French Municipal Council	1911	do.	8-10-23	T96	400,000	6	May-Nov.
	1914	do.	12-2-23	T88	500,000	5½	June-Dec.
	1915	do.	5-3-24	T90	350,000	5½	do.
	1921	do.	20-11-23	T108½	2,000,000	8	do.
	1923	do.	17-12-23	T95	a T800,000	6	May-Nov.
S'hai Waterworks Co., Ltd.	1921	10 to 30	2-10-23	T112	2,000,000	8	June-Dec.
S'hai Gas Co., Ltd.	1922	do.	6-6-22	T108	T500,000	8	do.
	1922	do.	2-10-23	T105	T1,000,000	7	do.
	1901	do.	2-4-23	T94	e 800,000	6	do.

LOANS	Term in years	Last business recorded		Loan Amt.	Int %	Payable
Shanghai Land Investment Co., Ld.	1905	5 to 20	31-8-22	T96½	T250,000	6	June-Dec.
	1909	do.	1-4-24	T98	750,000	6	do.
	1911	do.	26-9-22	T92	250,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
	,,	do.	23-3-24	T98	250,000	6	May-Nov.
	1912	do.	2-4-24	T98	250,000	6	Jan-July
	1913	do.	3-4-23	T98	250,000	6	April-Oct.
	,,	do.	11-1-24	T98	250,000	6	May-Nov.
	1914	do.	22-3-23	T98	250,000	6	April-Oct.
	1916	5 to 25	3-4-23	T98	350,000	6	June-Dec.
	1922	do.	12-2-23	T98	650,000	5½	do.
	1922	do.	10-1-24	T98	750,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
Shanghai Club	1907	20	1-2-24	T93	350,000	6	May-Nov.
Country Club	1901	Perpetual			455,000	6	do.
Lane, Crawford & Co., Ld.	1914	5 to 20			139,000	6	June-Dec.
	1915	do.			130,000	6	May-Nov.
Anglo-French Land Invest. Co., Ld.	1911	do.	7-6-23	T98	110,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
					250,000	6	June-Dec.
					300,000	6	do.
S'hai Mutual Tel. Co., Ld.	1923	10 to 20	27-2-23	T95½	h 270,000	6	do.
S'hai Race Club	1923	25	11-3-24	T100	1,200,000	6½	Mar.-Sept.
Culty Dairy Co., Ltd.	1915	10			50,000	7	Feb.-Aug.
Hall & Holtz Ld.	1914	5 to 20	14-10-22	$92	230,000	7	Jan.-July
Asia Realty Co., Inc.	1922	5 to 20	..	..	T500,000	7	Jan.-July

*Plus interest accrued since last half-yearly payment.

a—Now Issuing; Redeemed or Unissued:—b—Tls.65,100; c—Tls.51,100; d—Tls.34,100; e—Tls.68,500; f—Tls.262,400; g—Tls.189,500; h—Tls.12,300; i—$18,90

RUBBER OUTPUT STATISTICS.

Company	Authorized Capital	Financial yr. closes end of	Output last 2 fin. year: Year before	Output last 2 fin. year: Last year	Estimated output present fin. year	All in cost per lb.	Output from end last fin. year to 31-12-23	1923: Jan.	1923: Feb.	1923: Mar.	Total output this fin.yr. to date
			lb.	lb.	lb.	d.	lb.	lb.	lb.	lb.	lb.
Alma	Tls. 630,000	Sept.	292,500	259,100	246,648	8.87d	68,000	22,000	18,000	17,000	125,000
Amherst (New)	,, 250,000	Oct.	72,442	80,092	90,751	*4.83d.	19,020	8,214	8,475	14,662	50,371
Anglo-Dutch	£200,000	Dec.	650,000	510,000	600,000	8.45d.	..	61,000	50,000	65,000	176,000
Anglo-Java	£250,000	Dec.	1,524,411	183,000	1,550,000	6.95d	184,000	164,100	187,000	185,000	535,100
Ayer Tawah	Tls. 300,000	Sept.	369,447	58,042	360,000	†0.24.41	..	..	..	..	..
Batu Anam	,, 400,000	Dec.	258,510	217,322	185,793	9.01d.	..	12,500	11,500	15,000	39,000
Bukit Toh Alang	,, 500,000	Mar.	309,254	305,645	345,000	7.54d.	222,682	25,500	No.	..	248,182
Buto	,, 300,000	Dec.	230,067	174,350	159,516	10.11d.	..	17,000	16,800	13,600	47,700
Chemor United	,, 360,000	Dec.	330,794	267,627	..	*3.44d.	..	27,200	23,300	9,500	60,000
Chempedak	,, £35,000	Oct.	145,760	163,003	..	1/5.42d.	30,700	14,000	4,400	1,000	50,100
Chersonese	Tls. 675,000	June	151,923	145,338	..	11.09d.	102,014	10,500	9,700	11,800	134,014
Consolidated (1914)	,, 375,000	Dec.	669,239	648,778	761,500	7.47d.	..	53,000	56,779	44,437	149,216
Dominion	,, 350,000	Dec.	271,150	323,110	306,867	11.04d.	..	28,032	27,654	15,999	71,685
Gula-Kalumpang	£500,000	Dec.	1,113,000	933,003	1,215,000	1/0.7d.	..	85,000	78,000	66,000	232,000
Java Consolidated	£85,000	Dec.	675,500	620,500	..	7.03d.	..	68,500	60,900	72,300	201,500
Kapayang	,, 150,000	Dec.	189,239	146,710	..	†28.90	..	10,592	8,315	7,636	26,543
Koran	,, 250,000	Mar.	111,875	101,783	84,000	8½d.	60,067	8,148	6,448	4,915	79,578
Kota Bahroe (1921)	,, 300,000	June	158,330	137,070	..	..	100,918	29,136	26,949	19,180	176,103
Kroewoek	,, 450,000	Dec.	449,000	383,581	549,000	0/7.24d.	..	59,000	55,000	59,000	173,000
Langkat	Gs. 2,500,000	Oct.	842,589	943,000	975,000	Gls.0.28	179,300	82,500	71,500	70,000	413,300
Padang	Tls. 500,000	April	209,711	220,232	..	10½d.	120,600	19,700	11,100	8,600	159,900
Pengkalan (1921)	,, 150,000	Mar.	172,022	135,253	176,088	†10.19	..	..	2,780	..	2,780
Permata	,, 250,000	Oct.	..	98,503	..	0/8½d.	17,585	8,050	6,053	..	31,668
Rejah	,, 375,000	Dec.	68,584	217,087	..	..	..	17,100	8,700	15,900	42,000
Samagaga	,, 600,000	Sept.	361,819	250,814	..	..	120,509	8,500	11,000	10,500	150,509
See Kee (1918)	,, 100,000	June	179,065	142,000	115,183	11.37d.	..	13,466	13,400	7,600	34,466
Semanco	,, 300,000	Dec.	161,135	215,593	158,264	0/9.37d.	..	..	14,500	16,400	30,900
Senawan (1921)	,, 375,000	Jan.	272,500	275,100	..	*†7.35d.	..	..	8,700	8,000	16,700
Shanghai Kedah	,, 400,000	Sept.	313,444	216,542	..	8.12c.	67,625	21,196	17,259	17,021	126,194
Shai-Klebang	,, 315,000	Dec.	126,104	103,034	..	11.35d.	..	8,700	8,000	..	16,700
Shai-Malay	,, 600,000	Dec.	373,111	289,156	392,000	..	..	22,782	21,474	16,254	60,510
Shai-Pahang	,, 300,000	June	209,881	188,016	..	9½d.	100,973	16,432	14,475	14,845	146,726
Shai Serambau	,, 325,000	Dec.	171,213	147,112	..	9.82d.	..	14,400	13,300	7,100	35,100
Shai-Sumatra	,, 600,000	Oct.	661,338	673,716	650,000	Gls.0.38	111,341	61,110	51,170	43,537	267,158
Sua-Manggis	,, 300,000	Dec.	115,880	27,500	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Sungala	,, 750,000	Mar.	39,279	167,757	..	†7.20	14,010	8,892	..	..	22,902
Sungei Duri	,, £10,000	June	208,073	296,568	229,000	11.61d.	126,409	23,698	22,272	10,048	182,427
Taiping (1913)	Tls. 200,000	Dec.	107,011	102,689	99,000	*†30	..	8,184	6,572	..	14,756
Tanah Merah	,, 750,000	Mar.	415,000	389,000	..	7.52d.	234,900	21,900	22,200	24,700	303,700
Tebong	,, £150,000	Jan.	630,835	723,000	717,725	0/7.06d.	..	..	64,000	66,000	130,000
Ziangbo	,, £150,000	Dec.	514,566	523,600	600,000	7.24d.	..	67,500	58,200	58,000	183,700

*Excluding Depreciation and Shanghai Expenses. † Straits $ cents.

S'hai Pahang Rubber Estates, Ld.	T	0.75					63)	300,000		T1
S'hai Serambau Rubber Estates, Ld.	T	0.60					67)	100,000		T1
S'hai-Sumatra Tobacco Co., Ld.	T	105			110	7)	30,000			T20	a	T1,183	Sept.	T0.05, 1922
Sua Manggis Rubber Co., Ld.	T	3				30)	56,000			T5	a	T12,023	Dec.	T0.05, 1919
Sungala Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	0.30				$5)	100,000			T1	a	T19,124	Dec.	(Ord. T0.60 for 9 months ended 31/12/16
Sungei Duri Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	7½					40,000		£1 at T8.50					(Pref. T0.10, for 6 months ended 31/12/22
Taiping Rubber Estates (1913) Ld.	T	0.50					200,000			T1
Tanah Merah Estates (1916), Ld.	T	0.60				32)	750,000			T1
Tebong Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	1.05				£54)	750,000			T1
Ziangbe Rubber Co., Ld.	T	2½				32)	200,000			10s.

COTTONS, ETC.

Ewo Cotton Mills, Ld.	T	11½	11½			15)	1,000,000			T5	a	T3,257
(8% cum. pref.	T	105	106			43)	10 000			T100	b	T1,400,000
											c	T2,802,920	Dec.	Ord. T0.55, 1923			5-3-24
Laou Kung Mow C. S. & W. Co., Ld.	T	8					80,000			T10	a	(Loss)T86,057		Pref. T8, 1923			5-3-24
Oriental C. S. & W. Co., Ld. ord.	T	5				60)	500,000			T3	b	T120,000	Dec.	Final T2, (mkg. T4, 1921)			8-3-22
pref.	T					S)	5,000			T100	a	(Loss) T85,530
Shanghai Cotton Mfg. Co., Ld. (Shanghai Boshoku K.K.) ord.	T	£1 old 30new	59				80,000			T50	b	T200,000
							40,000			T50	c	T2,551,750	Dec.	Final T0.50 (mkg. T1.50, 1921)			25 3-22
											a	T50,375
											c	T1,270,000	June	T3.50 1922-23			24-8-23

INDUSTRIAL.

British-American Tobacco Co., Ld. ord.	£		£5 3/8	£5 1/16		66)	13,000,000			£1	a	£3,531,846	Sept.	Final Ord. 1922-23, 9% (mkg. 25%) free of I/T
5% cum. pref.							4,500,000			£1	c	£2,251,649
China Im. & Ex. Lumber Co., Ld.	T	350					5,000			T100	a	T161,833					11-1-24
											b	T300,000	Feb.	T8, 1922-23
China Sugar Refining Co., Ld.	H $	243					20,000			H$100	c	T2,100,000					31-5-23
Gordon & Co., Ltd.	T	25				37)	3,000			T25	a	H $40,763
Green Island Cement Co., Ld.	H $	34			27 old $10 new		400,000			H$7.50	b	H $600,000	Dec.	H$10, 1923			1-4-24
Maatschappij, &c., In Langkat	T	10					200,000			Gs.10	c	H1,200,000
											a	T19,695		Div. T2.50 & Bonus T0.62½
											c	T130,015		1922-23			5-7-23
											a	H $93,634		(Final H $1.50 (mkg. H $2, 1922)
											c	H $1,000,000	Dec.	(Interim H $0.50 a/c, 1923			24-2-23
											a(Loss)T158,133		Oct.	T0.50, 1918-19			18-9-23
											c	T190,164					30-3-20
Shanghai Loan & Investment Co., Ld.	T	6½	(comb. T26)	(comb T26)	(comb. T)		250,000			T5	a	T35,698
											c	T300,000	Dec.	T0.50, 1923			5-2-24
S'hai Exploration & Development Co., Ld.	T	11		10½			250,000			T5
Major Brothers, Ld.	T	5				10)	6,000			T20	a (Loss) T13,341		Dec.
John Richards & Co., Ld.	T	10				11)	25,000			T10	a	T6,941	Dec.
											c	T70,000
Shanghai Gas Co., Ld.	T	41	41			:)	24,000			T50	a	T3,130	Dec.	10% 1921			24-6-22
											c	T30,000
Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld.	T	136				49)	50,000			£20	a	T21,325	Dec.	T4.00, 1923
											b	T50,000					11-4-24
											c	T65,231

STORES.

Hall & Holtz, Ld.	$	7	7			$16)	28,000			$20	a	$116,937	Feb.	$2, 1917-18
											b						1-5-18
S. Llewellyn & Co., Ld.	$	30					1,200			$60	a	$10,697	Dec.	$6, 1922
S. Moutrie & Co., Ld.	$	50				17)	10,000			$30	c	$26,000					12-5-23
Weeks & Co., Ld.	$	11				$50)	30,000			$20	a	$323,105	Mar.	(Final $2 & Bonus $4 (mkg. $9, 1922-23)
											c	$37,633	Feb.	(Int. 6%, 1923-24			2-6-23
											a	$210,000		$1.60, 1922-23			30 11-23
Lane, Crawford & Co., Ld.	$	102	106			$)	2,500			$100	a	85,539					3 -5-22
											b	$20,000		$8, 1922-23
											c	$250 000					24-5-23

MISCELLANEOUS.

Culty Dairy Co., Ld.	T	13		12			10,000			T10	a	Loss)T26,956	Oct.	T0.60, 1921-22
											c	T119,293					30-12-22
S'hai Electric Construction Co., Ld., "B"	T	16½	16¾								a	£17,022
London	£1		£2:12:0	£2:15:0			40,000			£1	b		Dec.	1st Int. 1923, 12s.-(Coupon 23)
											c	£114,315		2nd Int. 1923, 12s.-(Coupon 24) both less I/T at 4/7½ to £			1-10-23
S'hai Horse Bazaar & Motor Co., Ld.	T	50					6,400			T50	a	T14,548	Dec.	T5, 1922			1-2-24
											a	T216,257					20-1-23
Shanghai Mercury, Ld.	T	25					3 000			T50			Apr.	T1 50 1913-14			31-3-15
Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co. Ld.	T	76½	76			£49	40,000			T50	a	T10,285	Mar.	T4.50, 1922-23			31-5-23
											b	T70,000
											c	T920,016
Oriental Press (L'Imprimerie Francaise)	$	100					910			$100	a	$109,513	Mar.	$10, 1922-23
											b	$3,000					5-7-23
											c	$21,101

For all Dollar shares quoted on the Shanghai Stock Exchange the Exchange rate is fixed at 73.

REFERENCES.

a Carried forward at last Ann. Genl. Meeting.
b Dividend Equalization Reserve.
c General and Other Reserves.
d Uncalled liability £5 per sh.
e ,, ,, £10 ,,
f ,, ,, Tls.50 ,, g ,, ,, H $100 ,,
h ,, ,, £12 10 ,,
i ,, ,, Tls. 25 ,,
w Working Account 1923
x Working Account 1922
y Working Account 1921
† Registered: or Bearer (idem. "B").
†† Issued Capital: 7% Cum. Pref. 24,461 shares; Ordinary, 10,270 shares.
‡ Debentures Issues also.
‡‡ Subject to Estate Managers' Commissions
* Subject to E. P. D. and Corpn. Tax.
• Continental liability for Interest on 12% Cum. Pref. Shares of Tls. 5,989
1—14,000 sh. unis'd.
2—70,411 ,,
3—5,000 ,,
4—4,000 ,,
5—19,182 ,,
6—50,000 ,,
7—10,761 ,,
8—10,000 ,,
9—10,470 sh. unis'd.
10—500 ,,
11—15,200 ,,
12—50,000 ,,
13—1,357 ,,
14—3,063 ,,
15—100,000 ,,
16—1,662 ,,
17—3,822 ,,
18—5,580 ,,
19—184,668 ,,
20—15,000 ,,
21—100,000 ,,
22—10,000 ,,
23—5,000 ,,
24—70,410 ,,
25—125,000 ,,
26—60,000 sh. unis'd
27—8,721 ,,
28—10,000 ,,
29—4,683 ,,
30—2,000 ,,
31—4,000 ,,
32—50,000 ,,
33—125,000 ,,
34—102,370 ,,
35—200 ,,
36—180,000 ,,
37—1,443 ,,
38—7,695 ,,
42—200,000 ,, 43—1,360 ,,
47—500 sh. unis'd.
(Note.—Issued or less than 50 ea 67—66,057 ,,

In order to ensure accuracy of the above details, Agents and Secretaries of Companies are requested to notify Messrs. J. P. Bisset & Co. of any alterations, errors or omissions.

COMPANY MEETINGS

SHANGHAI KLEBANG RUBBER ESTATE

The Annual Meeting

Mr. C. J. L. Stewart presided at the annual meeting of the Shanghai Klebang Rubber Estate, Ld., held at the offices of Messrs. J. A. Wattie & Co., Ld., last Friday, supported by Messrs. A. K. Craddock, H. E. Rigge (directors), W. S. Royston (representing Messrs. Wattie & Co., the secretaries and general managers) and other shareholders.

The Chairman—The report and accounts have been in your hands for some time and with your permission I will take them as read.

Since I last had the privilege of addressing you, we have had an opportunity of weighing the pros and cons of enforced restriction. Whilst the scheme as originally drafted had its faults, these are being gradually remedied and loopholes for leakage stopped. Undoubtedly restriction in British areas is solely the reason of the enhanced prices the industry enjoyed last year and if the Dutch Indies had only seconded British efforts to save the rubber-growing industry from the ruination which threatened it, we should to-day have been seeing our product fetching a much higher scale of prices. As it is, the Dutch Indies have produced almost pound for pound what the British have restricted.

The report and accounts are clear and fully detailed. The estate very easily produced its restricted allowance and could easily have produced far more, for the trees are in good condition and are with a few exceptions good yielders. Restriction bears heavily on this small company with all its separate overhead charges to meet, still the point is that it is better to sell 95,000 lb. at almost 15d. per lb. than 140,000 lb. at 7d. which would surely have been the case without restriction. Meantime, our trees are getting the advantage of light tapping, whereas to get their big production, I believe most of the native estates in the Dutch Indies are intensively tapping. Intensive tapping means disease and cannot be kept up for very long. Our cost of production is naturally dearer than last year, being divided over a smaller crop and enhanced also by a duty of 2 cents per lb. The estate is in first class condition and nothing more need be said on that point, except that, during the year, 40 acres of our line young trees were brought into tapping for the first time.

I am sorry the accounts do not show better results. The year yielded only a small profit of Tls. 4,920.62 which makes the balance at credit of profit and loss account Tls. 12,032.53. Of this, the directors recommend that Tls. 490.84 be written off development account and the balance of Tls. 11,541.69, all of which is represented by cash or stocks, be carried forward to next year's account. Since the closing of the books, the rubber stock has all been sold and has realized over $4,400 more than the amount at which it is valued in the balance sheet. The average rate of exchange for the year, at which the conversion of Straits currency into taels was made, was 74, whilst the closing rate for rubber in stock was 69, against 69 and 76¼ for 1922.

This is all I have to say, gentlemen. Before putting the resolutions to the meeting, should you wish to ask any questions, I shall endeavour to answer them to the best of my ability.

No questions were asked and the following resolutions were agreed to:—"That the directors' report and statement of accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923, as presented, and the disposal of the balance at credit of profit and loss account, as recommended, be received and passed."—Proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. H. E. Rigge.

"That Mr. H. E. Rigge be re-elected a director of the company."—Proposed by Mr. A. K. Craddock and seconded by Mr. C. G. Copley.

"That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-elected auditors to the company for the ensuing year."—Proposed by Mr. W. G. Royston and seconded by Mr. A. J. Welch.

KAPAYANG RUBBER ESTATES

Annual General Meeting

The annual general meeting of the Kapayang Rubber Estates Company, Ld., was held at the Company's offices, 23 Teking Road, on Monday at noon.

Mr. E. T. Byrne took the chair, supported by Messrs. G. D. Coutts and R. J. Marshall (Directors) and Mr. R. N. Swann (of Beck & Swann, Secretaries to the Company). There were 5,625 shares represented.

The Chairman presenting the annual report and accounts, said:

Gentlemen,—With your permission I will take the report and accounts as read. The accounts require very little comment on my part: you will note we now have a reserve account of Tls. 2,500 which is represented by Municipal debentures and your directors propose to invest a similar amount again this year. Our cost of production has naturally gone up with the lower output under the restriction act and I fear will be still higher this year as the new scheme hits us somewhat heavily, and as far as Kapayang is concerned restriction is by no means an unmixed benefit, as we have no way of reducing our overhead expenses. As I have said before, restriction is fostering the production of rubber in Java, Sumatra and elsewhere at the expense of Malaya, and I believe the small native estates or holdings in the Dutch Indies are now producing on a very large scale, a factor that has had a considerable effect in reducing prices. Our manager Mr. Knott, who has done extremely well, goes home on leave shortly and it is possible we may get the temporary services of Mr. Wise, who is a very experienced planter and one of the promoters of this company. Our estate is in first class condition and I am sure everything possible will be done to bring the cost of production down, but it is rather disheartening to think we are producing less than half of what we are capable of doing. The price of rubber as you all know has not been maintained at anything like the figure that was expected i.e., 1s. 6d. at which we started off last year with hopes of even higher. Stocks, too, in London have not evaporated to the extent we hoped—although a decline of 16,000 tons is something to be thankful for, leaving 56,138 tons on hand, which is too much. However 4,009,323 cars were produced in America in 1923 against 2,560,613 in 1922 whilst the stock of tyres declined from 4,876,352 at the end of October, 1923 to 4,659,329 at the close of the following month and as stocks of crude rubber there are light we may find that 1924 has a better future than 1923. Before proposing the adoption of the report and accounts I shall be glad to answer any questions to the best of my ability.

There were no questions.

The Chairman proposed, and Mr. G. D. Coutts seconded the adoption of the annual report and accounts. The motion was carried unanimously.

On the proposition of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Coutts, the following resolution was carried:—

That a final dividend of six per cent. (6%) for the year ended December 31, 1924, be and is hereby declared, payable to shareholders on the books of the company on March 31, 1924.

On the proposition of Mr. Marshall, seconded by Mr. Byrne, Mr. G. D. Coutts was re-elected a director of the company.

On the proposition of Mr. Coutts, seconded by Mr. Marshall, Messrs. Mortimer, Reid and Shewere re-elected auditors of the company.

This concluded the business of the meeting.

ZIANGBE RUBBER CO.

Declaration of a Dividend

The annual meeting of the Ziangbe Rubber Co., Ld., was held on Monday in the offices of Messrs. J. A. Wattie & Co., Ld., secretaries and general managers. Mr. A. J. Welch presided, supported by Messrs. E. S. Kadoorie, G. Grayrigge and C. J. L. Stewart and the attendance represented 42,800 shares. After Mr. Stewart had read the notice convening the meeting, and the auditors' report, the Chairman said:—

Gentlemen, The report and accounts have been in your hands for the prescribed period and, with your permission, I propose to follow the usual course and take them as read.

The accounts before you demonstrate most clearly the benefit that the rubber industry as a whole has derived from the enforcement of restriction of output in British Colonies, the profit earned being larger than in any year since 1919. The severe slump that preceded restriction was also not without its useful lessons, since it has enabled the cost of production, on many estates, to be reduced to a figure that would have been considered impossible of accomplishment a few years ago. As an illustration of my meaning, I may say that the 1923 harvest of this company was 335,485 lb. or 40 per cent. less than the 1919 output, but in spite of the much smaller quantity over which the overhead expenses could be divided, the average cost of production was only 6.84d. as compared with 8d. per pound four years ago. The unsold stock of rubber at the end of the year has again been valued at the cost of production and on realization should produce a surplus of approximately Gldrs. 40,000. Last year the stock when sold realized Gldrs. 49,217, more than the value placed upon it in the 1922 accounts. Capital expenditure during the year was negligible, and I can see no other items in the accounts that call for special comment.

If you pass the appropriations recommended by your directors, the company will start the year with a surplus of liquid assets over liabilities of approximately Tls. 38,250, plus a potential further asset of Tls. 20,000, in the probable surplus on realization of the stocks of rubber. This is not too strong a position for a company of this size, but, I think, is adequate to see us through any financial stringency that is likely to arise in the near future. The policy of your directors is to gradually strengthen the company's reserves without unduly penalizing the distribution of dividends.

It is not possible to tell you at this juncture what the output of rubber for 1924 is likely to be, since the basis of assessing standard production is in process of revision in the Straits Settlements and we do not yet know whether our present allowance will be affected or not, but I think, if anything, we shall be better off under the new scale than in 1923. In connexion with this subject, you are doubtless aware that for some months past there has been a lot of agitation and correspondence in the Straits papers with the idea of inducing the Dutch Colonies to join with the British in compulsory restriction of output and a very representative meeting of those interested in the rubber industry in Java was held at Djocdja on February 20 at which this question was thoroughly discussed. The meeting was not an official one, but certain resolutions were passed at it, the gist of which was:—

Firstly, that the owners of rubber estates in the two countries should strive for the most efficient cooperation with a view to preventing the price of rubber falling below the average cost price.

Secondly, that the respective Governments should lend their assistance to this cooperation both in fostering and strengthening its object and [illegible] the sphere of cooperation the owners of native [illegible]

[illegible], that with the utmost promptitude an inquiry should be carried out with a view to obtaining a close insight into the position [illegible] of native grown rubber in the Dutch Indies.

The meeting, on the whole, may be said to have received sympathetically the idea that something should be done in the Dutch Indies, as a necessary preliminary to which, however, it was essential to ascertain approximately what the area of native rubber in the Dutch Indies was. It may interest you to know that the output of rubber from the Dutch Indies during 1923 was approximately 36,000 tons greater than in 1922 and of this increase tons.

Java was responsible for only	2,400
Sumatra responsible for	23,200
Borneo and outer possessions responsible for	10,400

The above figures include native grown rubber which amounted to 53,000 tons as compared with 25,000 tons in 1922, or in other words 28,000 tons of the increase was due to native rubber. From these figures it is obvious that the Dutch planter is not the chief sinner and that very little can be hoped for unless the Dutch Government will take steps to control the output from Native holdings and from the very large American plantations in Sumatra. The final decision on restriction must therefore be with the Government in Holland and it behoves all those interested to use their utmost endeavours to induce it to cooperate with the Governments of Malaya and Ceylon.

As regards the condition of your properties, Bando Ardjo Estate was again a very cheap producer and the condition of its trees leaves nothing to be desired. The standard of tapping was first class, bark consumption kept well within the prescribed limit and bark renewal is reported to be fast and even. 210 acres of the 1915 planting were brought into the tapping rounds during the year. On this estate Mimosa, as a soil enricher and lallang exterminator, has proved an unqualified success, and there are now 1,534 acres under this cover plant. Manufacture gave a little trouble at one period during the year, but the fault has been discovered and preparation is now in order. Kali Minggir Estate, which has suffered considerably at various periods in the past from neglect by its managers, is gradually being nursed back to proper condition and with the exception of certain scattered patches estimated to aggregate 350 acres, is responding well to treatment. These 350 acres were also showing a steady improvement in growth, bark renewal and crown development until the drought came, but thereafter they ceased to improve and "die back" has become fairly prevalent. This has been a great disappointment as the trees would undoubtedly have come right if the drought had not intervened. Efforts are still being made to save these trees, but it may be found necessary eventually to gradually replant the worst areas. If replanting does become necessary the loss of crop will not be noticeable as the work can be carried out gradually and any condemned areas can be tapped intensively prior to elimination.

There are certain areas of native land on the borders of the estate, the total being somewhere between 300—350 acres, which can now be purchased for from Gldrs. 15 to 17 per acre, and your directors have sanctioned the purchase of any of this land that is available with the double purpose of preventing the encroachment of lallang into our gardens and of substituting an area of good rubber for any acreage that it may possibly be found necessary to replant in the future. Mimosa on this estate has unfortunately not been the success that it has proved elsewhere. This is probably due to the heavy clay soil which makes it very difficult for the seeds to germinate. Tapping under the present management is good and bark consumption kept within the required limit. Manufacture is satisfactory and pests or diseases gave very little trouble during the year.

In conclusion, gentlemen, I would like to say a few words of praise and thanks to the two managers and their staffs as well as to the visiting agent and the agents in Java to whose efforts the satisfactory result of the year's working is entirely due. That is all I have to say, gentlemen, but if any one has any questions to ask, I shall be pleased to answer to the best of my ability before formally proposing the adoption of the report and accounts.

The following resolutions were unanimously passed:—

"That the directors' report and statement of accounts as presented be adopted and passed."—Proposed by Mr. A. J. Welch and seconded by Mr. E. S. Kadoorie.

"That a dividend of 25 candareens per share be paid."—Proposed by Mr. A. J. Welch and seconded by Mr. E. S. Kadoorie.

"That the appointment of Mr. E. S. Kadoorie as a director of the company be confirmed"—Proposed by Mr. A. K. Craddock and seconded by Mr. C. J. L. Stewart.

"That Mr. G. Grayrigge be re-elected a director of the company"—Proposed by Mr. C. J. L. Stewart and seconded by Mr. A. K. Craddock.

"That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-elected auditors to the company"—Proposed by Mr. G. Grayrigge and seconded by Mr. A. K. Craddock.

THE CONSOLIDATED RUBBER ESTATES

The Results of Restriction: An Increase in Profits of over Tls. 55,000

The annual general meeting of the Consolidated Rubber Estates (1914) Ld., was held in the offices of Messrs. A. R. Burkill & Sons on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. E. T. Byrne (Chairman) presided and was supported by Messrs. A. W. Burkill, J. R. Moodie, and G. M. W. Hummel (Directors).

There were 61,150 shares represented.

The Chairman, proposing the adoption of the report and accounts, said:

Gentlemen, the report and accounts having been in your hands for some time I will, with your permission, follow the usual course and take them as read.

The result of the year's working shows an increase of over Tls. 55,000 over the profit for the previous year which I think you will agree is very satisfactory indeed. This gratifying result is principally due to the improved sale price—the effect of restriction—also to the satisfactory forward sale made last year for the delivery of four tons monthly, July-December, 1923 at 66⅔ cts. per lb.

Our output for the year exceeded the estimate by some 71,178 lb. but I might say that the crop figures include two quarters' allowance which were taken over from a neighbouring estate. With regard to the current year's crop, the estimated amount of 761,500 lb. as shown in the report is subject to revision under the re-assessment of Standard production. The exact details of the scheme as affecting our estates are not yet to hand but it is quite likely that our allowance will be less than the amount stated.

BRITISH AND DUTCH POLICY.

While on the subject of restriction, the directors of this company would like to associate themselves with the remarks made by the chairman of the Anglo-Dutch (Java) Plantations at the recent annual meeting of that company regarding the attitude of the Dutch East Indies vis-à-vis restriction. It is well known that while British producing countries reduced their 1923 outputs by some 40,000 tons, the Dutch East Indies increased theirs by an almost equivalent amount, thus greatly nullifying the benefits which we all hoped to derive as the result of restriction. After nearly 18 months' working, I think it can be safely said that the scheme has been found to be practicable and it is to be hoped that our Dutch friends will see their way to fall in line rather than benefit themselves at the expense of the British producers. The rubber market at the present time is none too bright and I consider the future largely depends on the outcome of the efforts to secure co-operation of the Dutch producers.

The estates have made good progress during the year and the visiting agent's reports indicate a highly satisfactory state of affairs. Health conditions have been uniformly satisfactory and diseases and pests gave no cause for anxiety. Thinning out was proceeded with throughout the year on all the company's properties, 7,400 trees being removed. The stand per acre is still very much above the average and further and further thinning out will take place during the current year.

THE ACCOUNTS.

The accounts call for no special comment. The profit for the year amounted to Tls. 108,170.01 which, added to the amount of Tls. 23,192.35 brought forward from last year, makes a total of Tls. 131,362.36. After deducting the amount of Tls. 22,500 Interim dividend paid on October 15 last, there remains a balance of Tls. 108,862.36 to be dealt with and I hope you will approve of the Directors' recommendation for the appropriation of this amount as shown in the report.

Before concluding, the directors wish to express their appreciation of the good work done by the managers and their staffs and they feel sure that the proposed bonus will be readily agreed to by the shareholders.

If any shareholder has any questions to ask, I shall be pleased to answer to the best of my ability.

Mr. A. W. Burkill seconded the motion and it was carried unanimously.

On the proposition of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. J. R. Moodie, the following resolution was carried unanimously:

"That the following recommendation as to appropriation of balance at credit of profit and loss account be accepted:—

	Tls.
Pay final dividend of Tls. 0.15 per share (making 28 per cent. for the year)	56,250.00
Place to general reserve	30,000.00
Pay Bonus to estate staffs	3,000.00
Write off buildings	92.88
.. ,, machinery	79.82
.. ,, telephone	646.58
.. ,, motor vehicles	1,564.42
.. ,, Live stock	240.45
Carry forward to next year's accounts	16,988.21
Tls.	108,862.36

On the proposal of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. G. M. W. Hummel, Mr. E. T. Byrne was re-elected a director of the company.

Messrs. Lowe Bingham and Matthews were, on the motion of Mr. Moodie seconded by Mr. Hummel, re-elected auditors of the Company.

This concluded the business of the meeting.

TAIPING RUBBER ESTATES LD.

Annual General Meeting

The annual meeting of the Taiping Rubbers Estates, Ld., was held on Wednesday at the offices of secretaries, Messrs. Hopkins, Dunn & Co., Ld., Kiangse Road. Mr. Brodie A. Clark presided, supported by Messrs. E. S. Kadoorie, G. Grayrigge, P. C. Inglis and J. Frost. There were 87,603 shares represented.

The chairman said:—

Gentlemen, The report and accounts were posted to you on the 27th ultimo, and I will, with your permission, take them as read.

Our visiting agent, Mr. MacDermot, in his last report remarks as follows:—"The property is greatly improved by the removal of useless trees. It is in a better position as regards bark than it was some years ago, and if the manager expedites his thinning out further improvement can be expected." He expressed his satisfaction with the appearance of the property on the whole. The crop allowance under restriction is the same as last year, viz: 99,900 lb.

My anticipations of an average selling price for the past year of 50 cts. per pound were not realized, solely on account of the Dutch companies increasing their output by practically the same quantity as the British companies reduced theirs. I believe, however, that they are beginning to realize the benefits of restriction, and it is possible that before very much longer it may be adopted by them, in which event we may anticipate a stabilized price for our product that will ensure dividends to investors.

There is, I think, nothing in the accounts that calls for special remark, our estate is a small one, and naturally with a restricted output of one-third of our capacity, all-in costs rise proportionately, hence the increase in all-in cost over 1922 from 20 cts. to 42 cts. Straits currency per lb. Under these conditions I think you will agree that a profit of Tls. 4,944.71 for the year may be considered fairly satisfactory.

There were no questions.

The following resolutions were formally adopted:—

That the report and statement of the company's accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923, as presented to the meeting be approved and passed—proposed by Mr. Brodie A. Clark, seconded by Mr. J. Frost.

That Messrs. Thomson & Co., a director and Mr. E. S. Kadoorie's appointment by the board as a director of the company be confirmed—proposed by Mr. Brodie A. Clark, seconded by Mr. P. C. Inglis.

That Messrs. Thomson & Co., successors to Messrs. G. H. and N. Thomson, be elected auditors of the company for the ensuing year at a fee of Tls. 250 per annum—proposed by Mr. J. F. Messer, seconded by Mr. Han Yung-keng.

That in accordance with paragraph 55 of the company's articles of association the next annual general meeting shall be held in the month of April or May, 1925—proposed by Mr. Brodie A. Clark, seconded by Mr. J. Frost.

SHANGHAI GAS CO.

Annual Meeting: 60th Report Since Company's Formation: A Satisactory Review

The annual meeting of shareholders in the Shanghai Gas Co., Ld., was held on Thursday at the offices of Messrs. Scott, Harding & Co. Mr. L. E. Canning (the Chairman) presided, supported by Messrs. P. Peebles, A. D. Bell (directors), F. W. Potter (engineer-in-Chief), W. Gater (secretary) and the following shareholders:—Messrs. J. Ambrose, B. Anderton, L. J. Cubitt, E. H. Dunning, W. J. N. Dyer, H. Martin Little, J. W. Mackay, G. H. Potts, R. E. Sedgwick, A. B. Trodd, S. M. Joseph, H. D. Bondfield and J. Mason, there being represented altogether 10,071 shares and 1,846 votes.

The secretary read the notice convening the meeting and the auditors' report, and the Chairman said:—

The report and accounts have been in your hands for some days now and I will with your permission, take them as read. It is interesting to record that this is the sixtieth report since the formation of the Company, and, as we are presenting you with what I consider a satisfactory one, I feel that I must transgress a little and give you some facts concerning your undertaking.

It was on February 26, 1862, that a prospectus was issued calling for a subscription of Tls. 100,000 wherewith to purchase a gas plant capable of supplying 500 street lamps, 100 foreign houses with 20 lights each and 1500 miscellaneous lights. The sale price of the gas was specified at 20s. per 1000 cubic feet or 1s. 1d. per hour for an illumination equal to 200 wax candles, whereas, the advancement in gas lighting now provides for 200-candle power at a cost of less than one half-penny per hour under the high pressure system.

The first shipment of the Plant arrived in Shanghai on Christmas Day, 1863, but it was not until November 1, 1865, that gas was first supplied to private consumers and has continued uninterrupted. By December 31, 1865 the Company had 58 meters in use, the total length of mains being 4.887 miles, whereas at the end of the year 1923 we had 8,636 meters in use and our mains cover a distance of 141.18 miles, while in addition 1671 lamps are supplied direct from the mains. Throughout the period the price of gas has fluctuated in comparison with the cost of coal, commencing at $4.50 per 1000 cubic feet in 1865 and declining to $1.50 in 1912 and, subsequently, gradually advancing again until it now stands at $2.25 per 1000 cubic feet, a reduction on the 1922 rate of 25 cents. To provide for additional plant to meet the growing business of the Company the capital has naturally been increased until it stands to-day at Tls. 1,200,000 augmented by a share premium of Tls. 483,724.57 and a debenture issue of Tls. 731,500 making a total of Tls. 2,415,224.57.

CHEAPER RATES FOR GAS.

With regard to the working of the Company for last year, you will have noticed that it was not so profitable as compared with 1922, due in the main to a reduction in gas rates, which occasioned a sacrifice by the Company, in favour of the consumers, of approximately Tls. 43,767, the increase in wages and salaries and the Company's contribution to the Staff Provident Fund. In spite of severe competition I am glad to state that there is a small but satisfactory increase in the amount of gas sold of 3½ per cent. accounted for by the larger output of gas for cooking and heating, which has more than compensated for the loss in lighting and power. The manufacture of water gas has now been definitely stopped, only 14 million feet were made last year, and unless it becomes necessary to relieve the coke market, water gas will no longer be manufactured, the cost being higher than that of coal gas at the present prices of raw materials. The quantity of coal carbonized exceeded the previous year by 4,679 tons and shows an increased cost of Tls. 28,614.37. Manufacture, distribution, management and general charges all show an increase over the previous years expenditure due to wages and salaries, repairs to mains, the Company's contribution to the Staff Provident Fund and the cost of holding a series of cooking lectures, a combined increase of Tls. 52,684.03 as compared with 1922.

Turning to the credit side of the account, gas sales show a decline of Tls. 39,559.19 due entirely to the 10 per cent. reduction in the gas rate, to which reference has already been made. The sale of residual products exhibits a gain of Tls. 64,477.50, more coke being sold than during the preceding year and the price of Tar and Pitch having advanced. Working Account shows a decrease on that of the previous year of Tls. 34,077.46 while our Profit & Loss Account reveals a net profit of Tls. 220,205.41, a decline of Tls. 45,743.63.

INCREASED DIVIDEND.

In dealing with the amount at credit of Profit & Loss Account your directors are not called upon to provide so liberally for contingencies as was the case last year and therefore are able to recommend the payment of an increased dividend.

Concerning the assets of the Company, a strip of land measuring Mow 0.3.2.6 fronting Seward Road was sold to the Municipal Council for road widening, which reduces the area of land owned by the Company to Mow 54.0.2.3.5 with an assessed value for taxation of Tls. 781,684.50 whereas the cost as shown in the books is only Tls. 168,248.25. In part payment of the Company's contribution to the Staff Provident Fund, a transfer was effected, from our investments to the Fund, of Tls. 40,000. Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld. 7 per cent. Debentures. An additional Tls. 25,000 of our own Debentures were purchased bringing the total of our investments to Tls. 170,155 as appears in the balance sheet. The manufacturing plant has served us well throughout the year but your Board, upon the advice of the Engineer, is considering the desirability of purchasing new charging and discharging machinery for the retort houses as the present machines are somewhat overtaxed in winter, and, furthermore, efficient machinery is to be obtained which would result in further economical working. The Council's new sewerage scheme, entailing as it does the cutting of deep trenches on all the main roads, has been the cause of many fractures in mains and services resulting in considerable losses of gas, but with the amicable working arrangements with the staff of the Public Works Department many of these mains have been relaid.

CHINESE WAGES INCREASED.

An increase of wages has been granted to all Chinese workmen, in view of the increased cost of living, and this appears to have been much appreciated. I am pleased to be able to report that the work of the whole staff has been most satisfactory and with the Staff Provident Fund now fully secured we have attained that mutual co-operation between employee and employer that is the backbone of any industrial undertaking. I will be pleased to answer any question, with regard to the report and accounts, to the best of my ability before proposing the formal resolution that they be accepted and passed.

No questions were asked and the following resolutions were carried unanimously:—

"That the report and accounts as presented be accepted and passed."—Proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. A. D. Bell.

"That a dividend for the year ending December 31, 1923, be paid to the shareholders at the rate of Tls. 4 per share."—Proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. Peebles.

"That the balance at credit of profit and loss account after payment of the dividend as passed at this meeting be appropriated as recommended by the directors in their report for the year 1923."—Proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. A. D. Bell.

"That Mr. L. E. Canning be re-elected a director of this company."—Proposed by Mr. H. Martin Little and seconded by Mr. A. B. Trodd.

"That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-elected auditors of the company."—Proposed by Mr. L. J. Cubitt and seconded by Mr. W. J. N. Dyer.

The Chairman—That is all the business before the meeting and I thank you very much for your attendance. Dividend warrants will be posted this evening.

Mr. W. J. N. Dyer—I should like to propose a vote of thanks to the Chairman for his interesting history of the company.

The Chairman—Thank you.

CLUB AND SOCIETIES

SHANGHAI BASEBALL CLUB

A Good Season in View but Expenses Heavy: More Members and Money Imperative

The annual meeting of the Shanghai Amateur Baseball Club was held last Friday in the American Club, Mr. F. McIntyre (president), presided, supported by Messrs. H. B. Gallop, Walter Holliday and W. Wilson (secretary). There was a good attendance and hopes of a successful season were expressed.

In giving his report for the year, the President commented on the depleted condition of the treasury, there being but $73 with which to begin the new year, which, if it be in accordance with last year, would require an expenditure of $15,000. Twelve months ago more than $1,200 was in hand for initial outlay, and while at that time there were 595 members on the books, there were now 613. The series with the visiting teams had cost the Club approximately $8,000 to finance, which sum was just about taken at the gate in the form of paid admissions, though the attendance at the games when the Fort Mills and Marines teams played, was none too good.

Two big items of expense last year were the erection of a new stand, costing $1,500, and the purchase of new players' suits, but the latter costs would not have to be repeated this year, though it would be necessary to raise Tls. 1,150 for additional new stands again, the old one having worn out entirely and not being worth repair—the new one to be 128 ft. long and six tiers high.

It was to be hoped that the annual drive for members would result in the approximation of their goal of last season, namely, 1,000—to have the most successful season, they must have this number on the rolls.

PROSPECTIVE MATCHES.

The prospects for the success of the team were good, four Japanese teams desiring to come to Shanghai, including the Dai Mai, Keio, Waseda and the South Manchurian Railway team from Dairen, as well as the Peking Marines and the Championship Army team from the Philippines. Then the Navy could be counted for a number of games during the four months. There was a wealth of new material among aspirants and as good a team as 1923 could be had.

Mr. H. B. Gallop's (manager) report dealt in detail with the problems connected with the erection of the stands and funds. It was imperative that additions be made and funds must come by means of a drive among the Americans, results not to be placed in the general treasury, but should be earmarked for that purpose alone.

The anomaly of having 98 suits for players, but being unable to equip nine men alike faced the Club in 1923, but happily the purchase of new uniforms, made locally at half the cost of imported suits, had met the problem satisfactorily. Many of the old uniforms, as well as 134 old balls and a number of mitts and other equipment had been given to the Y.M.C.A., thus furnishing them for charitable purposes sundry worn-out stuff, no longer usable by the Club.

Mr. Gallop laid stress on the team's need of new pitchers and several competent catchers, but was of the opinion that the remainder of the team would be no less powerful than a year ago. The candidates now on hand were men of experience, who could be counted to give Shanghai fans a good run for their annual payment of $10.

On the proposal of Mr. C. Wentworth, the same committee as served last season, with Mr. C. J. Smith taking the place of Mr. F. Bills, on Home leave, was elected, and now consists in addition to this new member of, Mr. F. W. McIntyre, Mr. W. Holliday, Mr. H. B. Gallop and Mr. C. S. Franklin.

It was further resolved to appoint a committee for the "New Stands Drive" and that the annual contribution of $200 to the Recreation Trust Funds Committee be made. Mr. A. West was requested by the Chairman to approach Admiral Washington on the part of the Association to station a vessel in port throughout the summer with a good baseball team on board and the secretary was instructed to draw up a letter expressing the sympathy of the Club to Mr. "Obie" O'Brien (umpire) who is seriously ill in the Victoria Nursing Home.

THE NAVY LEAGUE

Commander-in-Chief to Open the Union Jack Club: The Singapore Base

The annual general meeting of the Navy League (Shanghai branch) was held at the Shanghai Club on Thursday. Mr. S. Barton, C.M.G. (H. M. Consul-General) presided and amongst others present were Sir Edward Pearce, Dean C. J. F. Symons, Messrs. W. H. Trenchard Davis, E. F. Mackay, J. Prentice, N. Lees Smith, A. Brooke Smith, A. J. Welch, G. L. Campbell, A. C. Clear, H. J. Brett, and many others.

The President said that unfortunately there had been a slight falling off in revenue, but their expenses also had decreased. They hoped to see an increased revenue arising from an increased membership and one item in the report he thought furnished good cause for the hope that they would get an increased membership. He referred to the Union Jack Club, which now was nearly completed and it was hoped to open at any rate the first three floors early next month. The Commander-in-Chief had been asked to fix a date on which he would be in Shanghai and do them the honour of opening the club. It had been built out of the fund arising from the sale of the old recreation ground, together with generous assistance received from the Race Club. The Stewards of the Race Club had appointed a sub-committee which was acting with members of the League's committee in making arrangements for the completion of the club, its furnishing, the opening, and the method of running it. When it was opened it would be a very tangible proof of the existence of the Navy League in Shanghai. No one in Shanghai—a place which owed so much to the Navy—would be in any doubt as to the need for such accommodation for the men of the Navy, and he hoped the sight of the club would be an inducement to more people to join up and take an interest both in the club and the branch of the Navy League which was responsible for it.

The report and accounts were adopted and the following were elected:

President: Mr. Sidney Barton, C.M.G. Vice Presidents: The Presidents of St. Andrew's, St. George's, St. David's and St. Patrick's Societies. Committee: Dean Symons, Sir E. C. Pearce, Messrs. A. Brooke Smith, E. F. Mossop, P. L. Knight, John Pearce, P. A. Cox, F. F. Peirman and E. S. Wilkinson. Hon. Secretary and Treasurer:

SINGAPORE FETE.

Mr. E. F. Mossop [illegible] a telegram [illegible] by the Singapore people to the citizens of the Shanghai business [illegible] of the Navy [illegible] of the week on the Singapore [illegible] a present [illegible] and it is a [illegible] to get an [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] school, I am glad to think, and consequently never imbued the theory that manual work is degrading. The least of them earn $25 a month, the best $200. They have been recruited from a class of Chinese who rarely get the opportunity of going to school, but are ready and willing to be educated in a trade much as seven-eighths of the population of America and Britain are being educated to-day.

I have tried to get some of these school-educated Chinese to apprentice or article themselves, for but a year or two, to a trade that is quite highly esteemed in Anglo-Saxon countries—not a laborious or exacting one by any means, or one that calls for longer hours than they would work as office boys—but without success.

Ask the Old Dock what they will pay for good fitters, with no school education; or the General Electric Co. for good electricians; or probably yourselves for good printers. The answer ought to make the Chinese "clerk" and those that produce him aware that something is wrong with their educational theories. It won't, of course, because this type of Chinese would rather starve than doff its long coat.

Shanghai does not need more half-baked clerks, shroffs, embryo brokers and elusive "dealers." What it does need are more skilled mechanics and artisans: cabinet makers who can make a door that will fit; motor mechanics who can sometimes work without a hammer or a file; machinists who can locate a knock; and electricians who can be trusted not to botch if unwatched.

Can Mr. Lockwood, or some other expert on education, educate the Chinese to prefer a spanner to a fountain pen, or a micrometer to an abacus? If so he will be doing Shanghai a real service and, incidentally, providing poor Chinese children with an education that will be worth more than the word itself.

I am, etc.,
T. SQUARE.

Shanghai, April 10, 1924.

PROHIBITION.

To the Editor of the
"NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS."

SIR,—A very surprising statement appears in your "Notes and Comments" of yesterday's issue. After listing the benefits that have resulted from the Prohibition enactment (as reported at the Washington Convention recently held), you give voice to the opinion that you "cannot get away from the feeling that prohibition is a vicious infringement of liberty". . . . . ! A strange aberration of the human mind to consider the infringement of liberty vicious when, to quote the report, such an infringement has been instrumental in saving over 873.000 lives during the four years (or about 17 times the number of Americans killed in the World War); when industrial accidents have decreased by a quarter of a million annually; when about $74,000,000 has been released for constructive welfare work from funds previously used on drink—destitutes; when penal institution commitments have decreased by 20.000, to say nothing of the other benefits mentioned.

Of course Prohibition is an infringement of individual liberty, but is it right to call such an infringement vicious? Quite the contrary, Sir. To insist on personal liberty when that liberty costs the nation over 873.000 lives in four years and hundreds of thousands of industrial accidents—to say nothing of the moral evils and the indirect misery caused—that would be sheer viciousness. Must we insist on personal liberty at the expense of Human Welfare? Then annul the laws against theft, for a man should certainly have the right to take his neighbour's goods if he has a mind to do so; annul the laws against cruelty, for a man or woman should certainly have the right to cripple his own children, or a man to beat his own wife; annul the laws against illicit sexual relations, on the grounds that men or women may do anything with their bodies that they please! To carry this idea of personal liberty to its logical conclusion would be to let our already miserable civilization go down still further into the mud. It would then cease to be Liberty; it would be licence.

No. Sir, let not personal liberty be our ideal, but Human Welfare, and let us not delude ourselves with such beautiful-sounding words as Liberty. Let us not sacrifice Human Welfare to our own selfish ends, lest we degrade that god that for ages has inspired men under the name of Liberty. For that Liberty stands for Liberty-for-Humanity, for a Nation, not for an individual human being; it means Liberatism from misery, from degradation, and not liberty of self-satisfaction. We should be glad to sacrifice our little so-called liberties, when they contribute to the Liberatism of the race; we should deem it a crime to fight for personal liberty when such liberty tends to enslave the nation or the world. The eventual well-being of the whole should be our aim, not the temporary gratification of the part; let us be liberators, not libertines.

I am, etc.,
A. HORNE.

Shanghai, Apr. 8, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"NORTH CHINA DAILY NEWS."

SIR,—I was greatly interested in the extract from the report of the Washington Convention on the result of prohibition in the United States that you published last Monday in your "Notes & Comments" column, under the heading of "Prohibition Results." I think, Sir, there is a sting in the tail. A comment that is not quite fair.

It seems to me from this report, and from many reports I have seen in American papers that the people of United States, as a whole, have greatly benefited by prohibition, and that a great deal of poverty, misery and crime has been done away with. Now, Sir, can good come out of evil? I contend that if good has come out of it, it cannot "be a case of doing evil that good may come." "By their fruits ye shall know them. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" No, Sir, they do not. Good cannot come out of evil.

Again you say: "You cannot get away from the feeling that prohibition is a vicious infringement of liberty and a confession of weakness." Why prohibit anything, why not let everybody have absolute freedom? What would be the result? In my humble opinion it would spell anarchy, and we could say good-bye to civilization. Ever since man began to herd together he had to prohibit to protect himself against his vicious and selfish fellow-creatures. "Thou shalt not kill; thou shalt not steal; thou shalt not bear false witness" are all prohibitions; and the more civilized we become the more restrictions we have put upon us. We must, in a civilized state, prohibit many things to protect us from various evils. All laws are prohibitive more or less. How, Sir, can you make out that the prohibition of alcoholic beverages enforced on the people of the United States—by the consent of a large majority—is "a vicious infringement of liberty?" Is the prohibition of opium and other narcotic drugs an infringement of liberty? I maintain that if it is right to prohibit opium, any nation, by a vote of the people, has an equal right to prohibit alcoholic beverages. Alcohol is as much a narcotic drug as opium is. It is a narcotic drug that depresses and paralyzes the nerve centres. Most people believe it to be a stimulant, but it has been proved to be a narcotic poison.

In November, 1916, the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) appointed an Advisory Committee "to consider the conditions affecting the physiological action of alcohol."

The members of the Committee were as follows:—

Lord D'Abernon, G.C.M.G., (Chairman), Chairman of the Central Board (Liquor Traffic).

Sir George Newman, K.C.B., M.D., (Vice-Chairman)) Principal Medical Officer to the Board of Education, Member of the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic).

Professor A. R. Cushny, M.D., F.R.S., Professor of pharmacology at University College, London.

H. H. Dale, M.D., F.R.S., Head of the Department of Bio-Chemistry and Pharmacology under the Medical Research Committee, National Health Insurance.

M. Greenwood, M.R.C.S., Statistician to the Lester Institute of Preventive Medicine, and Reader in Medical Statistics in the University of London.

W. McDougall, M.B., F.R.S., Reader in Mental Philosophy in the University of Oxford and Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford.

W. C. Sullivan, M.D., Medical Superintendent of the Rampten State Asylum for Criminal Lunatics.

F. W. Mott, M.D., F.R.S., Pathologist to the London County Asylums, Consulting Physician to Charing Cross Hospital.

Professor C. S. Sherrington, M.D., F.R.S., Waynflete Professor of Physiology in the University of Oxford, and Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford.

Now, Sir, no one can say: a body of scientific, medical gentlemen such as the above are a lot of tub-thumping, tectotal cranks, and kill-joys. I take it they formed an unbiassed committee whose findings should command respect. In their report: Alcohol—Its action on the Human Organism" on page 125 we find:—

"Action of alcohol narcotic and not stimulant.

A further conclusion of capital importance which emerges with equal clearness is that the action of alcohol on the nervous system is essentially sensitive, and with the possible exception of its direct influence on the respiratory centre—is not truly stimulant. The popular belief in the stimulating properties of alcohol, as regard reasoning and other functions seems to be of purely subjective origin and illusory: it is in the main, if not wholly, an effect of the narcotic influence of the drug, for, as we have seen, it dulls the drinker's perception of unpleasant conditions in himself and his surroundings, and may make him feel better, more efficient and stronger than he really is."

"Effects which are apparently of a different character—effects such as the increased loquacity and freer gesticulation produced by alcohol—which are usually interpreted by the drinker, if not by those about him as evidences of stimulation, are really narcotic effects; they result from the removal of the control exercised by the higher nervous centres, a control which enables the individual to weigh his words and acts, and render himself self-critical and solicitous as to the impression he is making on other people."

I think people should know that alcohol is a narcotic drug, and not a stimulant; and that a country has a perfect right to prohibit the use of all drugs except for medicinal purposes.

I am, etc.,
A TOTAL ABSTAINER.

Shanghai, Apr. 7, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS."

Sir,—You say in your leaderette this morning "that millions of children are being brought up ignorant of the taste of alcohol is a great good."

This statement denotes an entirely wrong conception of the state of affairs in America to-day, and it would be far more correct to say that millions of children are being brought up cognisant "of the taste of alcohol," a taste which they satisfy now with frequent nips of bad whisky which the boys carry in flasks in their hip pockets, and the girls in dainty bottles in their satchels. That is the most crying pity of all the pities that have arisen out of this wretched law, and no one realizes and regrets it more than the large number of sound thinking men and women one meets in America—people whose common sense, however, carries little weight against the rantings and ravings of the intolerants.

A prominent American business man—himself a strict teetotaller—told me in New York some months ago that not only is the moral of the adult population becoming steadily lower through the bribery, bootlegging, wholesale drinking of bad liquor, knowledge that this law of the land can be openly flouted (and is actually flouted by many of the very law makers themselves), but that, more serious still, the youth of this nation is being debauched not only by actual widespread drinking in itself but also by witnessing in the homes the hourly defiance of the law by their elders. I have heard young girls openly boasting in New York of the amount of "hooch" they had put away the same morning, and one young man told me that he had been to his old school the day before and was horrified to see the amount of secret drinking going on amongst the boys.

One can quote no statistics in proof of the above facts but one can quote the statements of seriously minded Americans in their own country, and one can believe the evidence of one's own eyes and ears. The moral degeneracy which I was told is going on in the growing generation will prove vastly more injurious to America in the future than the mild and sensible amount of drinking one sees in England.

I saw more out-and-out "drunks" in 10 days on the New York public streets than I saw in six months in the whole of England.

I am, etc.,
MODERATE.

Shanghai, April 10, 1924.

KULING COOLIES.

To the Editor of the
"NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS."

SIR,—I have just read in your estimable paper a letter from Kuling about the threatening attitude of chair coolies; and I feel I must vouch for the alarming results that might occur if the situation is not seriously taken in hand. I spent four months of last summer in Kuling and trouble with the chair coolies was the usual occurrence, in fact generally considered as inevitable. I know of two cases of smashed windows.

I myself preferred to walk any distance rather than to be confronted with an awful row at the "End of a Perfect Day."

Enclosing my card,
I am, etc.,
N. C.

Hankow, April 2, 1924.

THE MIN RIVER.

To the Editor of the
"NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS."

SIR,—The issue of the "North China Herald" for March 29 contains a Reuter's Pacific Service item, dated Peking, March 24th, under the heading "Conservancy of the Min River," substantially correct, except that the British Consul is stated to be the Chairman of the Conservancy.

This is not the case. The Chairman of the Conservancy is Mr. Ch'en P'ei-k'un, Finance Commissioner of Fukien; the Consuls of powers represented at Foochow being, with representatives of other interests, members of the Board. The Executive Committee consists of the Chairman, the Commissioner of Customs (who is Treasurer and Secretary), and one of the resident Consuls in rotation. The present Consular representative is my French colleague, who succeeded me at the beginning of March this year.

I am, etc.,
WALTER J. CLENNELL.

Foochow, April 4, 1924.

Skin Cleared of FIERY ECZEMA BY Zam-Buk

Mr. H. Jarvis, J.P., of Bickham Park Road, Plymouth, England, says:—"A distressing burning eczema, which extended over the whole of the fleshy part of my legs, defied all the usual medical treatment. A near relative got me to apply Zam-Buk. Next morning my skin did not seem quite so red or angry, and I persevered. Zam-Buk caused new healthy skin to grow, and the eczema disappeared as by magic."

Zam-Buk Grows New Skin in a remarkable way and its germ-killing properties are never found in fatty ointments and salves. Zam-Buk's powerful herbal essences penetrate to the very root of skin disease, killing off germs and removing poisonous impurities. Zam-Buk is equally marvellous for ulcers, ringworm, piles, abscesses, bad legs, sore feet, poisoned wounds, cuts, insect bites and stings, etc. Obtainable in handy size boxes of most store dealers everywhere.

CONTAINS NO ANIMAL FAT

Agents:—Messrs. Wakefield & Co (China), Ltd., S. Y. Sheng Building, Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS

In the outports can rely on fresh supplies of Films, Plates and Papers and all Photo Sundries by sending to Mactavish & Co., Ld.

The Hongkew Medical Hall, Shanghai.

Developing and Printing by experienced operators.

HIMROD'S Asthma Cure

GIVES INSTANT RELIEF.

No matter what your respiratory organs may be suffering from—whether ASTHMA, INFLUENZA, NASAL CATARRH OR ORDINARY COUGH you will find in this famous remedy a restorative power that is simply unequalled.

FAMED FOR FIFTY YEARS

Sold in tins by all Chemists and Stores throughout the Country.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

FURLOUGH

Attention of intending travellers is drawn to the New Route Across Canada now available. Through most picturesque parts of the famous Rockies. New comfortable trains—specially constructed observation cars.

The Canadian National Railways operate from Coast to Coast in Canada—touch every principal city in the Dominion and many in the U. S. A.

SPECIAL FARES FOR MISSIONARIES

Through bookings—Any Steamship Line

Literature and full information furnished

The National Way

Canadian National Railways

GLEN LINE BUILDING

Shanghai Tel. C. 6973

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

THE SPRING RACES

Considerably Reduced Entries

The race book for the Spring Meeting of the Shanghai Race Club will be very much smaller this year than it was in 1923. There has been a remarkable falling off in entries, there being only half as many in several races as there were last spring. However, this should not make a great deal of difference to the fields, for whether there are 82 entries for a single event, as there were for the Poumating Cup last year, or 52, which is the biggest entry this time, in the same race, it will be as difficult to find more than about a score of jockeys. Reduced numbers do not mean a lack of quality, for the griffins are counted very good this time and all the best of the old ponies again are entered. The difference in numbers probably is due to the fact that, instead of coming down more or less in one mob, the griffins have been brought down in batches and the later arrivals or those markedly behind in condition necessarily have had to be held over.

The entries for individual races, with the comparative figures of last spring, follow:—

	1924.	1923
FIRST DAY.
Chefoo Cup	19	33
Criterion Stakes	22	25
Griffins' Plate	44	67
Cathay Cup	21	35
Poumating Cup	52	82
Hart Legacy Cup	21	27
Nanking Cup	30	43
Kiangan Cup	17	20
Eclipse Stakes	45	67
Hankow Cup	20	23
Hongkong Plate	25	40
SECOND DAY.
Chukaza Cup	36	44
Race Club Cup	16	22
Shanghai Derby	31	59
Mongolian Cup	31	32
Siccawei Cup	25	39
Grand Stand Stakes	43	75
Chinese Cup and Shanghai Stakes	17	25
Spring Cup	18	35
Scurry Stakes	50	74
Tientsin Plate	33	35
Peking Cup	34	49
THIRD DAY.
Great Northern Plate	40	49
Rubicon Plate	44	73
Pari-Mutuel Stakes	26	39
Racing Stakes	34	40
Yangtsze Cup	41	39
Foochow Cup	15	24
Jockey Cup	26	54
Ames Cup	40	76
Champion Sweepstakes	—	—
Swatow Cup	18	18
Newchwang Cup	46	74
FOURTH DAY.
Spring Griffins' H'cap ("A" and "B")	51	52
Spring H'cap ("A" and "B")	47	43
Grand National Steeplechase	15	18
Pootung Cup	26	57
Consolation Cup	32	52
Manchu Stakes	45	69
Nil Desperandum Cup	26	50
Griffins' Nil Desperandum Cup	45	66
Mafoos' Race	—	—

INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL

Army Championship Won by Belgium

London, Apr. 3.

The Belgian Army team beat the British Army by three goals to one in the International Triangular Association Football Tournament at Wembley to-day. Having also beaten the French Army, the Belgians won the Championship.—Reuter.

AMATEUR 10-MILE RUN

British Championship at Stamford Bridge

London, Apr. 5.

The Amateur Athletic Championship 10-mile run at Stamford Bridge to-day was won by H. Britton (Derby and County Harriers) in 52 min. 48 1-5 sec. E. Harper (Hallamshire Harriers), the holder, was second in 52 min. 50 sec. and C. Gibbs, (Surrey Athletic Club) third with a time of 53 min. 21 1-5 sec.—Reuter.

INTERNATIONAL CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP

Dr. Lasker Now Leading

New York, Apr. 4.

The position of the leaders at the end of the thirteenth round of the International Chess Tournament is as follows:—

M. Reti; 7 games won, 3 games lost, 2 games drawn;

Dr. Lasker, 5 games won, 5 games drawn;

M. Capablanca, 4 games won, 1 game lost, 7 games drawn.

Dr. Lasker has two games adjourned.

Apr. 5.

In the thirteenth round of the International Chess Tournament, M. Boguljubow resigned the adjourned game to Dr. Lasker.

In the fourteenth round, Mm. Boguljubow, Tartakower and Capablanca defeated Mr. Edward Lasker, Mr. Marshall and Dr. Lasker respectively, Dr. Lasker resigning after 50 moves. M. Alekhine drew with M. Maroczy.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Apr. 6.

The scores at the end of the 14th round of the International Chess Tournament are as follows: M. Capablanca 8½ points, M. Reti 8 points, Dr. Lasker and M. Alekhine 7½ points each. Dr. Lasker has two games adjourned which he is expected to win.—Reuter's American Service.

Apr. 6.

In the 15th round of the International Chess Tournament, MM. Alekhine, Boguljubow and Capablanca beat Mr. Yates, M. Tartakower and M. Janowski, respectively. The match between M. Maroczy and Mr. Edward Lasker was adjourned.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Apr. 7.

The leading positions in the International Chess Tournament at the end of the 15th round are as follows:—M. Capablanca, 9½ points; Dr. Lasker, 8½ points (with one game adjourned); M. Alekhine, 8½ points; M. Reti, 8 points. Mr. Yates is last with 3½ points and one game adjourned.—Reuter's American Service.

Later.

In the adjourned games Dr. Lasker, M. Maroczy and Mr. Yates won their games against M. Janowski, Mr. Edward Lasker and M. Janowski respectively.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Apr. 8.

In the sixteenth round of the International Chess Tournament, Dr. Lasker beat M. Reti, M. Tartakower beat M. Janowski, M. Alekhin drew with Mr. Edward Lasker and M. Capablanca drew with Mr. Marshall.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Apr. 9.

By defeating Mr. Yates in the 17th round of the International Chess Tournament, Dr. Lasker has drawn well into the leading position in view of M. Capablanca only drawing with Mr. Marshall.

Apr. 10.

By defeating Mr. Yates in the 17th round of the International Chess Tournament, Dr. Lasker now holds the commanding lead of a game and a half over M. Capablanca, each having only five games to play.

Later.

In the 17th round of the International Chess Tournament, Dr. Lasker beat Mr. Yates, M. Janowski beat M. Maroczy and M. Reti beat M. Tartakower. Mr. Marshall drew with Mr. Edward Lasker.—Reuter's American Service.

RACING IN FRANCE

Sir Galahad III Defeated

Longchamps, Apr. 6.

Sir Galahad III, the winner of the Lincolnshire Handicap, only secured the third place in the Prix de Sablons, a ten furlong race. Massine, with Sharpe up, won by a neck from Saint Hubert II, with Sir Galahad a length and a half behind.—Reuter.

CAMBRIDGE WIN THE BOATRACE

Betting for Once Upset: Oxford Heavier but Cambridge Very Stylish

London, Apr. 4.

The 'Varsity crews have concluded their training for to-morrow's boat-race under the same icy conditions, with a bleak northeaster, which have prevailed throughout the week.

With the advantage in weights Oxford, who have registered a marked improvement recently, start favourites, the betting being 6 to 4 on. Cambridge have developed a very stylish crew but they lack speed. Much may depend on the choice of station.

The start is timed for the unusually early hour of two o'clock.

Apr. 5.

Cambridge won the inter-'Varsity boat race by four lengths.

Later.

The official distance by which Cambridge beat Oxford was four and a half lengths, and the time was 18 min. 41 sec.

There was sunshine and a very light northeasterly breeze, while the water was smooth.

Cambridge won the toss and chose the Surrey station.

Oxford, rowing a slightly faster stroke, led at the start, but at the mile post Cambridge was slightly ahead. The time was 4 min. 4 sec. The Cambridge crew, rowing beautifully, held a length advantage at Hammersmith Bridge, which they reached in 7 min. 36 sec., and three lengths at Chiswick Church, in 11 min. 28 sec. Soon after, Oxford spurted and gained on the leaders, but the crew were ragged in their work. Cambridge reached Barnes Bridge in 15 min. 31 sec., two and a half lengths ahead, and ultimately won by four and a half lengths.—Reuter.

GOLF IN AMERICA

British Champion Beats American

New York, Apr. 5.

Arthur Havers, the British golf champion, beat Bobby Jones, the American open champion, in a thirty-six hole match here to-day by 2 and 1.—Reuter's American Service.

INTERNATIONAL TENNIS

New York, Apr. 3.

Mr. Macpherson of Queen's Club, London, defeated Mr. Cutler in the semi-final of the National Court Tennis Championships. Mr. Macpherson will meet Mr. Hewitt Morgan in the final round to determine who will play Mr. Jay Gould in the challenge round.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Apr. 5.

In the National Court Tennis Championship Jay Gould to-day successfully defended his title, defeating Howitt Morgan 6/1, 6/1, 11/9.—Reuter's American Service.

BOXING IN BERLIN

Berlin, Apr. 5.

The German heavyweight boxing champion, Koerner, defeated the British champion, Frank Goddard on points in a 10-round contest here last night.—Reuter.

"Where to Stay in England"

GLORIOUS DEVON

MR. AND MRS. GOODACRE,
(LATE TIENTSIN)

Tembani Private Hotel,
Sea Front, Paignton,
Near Torquay.

THAT tickling rawness at the back of the mouth, hoarseness, painful swallowing and persistent dry cough are all evidence that you need Peps.

Peps provide the handiest and safest of remedies, for they contain no throat parching formalin or other harmful chemical. You simply dissolve a Peps tablet on your tongue. The volatile medicinal fumes given off, mixing naturally with the breath, are carried into the throat and innermost recesses of the chest and lungs.

This Peps infection-killing medicine keeps the throat and larynx healthy and strong, exterminates dangerous germs, and simply charms away all pain, inflammation and soreness in the air-passages.

Peps are speedily effective in coughs, colds and chills, tonsilitis, laryngitis, etc., and they guard against bronchitis, asthma, pleurisy and pneumonia.

In sealed glass bottles of all medicine dealers. Full directions enclosed.

Peps I.P. 231.

INFECTION-KILLING TABLETS

Agents:—Messrs. Wakefield & Co. (China), Ltd., S. Y. Sheng Building, Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

NIENDORF

BIJOU GRAND

The Favourite "Little" Grand.

Charming Architectural Lines.

Occupies Little Space and Cost No More Than an Upright.

Tropical Construction.

Absolutely High Grade.

Details on Request.

ROBINSON PIANO CO./LD.

MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS

Ratepayers Meetings.

Enquiry has recently been made into the question of the qualifications required of speakers at Ratepayers Meetings, and it is noted that the following declaration by the British Bar in on record:—

Shanghai, March 20, 1914.

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honour to inform you that at a Bar Meeting held yesterday at H.B.M. Supreme Court it was unanimously resolved:—"That no member of the British Bar should speak at a Ratepayers' Meeting in his professional capacity."

Your obedient servant,
H. P. WILKINSON,
Crown Advocate.

The Shanghai Municipal Council.

Volunteer Corps.

Reserve of Officers.—Lieut. W. J. Hawkings resigns his commission.

Shantung Road Hospital.

From the Report and Accounts for 1923, it is noted that the Foreign subscriptions to the Hospital total $38,000, whilst those from Chinese sources amount to $7,000 only. The apparent lack of interest in this Hospital on the part of the Chinese population is regretted and the matter will be taken up with the Treasurer of the Institution.

Telephone Agreement.

Correspondence relative to the proposal to revise the terms of the existing agreement with the Telephone Company.

Shanghai, December 20, 1923.

DEAR SIR,—You are of course aware how rapidly the Company is growing and how constantly extensions are called for, and will appreciate how these extensions call for more and more capital outlay. Moreover it is the wish of the Directors now that the automatic is sufficiently perfected to be suitable for this place to substitute it for the manual in the future, so that all extensions and replacements would be on that system, and in the course of a comparatively short time it would take the place of the manual throughout; but the automatic costs a great deal more than the manual to instal and consequently the large capital expenditure necessary in any case will be greatly increased if it is adopted.

The franchise has now only some 13 years to run and it is the franchise that forms the principal security to the Public for the money it may put into the Company, so that its extension in some form or another is a matter which calls for most serious consideration before the Company can invite the Public to subscribe further capital, and my Directors therefore suggest that a representative from your Council should be appointed to go into the matter with them, and if possible to arrive at a solution which will satisfactorily meet the case.

A precisely similar letter has been addressed to the French Municipal Council.

Yours faithfully,
PHILIP H. COLE,
Engineer-in-Chief & General Manager,
The Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co., Ld.

E. S. B. ROWE, Esq.,
Acting Secretary,
Municipal Council.

Council Chamber,
Shanghai, January 21, 1924.

GENTLEMEN,—I am directed to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 20, alluding to the rapid growth of the Company's business, and the desire of the Directors of your Company to substitute an automatic system for the manual system and suggesting an extension of the telephone franchise.

I am directed therefore to inform you that in accordance with your suggestion the Council will appoint a representative to go into this matter with you.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
E. S. B. ROWE,
Acting Secretary.

The Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co., Ld.

Council Chamber,
Shanghai, January 29, 1924.

SIR,—With further reference to your letter of December 20, on the subject of the adoption of the automatic system by the Telephone Company, and to my reply of January 21, this to inform you that Mr. Wilson has been requested to act as the representative of the Council.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
E. S. B. ROWE,
Acting Secretary.

P. H. COLE, Esq.,
Engineer-in-Chief and General Manager,
The Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co., Ld.

Shanghai, April 1, 1924.

DEAR SIR,—Further to our informal conference in the Administration Building on March 24, when your Chairman expressed his wish to have particulars as to the extent to which the automatic system is in use, I have been able to collect the attached data, giving the number of lines in use in each country, the total being almost one million, excluding extension telephones. London, New York and Tokio have also given orders to commence the change to this system.

As regards the installation of an automatic system in Shanghai, it appears to be most desirable for the following reasons:

1. Increasing difficulty in manual operating owing to language difficulties.

2. Greater safety in the event of riots or other disturbances.

3. Quicker and better service when the subscribers have mastered the dialling.

As regards the present manual system, in accordance with Clause No. 9 of the franchise, owing to the increased cost of materials and labour a small increase in the present rental is asked for, and a message rate tariff for hotels, clubs, teashops, etc., whose calls per day are many times greater than the average number of calls per ordinary subscriber. This matter has already been fully discussed with the Council's representative, and is referred to here for purposes of record.

In conclusion I would point out the necessity of an early decision as to the system desired as although we have spare capacity at our exchanges at present, orders for extensions should be placed at once, the time taken to manufacture, deliver, instal and open for service being at the present time about two years.

Should it be decided to continue with the manual system and later on a change to automatic is desired, it will mean erecting new buildings for all our exchanges, with increased capital cost and therefore higher rates.

As will be readily understood before a change can be made it is necessary for both systems to be working simultaneously and at present we have room for this in our buildings.

The capacity of our present buildings would be doubled by the introduction of an automatic system.

Yours faithfully,
PHILIP H. COLE,
Engineer-in-Chief and General Manager,
The Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co., Ld.

E. S. B. ROWE, Esq.,
Acting Secretary,
Municipal Council.

Council Chamber,
Shanghai, April 3, 1924.

SIR,—I am directed to refer to your letter of December 20 last, to the informal conference which took place on March 4 between Sir E. C. Pearce, representing your Company, Mr. Wilson, representing the International Council, and Mr. Le Bris, representing the French Municipal Council; to the subsequent discussions that have taken place between the Secretary of your Company and the Treasurer and Comptroller, and to your further letter of April 1 explaining the necessity for an early decision on the Automatic Telephone question.

The Council has given careful consideration to the various matters raised by your Company and is satisfied (1) that the automatic system is suitable and desirable for Shanghai, (2) that the Agreement of 1907 should be extended, and (3) that the Tariff of Charges is in need of revision.

I am directed to add that the Council desires to take advantage of this opportunity to revise the Agreement of 1907 in certain other particulars. It is the Council's considered opinion that the agreements under which the public utility companies of Shanghai at present operate do not allow for an adequate measure of control being exercised by the ratepayers' representatives over certain vital matters of financial and general policy. Certain of these matters are provided for in the accompanying Memorandum, which contains an outline of the Council's views in connexion with the proposed revision of the Agreement of 1907. The main principles underlying these proposals are (1) to identify the interests of the Directors of the Company with those of the Council in such a manner as to remove any possible source of friction arising in the future; (2) to provide for an adequate return to shareholders and the proper maintenance of their security, i.e., the assets of the Company; and (3) to substitute the interests of the subscriber for those of the shareholder as the chief incentive for the affairs of the Company being conducted on the most economical lines.

In laying down these principles the Council does not wish your Directors (or the Public) to infer that any serious difficulties have arisen in the past in connexion with the operations of your Company. Indeed, the Council has been much impressed by the conciliatory spirit shown by your Directors and officials throughout the recent negotiations. The fact, however, remains that under the existing agreement there is always the possibility that a change in the personnel of the Directors or Executive may cause serious issues to arise at any time.

I am to conclude by stating that should your Directors agree in principle with the Council's views as outlined in the accompanying Memorandum, a resolution will be introduced by the Council at the forthcoming Ratepayers Meeting requesting authority to proceed with the negotiations on the lines indicated in the Memorandum.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
E. S. B. ROWE,
Acting Secretary.

The Engineer-in-Chief and General Manager,
The Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co., Ld.

MEMORANDUM ON PROPOSED REVISION OF THE AGREEMENT OF 1907 AND MATTERS INCIDENTAL THERETO.

(1) That bonus shares be issued to the shareholders of the Company in respect of that portion of the Reserve Account which is represented by premia on shares.

(2) That the Tariff of Charges be amended on such a basis as to provide for:—
- (a) a dividend not exceeding 8 per cent. on the share capital of the Company;
- (b) the maintenance of an Equalization of Dividends Account limited to 8 per cent. of the share capital, no transfer thereto in any year to exceed 1½ per cent of such share capital;
- (c) the maintenance of a Reserve Account limited to 10 per cent. of capital outlay, no transfer thereto in any year to exceed 2 per cent. of such capital outlay;
- (d) the yearly surplus to be transferred to an account to be called "Tariff Revision (Suspense) Account."
- (e) the Tariff of Charges, including all the matters incidental thereto (excepting only the limitation of dividend to 8 per cent.), to be subject to quinquennial revision, when the balances of Tariff Revision (Suspense) Account, Equalization of Dividends Account, and Reserve Account shall be taken into account.

(3) That the books, financial records and minutes of the Company be open at all reasonable times to the inspection of Accountants nominated by the Council.

(4) That no addition to the Company's share or debenture capital be made without the written approval of the Council.

(5) That quarterly reports be submitted to the Council, to include such information as may be subsequently decided upon.

(6) That the Board of Directors shall include one person nominated by the Council.

(7) That the Agreement of 1907, as revised, be extended for periods of 10 years as from March 31, 1937, and that the Council be entitled at the expiration of these periods, provided two years' notice of its intention so to do has been given to the Company, to purchase the Company's business and undertaking and all the land, buildings, plant and machinery, at a price to be fixed by arbitration if a mutual understanding has not been arrived at, and in arriving at such price the arbitrators shall have regard to the fair market value of the undertaking as a going concern, but without any allowance being made for compulsory purchase or goodwill.

Wafer Supply.

Correspondence with the Waterworks Company in continuation of that published in the Gazette of February 28:—

Council Chamber,
Shanghai, March 28, 1924.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 22, the contents of which are receiving the Council's careful consideration. The Council's reply is now being prepared and will be ready in the course of a few days. Particular attention is being given to the remarks contained in the penultimate paragraph of your letter in which you indicate that provided the undertaking is continued under Company management, your Directors are now prepared to concede certain principles which were outlined by the Council in previous correspondence.

As the Council is willing to explore every possible means of solving this long outstanding question, I am directed to forward the enclosed memorandum outlining a scheme which in the Council's opinion may lead to a revision of the existing Agreement satisfactory to both parties. Many of the complications dealt with in the scheme are occasioned by the fact that the share capital of the Company is in sterling while the revenue is in silver. It is suggested that your Directors should seriously consider the feasibility of placing the share capital of the Company on a silver basis.

I am directed to add that the Council has no objection to a frank exchange of views between the officials of your Company and those of the Council.

Will you kindly note that the memorandum now forwarded will form an integral part of the Council's official reply to your letter of February 22, and that until this letter has been despatched to you, it is not proposed to publish the contents of the memorandum.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
E. S. B. ROWE,
Acting Secretary.

F. B. PITCAIRN, Esq.,
Engineer-in Chief & Manager,
Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld.

Council Chamber,
Shanghai, April 7, 1924.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 22 further on the subject of the proposed purchase of your Company by the Municipality.

The Council notes with regret that your Directors are unable to accept the basis of valuation suggested in my letter of January 18 last which was supported by a joint opinion of two eminent counsel whose advice was sought by the Council. It is noted that your Directors have consulted probably equally eminent counsel, whose opinion more or less conflicts with that of the Council's advisers. Under the circumstances it is apparent that no useful purpose will be served by proceeding further with the attempt mutually to agree upon the basis of valuation, and I am therefore directed to inform you that the Council will at the forthcoming Ratepayers' Meeting again ask for authority to proceed with the purchase negotiations, fully realizing that this will result in the submission of the question to arbitration.

With regard to the remarks in the 4th paragraph of your letter under reply, I am directed to state that the Council has re perused the file of past correspondence with your Company, with the result that it has definitely reaffirmed its opinion as to the necessity for the Municipality, to control all essential matters connected with the water supply of the Settlement, and is in general agreement with the opinion expressed by the Second Special Waterworks Committee to the effect that "the Committee desires further to place on record its opinion that the differences between the Company and the Council, as disclosed by the data submitted to the Committee, are such that no really satisfactory settlement would be likely to eventuate even were negotiations to this end continued."

Looking at the matter from another viewpoint, the Council is of the opinion that the continually increasing duties and responsibilities that have to be borne by Members render a continuance of the lengthy negotiations of the past a matter of physical impossibility. In expressing this opinion, the Council does not wish your Directors to infer that the protracted correspondence that has taken place on practically every matter which has arisen in connexion with the water supply is considered to be the particular fault of either party, but simply that the different interests involved under existing conditions have conclusively been shown to be impossible to reconcile.

The Council is nevertheless willing to explore every possible means of solving this long outstanding question, and has therefore given particular attention to the penultimate paragraph of your letter under reply, in which an indication is given that provided the undertaking is continued under Company management, your Directors are now prepared to concede certain principles which were laid down by the Council in the past. Your suggestion that a scheme should be prepared by your Directors embodying these principles does not, however, commend itself to the Council for the reason that the questions at issue are so numerous and serious, and the viewpoints so dissimilar that any scheme prepared by your Directors would be unlikely to fully provide for the requirements considered necessary by the Council. In order, however, that the fullest consideration may be given to this new aspect of the question, the accompanying Memorandum has been prepared by the Council (a draft copy of which has already been forwarded you) outlining a scheme which it is hoped may lead to a revision of the Agreement of 1905 on lines satisfactory to both parties. In this connexion, I am directed to refer to a recent decision recorded by the Council to the effect that "it is the Council's considered opinion that the agreements under which the public utility companies of Shanghai at present operate do not allow for an adequate measure of control being exercised by the ratepayers' representatives over certain vital matters of financial and general policy." The Council's Memorandum covers certain of the matters referred to in the preceding paragraph, but it must not be inferred that the Memorandum is considered in any way comprehensive. The main principles underlying the Council's proposals are (1) to identify the interests of the Directors of the Company with those of the Council in such a manner as to remove any possible source of friction arising in the future; (2) to provide for an adequate return to shareholders and the proper maintenance of their security, i.e., the assets of the Company; and (3) to substitute the interests of the consumer for those of the shareholder as the chief incentive for the affairs of the Company being conducted on the most economical lines.

I am to conclude by stating that after making some slight modifications [illegible] copy of the Memorandum sent you on March 28, the Council is of the opinion that the revised Memorandum accompanying this letter should prove a satisfactory basis for solving this long outstanding question. The Council proposes, therefore, to add an alternative clause to the Purchase Resolution to be introduced at the forthcoming Ratepayers' Meeting requesting authority (as an alternative to purchase) to proceed with the negotiations for revising the Agreement of 1906 on the lines indicated in the Memorandum.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
E. S. B. ROWE,
Acting Secretary.

F. B. PITCAIRN, Esq.,
Engineer-in-Chief & Manager,
Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld.

SHANGHAI WATERWORKS COMPANY.

Memorandum outlining a Scheme for continuing the Undertaking as a Limited Company, subject to control by the Council over certain essential matters.

(1) That bonus shares be issued to the shareholders of the Company in respect of that portion of the Reserve Account which is represented by premia on shares.

(2) That the whole of the assets and liabilities of the Plumbing and Fittings Department be transferred to a subsidiary company on terms to be subsequently arranged.

(3) That the Tariff of Charges be amended, subject to the approval of the Council, to allow for the introduction of meters, and be framed on such a basis as to provide for:—

(a) A dividend not exceeding 9 per cent. on the share capital of the Company, subject to the further limitation that the Revenue Account of any year shall not be charged with more than the cost of such dividend at exchange 3s. 2d.

(b) The maintenance of an Equalization of Dividends Account under the following sub-headings:—

(1) Gold Reserve.—This account to be credited or debited with any surplus or deficit that may be occasioned by the rate of exchange at which the dividend is declared being over or under 3s. 2d. Any balance now at credit of Equalization of Dividends Account in the Company's books to be transferred to this heading.

(2) Silver Reserve.—This account to be limited to a total of 9 per cent. of the share capital converted to a silver basis of exchange [illegible] to this account to exceed 1½ per cent. of the share capital calculated on the same basis.

(3) The balances at credit of these accounts from time to time to be used ex[illegible] for which the Reserve is created, the Gold Reserve to cover fluctuations in exchange, and the Silver Reserve to cover variations in the silver revenue of the Company.

Explanatory Note.—The share capital of the Company is in sterling, and the revenue is in silver. Clause (a) above is to ensure that not only will the sterling dividend to shareholders be limited, but that the resulting charge to the consumer (in silver) to pay this dividend will also be limited. Clause (b) ensures that all reasonable provisions will be made to cover fluctuations in exchange and variations in the silver revenue of the Company. Thus, assume:—The share capital to be £10,000 (which at exchange 3s. 2d. equals Tls 63,158). The profit to be Tls. 9,500. The rate of exchange at which the dividend is paid to be 3s. 4d.:—

A dividend of 9 per cent. at exchange 3s. 2d would absorb Tls. 5,684, but at exchange 3s. 4d. only Tls. 5,400 would be required. It is proposed that the difference of Tls. 284 should be credited to the Gold Reserve, and that Tls. 946 (1½ per cent. on Tls. 63,158) should be transferred to the credit of the Silver Reserve.

(c) The maintenance of a Reserve Account limited to 10 per cent. of capital outlay, no transfer thereto in any year to exceed 2 per cent. of such capital outlay.

(d) That the yearly Surplus be transferred to an account to be called "Tariff Revision (Suspense) Account."

(e) That the Tariff of Charges, including all matters incidental thereto (excepting only the limitation of dividend to 9 per cent.) be subject to quinquennial revision when the balances of Tariff Revision (Suspense) Account, Equalization of Dividends Account, and Reserve Account, shall be taken into account.

(4) That the books, financial records and minutes of the Company be open at all reasonable times to the inspection of accountants nominated by the Council.

(5) That no addition to the Company's share or debenture capital be made without the written approval of the Council.

(6) That quarterly reports be submitted to the Council, to include such information as may be subsequently decided upon.

(7) That the Board of Directors shall include two persons nominated by the Council.

(8) That the revised agreement remain in force for a period of 20 years and that the Council be entitled at the expiry of this period, provided two years' notice of its intention so to do, has been given to the Company, to purchase the Company's business and undertaking, and all the lands, buildings, plant and machinery, at a price to be fixed by arbitration if a mutual understanding has not been arrived at, and in arriving at such price the arbitrators shall have regard to the fair market value of the undertaking as a going concern, but without any allowance being made for compulsory purchase or goodwill.

April 7, 1924.

The following letter has been received subsequent to approval by the Council of despatch of the foregoing:—

Shanghai, April 4, 1924.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge [illegible] your letter of the 28th ultimo, from which it is noted that the Council is willing to explore every possible means of solving the outstanding questions relating to Water Supply. It is further noted that the Council's reply to my letter of February 22 is being prepared and will be ready in the course of a few days.

My Directors are willing that an exchange of views between the officials of the Council and those of this Company should take place, and I am directed to ask you to be good enough to let me know on what date it would be suitable for a conference to be held.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
F. B. PITCAIRN,
Engineer-in-Chief & Manager,
Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld.

E. S. B. ROWE, Esq.,
Acting Secretary,
Municipal Council.

CHINA Journal of Science & Arts, edited by Mr. A. de Sowby and Dr. J. C. Ferguson, is to be monthly, profusely illustrated magazine. It will contain articles written by experts on the Arts, Literature and Science of China. The annual subscription is $10.00 Shanghai currency, or $6.00 gold for U.S.A. and Canada. Office: Room 102, the Bon Building, Shanghai. Central 3247.

LAW REPORTS

A PORTUGUESE-INDIAN PARTNERSHIP

Claim Against a Range Road Hotel

Last week at the Chess Club the Imperial Hotel, Range Road, appeared in H. M. Supreme Court before his Honour Judge Peter Grain on Monday to answer a summons brought by the Greatlight Electrical Company claiming the sum of $296 for work done in the Imperial Hotel. The defendants were Gujan Singh, Bishan Singh and Sucha Singh.

Mr. R. C. Faithfull represented the plaintiff company.

The Chinese proprietor of the plaintiff company, in evidence, stated that the work was done in November of last year. He was employed by a Mr. da Silva, the fourth partner in the concern. He was not suing him in this Court owing to the fact that Mr. Silva was a Portuguese citizen. The total amount incurred was $396, but of this sum Mr. Silva had paid $100.

In reply to Gujan Singh witness said he knew the defendants were partners in the firm because he had seen Gujan Singh himself hand over the $100 to da Silva, which had been paid on account.

The defendants pleaded that though they were partners with da Silva there was some dispute over the partnership and they did not feel that they should be liable for the expenses he incurred. He had refused to allow any of them on the premises so that they could not see the books and had no idea whether the concern was paying, or losing money. When they did enter the hotel he told them to get out because the guests would be annoyed if they saw Indians there. They did not know what work was done in connexion with the electricity and whether or not da Silva had paid up the balance.

The Judge pointed out to the defendants that they had their remedy open to them by suing da Silva in his own Court. If they consented to judgment in this case it would be better for them in any case they might bring in the Portuguese Court inasmuch as the judgment would prove partnership and would prove that the bill really did exist and that da Silva was liable for his share of it.

Defendants agreed to this course and judgment was given accordingly.

A DANGEROUS GANG

Four Chinese concerned in an attempted burglary during the last week in March, in the Yangtszepoo district, came up for sentence at the Mixed Court on Monday before Messrs. Whitamore and Loh. Three of them were sent to goal for two months, while the fourth, an old offender, was ordered to be incarcerated for six months, after which he is to be re-expelled.

Det.-Sgt. Douglas told the Court that at 3.30 a.m. on March 23 a gang of nine men placed a ladder against the wall of a house and one man was climbing it when a Chinese constable came into sight. The gang made off, but the constable caught one of them. On information it was learned that the remainder might return and a detective and a constable went to the spot and hid themselves. In a few minutes the marauders came back and were hailed. One was taken into custody and someone in the gang shouted, "Shoot, shoot," and the detective, thinking that they meant it, drew his own pistol first and fired four shots, but all the men made off. Two hours later, a coolie put in an appearance at the Yangtszepoo Station and said that he was walking along the road when a bullet struck him, which upon investigation was found lodged in the wrist. Not believing his story the police made further inquiries and the victim was identified as one of the gang, while a fourth was caught a week later.

The Chinese constable corroborated the Sergeant's evidence.

MR. W. WALLACE CONVICTED

Ex-Company Manager Gaoled for Nine Months and Expelled

Of the four charges of fraud against Mr. W. Wallace, former manager of the China Pacific Trading Company, three were dismissed by Mr. Martin, British Assessor, and Magistrate Kuan in the Mixed Court on Wednesday. The case has engaged the Court's attention for some time past and has aroused a good deal of public interest.

The early part of the day's proceedings were occupied by the cross examination of defendant by Mr. Ho Fei, appearing on behalf of one of the Chinese complainants.

Questioned with regard to his nationality, accused claimed that he was an American. He was not the only foreigner employed with the company, the others being Messrs. Becon, Howell and Schiller, and witness's position was that of manager. He had nothing to do with the company's finance at all, excepting that he signed the cheques.

"I am the victim of my Chinese colleagues" said Mr. Wallace later, "those people who are no longer to be found in the Settlement."

Dr. Fischer, appearing on behalf of the accused, in his address to the Court, pleaded that Wallace's statement that the Chinese were responsible for the frauds was backed by the fact that they were no longer to be found. The conduct of the accused himself was very different. As soon as he heard that the police were looking for him he at once turned up to face the music. A case of this kind was not brought to Court with the object of getting a man sent to gaol, but rather in the hope the complainants would get their money back. Therefore he asked that the accused be not sent to prison, but that the cases be transferred to the civil courts. If this were done there was a possibility of the money being returned and a man's life would not be ruined,—at least as far as the East was concerned. Admittedly Wallace had been careless, but he had done nothing criminal. All the allegations amounted to were that he had obtained credit and when the time came to pay had been unable to find the money. When a similar case came before the British Court a few months ago it had been pointed out that conditions in Shanghai were very different to conditions in England as far as credit was concerned, and if every person in Shanghai who had obtained credit under similar circumstances was to be arrested, there would not be gaols here large enough to hold them. The case he referred to was the one in which Norman Bowler had been tried. In that case Mr. King (the Magistrate) had dismissed the charges and contented himself with describing the prisoner as "an extravagant young ass."

Quoting from the "North China Daily News" report of the case, Dr. Fischer read:

> "The Magistrate, summing up, remarked that as he had elected to deal with the case summarily it was his duty to address himself as to a jury. There was a considerable amount of difference between life in England and life in Shanghai and he had to consider this when applying the law in Shanghai. 'In England you cannot get credit unless you are exceptionally well known. On the other hand you can get credit in Shanghai as a rule and not as an exception.'"

The Assessor interrupted Dr. Fischer at this point and asked for the paper to be handed up. He (the Assessor) then continued to read, aloud:

> "If Bowler had found himself within the walls of the Amoy Road Gaol the Magistrate would have had no sympathy with him. It was his duty to discharge him. The case would be dismissed."

Mr. Fischer agreed, and continued. He submitted that the case should be transferred from the criminal to the civil courts.

The Court then adjourned to consider its decision, and after half an hour's deliberation returned. They found accused guilty of the charge of obtaining 250 cases of Beehive brandy from Mr. Arbuthnot, by false pretences, and not guilty on the other three charges. He was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, to include the six weeks he has been held in custody during the trial.

On the application of Superintendent Vaughan, prosecuting, an order was made for accused's expulsion from the Settlement at the conclusion of his imprisonment, and a further order was made for him to be handed over to the French Police at their request.

The Court expressed its thanks to Superintendent Vaughan and to Dr. Fischer for the very able and efficient way in which they had conducted their cases.

Dr. Fischer remarked that he was defending purely out of charity and was charging nothing for his services.

"LONG LIFE PILLS"

Case Brought Against Chemist Under Presidential Mandate Dismissed

Judgment was handed down in the Mixed Court early in the week in the charges proferred under Presidential Mandate, promulgated against traffic in narcotics, in the case of the S.M.P. v. Dzaung Yoong-fah. Defendant was further accused of obtaining money under false pretences, by placing labels on medicine to the effect that the contents were certified by the Municipal Laboratories to induce longevity. Mr. E. T. Maitland prosecuted and Dr. O. Fischer apppeared for the defence. The charges were dismissed on the first counts, but accused was fined $200 on the last.

During the hearing Det.-Sub. Insp. York told the Court that he with a squad of men armed with a search warrant had raided accused's premises and found nine tins containing pills, of which heroin was a compound. He had sent samples to be analysed.

Mr. E. O. Wilson, analyst in the Public Health Department, presented the findings of Dr. Walker and declared that there was eight times too much drug in the pills than was specified in the Mandate, which permitted 0.1 per cent., the analysis revealing 0.82 per cent. There was absolutely nothing in the official report even to suggest that these pills could produce long life. As a matter of fact if four pills were taken they might prove an overdose with harmful effects, but on the other hand if taken under medical supervision they could be beneficial under certain conditions. Each pill contained 2 mg. and four would be 8 mg., which constituted an overdose of heroin.

Dr. Fischer argued that .0022 was the content and not .82, but Mr. Wilson declared that drug content was stated in per cent. and not in weight. He had tested 370 pills and found .82 per cent., whereupon the Assessor declared that the certificate showed that the certificate stated clearly the per cent. figure.

FINED ON FALSE PRETENCES CHARGE.

Dr. Fischer contended that the pills had been made according to the best medical advice available from English, American and German books, authorities on the subject, while Mr. Maitland argued that the charges had been brought under the Presidential Mandate. He wished that the Court order confiscation of the pills.

In passing sentence the Bench stated that a fine of $200 would be imposed on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences and that the pills should be returned to defendant to be remade according to the law, a bond of $500 to be given to ensure this, and that the advertisements be destroyed by the police.

To appreciate the delightful fragrance of the finest Virginia Tobacco

SMOKE

"Three Castles"

CIGARETTES

MADE IN ENGLAND.

This advertisement is issued by the British-American Tobacco Co., (China) Ltd.

FOREIGN TELEGRAMS

GOVERNMENT AGAIN DEFEATED

Debate in Commons on Evictions Bill: Amendment to Clause I Strongly Crit cized by the Opyosition: An Admittedly Hurried Bill

MR. MACDONALD NOT INTENDING TO RESIGN

London, April 4.

In the House of Commons today Mr. J. R. Clynes, the Deputy Leader of the House, settled doubts regarding the Government's way out of the impasse in which it found itself on Wednesday with regard to the Evictions Bill.

He stated that the Government proposed to submit an amendment to Clause I in committee providing that, before a court makes an order for possession in case of non-payment of rent, it shall first be satisfied that the tenant has had a reasonable opportunity of obtaining relief from the local Poor Law authorities. He was advised that such an amendment was within the scope of the present bill and did not require a money resolution. Therefore the Government proposed to take the bill as the first business on Monday.

After some Liberal and Conservative criticism of the proposed procedure a Labour member, Mr. Kirkwood (Dumbarton), excited Opposition laughter and cheers by a heated speech in which he described the Government as "jelly-fish calling themselves Socialists." He said that the time had come for the Government to prove its usefulness. Tenants were threatened with eviction, particularly in Scotland. The parish councils were already overburdened. The Government should say whether it intended to introduce a money bill to recoup them.

Mr. Clynes replied that the charge on the community must at first be met through the local authorities. He had said nothing to indicate that the Government was opposed to recouping them from State funds.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 7.

The Government was defeated in the House of Commons to-day on the Evictions Bill by 221 votes to 212.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, made it clear that he does not contemplate resignation in consequence of his defeat.

Later.

The Evictions Bill was discussed by the Cabinet for three hours to-day and also at a special meeting of the Liberal Party. The matter cropped up at question time in the House of Commons, when the Opposition pressed for the postponement of the Bill till the statistics of the numbers of evictions were available.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, replied that the urgency of the question precluded its postponement.

When Mr. W. M. R. Pringle, Liberal Member for Penistone, resumed the debate on the second reading, there was an imposing array of Conservative and Liberal front-benchers, while Mr. Ramsay MacDonald was leading the House instead of Mr. J. R. Clynes. Mr. Pringle declared that the Government's amendment to Clause I meant nothing. The clause might as well be withdrawn. It was important to know whether the Government meant that the cost of relieving the tenants would fall on the State or on the local authorities.

The Premier's Speech.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, who received an ovation from the Labour Members, said that this emergency measure was necessitated by the alarming increase of evictions in industrial towns, where unemployment was rife, some being due to the Act passed by the late Government. Most unseemly scenes were occurring and still more unseemly ones were probable. It was the Government's intention that the House should shape the Bill in Committee. The Government would gladly co-operate in relieving property owners of a burden which the community should share. He admitted, amid ironical cheers, that it was a hurried Bill, pressed upon the Government when their hands were uncomfortably full.

Mr. MacDonald's speech was greeted with Opposition laughter and ironical cheers and interruptions, demanding that he should clarify the position with regard to the source of relief, to such an extent that the Speaker intervened, saying that these were unfair to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the leader of the Opposition, said that the Government would be well advised to drop this futile and unhappy clause until the Government knew what they wanted to do.

Mr. Asquith's Criticism.

Mr. Asquith, the Liberal leader, said that for once he associated himself with the "stupid party." He had not the remotest idea what the Government's proposals were. To postpone the incidence of the cost of relief to a vague and remote readjustment of local and Imperial burdens was trifling with the House. (Loud Opposition and Liberal cheers.)

After the defeat of the Government on their amended Clause I to the Evictions Bill, Mr. Baldwin asked the Government's intentions with regard to the Bill.

Mr. MacDonald accused the House of declaring against all the clauses of the Bill (Opposition cries of "No!"), instead of amending Clause I in committee. He suggested that Mr. Baldwin should ask the question to-morrow and in the meantime there should be a consultation as to how a bill was to be got through, if produced at all.

Liberal and Conservative spokesmen followed and made it quite clear that they had not voted against the principle of any clause except Clause I, the obscurity of which had not been illuminated by Mr. MacDonald's speech.

Forty Liberals voted with the Labour minority. The others voted with the Conservatives, while most of the Liberal leaders abstained.—Reuter.

A Second Defeat.

Later.

The Government sustained a second defeat at to-night's session, when Mr. W. Graham, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, submitted a resolution to validate certain wartime charges by Government departments in connexion with the control of supplies and prices of certain commodities.

Sir Douglas Hogg, Conservative Member for St. Marylebone, moved an amendment, the effect of which was to withhold the validation of charges in respect to certain milk contracts.

The amendment was carried by 207 votes to 170 and the resolution was adopted as amended.—Reuter.

Evictions Bill Not to Be Reintroduced: Liberal Bill Substituted

London, Apr. 8.

The House of Commons opened [illegible]. The Benches were sparsely occupied. There was no sign of yesterday's dramatic events until, replying to Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald stated that the Government's Evictions Bill would not be reintroduced during the session, but the Government, though it was possible satisfactorily to amend the Bill of Mr. E. D. Simon, Liberal Member for Withington, which passed its second reading last night, the passage of which the Government would facilitate after it had been satisfactorily amended. The Government had not abandoned the proposal to make assistance to the unemployed a public charge, but "public funds" would be local funds.

Mr. E. D. Simon's Bill is almost identical with the Government's Evictions Bill, except the clause on which the Government was defeated.

At question time, Mr. Sidney Webb, the President of the Board of Trade, stated that the Government had decided not to introduce legislation extending the duration of the provisions of Part Two of the Safeguarding of Industries Act, which provides for duties to meet the case of depreciated currencies, and these, accordingly, would lapse on August 10 (Liberal and Labour cheers). The Government had carefully considered the report of the committee recommending a duty of 33-1/3 per cent. on lace, embroidery and silk, but he did not propose to ask Parliament to impose the duties (Ministerial cheers).—Reuter.

Another Evictions Bill

London, Apr. 9.

In the House of Commons today, a new Evictions Bill was introduced by Captain Wedgwood Benn, Liberal Member for Leith, prohibiting eviction of distressed tenants and providing for reimbursement of claims by local authorities. A tenant will be provided with a certificate of immunity from eviction. The local authorities will investigate the resources of the applicant and, if necessary, supplement them sufficiently to enable him to retain his home and will be entitled to claim a refund of part of the money they have spent from the Treasury.

The Bill was read for the first time.—Reuter.

POLITICS IN SOUTH AFRICA

Parliament to Dissolve at Once: Prince of Wales's Visit Postponed

Capetown, Apr. 8.

In the House of Assembly today, General Smuts announced that, in view of the defeat of the Governmental candidate by a Nationalist at the by-election at Wakkerstroom, Parliament would be dissolved in a few days.

Later.

The Government has decided on dissolution in June and has consequently asked the Prince of Wales to postpone his visit to South Africa.

Later.

The scene in the Legislative Assembly this afternoon was most dramatic. The galleries were crowded. There was great cheering and counter-cheering when the Premier, General Smuts, Mr. Hertzog and other leaders of parties entered and also during the announcement of the election of the nationalist candidate, Mr. Victor, at Wakkerstroom, which culminated in such an uproar that Mr. Creswell, the Leader of the Labour Party, who followed General Smuts, had to speak at the top of his voice.

General Smuts, announcing the dissolution, said that the Government were doubtful after the Wakkerstroom election whether they still enjoyed the confidence of the country, which was essential in order to carry out their policy.

Mr. Hertzog, the Nationalist leader, said that he was sure that the public would welcome the opportunity to express their views.

Mr. Creswell, speaking amid an uproar of cheers and countercheers, declared that the Labour Party accepted the Government's challenge and he was confident that the people would reject the present Government.—Reuter.

A Sensation in London.

London, Apr. 7.

The postponement of the Prince of Wales's visit to South Africa has created a sensation in London, where it is surmised that it is due to the possibility that any function arranged in honour of the Prince might be turned to political account by one or other of the parties fighting the election. General Smuts's decision to dissolve is delived to be a strategetic move to rally the electors in his support against the Dutch Nationalist and Labour Party combination.—Reuter.

Capetown, Apr. 8.

The dissolution will take place immediately and the elections in June.—Reuter.

Invitation to Prince of Wales to be Renewed after the Elections

Capetown, Apr. 8.

In the House of Assembly today, the Nationalist leader, Mr. Hertzog, said that he hoped that the announcement of the postponement of the Prince of Wales's visit was not equivalent to saying that the Prince would not come at all (cheers). He hoped that he was voicing the feelings of all sections when he said that, if the Prince visited South Africa in future, he would be greeted with respect and warmth worthy of his high position and the South African people (cheers).

The Premier, General Smuts, replying, said that the Prince was assured of a most royal welcome by every shade of opinion. It was only the proprieties of the case that induced the Government to advise him to postpone his trip during the turmoil of the election. General Smuts hoped that the invitation would be renewed when the elections were over.—Reuter.

SHIPBUILDING LOCKOUT

To Affect All Unions Whose Southampton Members Still Stand Out

London, Apr. 5.

Notices of the lock-out, on April 1, have been posted by the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation to take effect on April 10 in respect of members of all unions whose Southampton members have not returned to work by April 8.

The Federation in a statement says that this limitation will enable the executive representatives of the various unions to employ the full week-end in bringing their Southampton members into line with what the executives recognize to be the proper procedure.

The Boilermakers' Society, whose members at Southampton have not gone on strike, is not involved in the lock-out, but fifteen other unions will be affected.

Apr. 6.

The ship-building labour dispute has assumed a brighter aspect. The Employers' Federation have issued a statement that a conference of representatives of the Executive and the Southampton local committee have arrived at a basis of arrangement, which will be recommended to a mass meeting tomorrow, when it is hoped that it will be accepted. It is understood that both sides are hopeful of a settlement early in the coming week. The engineers did not take part in the conference.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 7.

The Southampton shipyard workers have decided by an overwhelming majority to refuse to resume work, hence a national lock-out is inevitable.

Later.

A very slight hope of averting the shipyard lock-out is contained in the decision of the unions to take a ballot of the strikers today, asking specifically whether they are prepared to accept the authority of the executives, after which steps will be taken to enforce the authority of the unions.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 8.

The shipbuilding unions have suspended the whole of the 1,200 members of three recalcitrant branches at Southampton. The balloting of the remainder is proceeding.—Reuter.

Lock-Out Suspended

London, Apr. 9.

A conference in London of the shipyard unions involved in the Southampton strike has reported that there was not a two-thirds majority for continuing the strike. The executive of each affiliated union has ordered the men to return to work to-morrow. It is hoped that this will avert the lock-out.

The lock-out notices have been withdrawn in the case of the Shipwrights' Society, which expelled its 1,200 Southampton members. Operation of the lock-out has been suspended in the case of the other shipyard unions till April 11 to give the Southampton members a further opportunity to resume work.—Reuter.

FRESH TROUBLE BREWING IN THE RUHR

Growth of German Secret Societies: Extensive Counter-Operations by French: Seizure of Important Nationalist Documents: M. Poincare's Warning to German Ambassador

London, Apr. 5.

That further trouble is brewing in the Ruhr and the Rhineland is indicated by Reuter's correspondent at Coblenz, who states that, on the orders of General Degoutte, a vast combined operation has begun throughout the Ruhr and the Rhineland with the purpose of suppressing German secret societies. Up to the present 61 arrests have been made, and important documents have been seized.

Reuter's correspondent in Berlin reports that a conference of the Imperial Coal Council and of the Coal Association adopted a resolution declaring that the burdens imposed on the mining industry of the Ruhr by the M. I. C. U. M., otherwise the Franco-Belgian Mission of Control of Mines and Factories, are intolerable, because they have swallowed up the working capital of the industry and are responsible for a disturbed state of mind among the workers.

Reuter's Paris correspondent states that, according to "Le Journal," M. Poincaré and the German Ambassador discussed the agreements of the Ruhr industrialists with the M. I. C. U. M. It is reported that the Premier warned the Ambassador that a fresh conflict would have fatal consequences, the first of which would be suspension of all the present working arrangements. M. Poincaré is said to have added that recent utterances of German Ministers might interfere with the participation of the occupied territories in the German elections. It was impossible to refuse Germans the right to vote, but the Allied authorities could not permit unrestricted Nationalist propaganda.—Reuter.

Berlin, Apr. 4.

It is reported from Essen that the French have extended the occupation to the northern outskirts of Elberfeld.—Reuter.

Paris, Apr. 5.

The reported extension of the French occupation to Elberfeld is officially denied. It is added that no such operations have been carried out nor are they being considered.—Reuter.

Customs Barriers May Go But Not Military Grip.

London, Apr. 4.

The French Chamber's vote of confidence in the Government yesterday evening followed an important statement by M. Poincaré indicating that a distinction would be drawn between military and economic occupation of the Ruhr.

It is anticipated that the expert committee under the presidency of General Charles G. Dawes will report in favour of restoration of the economic unity of Germany. In that case the present economic barriers, instituted as part of the occupation, would be abolished, but the military occupation would continue until payment had been completed.

The size of the Government's majority appears to be accounted for by the facts that the Deputies who support the occupation of the Ruhr interpreted the speech as meaning that France's Ruhr policy would not be altered, while those who are against the occupation deduced that the Ruhr would be evacuated completely except for a corporal's guard.—Reuter.

HOW GERMANY HAS DODGED PAYING HER FOREIGN CREDITORS

Enormous Flight of Gold Abroad: Huge Sums Made by German Capitalists by Sale of Paper Marks: Every Device to Evade Meeting Her Obligations

Paris, Apr. 9.

The report of the expert committee inquiring into the flight of German capital, under the presidency of Mr. Reginald McKenna, estimates that the value of German capital abroad at the end of last year was between 5,700,000,000 and 7,800,000,000 gold marks, making with 20,000,000 gold marks' worth of foreign money held in Germany a grand total of 8,000,000,000 gold marks.

It states that the principal method of acquiring foreign capital was by negotiating in paper marks abroad, and declares that inquiries at the principal German banks, assisted by chartered accountants, show that the Germans thus made a net profit of 7,000,000,000 to 8,000,000,000 gold marks. The report enumerates other methods adopted for the export of capital, like the sale of merchandise, securities, bullion and bills of exchange.

Stop Inflation.

In order to stop the flight of capital, the report recommends abolition of the cause, namely, definite cessation of inflation. It attributes the flight of capital principally to the failure to balance the Budget, causing capitalists to translate their money into foreign denominations to avoid loss through depreciation of their own currency, and declares that the flight was accentuated by the attitude of the German people towards the payments which Germany was called upon to make to her war creditors.

The committee refers to the recommendations of the Dawes committee for establishing German money on a stable foundation, thus facilitating the return of a large amount of German wealth abroad to ordinary commercial channels. It proposes for the period of transition that persons liable to penalties under the existing law should be pardoned and that advantages should be offered to Germans to subscribe to loans in foreign currency.—Reuter.

What Germany Should Pay.

Paris, Apr. 8.

The report of the two Committees of Experts on reparations will be published to-morrow. It is a huge document of 60 pages. According to a forecast, it proposes that Germany should immediately pay 16,000,000,000 gold marks and also make annual payments between a minimum of 1,400,000,000 gold marks and a maximum of 2,000,000,000 gold marks. Alternatively, she should pay 1,000,000,000 gold marks in the first year, 1,200,000,000 gold marks in the second and third years, 1,750,000,000 gold marks in the fourth and 2,460,000,000 gold marks in the fifth year and onwards. After the sixth year the Reparations Commission would demand supplementary payments, calculated on the basis of Germany's prosperity, amounting to several hundred million gold marks.

German Railways.

The German railways should be handed over for 50 years to an international company with a capital of 26,000,000,000 gold marks, of which the Reparations Commission should hold 11,000,000,000 gold marks 6 per cent. debentures, giving an annual yield of 660,000,000 gold marks after the fourth year.

Without entering into the question of military occupation of the Ruhr, the Committees of Experts express the opinion that Germany's economic restoration can be lasting only if her economic unity is fully re-established and suggest that a permanent committee of five experts, with a President nominated by the Reparations Commission, should regulate the movement of German capital and administer the capital left temporarily to Germany.—Reuter.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF ALLIED EXPERTS

Scheme Based on Hypothesis of Restoration of Fiscal and Economic Unity of the Reich: Assigned Revenue to be Under Allied Control

Paris, Apr. 9.

The official report of the committee of experts, under the presidency of General Dawes, with regard to measures to balance the German budget and to stabilize German currency, while recognizing that political considerations have set certain limits within which a solution must be found if it is to have any chance of acceptance, emphasizes that the committee have been concerned with the problem of debt recovery and not with imposition of penalties. As businessmen, they consider it hopeless to build any constructive scheme except on a basis of good faith and they submit a plan, relying on all parties carrying it out on such a basis. The committee have come to the conclusion that there is no method of balancing the German budget temporarily or permanently under the present limitations of Germany's fiscal and economic rights over part of her territory. They, therefore, are compelled to base their report solely on the hypothesis that the fiscal and economic unity of the Reich will be restored. The experts emphasize that their forecasts are based on the assumption that economic activity will not be hampered by any form of control organization other than that provided by the scheme. All existing measures hampering such activity should consequently be withdrawn as soon as Germany has taken positive steps towards a plan, such as establishing machinery whereby the assigned revenue should flow through Allied control. Such measures should not be removed except in case of flagrant failure, when the creditor Governments should determine the nature of the sanctions.

A Single Uniform Currency.

The committee propose the establishment of a new issue bank in Germany or re-organization of the Reichsbank as an essential agency for creating a stable currency. The bank would have a monopoly of the right of note issue in Germany for 50 years. The present paper would be withdrawn and replaced by a single uniform currency, namely, the new bank's bank-notes. This currency would be kept stable in relation to gold, but would not be convertible. At the commencement it would be protected by a reserve of 33⅓ per cent. and other liquid assets. The reserve would be held largely in the form of deposits in foreign banks. The bank would be the fiscal agent of the German Government and would be allowed to make short-term loans to it, but the amount and character of such loans would be carefully limited and safeguarded. The relations of the Reparations Commission towards the bank would be those of a private client. The bank would have a capital of 400,000,000 gold marks, of which 300,000,000 gold marks would be subscribed in Germany and abroad and the remainder would be issued in purchase of the real property of the Reichsbank. A German President and board, composed of seven Germans and seven foreigners, one each of British, French, Italian, Belgian, American, Dutch and Swiss nationality, would be given broad powers. One of its members would be a commissioner who would see that the provisions of the law with regard to the issue of notes and the maintenance of reserves were observed.

System of Gradual Payments.

The schedule of payments by Germany recommended by the experts proposes that Germany should pay 1,000,000,000 gold marks in the first year, 1,200,000,000 gold marks in the second and third years, 1,750,000,000 gold marks in the fourth year and 2,500,000,000 gold marks in the fifth year and onwards. The liability of 1,200,000,000 gold marks in the years 1925-6 and 1926-7 would be reduced or increased by a maximum of 250,000,000 gold marks, if the proceeds from controlled taxes and Customs duties on alcohol, beer, tobacco and sugar should fall short of 1,000,000,000 gold marks by a deficit of one-third or exceed 1,000,000,000 gold marks by an excess of one-third. A corresponding provision is made for reduction or increase of the liability of 1,750,000,000 gold marks in the year 1927-8.

The whole schedule of payments would begin to run only as from the date on which Germany regained full economic and fiscal sovereignty over her territory. The payments would be available not only for reparations, but for all Peace Treaty charges and interest on any loans.

Control of Railways.

The German railways should be handed over for 50 years to an international company with a capital of 26,000,000,000 gold marks, of which the Reparations Commission should hold 11,000,000,000 gold marks 6 per cent. debentures, giving an annual yield of 660,000,000 gold marks after the fourth year. The company would be administered by a board of 18 members, half of whom would be nominated by trustees appointed by the Reparations Commission. The managing director would be a German, but a Foreign Commissioner would be authorized to take measures if the service of the bonds could not be assured.

The Reich should provide 5,000,000,000 gold marks debentures for industrial concerns, carrying interest at 5 per cent., to be administered by a trustee of the Reparations Commission.

The controlled taxes already mentioned would be under a Foreign Commissioner, with a sub-commissioner for each tax.

Deliveries in Kind.

With regard to deliveries in kind, the experts believe that during the first two years deliveries should be automatically limited. After that a programme would be considered by a transfer committee, consisting of a representative of the Reparations Commission and five foreign exchange experts from Britain, the United States, France, Italy and Belgium, who would apply the bank balances deposited in the new issue bank to the account of the agent for reparation payments, to the payment of deliveries in kind and to the purchase of foreign currencies. As far as funds could not be remitted abroad without unduly prejudicing the foreign exchange market, they would be accumulated in Germany up to a maximum of 5,000,000,000 gold marks. When that limit was reached, the annual payment of Germany in her own currency in respect of the Peace Treaty charges would be reduced to an amount which could be remitted abroad yearly. Thus if the annual liability recommended by the experts proved to exceed the export surplus which Germany was able to create, the annual burden would be automatically reduced to the amount of such surplus.

An essential part of the scheme is that Germany should issue in the first year a foreign loan of 800,000,000 gold marks in order to provide stability of currency and to finance deliveries in kind during the period of her economic rehabilitation.—Reuter.

Press Comment.

Later.

Evening newspapers comment favourably on the reports of the Committees of Experts, the value of which they consider is derived from unanimity; they think that the reports justify the French policy.

The "Temps," referring to the experts' recommendation that France and Belgium forthwith abandon exploitation of the Ruhr and the Rhineland pledges, while claiming to substitute completion of guarantees, says that France realizes the extent of the sacrifice asked, but is ready to raise no obstacle to the agreement proposed.—Reuter.

Berlin, Apr. 9.

Early newspapers' views vary from the National "Deutsche Zeitung," which regards General Dawes' letter as distinctly pro-German and anti-French, to the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung," the organ of the industrialists, which is at present prepared to concede that a great attempt has been made to solve the reparations questions in a businesslike manner.

Apr. 10.

Political circles regard the decisions of the Committees of Experts, as far as they are already known, as containing a possibility of discussion. The opinion is held that the figures are far too high, but the proposals are assured thorough examination.—Reuter.

Favourably Received in London.

London, Apr. 10.

The reports of the expert committees are received in London as the most prominent signboard hitherto erected on the reparations road rather than as in any way indicating that the end of the journey is near.

Apart from Germany's attitude, the newspapers anticipate that very likely snags will arise, firstly in the matter of the fixation of the total sum payable by Germany, which the committees were forbidden to discuss, and secondly in connexion with the oblique references to the absolute necessity of France abandoning her economic control of the Ruhr, but as a business proposal the reports are hailed as a solid achievement, being moreover, encouragingly unanimous.

Several commentators remark that the payment of £125,000,000 annually would put a severe strain on any nation, but, nevertheless, the consensus plumps for adoption of the reports, in the belief that the terms are well within Germany's capacity to accept.—Reuter.

No Call on Budget Revenue for First Two Years.

London, Apr. 9.

It is noteworthy that under the recommendations of the Committees of Experts, the Allies would make no direct call upon Germany's Budget revenues for the next two years, seeing that the payment of 1,000,000,000 gold marks in 1924-5 would be provided for by means of a foreign loan of 800,000,000 gold marks, and 200,000,000 gold marks from railways. The payment of 1,220,000,000 gold marks in 1925-26 would be obtained from 595,000,000 gold marks from railways, 125,000,000 gold marks from industrial debentures and 500,000,000 gold marks from the sale of the railway company's shares. The payment of 1,200,000,000 gold marks for 1926-27 would comprise 550,000,000 gold marks from railways, 250,000,000 gold marks from the transport tax, 250,000,000 gold marks from industrial debentures and only 110,000,000 gold marks from Budget revenues.

The payment of 1,750,000,000 gold marks for 1927-28 would comprise 660,000,000 gold marks from railways, 290,000,000 gold marks from the transport tax, 300,000,000 gold marks from industrial debentures and 500,000,000 gold marks from Budget revenues.

The experts assume that Germany's financial and economic situation will have returned to normal by the end of 1928-29. The payment of 2,500,000,000 gold marks for that year would comprise 660,000,000 gold marks from railways 290,000,000 gold marks from the transport tax, 300,000,000 gold marks from industrial debentures and 1,250,000,000 gold marks from Budget revenues.—Reuter.

American Press Delighted.

New York, Apr. 10.

The newspapers are of the unanimous opinion that the report of the committees of experts is an admirable document, showing the way to ultimate settlement of vexed questions, while allowing Germany a chance to regain her feet firmly, financially and economically.—Reuter's American Service.

GERMAN TAX-DODGERS

Plan to Catch Those Who Live Abroad in Luxury: Special Tax on Travellers

Berlin, Apr. 4.

The Government have at length taken steps to check the exodus of Germans, who, since marks have been stabilized, have been living in luxury at foreign health resorts.

A decree, which has been signed by President Ebert, states that only 200 gold marks may be taken out of the country. Every German traveller must pay a tax of 500 gold marks, except in the case of traders.

One of the main reasons for this is the fact that 70,000 Germans are at present in Italy, spending roughly 35,000,000 rentenmarks a month. Many are accepting three, instead of the official six Italian lire for one rentenmark, thus endangering the latter's stability.

The decree is criticized as not affecting the rich and interfering with the holidays of people of the middle classes who desire to journey abroad.—Reuter.

Germany's Choice.

Paris, Apr. 7.

Speaking at a Democratic meeting at Weimar, the German ex-Minister, Herr Koch, said that the Government must bring the people to consciousness of realities, especially as regarded their foreign policy. "Vanquished Germany," he said, "must choose between an agreement with a view to fulfilment of the Treaty and continuation of the misery of the last five years."—Reuter.

POINCARE'S BUDGET PROMISES

Absolute Balancing Forecast: Special Powers Only to Effect Economies

Paris, Apr. 4.

Voting as on a question of confidence in the Government, the Chamber of Deputies to-day rejected a Radical amendment to the Pensions Bill by 327 votes to 201. It was a test vote on the same issue that caused the defeat of the late Government on March 26.

The present majority affords a truer reflex of the Government's position than last night's vote on the Ruhr policy, for which M. Poincaré has invariably secured thumping majorities.

Apr. 5.

In the Chamber of Deputies to-day, the Pensions Bill was passed in its entirety by a show of hands.

M. Poincaré stated that the Government desired to achieve an absolute and complete balancing of the Budget, and would not sanction any increase in expenditure or spend a centime over its resources. The decree laws would only be utilized to carry out economies.—Reuter.

DEEDS NOT WORDS

M. Poincare's Terms Upon which France Will Recognize Russia

Paris, Apr. 9.

M. Poincaré defined France's attitude towards Russia in the Senate to-day. He stated that it was not because of Russia's internal régime that France had not resumed relations, but because the Soviet had not agreed to the settlement of outstanding economic questions. This coincided with the attitude of the United States.

The Prime Minister said that he had sent a note to Great Britain regarding the forthcoming Anglo-Russian negotiations, drawing attention to the position of the owners of Russian bonds and submitting that any settlement reached should apply to the whole Russian debt. He asked Great Britain to have regard to that.

At the same time he had instructed the French Ambassador not to make formal refusals in the event of Great Britain desiring France to participate in the Anglo-Russian conversations. M. Poincaré was quite ready to resume conversations when Russia showed herself disposed to pass from words to deeds.

France was not placing obstacles in the way of private enterprise with Russia.

Anglo-Russian Conversations.

Later.

The Russian negotiators, headed by M. Rakovsky, will arrive in London to-night.

Apr. 10.

Ten Russian delegates, accompanied by numerous secretaries and officials, including women, arrived in London last night to attend the Anglo-Russian Conference to discuss the debts and treaty question.

M. Litvinoff was not present. He is expected to arrive in six or seven weeks' time.—Reuter.

THE ELECTIONS IN ITALY

A Sweeping Victory for Signor Mussolini Almost a Foregone Conclusion

Rome, Apr. 6.

The Fascisti are obtaining a sweeping victory in the parliamentary elections.

Disturbances occurred at Bari, Rovigo and Naples, but are not serious.

Signor Mussolini's success is practically a foregone conclusion, largely on account of the new electoral law, which assigns two-thirds of the total seats to the party obtaining the largest number of votes. A slight element of doubt, however, exists owing to the provision that the winning party must poll 25 per cent. of the aggregate votes cast and some score of parties have taken the field. On the other hand they are mostly small and unorganized and only two of them, namely the Popular Party and the Unitarian-Socialists, are fighting in all electoral districts.

The [illegible] violently antagonistic to the Government, but is disavowed by Signor Mussolini. The latter, which is led by Signor Turati, consists of moderate Socialists, while the dark horse is the so-called Constitutional Opposition led by the former Premier, Signor Benomi, and the former Minister, Signor Amendola, which claims much support in the country, although it is only of recent formation and lacks organization.—Reuter.

Fascists Leading by a Large Majority

Rome, Apr. 7.

The election results up to the present show that 1,437 votes have been cast for the Government and 823 for the other parties. The Catholic Popular Party is heading the latter with 242 votes. The Unitary Socialists have 158 votes, the Maximalists 150, the Communists 57 and the Republicans 39.

It is [illegible] per cent. of the [illegible] the Fascists, who up to the present have a 64 per cent. majority, whereas only 25 per cent. is required by the electoral law to secure the return of the Government list of candidates. Even in a former Socialist stronghold like Milan more than 50 per cent. of the voters supported the Government. [illegible] majority.—Reuter.

Rome, Apr. 8.

The new Chamber of Deputies consists of 375 members of the Government Party against 160 members representing the eleven other parties. The Catholic Popular Party now have 40 seats, having lost 66. The Democratic Socialists now have 25 seats, having lost 57.—Reuter.

GERMAN ELECTORAL CAMPAIGN

Herr Stresemann's Protest against Passive Resistance

Berlin, Apr. 6.

In a speech opening the electoral campaign, Herr Stresemann reiterated the impossibility of continuing the M.I.C.U.M. contracts. He vigorously protested against Germany's incapacity being made the starting-point for fresh construction of passive resistance, which, he declared, was how Paris threatened to interpret discontinuance of the contracts. Herr Stresemann asked if the old game were to begin anew just when the reports of the Committees of Experts were presented. He stated that Germany favoured direct negotiation between State and State.—Reuter.

BAVARIAN ELECTIONS

Gen. von Ludendorff Taking Part: Nationalist and Communist Gains

Berlin, Apr. 7.

The elections to the new Bavarian Diet were held throughout Bavaria yesterday. The results up to the present show that the extreme Nationalists, Herr Hitler, Gen. von Ludendorff, and their followers, as well as the Communists, gained considerably at the expense of the Moderate and Socialist parties. About 80 per cent. of the electors voted.

Gen. von Ludendorff took a prominent part in the campaign and delivered a speech to his followers in the famous beer cellar where the Hitler revolt was suppressed.—Reuter.

PEACE TREATY WITH TURKEY

"Humiliating and Cowardly:" Mr. Ll. George's Fulminations

London, Apr. 9.

The House of Commons to-day unanimously passed the second reading of the Treaty of Peace with Turkey Bill.

Mr. Lloyd George criticized the Treaty as humiliating, cowardly and possibly calamitous, but Mr. Stanley Baldwin thought that a remarkable feat had been performed in view of the interval which had elapsed between the conclusion of hostilities and the signature of the Treaty.

The Premier, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, winding up the debate, emphasized the desirability of passing the Bill in order that we might be enabled to conclude the ratification forms and regularize our position with Turkey.—Reuter.

TRIAL OF RUSSIAN PROFESSORS

Four Distinguished Scientists Sentenced to Death by Bolsheviks at Kieff

Moscow, Apr. 8.

The trial has concluded at Kieff of a number of well known local intelligentsia, mostly Social-Democrats, on a charge of treason.

Sentences of death were passed to-day on M. Tchebakov, M. Yakoviev, M. Inovsky and Madame Vinogradova, while two brothers named Vasilenko, M. Tcheloensky, M. Smirnov and M. [illegible] to 10 years' imprisonment, Anna Kapoustinskia to seven years and others to five years.

The condemned persons have the right to appeal within 48 hours.—Reuter.

Paris, Apr. 8.

M. Poincaré has telegraphed to M. Clemenceau [illegible] that French public opinion has grave fears that the professors implicated in the trial at Kieff will suffer the death penalty. Their loss would cause great sorrow and be regarded as a diminution of the world's [illegible]. The French Government has asked the British and Italian Governments to make a further appeal.—Reuter.

INDIA'S NEED

Patience, Sympathy and Imagination, Says Sir Roderick Jones: Complex and Delicate Case

Bombay, Apr. 6.

The passengers of the steamer Naldera, which sailed yesterday, included Sir Roderick Jones, completing a seven-months' tour of the United States, Canada, the Far East and India. Sir Roderick has been travelling for the past six weeks in India, during which time he was the guest of the Viceroy at the Viceregal Lodge at Delhi for a fortnight.

Sir Roderick Jones declined to be interviewed on the Indian situation, saying that it was far too complex and delicate for the opinion of a casual traveller to be worth anything. He, however, endorsed the statement recently made by Sir Mohamed Shafi, a Member of the Viceroy's Council, that what were most required in India at the present time were, on one side patience, and on the other sympathy and imagination.—Reuter.

VIVID TALE OF FIRE ON FRANGESTAN

Burnt to a Skeleton But All Passengers Safe: Sharks Defrauded of Prey

Port Sudan, Apr. 4.

Sir Derrick Watson, Bart., was a passenger on the steamer Frangestan. Interviewed by Reuter's correspondent, Sir Derrick, in a thrilling narrative, said that when the wireless operator woke him up with the alarm of fire he regarded it as a joke in retaliation for many that had been played the previous day, but he rose and found the passengers mustered on deck, watching smoke rising from the ventilators. Even then he did not think it serious but later the smoke increased and it was obvious that the fire could not be controlled.

When the flames spread, an aged pilgrim offered his small vessel of Holy Water. He was confident that it would quell the furnace.

Meanwhile the Frangestan was in wireless communication with 47 ships. When the Clan MacIver arrived, the European passengers were first transferred and then the pilgrims and their baggage. Night fell before the transfer was completed. The smoke was then rising in dense clouds. An Italian ship, which was standing by, turned her searchlights on the Frangestan and disclosed the eerie spectacle of the smoking ship surrounded by swarms of hungry sharks led by pilot-fish.

The crew had remained on board and the wireless operator, in spite of the oppressive heat and the smoke, stuck to his cabin till just before the captain ordered the crew to abandon the vessel. The flames had spread from forward, devouring first the saloon and then the bridge, on which the captain was standing at his post. The ship listed heavily and was settling by the head. So intense was the heat that the steel plates fell off like scales, leaving the skeleton silhouetted against the roaring furnace. The Tangistan's lights were sighted at ten o'clock in the evening.

It was then impossible for the captain to remain. As he departed, he paused on the gangway to light a cigarette. At the same time the gangway caught fire.

The proceedings throughout were very orderly. None of the passengers' effects were lost and all were little the worse for the experience.—Reuter.

DESTROYING MOTORS BY WIRELESS

British Radiologist's Discovery of German Secret: Motor Stopped 50ft. Away

London, Apr. 5.

Mr. Grindell Matthews, a British inventor and an expert radiologist, claims to have mastered the method of disabling a motor by means of an invisible ray directed at the magneto, which was discovered in Germany last year and held up to the present been kept secret.

Mr. Matthews yesterday demonstrated the method by stopping a motor 50 feet away. He asserts that the system when developed will not only stop aeroplanes but destroy them, explode powder magazines and destroy practically anything on which the rays rest.—Reuter.

The str. Frangestan, recently burned near Port Sudan, as seen in Yangtszepoo Dock, Shanghai, last January.

THE PLAGUE IN INDIA

Severest Outbreak Since 1918: 25,000 Deaths in March

Lahore, Apr. 5.

The plague epidemic is the severest since 1918. It is estimated that the mortality in March was 25,000. The epidemic is expected to last another six weeks. The Government is supplying additional medical relief. The Punjab University examinations have been postponed for a month.—Reuter.

LLOYD'S SHIPPING RETURNS

Tonnage Launched and Under Construction in Quarter Ended March 31

London, Apr. 8.

Lloyd's returns show that a tonnage of 1,473,000 tons was under construction in the United Kingdom during the past quarter, an increase of 78,000 tons as compared with the previous quarter and a decrease of 19,000 tons as compared with a year ago. The total includes 101,000 tons on which work has been suspended.

The tonnage launched in the past quarter was 361,000 tons, as compared with 114,000 tons for the previous quarter.

The total tonnage under construction abroad was [illegible] tons, including 118,000 tons on which work has been suspended, Germany and Danzig heading the list with 299,000 tons.

The total tonnage launched abroad was 188,000 tons.—Reuter.

BRITISH ROUND WORLD FLIGHT

New Gear for Sq. Ldr. MacLaren: Ready Help by Americans in His Misfortune

Corfu, Apr. 4.

A messenger with new reduction gear for Squadron-Leader MacLaren's machine arrived here today. It is expected that the aviators will depart for Athens on Saturday.

When Squadron-Leader MacLaren was forced to land at Corfu, Americans were the first to come to his aid with a tent, blankets and foodstuffs sent by Colonel Stephen Lowe, the director of the American Near East Relief Orphanage at Corfu.

Apr. 5.

On account of a defective casting, Squadron-Leader MacLaren has to obtain a new engine from England. The resumption of the world flight is consequently delayed for 10 days.—Reuter.

MURDER OF AMERICANS IN ALBANIA

Murderers Rounded Up: Two Killed and One Wounded

Tirana, Apr. 6.

Unknown persons have murdered two American merchants on the Tirana Scutari road.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 7.

A telegram from Tirana gives the names of the two murdered American merchants as Messrs. B. E. Long and Coroman. It says that the Albanian Government deeply regret the crime, which is the first of this kind committed in Albania. They are convinced that it had a political aim and was intended to discredit Albania. The Government have taken strong measures to secure the arrest and punishment of the murderers.—Reuter.

New York, Apr. 8.

The Americans murdered in Albania were Mr. Robert Lou's Coleman, of San Francisco, and Mr. George B. de Long, of New York, the son of the late Senator de Long.—Reuter's American Service.

London, Apr. 9.

It is reported from Tirana that the Albanian gendarmerie have killed two and wounded one of the murderers of the Americans, Messrs. de Long and Coleman. The other three escaped and are being pursued by gendarmes.—Reuter.

COAL MINERS' WAGES DISPUTE

Ballots in North of England

London, Apr. 9.

The results of the North of England miners' ballots on the owners' terms (an increase in the minimum rate of wages from 20 to 34½ per cent. and the appropriation of 87 per cent. of any surplus to wages and 13 per cent. to profits instead of 93 per cent. to wages and 17 per cent. to profits as at present) up to the present show that Northumberland, Yorkshire and Leicestershire favour acceptance by substantial majorities, but the Lancashire and Cheshire returns indicate a large vote against acceptance in consequence of the recommendation of the local federation.—Reuter.

Bucharest, Apr. 4.—Prince Naruhiko Higashikuni, after laying a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier yesterday, made a speech eulogizing the bravery of the Rumanian Army. A great military parade will be held today in his honour, which will be attended by the Royal Family.—Reuter.

AMERICAN OIL SCANDALS

Senator Wheeler Indicted for an Improper Fee

Great Falls, Apr. 8.

The Federal Grand Jury has indicted Senator Wheeler of accepting a retaining fee to influence the granting of oil-land permits after he became a senator. —Reuter's American Service.

Washington, Apr. 9.

In the Senate to-day, Mr. Burton K. Wheeler, Democratic Senator for Montana, who has been indicted by the Federal Grand Jury for accepting a retaining fee to influence the granting of oil-land permits, denounced the indictment as the product of a damnable conspiracy.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh supported Senator Wheeler and introduced a resolution, which was supported by the Democratic leader, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, and carried nem. con., appointing a committee of five Senators to investigate the charges against him.—Reuter's American Service.

OBITUARY

Lady Emily Peel

Peking, Apr. 6.

The death is announced at Florence, on April 4, of Lady Macleay's mother, Lady Emily Peel, after a long illness.

The deceased lady was the widow of the late Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Peel, Bart., G.C.B., and the daughter of the ninth Marquess of Tweeddale and of his wife Lady Susan Montagu, daughter of the Duke of Manchester.

Lady Emily Peel was the youngest of a family of 17 children, and among her sisters were the Marchioness of Dalhousie, wife of the Viceroy of India, and the Duchess of Wellington, who married the only son of the Iron Duke. Among her brothers, the youngest, Admiral of the Fleet Lord John Hay, commanded the British naval forces in the China seas in the 'sixties.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPANESE STEAMER IN DANGER

A Lopsided Cargo of Zinc

Sydney, Apr. 4.

The Japanese steamer Honolulu Maru, from Melbourne to Sydney, has wirelessed that she is urgently requiring assistance, saying that the vessel has heeled over too much and is in a dangerous condition. Several steamers are going to her assistance and a tug has been sent from Sydney. The vessel is making little headway. The captain does not wish to leave his ship. The British man-o'-war Dauntless is standing by.

Later.

The man-o'-war Dragon is towing the Honolulu Maru to Jervis Bay. She was fighting desperately in terrific seas late last night. —Reuter.

Melbourne, Apr. 4.

The Honolulu Maru's cargo of zinc has shifted owing to heavy seas.—Reuter.

Saved in Terrific Sea.

Apr. 5.

An officer of H. M. S. Dauntless, interviewed, said that the Dauntless found the Honolulu Maru rolling at an angle of 40 degrees. The weather was terrific and it was sometimes impossible to see the Japanese vessel. "It was the worst sea we have experienced," the officer declared "I thought time and again that she would turn turtle, but the fact that she was able to keep her port side to windward saved her."

Apr. 6.

The Honolulu Maru anchored safely in Jervis Bay at eleven this morning.—Reuter.

London, April 4.—The War Office announces the appointment of Major-General Sir Theodore Fraser, who commanded the British Forces in Iraq in 1922, as General Officer Commanding in Malaya.—Reuter.

ENGLISH-SPEAKING RACES

Australian Premier's Plea for World Co-operation

New York, Apr. 4.

The former Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, speaking at a luncheon given in his honour here to-day, appealed for co-operation between the British Empire and the United States to preserve the peace of the world. He referred to the awakening of the East and to Australia as the vanguard of Western civilization in the Pacific.

Mr. Hughes asserted that without Anglo-American co-operation Western civilization was doomed.

In conclusion, the ex-Premier deplored the abandonment of the Singapore base.—Reuter's American Service.

AUSTRALIA'S NEED OF A NAVAL BASE

Advice from Admiral Field

Sydney, Apr. 7.

The British special service squadron which is on an Empire cruise has arrived at Jervis Bay from Tasmania.

Rear-Admiral Sir Frederick Field, interviewed, expressed the opinion that it was undesirable as a consequence of the dropping of the Singapore scheme that Australia should act hastily in establishing an expensive naval base. He declared that England was not aware of Australia's possibilities and he hoped that the visit of the naval squadron would have an educative influence.—Reuter.

"COPEC" CONFERENCE AT BIRMINGHAM

A Comprehensive Programme and Large Attendance

London, Apr. 7.

An International Conference on Christian Politics, Economics and Citizenship, which is dubbed the "Copec," opened at Birmingham to-day, when messages from the King, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Mr. Stanley Baldwin were read expressing sympathy with the objects of the Conference. There are several hundred delegates to the Conference, which is probably unprecedented in scope and purpose and has been preparing for three years. The scale may be judged by the fact that the reports on two subjects for consideration on the first day alone totalled about 120,000 words. —Reuter.

KU KLUX KLAN OUTRAGE

Four Men Shot Dead and 11 Injured

Lilly, Gr., Apr. 6.

The greatest indignation has been aroused throughout the country by a tragedy last night in connexion with a Ku Klux Klan celebration, when four men were shot dead and eleven injured. The Ku Klux Klansmen came entirely uninvited and held their ceremonies in an open field. The townsmen played a fire-hose on their special train. Shooting followed. None but townsmen were shot. The train came from Johnstown. The police have arrested 60 Klansmen on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.—Reuter's American Service.

THE INSURRECTION IN HONDURAS

Capital Still Besieged

Washington, Apr. 8.

Advices received by the State Department depict a serious state of affairs in the capital of Honduras. The ground on the outskirts of the city is strewn with dead. Typhoid and dysentery are raging. No attempt is being made to inter or cremate the dead. The city is still besieged and there has been considerable hand-to-hand fighting.—Reuter's American Service.

STABILIZATION OF THE BELGIAN FRANC

American and Swiss Loans

Brussels, Apr. 4.

According to the newspapers, American banks are prepared to place $200,000,000 at the disposal of the Société Nationale de Crédits, and Swiss banks are ready to grant a loan of Frs. 1,000,000,000 on which the Société could draw as necessary to stabilize the Belgian franc.—Reuter.

BIG WAREHOUSE FIRE

Tons of Tea and Rubbe Destroyed in London

London, Apr. 3.

Thousands of tons of tea and rubber were destroyed by fire in a warehouse at Bermondsey yesterday evening. Two firemen were overcome by the fumes and were taken to hospital.—Reuter.

NORMAL WORK AT WEMBLEY

London, Apr. 4

Work is proceeding normally at Wembley. The additional police are still present in reduced numbers.

The strike position at Croydon Aerodrome remains unchanged. No aeroplanes are leaving.—Reuter.

SIKH FANATICS SENT FOR TRIAL

Lahore, Apr. 7.

Ninety-one Babar Akalis, or Sikh fanatics, have been committed for trial at the sessions. The magistrate pointed out that the leaders had conspired to murder Government officials and loyalists, whom they accused of obstructing the Sikh shrines reform movement, and had surreptitiously procured bombs and arms from the frontier and elsewhere.—Reuter.

NEW QUEENSLAND LOAN

London, Apr. 7.

The Bank of England has issued the prospectus of the new Queensland Loan. The lists will close on April 24.

The loan is being issued for the conversion of the 3½ per cent. 1924 Loan of £4,765,000 and also of the 4 per cent. Loan of £7,939,000, due on July 1. Holders of these loans will be offered in exchange 5½ per cent. inscribed stock due in 1926/29 on cash payment of 10/- per cent. Cash applications will be received at 99½ per cent. on payment of 10 per cent. on application and 89½ per cent. on July 1.—Reuter.

FRANCE'S GOLD RESERVE INTACT

Paris, Apr. 7.

M. de Lasteyrie, the ex-Minister of Finance, speaking at Tulle today, stated that the foreign credits, which were employed to break the offensive against the franc, had been entirely repaid with the result that the gold reserve in the Banque of France remained intact.—Reuter.

M. TROTSKY BETTER

Helsingfors, Apr. 7.

It is officially announced that M. Trotsky has recovered from his illness and will return to Moscow within the next few days to resume his duties as Commissary for War and President of the Revolutionary Council.—Reuter.

GREEK KING'S DEMAND FOR RESTORATION

Bucharest, Apr. 8.

An impassioned despatch to the Greek people from the exiled King George demands that he be restored to the monarchy. He declares that the violent suppression of principles on which the State is founded impels him to protest against the iniquity committed against the nation and to demand free exercise of the rights and duties of Royalty as laid down in the Constitution.—Reuter.

SATURDAY'S TELEGRAMS

DEATH OF HERR HUGO STINNES

The Greatest Industrial and Financial Magnate in the History of Germany: A Bitter Enemy of Communism

Berlin, Apr. 10.

The death is announced of Herr Hugo Stinnes, the great German industrialist.—Reuter.

 With the death of Herr Hugo Stinnes, writes a Continental Correspondent, Germany loses one of the greatest figures in her history. The biggest industrialist and financier produced in an age of such men, Herr Stinnes' life was a remarkable one. A man of quiet, simple tastes, hating luxury with the hatred almost of a fanatic, yet his were the riches of a Croesus. Probably the biggest capitalist the world has ever seen, certainly the biggest in Germany, he was the one man who could drive a motor-car through the poorest and most hard-hit mining areas of the Ruhr Valley without hostility from its starving people. Hating politics with the hatred of a business man, force of circumstances drew him into its meshes and he became one of the most outstanding figures in the politics of the world.

Herr Stinnes was born at Muelheim, on the Ruhr, in 1870, the son of respected parents. His father was a rich coal merchant of Mulheim and possessed a keen business instinct, which was magnified in his son. The boy was sent to school and passed his school days with nothing to indicate the career he had before him. Afterwards he was placed in a business office in Coblenz where he speedily picked up the elements of a business training. Always thorough, he entered a coal mine in the Ruhr as a simple miner and learned the coal business right from the very bottom, afterwards going to a the Academy of Mining in Berlin. This was in 1889, and in the following year he entered his father's firm at Mulheim, founded by his grandfather over a century ago. He remained there but two years and afterwards established a firm of his own, known as Hugo Stinnes, Ld., with capital of Mks. 50,000.

German Big Business.

Then it was that German big business began to feel this young man's hand. From dealing in coal he became the owner of several mines and extended his business to the manufacture of various kinds of fuel. Then his activities began to be felt in the steel industry and many minor industries in the Ruhr district. He turned to shipping and operated a fleet of tugs and barges on the Rhine. His activities in the direction steadily increased and for many years before the war he had a big fleet of ocean-going ships operating between German ports and Newcastle, carrying coal. His ships traded with the Baltic ports, the Mediterranean, the North Sea and Black Sea ports. He imported enormous quantities of English coal to the Continent and held a large interest in certain British coal mines. His fortune before the War was vaguely estimated at several millions of pounds sterling. He was a director of many of the greatest industrial and mining companies in Westphalia, the Rhineland and Luxemburg, to say nothing of numerous subsidiary industries such as tramways, the supply of electric power and light and the control of newspapers. The secret of his success was his strength of will and his power for unity,—always his slogan—unity of direction and the coordination of aims in all branches of business.

When the war broke out he secured an enormous share in the war profits which flowed into the coffers of the great German industrialists. He was consulted by Ludendorff for advice and in the organization of the industrial and coal productions of Belgium —that organization which at the time aroused the reluctant but sincere admiration of the rest of the world. It was his connexion with Ludendorff that led to his becoming an influence, at first behind the scenes, in German politics. During the War he extended his influence in Hamburg by the purchase of several shipping lines and by becoming associated with the Hamburg—Amerika Linie and the Norddeutscher-Lloyd Linie. His newspaper purchases round about that time included the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung."

In 1921 he was reported to be contemplating something in the nature of a super-trust in Germany, co-ordinating the whole of his interests into one gigantic concern, regulating production, transport and the supply of the German markets and the markets of the whole world, and to further this end he is reported to have expended something like £250,000,000.

An Opponent of Communism.

Stinnes' politics were always moderate. Never at any time would he give his favour to the extreme Right movement. His was always the People's Party, and he was ever an avowed exponent of the policy of give and take. In spite of general belief, those who knew him best will always say that there was nothing Chauvinistic in his character at all. He was a bitter enemy of Marxism and Communism, and was always suspected by his opponents on that score of secret leanings towards Monarchism. If this was so, however, generally he lacked any aspirations towards the return of a Monarchy within his own breast, and if he recognized the Republic as a mixed blessing, yet he threw himself into its activities with the whole-heartedness for which he was remarkable, becoming a member of the Reichstag and devoting all his powerful energies in bringing about unity of the country, and doing all that was possible to set Germany on the road to rehabilitation. Always it was to him the Government went for advice. When the policy of passive resistance broke down in the Ruhr district, his was the first mind to realize that something had to be done, and he told the Government frankly that he had made a private agreement with the French on behalf of his own interests for the working once more of the mines in the Ruhr valley. This action was not altogether relished by the people as a whole, but in the light of events it proves to have been one of the best things done for Germany since the war, and is responsible for setting Germany's trade well on the way to its former success

Herr Stinnes leaves a number of sons, ranging evenly from 8 years to 30. They are said to take after their father, being a party of earnest young men, simple living and hardworking. He leaves his wife to mourn his loss.

The Hugo Stinnes Linien and concerted interests in Shanghai request us to state that they have received no confirmation of the news from Hamburg.—Ed.

GERMAN OPINION ON THE EXPERTS' REPORT

Berlin, Apr. 10.

Herr Sorge, director of Krupp's and Chairman of the Association of German Industrialists, interviewed by Reuter's correspondent, expressed the opinion that the reports of the reparation experts must be accepted, in spite of the enormously heavy burden imposed. He thinks that better terms are not likely to be obtained. Herr Sorge said that an absolute prerequisite was the full restoration of Germany's economic sovereignty. The experts' proposals were only possible if an international loan could be raised, as to which he was sceptical.—Reuter.

FROM THE FOUR WINDS

AN ENGLISH WANDERER IN AMERICA

The Other Side of Prohibition: Insurance Companies' Warning of Death-rate from Bootlegger Whiskey: America's Prosperity: New British Ambassador

From Our Own Correspondent.

San Francisco, Mar. 5.

Whenever a person in an apparent healthful state of mind takes his own life by swallowing a dose of carbolic acid or strychnine, he is said to have committed suicide; but when a man goes on what he calls the spree and drinks sufficient of the abominable bootleg whiskey that represents an overwhelming proportion of available supplies now in this country, they merely say that he died of drink. To the old China hand on leave in the United States it is a distinctly dispiriting circumstance that he cannot get a drink when he wants it—and every man in the Orient will agree that, human nature being what it is, a man will want a drink about 45 times as much when it is not available as when it is—but if he would play safe he must be teetotal. To be sure, there is an abundance of liquor. Curiously, too, every man claims that he has a number one bootlegger, and that what he gets is unfailingly "good liquor," but if you are a newspaper reader you will be able to see through a long array of obituary notices that a lot of people have been fooled on this point. It is apparent that the joke is decidedly on the consumer and not on the bootlegger, who is reaping a harvest of gold while the cemeteries are filling up faster than they should. I saw statistics the other day written by an insurance company purporting to prove that at least 200,000 "sane individuals are departing this life yearly from slow poisoning by drinking bootleg whiskey in one form or another."

Bootleg whiskey cannot be told so much by any great difference to the palate, but for its after effects it will beat anything that "Hongkew whiskey" can do. The following will show how bootleg is made:

> Methyl alcohol is used freely in moonshine, and is known for the danger that it brings to the drinker. Denatured alcohol contains a varying percentage of methyl alcohol, ranging from two to 10 per cent. Acetaldehyde is the name of the poison that helps the alcohol give the kick to the imbiber of bootleg, moonshine and unaged liquor. It is a rapid intoxicant, inducing profound stupor and deleterious after effects. The ranker the liquor the higher the aldehyde content: it may contain as much as 100 per cent. Acetic acid, a sort of half brother to acetaldehyde, is the lurking demon in home-made wine. Salicylic acid, the use of which has been prohibited for years, is now being used to arrest fermentation in some grades of wine.

Sudden deaths from indulgence in bootleg whiskey are now so common as to be an everyday occurrence, but I suspect that the American public does not hear of the multitude of deaths that are caused by the slow effects of acetaldehyde. There seems to be no doubt that it will become increasingly difficult as time goes on to get a drink of the real "crater" in this country, and possibly the most effectual campaign of education to demonstrate the harmful physiological effects of the various forms of illicit liquor is being undertaken by the victims themselves, for no better proof can be given the public than a conspicuously high death-rate therefrom.

CONTINUED PROSPERITY OF AMERICA.

In spite of the fact that oil and other scandals in Washington are on the increase, and also that this is the Presidential year, when everyone expects a bad year, economists say that America is steering straight for its biggest industrial and business year in 1924. Prospects [illegible] better for a record business year, and financial and business men East and West are as optimistic as can be wished for, and there is no uncommon enthusiasm. In reviewing an intricate chain of conditions a few days ago, I found that the only "black spot" in the entire country is in the Dakotas, Iowa and Idaho, where over-time speculation and crop failures have crippled the finances of the farmers. The financial interests of the country have not lost faith, however, that the Middle West will eventually pull through and share in the nation's prosperity. So convinced are they that conditions in the "black spot" referred to can rapidly be improved, that York and Chicago interests have formed a pool of $10,000,000 "to enable the stricken individuals and organizations to tide over their difficulties."

On the Pacific Coast, and particularly around the Bay Region of San Francisco, business is on an extremely firm basis; indeed, the Western part of America did not feel to any great extent the pinch of hard times which were common during and after the slump years. And regarding the present "Black spots," it is, as one writer has said, a gratifying phenomenon when financiers back up their statements with hard cash, as I indicate above has been done, for then we have the best evidence that the talk about prosperity is not idle chatter.

CONTROLLING RADIO WAVES.

I remember years ago, as a struggling sub-editor on a Far Eastern paper, receiving the message that Marconi had succeeded in sending his first trans-Atlantic message from Poldhu in Cornwall. Our enthusiasm in those days scarcely knew any bounds, but even the best informed could not look forward in imagination to the possibilities of the radio. I notice by this morning's paper, for example, that the wireless wizard, Guglielmo Marconi, who has been devoting a couple of years to the possibility of controlling radio waves so as to focus them on any given point, has finally succeeded. Marconi claims that he can now concentrate and direct these electrical waves pretty much as light is controlled and directed by a searchlight, and if he desires to radio to a specific country or locality, he can do so, by the operation of certain controls in the sending station, without the chance of anyone listening in.

In a private letter from a friend in London, I also learn of another kind of air defence. This is an important scheme which is being prepared by the British Air Ministry and the War Office under the direction of Colonel Edward B. Ashmore, who, your readers will remember, commanded London's defence during the war. The scheme, so my informant writes, comprises a sky defensive extending to more than 40,000 feet above the ground. Colonel Ashmore will take great areas of the sky and "mine" and net and barrage them from the earth level to an altitude of more than three miles, that aerial raiders will find it impossible to live and move there, while above that will be an area of bursting shells and other defensive measures. New squadrons of [illegible] air fighters will patrol the air to an altitude never before attained in aerial fighting. I suppose that you may possibly have received telegraphic information regarding this, for I take it that my London friend has not the monopoly of such vitally important news. But it may have escaped the eye of the many in China who will remember with horror the bombing of London during those dark days.

So we move along and find that science is teaching us first to harness the air, and then to enter upon an absolute control.

FREEDOM OF THE PHILIPPINES.

"The Government of the United States would not feel that it had performed its full duty by the Filipino people, or discharged all of its obligations to civilization if it should yield at this time to mere expectations to national independence." A condensed report of the letter from President Coolidge to Manuel Roxas (head of the Philippine Independence Mission), of which the above is an excerpt, will doubtless have been supplied Shanghai by Reuter's, but the matter is so vital to American and other interests in the Far East that further information will doubtless be opportune.

In the President's opinion the time has not yet come for separation of the Islands from the States, and he states officially that the United States government "has full confidence in the ability, good intentions, fairness and sincerity" of Governor General Wood. It cannot be said that the Mission created much sympathy in the United States. I have personally met the head of the Mission and heard him speak on the subject, and must confess that I was impressed with his eloquence and apparent sincerity of motive. But, generally speaking, in this country interest fell flat,, or rather could not be keenly aroused, in the matter. The President's letter was written in reply to resolutions passed by the Island legislature, which, as many of your readers will be aware, asked for independence and attacked Governor Wood, who, the President now declares, intended "to act and has acted within the scope of his proper and constitutional authority." And the United States, thus convinced, is determined to sustain Him. Looking at the whole situation fairly and impartially, the President announced that one cannot but feel that if the Filipino people cannot cooperate in the support and encouragement of as good an administration as has been offered under Governor-General Wood their failure will be rather a testimony of unpreparedness for the full obligations of citizenship, than an evidence of patriotic preparedness to advance their country. And the President's letter gives advice to the Filipinos in this way, pointing to the possibility of either economic or political disorders, calculated to bring misfortune, if not disaster to the people of the Islands unless they are strongly supported:—

> By reason of their assurance against attack by any power, by the reason also of that financial and economic strength which inevitably accrues to them, by reason of the still expanding opportunities for industrial development, the Filipino people would do well to consider most carefully the value of their intimate association with the American nation. . . . Had the Philippines not been under the protection of the United States, they more than probably would have been involved deeply in the world war, and their independence and nationality would have become, as did those of many other peoples, pawns in the great world reorganization.

President Coolidge, however, does not close his eyes to the fact that his letter will not settle this matter, nor stop the agitation in the Islands for their independence. He indeed admits in his official document that there are many Americans at home who believe that the immediate independence of the Philippines would be best for both peoples, but he makes it unmistakeably plain that in his judgment the strongest argument that has been used in the United States in support of immediate independence is not the argument that it would benefit the Filipinos, but that it would be to the advantage of the United States.

THE NEW BRITISH AMBASSAODOR TO THE U. S.

When Sir Auckland Geddes was considered by some to have unduly hastened his resignation at Washington, in order that the Conservative Government might fill the post with a man whom it would regard as safe from the standpoint of its own imperial views, fears were expressed that the successor would be hard put to it to follow a man so undeniably popular as Sir Auckland. He so well understood how to live happily in the United States, and was so entirely at home in the atmosphere of Washington. His successor, Sir Esme William Howard, is a man of entirely different training. He has had a long diplomatic career, having been Minister to Switzerland before entering on service as Minister to Sweden from 1913 to 1919, after which he was promoted to the position of Ambassador at Madrid.

Sir Esme is 60, looks 50, and will soon complete the 40th year of his connexion with the British diplomatic Service, which he entered in 1885. He has had an exceptionally wide and varied diplomatic experience. He was in Dublin a year with the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, following this with two years in Rome, then becoming secretary of Embassy at Berlin, where he remained several years. Returning to the Foreign Office in London, he again went to Rome, and from 1908 8 was Counsellor of Embassy at Washington, and thereafter was successively Consul-General for Crete, Consul-General at Vienna, and Consul-General for Hungary. He became Minister to Switzerland in 1911, and then went to Sweden two years later, and was a member of the British delegation at the Paris Peace Conference. It will therefore be seen that his present ambassadorial appointment at Washington crowns a lifetime of training in international affairs that is surely almost unrivalled in extent and variety. He is, moreover, what the Americans call a "good mixer."

OPINION OF BRITISH LABOUR LEADERS.

To a surprising extent the press of the United States, even far away in the Middle West and the South, are devoting space to biographical matter regarding the British Labour leaders and the party. One rarely finds anything but somewhat extravagant eulogy. Take this—not that it is not true, for it unquestionably is:—

> "Men like Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Snowden might be well taken as examples by some of our noisy American radicals in politics, whose fulminations against business in the corporate form and against capital, under private control are on low levels of intelligence, and seemingly not on the highest levels of sincerity. In contrast, English labour leaders like Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Snowden make strong appeals to popular intelligence, whether or not one accepts their views: and as to their sincerity and integrity there is ample testimony from the foremost leaders in the ranks of their Conservative opponents. . . ."

Among the real Americans straight through the country there is a strong feeling that British politics and American politics are of entirely different species, and I think I am right in saying that, although he may not know his subject any too well, the average intelligent American realizes that their is no political atmosphere in the world to compare with that of Great Britain.

The following sketch of Ramsay Macdonald may be of interest to the Scottish community of the China ports—I forget where it appeared, but that does not matter much:—

> So far as his features go, Ramsay Macdonald is not bad-looking. An abundance of steel-gray hair across the top of a wide forehead, wide-set brown eyes deep under his brows, a strong Scotch nose and a strong chin; no, Ramsay Macdonald is not bad looking; C. F. G. Masterman once said of him that he was the handsomest man in the 1906 Parliament. The chin is particularly strong. It is the sort of chin they grow in Scotland. It drops straight down from the lower lip and it has a crease across the middle of it and a dimple at the square-thrusting bottom of it. Scotch Presbyterians run to that sort of chin, and Scotch Presbyterians are men to be looked upon with something very like respect.
>
> There is also a moustache to Ramsay Macdonald's face, a great spreading moustache which almost completely conceals his lips except when he mounts a platform and lifts his rich baritone voice to the back of the gallery. When you hear him, you will be reminded again of Scotland. On English lips, the Labour Party frequently becomes the "Labah Pahty," but to Ramsay Macdonald there are any number of r's in Labour. This is not to say that he burrs up the language as some of his Glasgow friends do, but still there are moments when he slips into "there's no the least use."

BRITISH COLUMBIA LETTER

Empress of Australia's Great Services During Japanese Earthquake Worthily Recognized: The Chinese Commission: Where Cats Cannot Face Rats

From Our Own Correspondent.

Vancouver B. C., Mar. 20.

"As Canadian citizens we are proud of the fact that the splendid service rendered by the ship at the time of the great Japanese earthquake was performed by a Canadian vessel, operated by a Canadian company, and that her captain, officers and crew were not forgetful of their duty to humanity."

With the above words Chief Justice MacDonald, acting Governor-general for British Columbia, presented to Captain A. J. Hailey, acting on behalf of Captain S. Robinson, O.B.E., commander of the C. P. R. Liner Empress of Australia, a bronze tablet. The pleasing ceremony took place aboard the liner in dock here two days ago. The tablet was subscribed for by the passengers who were on the ship and witnessed the splendid service rendered in Yokohama at the time of the disaster last September. The presentation took place in the sumptuous dining hall on the ship and was attended by influential and representative citizens. Mayor W. R. Owen, the president of the Board of Trade, and representative men from shipping and commercial organizations were in the gathering. Mr. Justice MacDonald paid a lofty tribute to Captain Robinson, and officers and crew for discipline and courage shown amid constant dangers of shocks, burning oil and explosions, and for the magnificent assistance rendered refugees which resulted in the saving of many lives. Traditional short speeches of seamen were given in reply.

The tablet, which is being set up in a prominent part of the vessel, reads:

> "Presented to R.M.S. Empress of Australia by the passengers to commemorate the heroic work performed by Commander Robinson R.N.R., O.B.E., and all the officers and crew in saving the lives of all on board and rescuing survivors of the earthquake and fire which devastated the district of Yokohama, September 1. 1923. The ship, for nine days a veritable haven of refuge, sheltered and succoured thousands of homeless and wounded."

Commander Robinson is at present skipper of the Empress of Canada on her trip around the world. The Empress of Australia sailed to-day for the Orient.

CHANG CHIEN'S COMMISSION.

Among the saloon passengers who sailed to-day on the Empress of Australia for China was the High Commissioner Chang Chien Jr., and his staff of six engineering and industrial assistants from Nantungchow. On their return to China they will report to the Peking Government on industrial and economic conditions and methods in the leading countries of the world. Branches of cotton textile engineering and coal mining have been the chief subjects of interest to the commission who spent several months touring the United States, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Holland and Italy.

RATS INVADE PORTLAND.

Thousands of big brown and grey ship rats have suddenly invaded the waterfront at Portland, Oregon, and so serious has the menace to edible cargoes become, Captain J. Spier, harbour master there came specially to Vancouver in quest of ferrets to trace them to their nests. So many and so vicious are the rats in Portland just now that cats have been chased off the wharves and even sporting dogs are practically useless in combating the pest. Captain Spier has left an open order with anybody and everybody in Vancouver to send down to Portland all the ferrets they can get.

MANILA, April 5.—Senators Quezon and Osmena and four others will sail for the United States on April 6 to present their plea for Independence to Congress and President Coolidge.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

MANILA, April 5.—It is reported that the appointment of Mr. Ben Wright, the Insular Auditor, as General Manager of the Philippine National Bank has been agreed upon.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

OUR PARIS LETTER

French Effort to Revive Franc: A Deal in Oil Shares With Disastrous Results

From Our Own Correspondent.

Paris, Feb. 22.

After a stormy sitting, the Chamber of Deputies adopted the second of the two principal measures which the Government has devised to rescue the franc from its unmerited depreciation. This measure was, in brief, an authority to increase all direct taxation by 20 per cent. The Socialists opposed it tooth and nail, bringing forward amendment after amendment and making long speeches in the hope of exhausting M. Poincaré's majority, but it remained faithful to him. The vote has not yet produced any improvement in the franc, probably because the whole series of fiscal Bills will have to go before the Senate after the Chamber has finished with them, and because foreign opinion does not yet realize, or believe, that France is prepared to go to extreme lengths to put her public finances in order. Moreover this determination on her part cannot really be proved unless the general election in May results in favour of the present majority, whose interest clearly is to support M. Poincaré, in view of his promise that the Government's influence would be exerted in their favour during the electoral period.

Meanwhile the Government continues to act in a manner suggestive of panic. It has closed the Produce Exchange, in the hope of preventing the public from being disturbed by high quotations for wheat and other necessaries. The inevitable result is to make people believe that the situation is much worse than it really is. The laws of supply and demand continue to operate in spite of all artificial precautions, and prices are still going up.

A NEW ROAD FOR ALBION.

The popularity of the British in France has not been increased by newspaper stories to the effect that a group of clever and unscrupulous people in London have "done" French investors out of quite a respectable number of millions of francs. The head and front of the offending is that large blocks of shares, which have since fallen considerably in value, were sold to French buyers, and endeavours are now being made to prove that these shares, or the bulk of them, were smuggled into France in defiance of the law.

Proceedings have been taken against an Englishman, Capt. Langton, formerly secretary of the Travellers' Club and head of the British Passport Office in Paris, who subsequently established himself in business in Paris as a banker. The inquiry into his operations dates from the beginning of 1922 and has therefore occupied the experts for two years before sufficient evidence to justify a prosecution was obtained. During the war, decrees were passed prohibiting, under heavy penalties, the export of capital and the import of securities without the permission of a special body known as the Commission des Changes.

According to the prosecution, large quantities of Mexican Eagle, Shell Transport and Royal Dutch shares were smuggled over the frontier, chiefly by aeroplane. They were then presented at the Stamp Office to receive the 2 per cent. stamp without which no foreign share certificate can be dealt in on the Paris Bourse. As it was no part of the business of the Stamp Office to inquire how these certificates came into the country, the Office collected the fees and stamped the certificates, which were then put on the market. Mexican Eagles found buyers in France at one time as high as Frs. 700 when the pound sterling was worth barely Frs. 40. They are now quoted about Frs. 95 and have been as low as Frs. 70. Taking the fall of the franc into account, the man who bought Mexican Eagles when they were near their highest point would have lost 80 or 90 per cent. of his money, assuming of course that he kept them.

ONE PLAIN EXPLANATION.

The presence of part of the shares complained about is accounted for by a Paris banker, who paid stamp duty on over 100,000 shares. They formed part of an issue of fresh capital, were taken up by French people who already had holdings, and were brought into France by written permission of the Commission des Changes. As there was at the time a general prohibition against importing foreign securities, it would appear that the Commission des Changes simply overrode the law—an event which now possesses a merely historic interest. It is quite possible that other persons who put Mexican Eagle, Shell and Royal Dutch shares on the market may be able to produce equally good authority for what they did.

THE RIDDLE OF THE SPHINX.

M. Maurice Rostand's new drama in verse, "The Secret of Sphinx," just produced at the Théâtre Sarah Bernhardt, is an ambitious work on a big subject—the inability of genius to attain its ideals and materialize its artistic visions. His hero, a young Italian poet, has written a drama which, according to rumour, is a masterpiece. The night of the première has arrived, and we see the Roman public in the theatre, waiting for the curtain to rise. The manager comes before the curtain and announces that there will be no performance, as the poet-dramatist has withdrawn his work suddenly at the last minute. The clamour of the spectators brings the poet himself before the curtain. He explains that his drama does not satisfy him. He asserts his right to destroy it, tears up the manuscript and walks off. This scene is typical of M. Maurice Rostand's disregard for reality. Tearing up a manuscript does not destroy a play when the actors have learnt and rehearsed their parts. Moreover the incident has little or no bearing on the title, and seems to have been invented chiefly to give the poet an opportunity to tell the public and the critics what he thinks of them.

Subsequently we are shown Eglano and a friend in front of the Great Pyramids. In the base of the Sphinx they find the "brooding spirit of eternal wisdom," played very effectively by Mme. Ida Rubenstein (the part was originally written for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt). She whispers the secret of existence into the friend's ear, and he falls dead. She also whispers in Eglano's ear, but he escapes with a shock, because the Sphinx told him only part of the truth. The last act takes place on the stage of the Roman theatre where Eglano's tragedy of the Sphinx has just ended (whereby we again miss the masterpiece and have to take it on trust). The act is, in the main, merely another duel between the author and the public. He treats with contempt or indifference the spectators who come on the stage to congratulate him and the journalist who comes to interview him. The scene is full of wit and biting sarcasm and is brilliantly versified.

NINE-TON TELESCOPE

Instrument for the Soviet Government

A reflecting telescope, originally ordered by the Imperial Russian Government, is now being completed for the Soviet Government by Sir Howard Grubb Sons' works at St. Albans. It has an aperture of one metre (nearly 40 inches), and a focal length of five metres.

The mirror, which is of glass, is 40½ inches in diameter and eight inches thick and weighs about 900 pounds and has been polished and figured under the personal supervision of Sir Howard Grubb. All the motions of the telescope and dome are electrically worked and operated by means of push buttons from any convenient position. The moving parts of the telescope weigh between four and five tons, the weight of the complete instrument being about nine tons.

The height from the base of the telescope to the top of the tube, when the latter is pointing to the zenith, is about 30 feet. The steel hemispherical revolving dome is of 32 feet internal diameter, and is carried on steel pillars 16 feet high. The spaces between the pillars will be filled in with brickwork or concrete when the instrument is erected in situ.

NEW WAR HORSE

Tank that Will Take Artillery into Action

One day a few weeks ago a strange monster pushed its nose outside the works of a British armament firm, and, to the amazement of passers-by, began to make its way to a hill close by.

It was the first of the new "war horse artillery Tanks," out for a trial of its possibilities.

People stared open-mouthed as the new war horse, after crawling slowly at first, began with a great din to run at a surprising speed. Those in charge of the operations were delighted with the behaviour of the new pet.

These new war tanks are designed to be not only self-contained fighting units, but to take field artillery into action. War experience showed that repeatedly artillery attacks were crippled owing to the horses being killed before the guns were got into position, and suggested that a steel "horse" would be preferable.

Outstanding features are that by a new system of springing, the jolting of the old type of tanks has been almost eliminated while as a result of a new method of making the caterpillar wheel, it can cover 1,000 miles without requiring new "caterpillars," as against 500 miles for the old tanks.

It appears to be about 25 feet long, and has a speed of 23 miles an hour.

TELEPHONING TO LINERS

Ships to be Connected to Land Exchanges

Following experiments conducted along the German coast last year, the German telegraphic authorities are now making preparations to establish wireless telephonic communication between liners at sea and telephone systems in Berlin, Bremen, Hamburg and other German towns.

It may be possible shortly, under favourable atmospheric conditions, for a passenger on a liner in the English Channel or some distance out in the Atlantic to ring up (viâ a coastal receiving station) a telephone subscriber in one of these towns, or vice versa.

Since the German wireless stations, at Norddeich, Cuxhaven, and Swinemunde were equipped last year with wireless telephonic apparatus continuous experiments have been made with a view to ascertaining at what distances it is possible to maintain wireless telephonic communication with vessels at sea.

Particularly successful results were obtained with the s.s. Cap Polonia, en route to South America, and the liner Albert Ballin, bound for New York. It was possible, by means of the five kilowatt transmitter at the Norddeich station to send messages which were clearly intercepted by the vessels when they were several days' journey south and west of the English Channel.

PROUD SHANTIES

Shanties, silvering themselves along the beaches,
Like heaps of old shells that the tide washes in,
The coarse grasses and the seagulls' screeches
And the sound of the sea have scraped thin.
Shanties are sure that they are shells when sunset-tinted,
Or filmed by fog in an opalescent swirl—
And in moonlight, when every grain of sand is glinted,
It's plain that they feel capable of pearl.

WINIFRED WELLS in "New Republic."

COMING OF AGE OF AIRCRAFT

Celebrated at Empire Exhibition: 21 Years Since First Flight

Considering the wonderful advancement that has been made during the past few years in all forms of aircraft construction, it does not seem possible that the airship has only just reached its majority. But such is the fact, nevertheless, for it was 21 years ago practical air flight became possible, and although the first flight was not accomplished by British airmen, much of the important pioneer work was contributed by British effort. Hence it is appropriate that the event should be celebrated in connexion with the Exhibition at Wembley.

Speaking of the special aerial exhibit at Wembley, the "Army and Navy Journal" says:

In the section allotted to the Air Ministry in the Government Pavillion the opportunity will be taken to present as comprehensive an impression as possible of the field of aerial activities, and the exhibit will convey a striking idea of the possibilities of aircraft, both as a weapon of defence and as an aid to commerce. It will show the valuable co-operation afforded by aircraft to the Navy and Army, the potentialities of aircraft as an independent arm, and the beneficial services that aircraft can render in time of peace.

HISTORICAL ASPECT.

For those who wish to study aircraft from the historical aspect a comprehensive series of scale models, complete in every detail, of pre-war, war, and post-war types of aircraft will be provided. For those, again, who wish to visualize the part played by the aeroplane in war there will be displayed ingenious mechanical and other models illustrating the utility of the aerial arm working in combination with other arms. Here will be presented a realistic demonstration of the victory wrought by British aircraft in Palestine; elsewhere the advance of our tanks and infantry over shell-stricken ground in France, and yet again the sea-going aircraft operating with the Navy over the sea. A scenic spectacle of London being attacked by a hostile air fleet is to be on view in the theatre in the Government Pavillion. What is meant by aerial attack and by aerial defence will both be shown. To carry it out the latest devices of the scenic artist and the lighting experts are to be employed. Many ingenious and elaborate models are also being constructed to illustrate other phases of service and technical aviation.

CIVIL AVIATION.

To demonstrate the development of civil aviation, a large scale model of the South of England and the North of France has been made, on which the air route between London and Paris will be shown. A second model will give a complete representation of Croydon aerodrome, the air port for London, as it will be in the near future. With the first of those models it will be possible to visualize the advantages of air travel over the combined train and steamship service to Paris. Besides the various British services operated in Europe, an air mail service is being run by the Royal Air Force between Cairo and Baghdad. A model of this route will also be exhibited. The speeding up of communications is one of the most urgent of the problems confronting the Empire today. Special interest will, therefore, be taken in a working model of a commercial airship base in which full details of the organization of airships will be displayed.

Other interesting exhibits at Wembley will include an illustration of some of the methods emhensive meteorological exhibit examples of aircraft engines and accessories, specimens of the work of Royal Air Force apprentices, a collection of paintings of aeronautical subjects, and a comprehensive meteorological exhibit descriptive of the important help given to many branches of industry by the Meteorological Office.

IN MEMORY OF ZOLA

Captain Dreyfus Present at Paris Tribute

A commemorative plaque which has been fixed to the humble dwelling house in the Rue St. Joseph, a squalid little sidestreet off the Rue Montmartre, where Emile Zola was born, was publicly unveiled on January 26 amid a large gathering of the great writer's admirers. The central figure in the gathering, perhaps, was that of Captain Alfred Dreyfus, the hero of the memorable controversy which many years ago rent France in twain, and which elevated Zola in the minds of thousands of English people to whom his books were anathema to the grade of champion of justice and right. Others present included the novelist's son Georges Zola and his daughter Madame le Blond, the President of Paris Municipal Council, M. Lalou, President of the Société des Gens de Lettres, and the leaders of several other organizations.

M. Lalou in an eloquent analysis of Zola's works referred to the large part which Paris played in those books. In the four works "Travail," "Fécondité," "Vérité," and "Justice"—the supreme expression of Zola's thought—it was Paris, he said, which played the leading rôle. "but a Paris, which was a city of labour, the foundation of the modern city which, when it shall have been organized according to scientific and human laws, will become the principle of all health and all virtue—Paris the arch-saint of modern civilization, the cradle of the Revolution, the home of Liberty, Progress, and Justice."

SNAP SHOTS OF OUR STATESMEN

Readers of the "Saturday Westminster" were recently invited to compose epigrams upon Statesmen of the day, and the following specimens are among those which caught the Editorial eye:—

MR. LLOYD GEORGE.

Thrice gifted actor, prodigal of power!
Protagonist on many a sounding stage!
Hadst thou forgone the plaudits of an hour,
Thine might have been the triumph of an age.

Imada.

SIR FREDERICK BANBURY.

By "talking out" Sir Frederick loved to kill
Each eager private member's harmless Bill.
Will he contrive to learn, in lordly leisure,
From "listening-in" to gain an equal pleasure?

Philosopher.

MR. BALDWIN.

A simple child a pretty mug possessed;
A new one might be bigger, that's confessed!
The simple child threw down the mug—and broke it.
Put that, dear Stanley, in your pipe, and smoke it!

Janik.

M. POINCARE.

A comma tailed, a colon round
To call a halt are useful found;
But utterly to block the way
There's nothing like a point carré.

Deva.

MR. RAMSAY MACDONALD.

Behold this man who kisses hands with kings,
Rich in audacious thought, and dream-caressed;
Shall he, like Prospero, do magic things
And win sweet justice for the dispossessed?

J. M.

OVER HALF A CENTURY REPUTATION
Dr. LE CLERC'S PILLS FOR THE LIVER & KIDNEYS
INVALUABLE for DISEASES of these IMPORTANT ORGANS, GRAVEL, BACKACHE, GOUT, RHEUMATISM
Price 3s., leading CHEMISTS, or Post Free DR. LE CLERC Med. Co. Haverstock Rd. N.W. 5, London
Dr. LE CLERC'S VEG. APERIENT PILLS. Price 3s.
Dr. LE CLERC'S PILLS FOR ANÆMIA. Price 3s.
SAFE & RELIABLE FOR LADIES AILMENTS
DR. LE CLERC'S SOAP. 1s. or 6 Tablets 5s.
Sold by Boots', Taylor's, Timothy Whites and leading Stores.

SPECIAL ARTICLES

MR. C. K. CHESTERTON

Notes of a Sermon preached by the Rev. C. F. Darwent in Union Church, Tientsin, on Sunday Evening March 9, being one of the Monthly Series of Biographical Sermons

Text: Numbers XI 29: "And Moses said to him (Joshua), Enviest thou for my sake? I would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his spirit upon them!"

What a great man Moses was! Surely the greatest! He is the Old Testament, and Jesus Christ, the world's Redeemer, the New Testament. What more need be said? These are the only two books in the world to be clear wholly by themselves, and he is the hero and centre of one of them. And it is humanly as we see how great he is as well as in spirit. Despite what there was of the commonplace in the character of the man. The unassuming way, with the inherent pride of race, had actually vexed his brother and sister. The spot in one case, and jealousy in the other, of the Midianite blood were fanned into flame. Moses was wounded on the tenderest point. And Joshua, too, who ought to have had more sense, said to Moses, Forbid them. He evidently quite expected that the great man would promptly put a stop to Eldad and Medad, the building prophets, and teach them a lesson. But Moses was that rare kind of man, incapable of jealousy. He knew that

It is a matter
Being upon the Lord's part or mine?

He had not a atom of it in him. He tells Joshua that he is more jealous for him than he, Moses, is for himself. "Envyest thou for my sake." Let them go on prophesying, never try to dry up the fountain of youth, let them prophesy, and then he says one of the most tender and beautiful things ever said. "Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets." Do gifted people always wish that their gifts were widely shared by their fellow men? Not always. There has always been jealousy, even among writers, musicians, preachers. When John Wesley let laymen preach the Gospel, what a pother there was among the regular preachers! When Carey went out as a missionary from the cobbler's bench the Rev. Sydney Smith sneered at "consecrated cobblers." Moses did not. He prayed that all cobblers and masons and labourers should be consecrated too. How beautiful! That is being in order, to have truth revealed from God to you, and to utter it, for prophesying is not foretelling, it only is telling forth the truth now.

SOME MODERN PROPHETS.

Now happily, God has always had his Eldads and Medads in the world, outside the regular prophets. In the last century there was one John Ruskin, whose books ought to be gone through by someone. They would make the best of dissertations of Sermons. To-day we have another. He is Mr G. K. Chesterton. He was born in London, a man that has gathered more than all other capitals in the world. Ruskin was a Londoner too. There is not much to be said about Chesterton's life. He went to St Paul's, then on to Journalism and book writing. He is a big man, of a hearty appearance, with a hearty appetite against all fads, and foibles. He would have enjoyed Dr Johnson, who liked a "meaty book." He is something like Father Faber, whose hymns are so tender that we always think of him as a slim ascetic weekly figure, whereas he was a twenty stone man. The bulk and healthiness of such Eldads and Medads is, no doubt, a handicap against them in the eyes of the public, which still is inclined to identify piety with a pale face and a thin body. However, Mr Chesterton has got over that. His books are widely read, and anticipated with eagerness by discerning readers. "Orthodoxy." "Heterodoxy." "What's Wrong with the World?" and his recent books on Jerusalem and the United States are a pure joy. If you cannot read them with pleasure, you are not fit to have any books at all.

THE PARADOXES OF CHRIST.

Before we proceed to learn two lessons from him we are bound to consider the one accusation, that is ever being made against him. That is that he is too fond of paradoxes. That is the everlasting fault, that is found in his works. They say "If he only would stop his flow of paradoxes." Then he would be just about all right." But is he? Look into that. What is a paradox? Here is a definition of it from the "Oxford Dictionary," an authority that is good enough for most people. It is a seemingly absurd though really well founded opinion." The sentence meaning is obscured, the real meaning sound truth. Another definition is one-sided. I think Mr Gerald Duff once gave it as "substantial sense in verbal nonsense." As so many people seem incapable of seeing only by "verbal nonsense," they take Mr Chesterton to be a kind of acrobat clown, who dances on a literary table to please them. But how utterly wrong this is! Who is the great Master of Paradox? Jesus Christ Himself. Of course. He is, we have been fed spiritually on paradoxes all our lives, but we have got so used to the Lord's ways that we have not recognized them as the tremendous paradoxes that they are. Such are "To him that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath:" "the first shall be last and the last first:" "unless a seed of corn die it cannot live:" Where are all Mr Chesterton's paradoxes beside these? Or this "My burden is light" or this "he that findeth his life shall lose it." That paradoxes are dangerous is proved by the fact, that it was a paradox, that as far as human causes operated brought Jesus to the cross. They never forgave Him for saying, that he could "destroy the temple" and "build it again in three days." It was brought up against Him at His trial. The paradoxes of Jesus Christ were dangerous to Him: they have been misunderstood all through the ages by many people: But in spite of that, would any of us wish, that the Lord had taught and put His thought into the ordinary dry and colourless form? Certainly not. This therefore must be sufficient justification for the paradoxes of our modern Elidad.

SAYINGS WITH A STING.

We will take a few samples of them. "Men invent new ideals, because they dare not attempt old ideals." There is a great deal more truth in that than one likes to admit. It may account for a good deal of current difficulty in accepting the Gospel. Its ideals do not across very cherished prejudices of mankind. Where would many of us be, and where would the French nation be if we really tried to put into practice the ideal Jesus gave us of "forgiving our enemies." Becket wore a hair shirt under his gold and crimson, and there is much to be said for the combination. For Becket got the benefit of the hair shirt, while the people in the street got the benefit of the gold and crimson. It is better than the manner of the modern millionaire, who wears black and drab outwardly for others, and has the gold near his heart: That is bitter, but has a world of truth in it as many bitter sayings have. And here is a fine saying on home. It is sad that people often get out of their homes as soon as they can. They think there are too many restraints at home: if they can only get to hotels and public resorts, they will enjoy a glorious liberty. Home seems under a cloud. People dine at hotels and entertain their friends there instead of at home as used to be the custom. Mr. Chesterton is excellent on this idea. He says, 'The home is the only place of liberty. In a club or hotel a man has to accept their rules. At home he can have his dinner on the floor if he likes. He can have his breakfast in his dressing-gown. He can't in the Savoy." Yet people get out of their home as if it were a prison. "Common things are never commonplace. Birth is covered with curtains because it is a staggering and monstrous process." That is a very deep saying and this is a fine pin, with which to prick the bubble of priggery and snobbishness. "No man ought to be superior to the things common to men." Yes. It is more than ever true, that "knowledge puffeth up." One hears men and women express a contempt for the ordinary man. They must have "intellectual conversation." They will say, So and So "is so provincial." Yet the Lord's friends were common men, not one a "Varsity man," in the snobbish cant of to-day. And the Lord got on quite well with them. They were His friends which is more than some "Varsity men" can. This is very fine: "The specially unchristian idea of Carlyle is that the man should rule who thinks he can. Whereas the Christian idea is that the man should rule who is humble and thinks he cannot. Much as I used to admire the late Dr Clifford, I cannot deny that he gets a hard knock in this saying. "Dr Clifford wants a man somewhere in the public mind as much as Lord Halifax, only he wants a different one."

A FULL-BLOODED FAITH.

Now we come to the two very important lessons that this man teaches us. There are two things in him which are a perpetual tonic. I find them so. The first is, that he is a great believer. It is a mercy, indeed, to read such a man. He is a full Christian. It is not his idea to believe as little as he can, but as much as he can. He is not pleased when he has lopped a branch off the Christian tree, but when he has encouraged another to grow. He finds it easier to believe than to disbelieve as indeed it is. He wants a full faith, a rich, not a skeleton Gospel. He gets sick of apologies for the Atonement and miracles. He says, "When one once believes in a creed, one is proud of its complexity." Of course. When he is told of difficulties, he says, "Of course there will be difficulties." Seeing that we believe, that Christianity is a grand divine administration in which all the mighty and gracious powers of God, the energy of the whole Godhead, the power of the Holy Spirit of God, the energies concentrated in the incarnate and risen Son of God, His life, His blood, His perpetual presence in man, are engaged in winning back the world to God, there may indeed well be difficulties. Indeed. Yes. But that is what we believe. There are difficulties, but not contradictions. He has no difficulty in great passages like this, "Great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified of the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory. It does one good to read such a writer. Lately he has joined another church. I have not seen a statement why. But it may be, that he got tired of the naked bareness of so much of the teaching of to-day. His soul yearned for a Christ, a Saviour, who was not tied hand and foot, he got tired of a Christ who couldn't feed a hungry crowd, even if He wanted to do so, couldn't still a storm, or heal a poor blind man, or drive the demons out of a poor demoniac. And I think the world agrees with him. It wants a Saviour to be "the Son of God with power," if it wants one at all. There are only two categories, the created and the uncreated. Was the uncreated, aboriginal eternal life of God, in Jesus Christ, as in no other man? Then, though his humanity was true, what might He not do, that we cannot, He being "God in the flesh?"

HIS LACK TO THE WALL.

Mr. Chesterton is very powerful on all this. Here is a tremendous passage on the very ground idea of the Gospel: "Twice heaven has interrupted the natural order; once when man was created; once when heaven came to save man in the awful shape of a man. That a good man may have his back to the wall we all know: but that God could have His back to the wall, was new. Alone of creeds Christianity added courage to the virtues of the Creator. For the only courage worth calling courage means that the soul passes a breaking point. And in the terrible story of Christ's passion and agony, He broke His heart for us." That is magnificent. What a bold, yet pathetically true picture! God, the Creator, "with His back to the wall!" Aye. That is Christianity: "Last of all He sent His Son also." So Mr. Chesterton feels no difficulty about miracles. Seeing, that in Jesus Christ, God is doing all, that even He can, to save us, His Son may well have been able to touch a blind man's eyes, and give the poor creature sight. This is what Mr. Chesterton means, when he says, in a much criticized passage, that "fairy tales are easier to believe than science." Given, as is given in the Gospel, God "with His back to the wall," then "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?"

THE CONTRADICTIONS OF UNBELIEF.

Then, in the second place, Mr. Chesterton is precious, because he is not overawed by the negations and pretensions of modern unbelief, as most of us are. We treat it too seriously and solemnly. He shows it up. He says that in his youth he felt that the unbeliever made out a strong case against Christianity. He then read one book after another, and was surprised to find that they contradicted one another most amazingly. One author got quite bitter over the sad effect of Christianity on a man, making him unmanly, a sort of sheep. Well, he felt, I don't want to be turned into a sheep. But then, he read another infidel book which got very bitter over the awful effect Christianity has had on the world. This author accused it of being the cause of more wars and bloodshed than any other agency on the earth. Well, he thought, this is very queer. The same religion turns some men into sheep, and others into tigers! It must be a most extraordinary religion. Similarly, he found that one rationalist author accused it of filling the world with abnormal gloom, while another said that it is not serious enough: that it teaches forgiveness, and that is a very immoral thing, because it lets a penitent sinner escape the full consequences of his sins, and so makes for cheerfulness. He had no sooner got worked up into a state of indignation with the Gospel for having done one thing, than, on reading another book, he had to get worked up into wrath with it for doing the direct opposite. From which he concluded, that Christianity is just right. As indeed it is.

THE SEED-SHOP

Here in a quiet and dusty room they lie,
Faded as crumbled stone and shifting sand,
Forlorn as ashes, shrivelled, scentless, dry—
Meadows and gardens running through my hand.

Dead that shall quicken at the voice of spring,
Sleepers to wake beneath June's
tempest kiss;
Though birds pass over, unremembering,
And no bee find here roses that were his.

In this brown husk a dale of hawthorn dreams;
A cedar in this narrow cell is thrust
That shall drink deeply at a century's streams;
These lilies shall make summer on my dust.

Here in their safe and simple house of death,
Sealed in their shells, a million
roses leap;
Here I can stir a garden with my breath,
And in my hand a forest lies asleep.

MURIEL STUART IN "POETRY."

A correspondent in Chungking writes on March 18: General Yang seems to be in control of most of the province now and all is quiet here in Chungking, though there are troops everywhere. The First Army has retreated to the south and is being forced into Kueichow. Brigandage is about as bad as ever on the Big Road and the city of Yungchuan has been robbed three times in about as many months.

THE WORLD OF WIRELESS

I—Progress in Telephony: How China Bars the Way

Under the above title we hope to publish from time to time articles on radio matters, in which an ever-increasing number of people are taking a practical interest, though as this article shows, even interposes causeless difficulties.

The advent of such a truly wonderful means of communication as wireless telephony has proved to be, and the pace to at which such a remarkable degree of perfection has been attained, provide much food for thought on its tremendous possibilities and the benefits which would accrue from its ultimate general adoption for both private and commercial use. Both these applications are without doubt arousing the keenest interest in every country in the world where the incalculable value of reliable speech transmission and reception without wires can be appreciated.

With so many of the commercial applications of scientific discoveries, ultimate perfection was the result of years of painstaking effort, experiment, and research that frequently extended over generations. Not so with with wireless telephony. Prior to the Great War, Various investigators achieved some measure of success in the transmission of speech by a beam of light, and efforts were also made to effect transmission by modulating the electric arc discharge, but one can safely say that the real beginning of wireless telephony came with the evolution of the thermionic valve after its discovery by Dr. Fleming, the British university professor. The full significance and value of that epoch-marking discovery may never be fully known. Certain it is that in the light of our present-day knowledge we can only regard its possibilities as boundless.

ONE BENEFIT OF WAR.

During the Great War, large sums of money were made available for research in wireless telegraphy and telephony, and as a resuly, great progress was made in the design, manufacture, and use of the thermionic valve in its varied applications. The close of the war, then, saw wireless telephony an accomplished fact, although the apparatus in use was largely of an experimental character. Upon the removal of wartime restrictions, improvements and developments followed one another in rapid succession, and the outstanding achievement which attracted the attention of the whole world to this fascinating subject was the advent of broadcasting.

Progress continues apace. The quality of the trasmission of musical items from the leading broadcasting stations is very near to perfection. In England, the whole movement is under the control of the Post Office authorities. Wave-lengths and times for transmission are allotted to all broadcasting stations and to experimenters, while revenue from the licences issued to "listeners" provides the funds for operating the broadcasting stations. The whole scheme is in smooth and efficient operation.

CHINA'S BACKWARDNESS.

What have we in China? A government that does not understand wireless telephony and attempts to prevent its development by foreigners in banning the importation of apparatus. Exactly what this government expects either to gain or prevent in instituting such a ban is difficult to see. The futility of it is obvious on a first investigation. There are regular broadcast transmissions in both Shanghai and Hongkong, and apparatus continues to arrive in the country in increasing quantities. That the ban is hampering progress one cannot deny but it can never prevent it. Sooner or later we are bound to have in Shanghai an efficient broadcasting service maintained by a revenue system possibly similar to that obtaining at home, with transmission for several hours daily. The project needs energy, enthusiasm, and leadership even more ...rn capital. These qualities are ...reat asset in the initiation of ...heme of this nature while in ... where we have unusual ... to overcome, are essen-...

...strictions and barriers have ...en placed against progress with ...very great scientific discovery in ...s early stages, by authorities ...ho have been prejudiced against ...ese innovations and who did ...ot understand them. So with ...ireless telephony. Its progress ...ay be hindered, but it can never ... prevented. The great mass of ...he public in every civilized coun...ry in the world knows its possi...ilities and awaits with wonder...ng interest their materialization.

II—Long Range Reception: Shanghai Well Placed

Although here in Shanghai we experimenters are somewhat handicapped by the difficulty of obtaining apparatus, much very useful and interesting work may be done by co-operation in experimenting, and the use of improvised components to supplement the inadequate and, moreover, expensive equipment available.

Concerning long-range reception, one does not hear of many experimenters making serious attempts at reception of the San Francisco broadcasting. The writer believes that in both Peking and Tientsin this has been occasionally accomplished, but has no information of similar success being achieved in Shanghai. Yet Shanghai is almost ideally situated for experiments with this object in view, as the surrounding country is flat, while the nature of the soil on which it is built makes a very efficient earth connexion easily obtainable at small cost. The importance of this point for successful long-distance reception cannot be over-emphasized.

Concerning the type of receiver most suitable for an experiment of this nature, the writer is of the opinion that five valves should be employed—the first two operating as radio-frequency amplifiers, the third as rectifier, and them two stages of audio-frequency amplification. The radio-frequency amplifiers should preferably have reactance-capacity intervalve coupling, and should have incorporated the neutrodyne principal introduced by Prof. Hazeltine. Regarding the type of tuner to employ, a selective loose-coupled design should, of course, be used, and of these, probably the most efficient and selective is that employing "plug-in" honeycomb inductances. Variable grid leaks are extremely desirable, while extension handles on all turning condensers will be found indispensable.

A receiver of this type is naturally an expensive proposition, but where there are several enthusiasts attracted by the experiment, resources in the way of apparatus might be pooled, when the actual construction of the receiver would be a simple matter. Additional interest is given to an experiment of this nature when strong signals are obtainable, for it would be quite possible by use off a suitable amplifier to re-transmit the San Francisco broadcasting in Shanghai.

CO-OPERATION IN LOCAL WORK.

With reference to local experimental wireless telephony, there is undoubtedly a great opening for useful work among the enthusiasts, provided the essential co-operation is maintained. At present, however, there seems to be little opportunity for discussion and the inter-change of ideas, although the inclination for, and value of such co-operation is evident. Five watts is ample power for this local work, and some excellent results have been obtained with this low output. The same difficulty concerning the supply of apparatus still arises, but of all the essentials for a transmitter of this type, the high tension D. C. supply is undoubtedly the most difficult to obtain. Several methods are in regular use, and these may be divided into three classes:—the motor-generator unit, which is probably the best but the most expensive—the storage battery method, and the rectification of alternating current supply from the public mains after transformation up to the desired voltage. While the first-mentioned method involves the highest capital outlay, it is the least expensive in upkeep costs and gives very little trouble.

EXPERIMENT WITH FAN MOTORS.

In this connexion the writer has been investigating the possibility of utilizing two electric fan motors, one A.C., and one D.C., for the construction of a motor-generator set for small-power transmission. The fan motors arranged to run off A.C. supply are usually of the squirrel-cage synchronous type, and may be employed as the motor of the unit without change. The D.C. fan motor will, of course, have to be rewound to function as a high-tension generator, and while this is not a difficult job, yet it is most important that the proper number of turns of wire of the correct gauge for both field windings and armature should be correctly calculated first. The writer has had no opportunity as yet of carrying out a practical test on a generator so arranged, but hopes to do so in the very near future, when figures will gladly be furnished to those who are interested.

With regard to the storage battery and rectifier methods of obtaining the high tension supply, it may be possible in the near future to publish details of the manner in which these means are employed, but as both systems are relatively more complicated than the motor-generator, a proper description of each cannot be given in the space here available.

OAK AND OLIVE

Though I was born a Londoner,
And bred in Gloucestershire,
I walked in Hellas years ago
With friends in white attire:
And I remember how my soul
Drank wine as pure as fire.

And when I stand by Charing Cross
I can forget to hear
The crash of all those smoking wheels,
When those cold flutes and clear
Pipe with such fury down the street,
My hands grow moist with fear.

And there's a hall in Bloomsbury
No more I dare to tread,
For all the stone men shout at me,
And swear they are not dead;
And once I touched a broken girl
And knew that marble bled.

But when I walk in Athens town
That swims in dust and sun
Perverse, I think of London then
Where God's brave work is done
And with what sweep at Westminster
The rayless waters run.

I ponder how from Attic seed
There grew an English tree,
How Byron like his heroes fell,
Fighting a country free,
And Swinburne took from Shelley's lips
The kiss of Poetry.

And while our poets chanted Pan
Back to his pipes and power,
Great Verrall, bending at his desk,
And searching hour on hour
Found out old gardens, where the wise
May find a Spartan flower.

When I go down the Gloucester lanes
My friends are deaf and blind:
Fast as they turn their foolish eyes
The Maenads leap behind,
And when I hear the fire-winged feet,
They only hear the wind.

Have I not chased the fluting Pan
Through Cranham's sober trees?
Have I not sat on Painswick Hill
With a nymph upon my knees,
And she as rosy as the dawn,
And naked as the breeze?

But when I lie in Grecian fields,
Smothered in asphodel
Or climb the blue and barren hills
Or sing in woods that smell
With such hot spices of the South
As mariners might sell—

Then my heart turns where no sun burns,
To lands of glittering rain,
To fields beneath low-clouded skies
New-widowed of their grain,
And Autumn leaves like blood and gold
That strew a Gloucester lane.

Oh well I know sweet Hellas now,
And well I knew it then,
When I with starry lads walked out—
But ah, for home again!
Was I not bred in Gloucestershire,
One of the Englishmen!

From "The Golden Journey to Samarkand."

By James Elroy Flecker.

NORTHERN ASIA THE CRADLE OF MAN

French Priests' Researches into the Antiquities of Mongolia: Discovery of a Prehistoric Kitchen: Lecture in Tientsin

Specially Translated for Tientsin News Service.

An extremely interesting lecture summarized as under, on the results of a French Palæontological Mission in Mongolia was given recently in Tientsin by the Rev. Father Teilhard de Chardin, S.J., Docteur of Sciences, Professeur de Géologie a l'Institut de France, Charge de Mission Scientifique par le Museum de Paris, and by the Rev. Father Licent, S.J., Docteur of Sciences, en Mission Scientifique en Chine.

Father de Chardin, explained that palæontological interest in Northern Asia lies in the fact that this land represents an exceedingly ancient continent. While over the site of the southern Asiatic mountain ranges, the Himalayan for example, a vast Mediterranean had continued to exist until a comparatively recent epoch, the regions corresponding to modern southern Siberia and northern China had emerged much earlier; that is to say, they constituted, for a much longer period, land upon which developed mobile animals, reptiles and mammals. During this immense continental period, stretching over millions of years, thousands of generations of living beings have succeeded each other on this broad expanse of territory. Therefore, one could not despair of finding in these ancient geological deposits some new elements for the solution of the great problem of the History of Life.

Attracted by this hope, many palæontologists have, during the past few years, undertaken the work of exploring China, principally the desert regions, where cultivated earth does not hide the deep fossil beds, and where the hand of man has not for a long time disturbed them. Geology has a predilection for "unfruitful" ground.

The Geologic Service of Peking has concentrated its principal efforts on the interior provinces of China, while Americans have undertaken exploration of Western Gobi, where they have made some really marvellous discoveries. Father Licent, faithful to his programme of exploring the Yellow River basin, has carried his researches into the interior of Mongolia, especially in the Ordos country. It was towards this region that the explorers directed themselves when the Paris Museum and the French Government, upon the recommendation of M. Boule, decided to subsidize a palæontological campaign in China.

The object of this lecture, said Father de Chardin, is to give a summary of the first part of the campaign, the second part of which will commence this spring. The idea was to reach the Sjara Ossos Gol, where fossils had been found in 1922 by Father Licent. The journey could be divided into two stages, the first from Pao Tùi, the terminus of the Peking-Suiyuan Railway, to Sjara Ossos Gol, the second from there to the country of Yufungt'ui, in Northern Shansi.

The explorers left Pao T'ui on June 22, 1923, with a caravan of 10 mules and two soldiers, the latter as an escort. The first stage of the journey brought them in contact with the most advanced spurs of the sub-Gobian mountain ranges, which rise progressively, like steps, to the altitudes of the Gobi Desert. These chains have a particular feature in that they form rocky barriers perfectly delimited and rising up abruptly in the midst of the surrounding plains. Between the mountain ranges there are large flat valleys, filled with débris. Each chain is crossed from north to south by torrents that fall from one level to the other. The traveller sees before him abrupt ridges of naked rock, interlined here and there with stripes of white marble. The explorers reached the level between Oula Chan and Sheiltan Oula through a transverse valley. They had the pleasure of seeing the first herds of gazells in this large plain.

A BARREN LAND.

The lecturer then described the features of this severe country of scanty vegetation, the charm of which is, nevertheless, profound for geologists. When nearing the edge of the Lang Shan they turned into the Santaoho, a broad low plain between the river and the Lang, Chara and Oula mountains. The plain is exceedingly monotonous, scarcely a living thing can be seen, save a few hares and pheasants. After a further march of several days they reached their objective in the Ordos country. The Ordos is a well defined area bounded on three sides by great loop of the Yellow River, and on the fourth by the Great wall, which follows a line of low hills of yellow earth.

For 36 hours the explorers wandered in the stony desert, intersected by dried-up rivers, strewn with clusters of lignous plants, until a transient Llama monk directed them to a more favourable locality—a vast hollow, 80 metres deep, formed by erosion in earth of a dark red colour. It was absolutely barren land with ravines, mounds and cliffs. Here they discovered many fossils and after filling two cases with them they struck camp and continued their march towards Santaoho.

Among the fossils were bones of rhinosceros, ostrich egg shells, ancient flints and bones of animals no longer denizens of this country. This discovery was proof that man lived there before the deep crust of yellow loess soil was formed.

The expedition had, upon reaching the Ordos on its Northern edge, skirted the northern and western boundaries, finding the fossils near the northwest corner. It now proceeded to skirt the eastern edge travelling in a south-easterly direction, following the Yellow River. After five or six days it reached the Sjara Ossos Gol, where natives assisted them to further discoveries. The country was extremely barren, inhabited by a few Chinese, Mongols and an assortment of bandits. Pheasant and hares were the only game and seemed to be plentiful. The country was all steppe and except for rare canals and artificial irrigation there was no cultivation.

Crossing over the Yellow River into the Ordos country, to which they were attracted by the violet tinted hills, strongly reminiscent of Sinai, in the Holy land, they prospected unsuccessfully for several days until another Llama shepherd directed their path to fossil deposits in a tertiary bed of white sand. Here they discovered all sorts of remains, among which were rhinoceros, elephants, rats, and bones of many smaller animals. In this pocket, about 80 yards in diameter, they camped for as short a time as was necessary to collect the more valuable fossils, for the climate was unhealthy and the water supply scarce.

Turning the caravan southward they arrived at a transverse valley leading towards the Gobi desert. A river had cut deeply into the soil and in the stratum of red earth below the yellow top-soil, they found more fossils. Here they found the mountain ranges of an interesting structure previously unknown. Two ridges crossed were formed as though two concentric circles had been thrown out by the Ala Mountains, and the earth between the two was of calcareous formation. Many Llamasseries were noticed in the region, marked by the conspicuous "obos", but while they were picturesque at a distance upon closer acquaintance they lost much of this in their state of extreme filthiness.

Passing through this country the travellers discovered more fossils and flints. After traversing the Argo Ossos they came to a fortified town on the edge of the Ala mountains, in a country rich in orchards. The caravan then turned eastward to follow the Great Wall, a natural frontier dividing the steppes from the mountains of Northern Kansu.

A PREHISTORIC KITCHEN.

About 20 kilometres from this town, near Ninghsiafu, the explorers made their greatest discovery. After following a small river they came to a cliff of yellow earth, in which they saw sticking out, a horse's tooth. Working carefully around this they discovered several flints and then other materials which belonged to a prehistoric kitchen. They discovered indisputable evidence of a man, of the quartenary period, who had hitherto been unknown in China or anywhere in the Far East north of the Himalayas, although previously identified in Hindustan and in the Yenesei district. The evidence is considered complete as the kitchen was discovered on a horizontal surface well down in the cliff. The river flows through the steppe cutting a ravine nearly 200 feet deep, in places quite vertical, and the valley is interesting to the geologist because the strata are so very clearly revealed. The yellow earth in this district is most valuable to the palæontologist for large animal fossils, such as rhinoceros and bison, are found here in a well preserved state. They were shown by a Mongol a bed of sand, wherein were scattered, at the extreme bottom of it, many broken bones belonging to stags, horses, antelopes and cattle, such as might have been used by prehistoric man for food. Confirmation was supplied in the discovery of more flints, supporting the idea of the spot having been used as a place where animals had been killed for food, in other words, a kitchen. Sixty metres of earth lie above this stratum, which belonged to the quartenary period.

This discovery practically brought the Mission's quest to an end, but the caravan pushed on into Shensi. Here the Great Wall has almost disappeared, being covered with drifting sand, and only the towers are visible. The loess covers the land to a depth of about 100 metres, but is torn into ravines by previous upheavals of the earth. Remains of fossils are found in the red stratum throughout this district, especially three-toed horses, rhinoceros and other fauna. Man did not exist in this tertiary period but flints are found at the bottom of the loess stratum, indicating his presence at the beginning of the deposits of losess. Among future problems is to find some connecting link.

After traversing nothern Shensi, the expedition returned by boat down the Yellow River, in order to avoid bandits, and the possible loss of their fossils. Reaching Suiyuan, the "Blue City," they transferred to train and came back to Peking.

Fathers Licent and de Chardin left Tientsin yesterday to continue their searches on behalf of the institution they represent.

SAXON SONG

Tools with the comely names,
Mattock and scythe and spade,
Couth and bitter as flames
Clean and bowed in the blade—
A man and his tools make a man and his trade.

Breadth of the English shires,
Hummock and kame and mead,
Tang of the reeking byres,
Land of the English breed—
A man and his land make a man and his creed.

Leisurely flocks and herds,
Cool-eyed cattle that come
Mildly to wonted words,
Swine that in orchards roam—
A man and his beasts make a man and his home.

Children sturdy and flaxen,
Shouting in brotherly strife,
Like the land they are Saxon,
Sons of a man and his wife—
For a man and his loves makes a man and his life.

By V. Sackville-West, in Georgian Poetry, 1920-22.

Dr. Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian poet and philosopher, arrived in Singapore on April 2 by the Ethiopia and received an affectionate greeting at the dock from a tremendous crowd, representing all communities, including European, Indian, Chinese and Japanese. Dr. Tagore motored round the city and lunched at an Indian leader's home, before taking the Atsuta Maru for Hongkong, whence he will journey to Peking to lecture at the University.

THE BOOK PAGE

BOOK NOTES AND NEWS

M. Klotz, who was Finance Minister in the Clemenceau Cabinet, has written a book on the present relations between England and France. M. Klotz can hardly be regarded as a very great man. Clemenceau's policy was to form a Cabinet of mediocrities in which he might rule supreme. He was asked why he had selected M. Klotz as Finance Minister, and he replied that he was the only Jew in Europe who knew nothing about finance.

∴

Although published only a few weeks ago, the demand for "The Shoreless Sea," the novel written by Miss Mollie Panter-Downes, the 16 year old author, has been so great that Mr. Murray has just issued a second large impression.

∴

Miss Katharine Pleydell-Bouverie's "January" (Heinemann, 7s. 6d. net) is taut and trim in workmanship, and concentrated in its effects. There are qualities unusual in a first novel, and promising. As a story it has one essential weakness, which is not its War associations. From the prejudice against these in novel and play signs of a reaction are already evident. It lies with the authors of either to make the War scene acceptable. Much more difficult of acquiescence is the "odd" circumstance in story, such as the relationship of uncle and niece between Miss Pleydell-Bouverie's hero and heroine. Matters are not really helped—for it is the reader's delicate illusions that count—when Bill and Jan are discovered not to stand in such relationship after all. Noreen's infidelity, which explains that, is resented as curious artifice.

∴

Mr. Hilaire Belloc's literary gifts are so wide and varied that one is not surprised to hear he has written a popular book on economics—"Economics for Helen." As one might suppose from that title, it is done in simple language so that Helen, or anyone else aged 16 or thereabout, may understand the intricacies of economics.

∴

Readers of the "Weekly Westminster" were recently asked to name what they considered to be the ten most notable books published in Great Britain since 1900, and the following list gained the prize:

Morley's "Life of Gladstone."
Strachey's "Life of Queen Victoria."
"Scott's Last Expedition."
Norman Angell's "Great Illusion."
Hardy's "Dynasts."
Masefield "Everlasting Mercy."
Bennett's "Old Wives' Tale."
Galsworthy's "Forsyte Saga."
Shaw's "John Bull's Other Island."
Wells' "Outline of History."

∴

Dr. Gore's concluding volume on The Reconstruction of Belief, entitled "The Holy Spirit and the Church" is announced for immediate publication by Mr. Murray. The success of the two previous books in the series was phenomenal, and it is confidently anticipated that there will be an equally big demand for this new study, in which Dr. Gore shows how his conclusions bear on present day problems.

AMERICAN TRADEMARKS IN CHINA

"American "Trade-marks, Trade Names, Copyrights and Patents in China," is the title of a booklet of some 26 pages which has just been issued by the "China Weekly Review," of Shanghai. The booklet was written by Mr. R. T. Bryan, Jr., an American attorney in Shanghai, and as its title indicates deals with the situation of American trademarks in China in view of the new Chinese Trademark Law which was adopted by Parliament on May 3, 1923. The booklet begins with a consideration of the present situation from the standpoint of the treaties and contains in the appendix a copy of the Chinese Law of 1904, the new Law of 1923, and the regulations of the 3rd year of the Republic dealing with Trade Names. The price of the booklet is $1 a copy, postage paid.

THE LONG ROAD

A New Study of the Chinese and Their History

"China Yesterday and To-day." By Edward Thomas Williams. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell Company.

Professor Williams writes his book from the standpoint of the foreigner noting the characteristics and features of a country which differ from those of his own. In spite of his first hand experienre during his term as American Charge d'Affaires at Peking, he manages to retain the detached attitude in regard to things Chinese which is considered to be a typically British trait. Of modern books his must surely be the most comprehensive in its subject. There is hardly anything Chinese that he does not touch upon, and in most cases he shows the result of an observation which has been, besides minute and pains-taking, extraordinarily shrewd. History, geography, customs, religion, politics, crafts, trades, upon all these subjects he has much useful information to impart. That is the principal value of the book, the useful information which makes it a book of reference of considerable service. There are several photographic illustrations and enclosed in a pocket in the outer cover of the book is the Rand, McNally Standard map of China and Japan. The work also abounds with references.

The author lived in China during the interesting period which saw the downfall of the Manchu Dynasty and the establishment of the Republic, and he saw the beginning of "the great reforms which have wrought such havoc with old-time manners and conditions." With all his research and knowledge his book is nowhere marred by the certainty of judgment which so often spoils our reading of such works. In his preface he says: "There may be instances in which he has unintentionally described as universal certain customs which are known only in the regions with which he is familiar, and there may be other cases in which the changes that have taken place are much greater or less than as described."

It is the work of a very thorough student and a very valuable contribution to Western knowledge of China and her great change.

John Lofting.

RAGGED TALES

"Ragged Tales." By Nigel Vau Biene; author of "The Sibilant Whisper." With preface by O. M. Green. — Lettercraft Publishers, Shanghai.

"Ragged Tales" is the second effort in publication by an ambitious and ingenious youth, resident in Shanghai, whose work has already met with appreciation. These half dozen tales are much in the vein of "The Sibilant Whisper," discovering a penchant for occult, bizarre subjects, and more than the skill of a beginner in dealing with them. "Dawn" is a pretty piece of mysticism, "The Grey Hat," a crime story with a touch of broad comedy, and "The Mightiest Despot," a tale illustrating the power of imagination. The whole six, while of unequal interest, have some touches of merit and, on the whole, the little volume shows promise. Essentially, the tales depend on narrative for their interest, and are very skilfully constructed, but there are crudities in style which betray a too facile pen, and characterization as yet shows no outstanding feature in this delicate art. These blemishes apart, "Ragged Tales" have points of real interest, and we shall look to the young author to provide us with further entertainment of more than average quality.

IN A FINE FRENZY

"Candour: First Poems": By A. E. Tomlinson. Elkin, Matthews, Ld. 5/-net.

There is an attractive portrait of the author in khaki uniform as a frontispiece. It is a very misleading picture. For it shows us a young good-looking man of a very gentle expression. And his poems generally are so violent as to make even the most turbulent stuff of young America seem mild in comparison. Some of the work seems indeed to display only a frenzy, an unbridled passion that swamps and drowns the expression. The author is of course very young; and it is the common thing to say in such a case (it has indeed been said in most of the earlier reviews of this book) that his work shows great promise. But it is doubtful if this kind of criticism can be applied to poetry. For surely youth is an essential of poetry. And Mr. Tomlinson's poems strike one as of the sort that could not be written except in the heat of their enlivening passion. It is, nevertheless, cheering to read the words "First Poems" as a subtitle. For the author is a poet, beyond question, and we will look for his further work. Even among these poems which are, for the most part, so uncontrolled in utterance, there are one or two which show that he can reduce his thought to a form, to a dignified, finished expression. This is noticeable in the first poem, called "Peace" and in the third, called "March Past." If this can be done Mr. Tomlinson should give us some good poetry. His is a very fertile imagination and he has a wide vocabulary. A greater control over both (many of his words even are his own and not properly England's) should produce some excellent work.

John Lofting.

BY WHAT AUTHORITY?

Complete Works of Samuel Butler. The first four volumes: "A First Year in Canterbury Settlement, and Other Early Essays," with a Biographical Sketch of Butler by Henry Festing Jones. "Erewhon," "The Fair Haven" (published to-day), and "Life and Habit" (published to-day). The Shrewsbury Edition, edited by Henry Festing Jones and A. T. Bartholomew, and published by Jonathan Cape. Complete in 20 volumes at 20 guineas, in 750 numbered sets.

Foreigners say sometimes that the English people have made a god of authority. No-one travelling from Continental towns to London but is impressed by the quietude with which the city's millions move about their streets. Here is authority in a wise sense. The people hand over the regulation of their city to an authority they are prepared to obey, and they are left free to ponder quietly on their own engaging affairs. But the charge goes deeper. It is asserted that we will take no man's word for anything unless we feel it is backed by authority; then he can do no wrong. We are accused of disliking brilliant ideas and many-sidedness, because we argue that no man has time in life for attainment in many diversities.

Mr. R. A. Streatfeild, in an introduction to the 1913 edition of "Fair Haven," says that the book did Samuel Butler grave harm in the literary world. Deceived by irony and mystification, his critics ignored his later works, thinking discretion the better part of valour. But there may have been another reason for Butler's failure. He was too brilliant, too greatly interested in too many subjects. How could he pour forth upon them all? He wrote of New Zealand, of religion, of science and philosophy, of the Odyssey and its origin, he translated Homer, considered Shakespeare's sonnets, wrote a novel and many essays.

But it was this gift of absorbing easily and reflecting well and wisely that should endear him to the average man and woman. He brought, as they must do, his experience of life to bear on all problems. Specialization he left to the specialists, but he seems to say, "you are interested in the deeper ways of life, wishing for a rounded philosophy which may help you to view it sanely, I think I can help you." True he had to work with the ideas common to his age, the Victorian period, and in a sense he is limited by them. We no longer argue philosophically on the Darwinian theory, nor burst with indignation if anyone pulls at a thread in the rich garment of Christianity. But Samuel Butler infused his arguments with a breadth of thought which carries his works through his own generation into future days.

It is a belief in his usefulness that has produced this edition. In one of his essays Butler says, "The essence of Christianity lies neither in dogma nor yet in abnormally holy life, but in faith in an unseen world, in doing one's duty, in speaking the truth, in finding the true life rather in others than in oneself, and in the certain hope that he who loses his life on these behalfs finds more than he has lost." Not an entirely original point of view, but one that commends itself to the wisdom of most men and women of to-day. But he is a spur against inactivity and to individual thinking. Mr. Cape has made a bold venture in presenting this definitive edition, so admirably edited by Mr. H. Festing Jones and Mr. Bartholomew. Each volume is charmingly bound in blue and white, decorated with gold lettering. Each is easy to handle and hold. The memory of a great Victorian is honoured in this edition, which enshrines his thoughts so worthily. —"Morning Post."

GENTLE DISPUTATIONS

Conversations in Ebury-street. By George Moore. William Heinemann, Ld.

Mr. Geodge Moore has always been the candid and confidential friend of all his readers, but he has never before been so frank and outspoken (except when telling us about his many bonnes fortunes with the air of an occasional Casanova) as in this volume of parleyings and opinions. The first of his conversations in the street that has been so unkindly called "the Edgware-road of Mayfair" introduces a delightful American disciple who went down a coal-mine, when he left Harvard, because he wanted to get in touch with life. Had he lived in Europe, he could have gone to Paris, but, being in America, there was nothing else for him to do but go down a coal-mine. Unlike Mr. Moore, he had not the courage to descend into the oubliette of his own heart or somebody else's, which would have been a far more profound and perilous adventure. We suspect Mr. Husband (for such was his name) of being one of those abnormal Americans of whom, speaking of a similar case, a compatriot said: "There must be something radically wrong with him—he's never been divorced." Mr. Husband having hurried home to see his wife again, we begin to meet some of the artists who exist to console Mr. Moore for the death of Manet—we feel quite angry with Manet for dying at a time that did not suit the convenience of Mr. Moore. Before they enter 121, Ebury-street, however, we are indulged in the inevitable panegyric on Balzac, whose two thousand men and women are intimate friends of the author of "A Mummer's Wife," or, if you prefer it, of "Evelyn Innes." The critics of Balzac are ruthlessly criticised. "Sainte-Beuve's failure to appreciate Balzac's genius," we are assured, "will assure him of the sneers of many a generation, and the pot of paint flung in the face of the public will survive Ruskin's finest prose passage." Mr. Moore quotes with admiration some of the epigrams from the "Curé de Tours," insisting that four out of seven translated into English, which is better than the original French, could hold their own against the best to be found in La Rochefoucauld. We cannot agree; there is the packed substance of wisdom in two of them:

Celibates replace sentiments by habits

If we do not always know where we are going, we always know the fatigues of the journey—but neither has the witty, weighty brevity of the famous maxims which have the ring of gold pieces, whereas Balzac's thoughts lack even the muffled jingle of nickel coins. After Mr. Moore's master has been duly acclaimed, George Eliot is praised with faint damns, and then, oh then, there is a murderous onslaught on Mr. Thomas Hardy's art. A passage out of "Far from the Madding Crowd" is ridiculed, word by word, sentence by sentence, and the story of "Tess" is described as coco (which Mr. Moore translates as "Mother Goose"). When Mr. Freeman, that faint, elusive poet who takes part in this discussion, says that the Wessex novelist has helped the ordinary man to realize pessimism, the reply is that pessimism is no new thing in literature and that Mr. Hardy has "coaxed his readers into drinking from an old tin pot a beverage that had hitherto only been offered to them in golden and jewelled goblets." This candid critic will not see that it is truth, not beauty nor even elegance, much less the tact and taste of the elder French novelists, which is sought in the joyless quests of the greatest of our living men of letters. How could you expect him to understand! For it is a hand-mirror, framed in silver and stolen from some lady-Muse's dressing-table, which Mr. Moore holds up to the artificialities of the life he knows—and whether he poses in front of it as an English Zola or an Irish Balzac, the face of his indomitable ego is always the amplest reflexion in the glass.

Still, we all love him for his carefully-managed peccadilloes and petulances—most of all, perhaps, for the gay, defiant air with which he flaunts the tattered cloak of "ninety-ish" superior-mindedness in the astonished eyes of the post-war generations. With him it was never merely Art for Art's sake; it was Art for the Artist's sake, for ever and ever, amen! Wilde was a clumsy bourgeois, waving a podgy hand and saying things to amaze his own kind, in comparison with the delightful egoist of Ebury-street, who confesses he always has time to talk about Art, meaning the Artist—meaning, of course, himself! And Shaw, in comparison, is a limping interloper; with the "knocker-kneed" literary gait which his spirit has inherited from ancestral flesh. And Yeats, compared with him, is an umbrella blown inside out, showing the frail, iron ribs of his artistry; as, indeed, Mr. Moore depicts him, hiding in a cloak the budding of his latter-day rotundity (like that of Meredith's "Wise Youth") at a windy street-corner in Dublin. For this eremite of Ebury-street never forgets that he himself is really and truly an Irish gentleman, though with a distinguished complaisance he quite often allows the reader to forget it.—"Morning Post."

A WELSH SINGER

"Poems of Wales." By A. G. Prys-Jones. Blackwell. 2s. 6d.

This little volume will appeal to Welshmen and to all lovers of melodious verse. Mr. Prys-Jones is proud of his native land, saturated with memories of its ancient glories. "A Song of the Welsh" is a stirring tribute to the ancient Cymric race, with its unexhausted vitality; and in a poem on the lovely valley which is adorned by the ruins of Talley Abbey are such touching lines as:

Along that road I could have sworn
I heard
Ap Gwilym, lithe and laughing, in the brake,
Calling on Morfudd — and for Morfudd's sake
Outpouring songs of passion, like a bird.

An "in memoriam" tribute to the late Owen Edwards gives thanks to God for "our deathless dead":

Prince, Poet, Peasant—those who made
For us this heritage of pride,
Building with sword and song and spade
A land where freedom never died.

There are also charming poems about fairies, clouds and waters, containing such lines as:

When, like a lantern, glows the moon
Upon night's high roof-tree,
When dusk has closed the eyes of June
And sleep is on the bee:
If you go gently through the dell
And hide in dewy grass—
Maybe you'll hear the fairy-bell
And see the fairies pass

One is not surprised to learn that several of these melodious poems have already been set to music.

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

SHANGHAI MOTHER GOOSE

By Elizabeth Pepys.

THE MORNING AFTER.

Diddle, diddle dumpling, my son John
Went to bed with his stockings on;
A dark brown taste, head weighed a ton,
O a wild, wild night had my son John.

REDUCING.

Little Miss Muffet
Sat on a tuffet
Eating curds and whey;
But a neighbour said "No,
Too fat you will grow,"
And frightened Miss Muffet away.

HIGH FINANCE.

There was a crooked man, who worked a crooked deal
And made some crooked money in a very crooked style.
He formed a monster company—of course it wasn't real—
But it brought them wealth aplenty for a long, long while.

CHITS WE SHOULD LIKE TO SEND

To the Caller Who Hasn't Time to Sit Down

By Elizabeth Pepys.

Miss Janet Calliday
Primrose Terrace, Shanghai

My dear Jan:

I tried to expostulate with you the other day when you kept a whole roomful in a flutter of perturbation for precisely twenty-two and a half minutes while you protested you hadn't time for a cup of tea, for a scone, or even to sit down. You had some reason for coming in, but what it was I never did find out. My one recollection is a series of "I'm just going—really can't sit down—haven't time for tea—don't let me interrupt you."

But of course you did interrupt us. Not only the men who stood at attention while their teas cooled, not only those of us to whom you talked in your darting, inconsequential, bird-like conversational flurries, but the whole room kept waiting for you to go or to stay and it was impossible to resume any connected social intercourse until you had finally departed, after many false starts.

Do you remember in "Old Lady 31" how Sarah Jane says of "Blossy," "She always could hold the door open longer than any other living being?" As you advanced to the door, accompanied by charging gallants, then returned to fling a chance remark across the room, pivoted, and were off again without the answer, only to return again and yet again, I'm sure that remark crossed the minds of those present.

THE DISTURBING ELEMENT.

It's not that we wished to hurry you off, Jan dear, but the state of suspense is trying. You would neither stay with us nor go. Instead of being a delightful diversion you were an irritating intrusion. With twenty-two minutes at your command you might have had a dish of tea with us in an atmosphere of peace and leisure instead of imposing your tenseness upon us all.

We've seen you do it before this, and latterly I've timed your incursions when you simply couldn't stay a moment. They vary from seven minutes—you were catching a train that day—to half an hour. Surely 30 minutes is enough for a placid entrance, an easing of the nervous tension which not only emanates from you but puts us all into a fidget. If you must go, —go, and be brisk about it; but don't allow youself to fall into the fallacy of thinking you are busier than you honestly are. Bustle is not a virtue to be cultivated.

Agitatedly yours,
Flustered Hostess.

VISITING ARTIST

Miss Amy J. Drucker of London Sketching in China

Miss Drucker, whose work is doubtless familiar to many artists in Shanghai who visit the exhibitions of the Royal Academy, the Royal Institute of Oil Painters, or the International Society of Sculptors, Painters and Etchers when at Home, is now in Shanghai, making a collection of Chinese types, and it is hoped that an exhibit of her work may be arranged while she is here.

MISS PEGGY LOVELL OF THE "MIDNIGHT FOLLIES"

While this talented artist has brought with her only a part of her studies the writer saw enough to get an excellent idea of the versatility and strength displayed in the various mediums of oils, water colours and pastels, mainly the latter, and a showing could not fail to be of general interest. Miss Drucker's main line is portraiture and among her sitters have been H. R.H. Prince Henry, Colonel Bramley, now Attorney General of Palestine and formerly Chief of Police, the former head of the Board of Works in Palestine, Stephen McKenna, Cynthia Stockley, author of "The Claw," Rosita Forbes, the explorer, and other well known persons. While in Shanghai she is painting likenesses of local people.

VARIED TALENTS.

Miss Drucker's work includes a large number of types as she has travelled extensively and her interests are equally wide in range. With Mrs. Dawson Scott she organized the "Land Girls" and later started the "To-morrow Club," a literary circle in London. She also writes and has published some of her reminiscences in "Time and Tide." Lithography and colour printing after the Japanese method are other art branches which she has taken up and she taught the latter subject in the Tagore School of Indian Painting in Calcutta.

The most appealing thing in the paintings which Miss Drucker has with her in Shanghai were, in the judgment of the writer, a group of child studies in pastel, some exquisite bits of restrained colouring and sympathetic interpretation. Besides these there are some admirable landscapes, luminous and striking, other portrait studies, notably a series of rapidly sketched sailors, some lovely prints of London and bits of Yorkshire. Miss Drucker comes to Shanghai from Italy and expects to return to England via Taishan and Peking and thence across Siberia.

E. P.

CHINESE CAMPFIRE GIRLS

At the second annual conference of the Northwest Campfire Girls of America, held in Seattle in March the 13 Chinese girls composing the membership of the Tanda Group were especially invited to be guests of Mr. Goon Dip, the Chinese consul in Seattle. This is the only Chinese Campfire group on the Coast, so far as is known. The organization is similar to the Girl Guides and these Chinese high school students are carrying on in different surroundings much the same type of work that the Chinese Girl Guides of Shanghai are doing.

HOME HUMOURS

Dorothy: How long is it to my birthday?

Mother: Not very long, dear.

Well, is it time for me to begin to be a good girl?

—"Life"

SHELVED.

Mother: Why did you drop that young man who took you to all the football games?

Daughter: The football season's over.

SPRING COSTUMES.

PUT TO THE PROOF.

Little Lucy (to guest): Do you like that cake, Mrs. Brown?

Mrs. Brown: Yes, dear, very much.

Little Lucy: That's funny, 'cause Muvver said you havent't any taste.

—"Life"

TELEPHONE MANNERS.

The Telephone: I'm afraid it's the wrong number. Very sorry to have troubled you.

Horace (politely): Oh, not at all. Thank you for having me.

Cambridge Granta.

PERTINENT QUESTION.

"I give my husband no cause for fault-finding."

"Does that help matters any?"

Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE LITTLE TRUMPETERS

I met the herald jonquils
Amid the grass to-day
They trooped, the little trumpeters.
In glad and green array;
Each held a golden bugle,
And each a spear of green,
They said that they were messengers
From April's misty queen.

Spring gave a swift direction,
A hidden countersign,—
Mayhap it was the blue bird's pipe,—
They straightened up in line;
There came a rushing whisper,
A mystic sudden breeze;
It tossed their little horns on high,
Their trumpets to the trees.

They blew a golden message,
A shout of love and spring,
A tip-toe blast of just one word—
A word for stars to sing;
They tossed their living trumpets,
The word they blew and blew—
And the word, O Lord of Life, the word
Was You! You! You!

Margaret Prescott Montague, in The "Atlantic."

SENEX IRRITANS

When I was twenty the world was a daisy,
Blue were the skies as the eyes of a girl:
"Elders and betters" were no less than crazy—
Day was a jig and the night was a whirl.

When I was forty the world was a melon,
Every one out to make sure of his slice
Juicy enough to get sick and get well on—
Ready to buy and to pay the full price.

Now I am sixty the running is faster—
Not a whit daunted, I step just aside
Watching the race, and avoiding disaster,
Smiling superior, clothed in my pride.

Oh, for the zest of it! Forty and twenty
Each had his fling—but for sixty remains
Only remembrance, and echoes in plenty.
Still—there's some pleasure in using your brains!

W. S. M., in "Life."

EARLY SPRING

I said a quiet thing to-day.
I said: "And who would care
Though every breeze is like the way
A hand feels on your hair?

"And who would mind a day so new
And so sweet with the south,
That it seems reaching out for you
And feeling for your mouth?

"O who would give the flip of a string,
Or the blowing of a feather,
At any time for anything
So trivial as weather?"

Annis Higgins, in "New Republic"

VEGETABLE RECIPES

Peas in French Style.

796 Total Calories
28 Protein Calories
2 quarts green peas
4 tablespoonfuls butter
1 tablespoonful flour
1 teaspoonful sugar
2 teaspoonfuls salt
¼ section white onion, chopped
½ teaspoonful chopped parsley
½ cupful boiling water

Shell the peas. Melt the butter over a moderate heat; add the salt and sugar, and then the peas. Cook slowly until the skin of the peas begins to wrinkle. While cooking, shake the pan frequently, but do not stir the peas with a fork or spoon. When sufficiently cooked, dredge with the flour and shake the pan until the butter and flour are blended. Then add the onion, parsley, and the boiling water. Cook until the peas are tender.

Squash Petites.

716 Total Calories
54 Protein Calories
1 summer squash
1 egg
1 tablespoonful cold water
½ cupful cracker crumbs
3 tablespoonfuls butter or drippings
Salt to taste

Select a very small squash; remove the outside covering unless

THE "PERIOD FROCK."

the squash is very tender. Cut into inch-square pieces. Place in salted water and boil until tender; then drain. Beat the egg and mix with the cold water. Dredge the squash in cracker crumbs, then in egg, and again in cracker crumbs. Sauté in the butter or drippings.

Cucumber Vinaigrette.

138 Total Calories
24 Protein Calories
1 good sized cucumber
1 egg
2 tablespoonfuls mild vinegar
½ teaspoonful sugar
Salt and pepper to taste

Pare the cucumber, cut into small pieces, and cook in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain. To make the dressing, beat the egg and add the vinegar, sugar, salt, and pepper. Boil until slightly thickened. It should be served hot poured over the cucumbers.

TO POETRY

Thou lady of my dreams awake or sleeping,
Thou enemy of work, and peace, and play,
Thine eyes are turned forever from my seeking,
Both night and day.
Waking I dream, and dreaming I awaken,
The years are passing as a flight of stars,
And in the darkness now I am forsaken
Behind these bars.
I meet in thee my last, my only lover,
I find in thee my first unfailing friend,
And yet I know I never shall discover
How to unbend
Thy subtle form and delicate surprising,
Or wrest from thee one secret of thine art
Ere with unanswered question and surmising
I too depart.

Everest Lewin, in London "Mercury"

MAIL NOTICES

INWARD

Per I.K.K.S. Shinyo Maru ... Apr. 16
Per M.M.S. Chile ... ... „ 17
Per A.O.L.S. President Grant „ 19

OUTWARD

For Marseilles, London, etc —

Per N.D.L.S. Nurnberg ... Apr. 14
Per H.A.L.S. Oldenburg ... „ 15
Per P. & O.S. China ... „ 15

For Japan, Canada, U.S.A. & Europe:

Per A.O.L.S. Pres. Jackson Apr. 13
Per O.S.K.S. Alabama Maru „ 17
Per R.M.S. Emp. of Australia „ 21
Per N.Y.K.S. Iyo Maru ... „ 21
Per T.K.K.S. Shinyo Maru... „ 23
Per A.O.L.S. Pres. Jefferson „ 25

For Manila, Australia and New Zealand via Hongkong —

Per O. & O. S. China ....Apr. 15

PASSENGERS

INWARD.

Per str. Nagasaki Maru, April 2. From Japan. Miss L. Lorens, steerage, E. C. Pomercy, A. Ribert, A. C. M. M'Clough, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Fuller.

Per H.A.L.S. Cobenz, April. 4. From Hamburg. Mr. Ft. Wandtke, Mr. K. Seltin Dr. and Mrs. Kleid, Mrs. O. Wantor, Mr. G. Helles, Mr. R. Bossen, Mrs. H. Heyse, Mrs. H. Oertel and children, Miss S. Radunski, Mr. H. Peltner, Mrs. M. Funke, Mr. W. Schirmer, Miss Wiedemann, Mr. A. Sielden Mrs. D. Arndt, Miss M. Teindt From Genoa Miss R. de la Camp, Mr. [illegible] Wagner, Mr. N. Peliakoff, Mr. and Mrs. K. Grove, Mr. and Mrs. R. [illegible] From Rotterdam. Mr. and Mrs. Krebs. From Batavia. Mrs. H. Saito. From Singapore. Mr. and Mrs N. Livermore, Mr. T. G. Fenby, Mr. and Mrs. N. Isse. From Hongkong. Mrs. I. E. Costa, Miss M. de Figueiredo, Mr. and Miss de Figueiredo, Mrs. Tilburn, Mr. and Mrs. Ehan, Mrs. I. Golding, Mr. and Mrs C. Harder.

Per R.M.S. Empress of Russia April 5. From Hongkong. Mr. J. R. Collins, Miss D. L. Glassford, Mr. R. L. Moore, Mr. J. O'Leary, Dr. A. Schwarzhaupt Mr. and Mrs P. A. Doan, Mr. L. T. Lamont, Mr. A. [illegible] Mrs. C. Weld, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. N. [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. G. P. McKee, Mr. E. P. Lemon, Dr. R. E. Bowen, Mr. C. K. [illegible] Miss M. Cayen, Mr. and Mrs. A. Clare, Mr. C. E. Davies, Mr. J. F. Dorsey, Capt. D. Fraser, Mr. J. [illegible] hay, Mrs. G. Harvey, Mrs. D. F. Henderson Mr. and Mrs H. T. Kain, Mrs. C. H. Bruce, Mrs. M. [illegible] Mrs. Joy, Miss [illegible] Mr. D. Jones, Mr. H. M. Kenyon, Mr. A. [illegible] Mrs. J. L. Mackenzie, Mr. E. Mayhew, Mr. J. Medeiros, Mrs. A. Moutrie, Mr. J. Nakayama, Mr. E. D. Nelson, Mrs. M. Pilcher, Miss G. Ranzer, Mr. E. C. Robinson, Mr. E. G. Smith, Mr. M. Schreiber, Miss P. Spicer, Mrs. [illegible] Stantz, Miss N. Swartz, Mr. T. Thomas, Mr. T. Vanderbeek, Mrs. B. Wall, Miss S. Wilson, Mrs. H. Wise, Mrs. D. Wise, Mr. E. W. Bunnell, Mr. P. A. Cox, Mrs. J. L. Nelson, Miss [illegible] Mr. E. [illegible] Mrs. J. S. Ayers, Mr. D. M. Bunnell, Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. N. D. Bunnell, Mrs. [illegible] W. Bunkley, Master B. Bunkley, Mrs. M. O. Carlson, Miss J. Carlson, Mrs. C. A. Cabanies, Mrs. R. B. Crichton and child, Mrs. H. H. Gee and child, Mrs. A. H. [illegible] nings and child, Mr. T. [illegible] Mrs. S. B. Deal, Miss M. K. Dunn, Mrs. G. E. Derk and child, Mrs. C. D. Evans and child, Miss M. Evans, Mrs. E. L. Finster, M. C. Goodrich, Mrs. N. W. Cress, Mrs. W. E. Goodhue, Miss J. Gerstime, Miss L. M. Grennan, Mrs. M. Grennon and child, Miss M. [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Miss P. Hess, Mrs. J. H. Hoge, Mrs. E. Hoge, Mrs. G. F. Helse, Mrs. C. W. Hughes, [illegible] S. E. Jackson, Miss J. S. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Jansen, Mrs. C. Jones, Miss J. L. Jones, Miss D. L. Kenney, Miss [illegible] H. Lucas, Miss C. Lucas, Mrs. C. G. Miss [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. W. Mees, Mrs. Mellon, Master F. Mallen, Mrs. H. C. Obea, Capt. and Mrs. A. Orrill, Mrs. W. J. Pennell and child, Rev. A. L. Ryan, Mrs. K. S. Schilling, Mrs H. L. Smith, Mrs. C. Weaver, Miss C. Weaver, Mr. J. A. Bailey, Miss V. Barger, Miss E. Dores, Mr. A. R. Eichler, Mr. E. L. V. Forster, Mr. L. Da Silva, Mr. J. Simpson.

Per str. Suiyang, April 6. From Hongkong and Amoy. Mrs. Hotchhiss, Mr. Hotchkiss.

Per str. Kungwo, April 6. From River Ports. Mr. Banker, Mr. H. Van der Veen Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Allen and [illegible] children.

Per str Tungchow April 7. From Tientsin. Mr. and Mrs. Dermotte and four children, Captain Lepler, Mrs. S. E. Watts, Dr. and Mrs. Ayres.

Per R.M.S. Empress of Australia, April 7. From Vancouver, etc. Mr. and Mrs. B. D. F. Dieth, Mr. R. Berlinger, Mr. R. Blumenthal, Mrs. L. Brodie, Miss E. Brodie, Mr. R. K. Cameron, Miss M. Esser, Mr. R. E. England, Miss M. Furness, Mr. H. B. Gobeatiel, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Goddard, Miss Goddard, Mr. K. T. Gurney, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Hammond, Mr. J. R. Hargreaves, Miss P. Hoffel, Mr. and Mrs. G. Houser, Mr. E. L. Hunter, Mr. J. N. Boyd, Mr. V. T. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. R. Brodie, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Cooper, Mr. W. E. Gillis, Mrs. Hunter, Mr. H. C. Lamond, Dr. A. Mann, Mr. W. H. Merzan, Mr. M. Munz, Mr. H. J. Nairn, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Nazer, Mrs. P. Norman, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. A. Perlin, Miss E. Platts, Captain E. Y. Sassoon, Mrs. S. J. Sharpless, Mr. and Mrs. M. Simmons, Mrs. S. Simmons, Master L. Simmons, Mr. G. J. Wijtanburg, Mr. J. B. Swain, Mrs. I. Terrano, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Struble, Master F. Struble, Master P. Struble, M. M. Shumaker, Miss Gibbs, Miss [illegible] Mr. O. A. Hall, Mr. [illegible] McMullan, Mr. I. Mankowitz, Mrs. R. P. Oakshett, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Oakshett, Mr. I. Morita; Mr. and Mrs. W. Y. Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. S. Stani and two children, Mr. K. Taki, Mrs. C. S. Upson, Miss P. Upson, Miss E. V. Upson, Mr. A. J. Wearner, Mr. R. Watanabe, Mr. K. Nakamura, Mr. and Mrs. A. Sakai, Master K. Sakai, Miss K. Sakai, Master H. Sakai, Mr. P. H. Ieuch, Rev. M. Tjader.

Per str. Szechuen, April 8. From Hongkong. Miss M. T. Price, Mr. and Mrs. G. Murray.

Per str. Hsinchi, April 8. From Foochow. Mrs. Putnam, Miss Putnam, Miss Rowatree.

Per str. Soochow, April 8. From Hongkong. Mr. and Mrs. G. V. [illegible] Miss G. M. [illegible] Mr. E. W. [illegible]

Per str. Kiangwah April 8. From River Ports. Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Miss [illegible] and child, Miss Lindsay, Messrs. Morris, Rannon, Reed, Schwarz.

Per P. & O. S. Soudan, April 8. From Bombay. Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar, Mr. Dagel. From Colombo. Mrs. Piercy. From Singapore. Miss McLellan, Mrs. Cameron, Mr. Crabb, Mr. C. Tripp, Mrs. Mott, Miss H. Camp, Miss C. Camp, Mr. and Mrs. Johns and two children. From Hongkong. Mrs. Bristow and two children, Miss A. Sampson.

Per P. & O. S. Kashmir, April 8. From London, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Andersen, Mr. J. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Barrow, Mr. and Mrs. M. Barrow, Miss Saddler, Mr. J. Bentley, Mr. [illegible] Mrs. Westbury, Messrs. F. and B. Westbury, Mr. D. Barr, Mr. Charki, Mr. [illegible] Mr. Drake, Mr. H. Depreer, Mr. Hyndman, Mr. W. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Hotchkiss, Mr. W. P. [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Mr. Napier, Mr. Purdon, Mr. [illegible] Miss D. and Miss E. Bur[illegible] Mr. H. Zirkel, Mr. Zirkel, Mr. C. Dowell, Miss I. Dowell, Rev. [illegible] Mr. and Miss Allen, Mr. [illegible]

Per R.M.S. President Garfield, April 8. From America, etc. The Hon. Judge and Mrs. D. Purdy, Miss F. Purdy, Mr. and Mrs. M. Toch, Miss Toch, Mr. A. Bennett, Mr. W. R. Dockrill, Mr. [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. E. Westbury, Mr. B. and Mr. E. Westbury, Mr. W. H. Arnold-Forster, Misses F. and M. Cullinane, Mr. P. E. Saumon, Mr. and Mrs. P. H. A. Borrow, Mr. I. G. S. Barrow, Misses C. E. and I. E. Doxell, Mr. [illegible] Mrs. W. Thomas, Mr. J. P. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. L. Deacons, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Miss [illegible] Marquis and Marchese Tokugawa, Mr. T. [illegible] Mrs. J. B. Pardee, [illegible] Mrs. J. P. Cameron, Mr. E. W. Foster, Mrs. C. Mott, Mr. C. H. Tripp, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Gill, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. [illegible] Mrs. M. Kyle, Judge and Mrs. W. B. [illegible] Mr. E. T. Gregg, Mr. C. C. [illegible]

Per str. Kanchow, April 9. From Canton and Hongkong via Swatow. Mr. and Mrs. Hicks and two children.

Per str. Hsin Kiangteen, April 10. From Ningpo. Mr. and Mrs. Hubert, Mr. Kuff, Mr. Wolsiffer, Mr. Poleat and child, Mr. and Mrs. Ballgwan and child.

Per str. Fengtien, April 10. From Tientsin. Dame Adelaide Anderson, Mr. Twogood. From Chefoo. Mr. F. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Master O. Adams.

Per str. Tuckwo, April 10. From River Ports. Mr. E. F. Ratti, Mr. C. Love, Mr. Tippard, Mrs. J. S. Adams, Mr. Ost, Mr. de Ridder, Mr. M. T. Alexander, Mr. A. Dixon, Miss Dunphy, Miss Norman, Miss Loggin, Mr. A. F. Barnes, Mrs. Gundey.

OUTWARD.

Per str. Hsin Peking, April 4. For Ningpo.—Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Martin, Mr. F. Schimming, Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Bakeman and child, Messrs. Poteat and child, Lee.

Per str. Luchow, April 5.—For Tsingtao.—Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Berthel and two children, Mr. Wagener.

Per str. Suuning, April 5.—For Hongkong.—Mr. and Mrs. T. Y. Pearson and child, Mr. W. S. Cruickshank.

For Amoy.—Messrs. G. T. Hanwell, F. I. Robbins and Rasmussen.

Per str. Sunning, April 5.—For Chefoo.—Miss D. Stark, Master D. Parry, Messrs. J. J. Sheridan, J. P. Lawrie, Mrs. G. N. Courtney and two children. For Tientsin.—Miss Allian, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. de Silva, Mr. E. Hine, Miss S. Feika.

Per str. Woosung, April 5.—For River Ports—Mr. C. E. Burdett, Mrs. D. Henderson, Mr. W. G. L. Sell, Mr. V. G. Smyth, Mr. G. E. Stewart, Mr. A. J. Hughes, Mrs. M. Faure, Mr. and Mrs. J. Martinek and child, Mr. [illegible] N. Wilson.

Per R.M.S. Empress of Russia, April 5.—For Vancouver, etc.—Mrs. N. Adair, Miss A. Adair, Miss E. Adair, Mr. G. A. Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Brooks and child, Mr. Oscar Benz, Capt. J. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs J. W. Bradley, Miss T. and Miss A. B. Bradley, Master T. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Dawe, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Gillingham and child, Miss Frances Guy, Mr. F. M. Hood, Mrs. H. B. Hoff, Mr. J. Hope, Miss C. Hamilton, Miss T. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs C. J. G. Hill, Mr. T. Iens, Mr. C. Ioannou, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Le Breton, Master Robert Le Breton, Mr. J. F. Mewson, Mr. K. MacKenzie, Miss L. S. McRae, Mr. J. Morley, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Maassen, Mr. W. H. Porritt, Mr. L. Rondon, Mr. A. Reuss, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Stanstead, Master Arthur and Master Richard Stanstead, Mr. G. E. P. Lewis, Miss A. Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Taylor, Master Alfred Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Townsend, Rt. Rev. W. C. White, Mr. M. H. [illegible] Miss H. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hudson Brownnall, Adjutant and Mrs. E. Brandt, Master C. Brandt, Miss E. Couche, Mr. R. Conduit, Mrs. D. B. Davenport, Master Donald Davenport, Master Richard Davenport, Master Russell Davenport, Miss Marion Davenport, Mr. L. L. Dzu, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Doherty, Mr. J. H. Farquharson, Miss J. Farquharson, Mr. W. S. Featherstonhaugh, Miss M. Giesfeldt, Mr. W. Grant, Mr. F. [illegible] Mrs. M. D. Hopkins, Miss A. V. Harris, Mrs. S. Koff, Miss L. Koff, Miss D. Koff, Miss T. Peterson, Miss V. Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Rogers, Rev. and Mrs P. Stevens, Miss Nada Stevens, Mr. T. Schneider, Mr. M. T. Simmons, Mrs. W. Smith, Rev. and Mrs. W. Stobie, Miss M. Stobie, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Sama, Master O. Sama, Master A. Sama, Mr. T. K. Voronovsky.

Per str. Shantung, April 6.—For Canton—Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Adlington and child. For Hongkong Mr. and Mrs J. V. Murphy, Master Murphy, Miss Sith. For Swatow—Mr. Hakine.

Per str. Shengking, April 7.—For Tungchow—Dr. J. B. Grant.

Per str. Wanliu, April 8.—For Ichang—Mr. G. A. Meszkovski.

Per str. Wuchang, April 8.—For River Ports—Rev. G. A. Clayton.

Per str. Suiyang, April 8.—For Amoy. Mrs. G. Cole, Mrs. Buss, Mr. F. Ecker, Miss S. Heyreisu.

Per str. Szechuen, April 9.—For Hongkong—Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Byrne, Mr. A. J. Fellingham, Mr. A. M. Bourne, Mr. L. A. Whittaker. For Canton Mr. W. S. H. Fuller.

Per str. Tungchow, April 9.—For Chefoo—Mr. R. W. Wingrove. For Tientsin—Miss C. Harding, Miss Allian, Mr. and Mrs. O. Mannen and two children.

Per str. Poyang, April 9.—For River Ports—Mr. G. T. Nelson, Mr. Wilden.

Per M.M.S. Amazone, April 10. —For Marseilles—Mrs. Claudon and child, Mr. and Miss Vittori, Mr. and Mrs. Bauik and three children, Mr. E. Bougeard, Miss Remond and child, Mr. [illegible] E. Steiger, Mrs. H. [illegible] Messrs. J. Bonnet, Messrs. J. [illegible] Cadas, R. Allix, A. Vakatia, Ropin, Favoureou, J. Vandamme, J. M. Bouche, J. Jolivet, Mrs. A. E. Muellenmer, Mrs. A. Gautier and two children, Miss Rishkevich, Mr. B. Vanow, Mrs. G. V. [illegible] and two children, Rev. Pere Seals, Dr. Hardiollier, Mr. Serjensky, Mrs. Sherer, Mr. and Mrs. R. [illegible] Mrs. A. Szulcenko, Mrs. M. Patrykowska, Messrs. C. Lacomb, J. Gualicelli, J. Bertho, J. Vicilas, P. Vessere J. Verzin, J. Haccart, L. Bernard, R. Gauthier, L. Louveau, P. Wandelle, Kouznetoff, Mrs. Plikta and child, Mr. I. Erbank, Messrs. P. Portier, L. Garner, L. Laure, Pages. For Baroath—Mr. M. Frankel. For Port Said—Mr. R. M. de Welle. For Colombo—Mr. R. Marr. For Saigon—Mr. and Mrs. Deseams. For Singapore Mr. R. Light, Mr. M. H. Kavrama, Mr. C. Van Dyk, Mr. R. A. Hutchinson. For Hongkong—Mr. R. S. Moore, Mr. A. R. Scott, Mr. F. X. Cuccio, Mrs. O'Kelly and child.

Per str. Kanchow, April 11.—For Amoy Mr. and Mrs T. C. Brown and child, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. C. Anderson, Mr. W. S. Lawton.

SICCAWEI METEOROLOGICAL REPORT

Day of Month	Barometer 9 A.M.	Barometer Attchd Therm	Wind Direction 9 a.m.	Wind Force (1-12)	Hygrometer 9 a.m. Dry	Hygrometer 9 a.m. Wet	Thermometer in Shade Max.	Thermometer in Shade Min.	Weather conditions
April 4	30.34	53.4	S S E	2	53.0	47.3	63.5	39.6	C.
„ 5	30.21	53.6	S F	2	53.4	46.8	57.0	43.3	C.
„ 6	30.03	54.0	S E	1	58.1	52.7	65.0	44.2	B.
„ 7	30.07	54.7	E S E	2	60.3	53.8	70.6	44.4	C.
„ 8	30.36	55.9	E N E	2	60.8	51.4	67.5	47.1	C.
„ 9	30.23	56.1	S E	2	56.0	53.4	72.0	47.1	C.
„ 10	30.12	57.5	S E	1	67.5	59.9	79.1	51.8	B. C.

Explanation

B—blue sky D—drizzle H—hail M—misty (hazy) R—rain T—thunder
C—clouds F—fog L—lightning O—overcast (dull) S—snow Z—calm

SHANGHAI THERMOMETER READINGS FOR THE WEEK

In the open air in a shaded situation in the Foreign Settlement

Date	Thermometer (Fahr.) Minimum 1924	Minimum 1923	Maximum 1924	Maximum 1923	Rainfall Inches 1924	Inches 1923
April 4	43.0	51.0	58.8	67.0	Nil.	Trace
„ 5	46.0	47.5	54.8	58.0	Nil.	0.62
„ 6	48.0	43.5	61.0	64.2	Nil.	Nil.
„ 7	58.0	50.6	66.8	73.0	Nil.	Nil.
„ 8	49.0	52.0	63.0	64.8	Nil.	0.05
„ 9	48.0	45.0	67.8	68.8	Nil.	Nil.
„ 10	54.6	58.2	74.4	63.8	Nil.	0.57

BIRTHS

FUXMAN.—On Monday, April 7, 1924, at the Victoria Nursing Home, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fuxman, a daughter. Australian papers please copy.

KIMBALL.—On April 6, 1924, at Maternite, St. Marie's Hospital, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. A. Fleming Kimball, a son.

MILLINGTON. — On Tuesday, April 8, 1924, at Dr. Fearn's Sanatorium, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Millington, a daughter.

UNDERWOOD.—On April 6, 1924, at Paris, to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Underwood, a daughter.

MARRIAGES

MOORE–BENSON.—On April 3, 1924, at the British Consulate, Shanghai, and afterwards at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Dr. W. B. A. Moore, Government Medical Officer, Kowloon, Hongkong, to Helen Margaret Benson, daughter of C. Benson, Lyme Regis, Dorset, late I.C.S. Madras.

ROSSE—THOMAS.—On April 10, 1924, at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Shanghai, by the Very Rev. Dean Symons and the Rev. John Magee, Dorothy Jansen Thomas, eldest daughter of Mrs. H. J. Everall and the late H. R. H. Thomas, to George Morton Rosse, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Irving C. Rosse, of Washington, D.C.

SILVER WEDDING

CLENNELL—SHARPLES. — On April 12, 1899, at H.B.M. Consulate General and at the Cathedral, Shanghai, Walter J. Clennell, B.A. (H.B.M.'s Acting Consul, Wuhu), second son of the late Walter C. Clennell, B.A., London, to Edith Sarah, elder daughter of John Sharples, Esq., of Birkenhead and Shanghai.

DEATHS

BAILEY.—On April 9, 1924, at 4 Peitaiho Lane, Shanghai, Doris, the beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Bailey, age one year and four months.

BUCK.—On April 9, 1924, at the General Hospital, Shanghai, Morton Ward Buck, of Messrs. Sulzer Bros., aged 43 years.

FRISENETTE.—On April 4, 1924, at the Isolation Hospital, Shanghai, Adolf C. Z. Frisenette, Great Northern Telegraph Co., aged 45 years.

GALE.—On February 15, 1924, at Sunnyside, Woodbury, Devon, England, Phoebe, widow of the late S. R. Gale. Deeply regretted.

LETHIN.—On Sunday morning, April, 6, 1924, at Shanghai, Lois Linnea, Lethin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Lethin, aged one year and one month.

LOPES.—On April 10, 1924, at the Isolation Hospital, Shanghai, Eugenie Josie, at the age of 47. Hongkong, Canton and Macao papers please copy.

LOVELL.—On April 4, 1924, at Nanking, Brenda, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lovell.

POATE.—On April 6, 1924, at Wykeham House, Stanmore, Middlesex, England, Clara Gilfillan Poate, beloved wife of Mr. W. H. Poate, late of Shanghai. Deeply regretted.

SEREDKIN. — On April 6, 1924, at the General Hospital, Shanghai, Mrs. Klavdia Artemievna Seredkin, of Manchouli, aged 57 years.

EAST ASIATIC Co., Ld.

(Aktieselskabet Det Ostasiatiske Kompagni)

COPENHAGEN

TO THE EAST.

Japan Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to HONGKONG, SHANGHAI, KOBE, YOKOHAMA, DALNY and VLADIVOSTOCK.

Bangkok Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG, MIDDLESBROUGH and ANTWERP to PORT SAID, COLOMBO, PENANG, SINGAPORE and BANGKOK.

Java Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA and HAMBURG to BATAVIA, SAMARANG and SOERABAYA.

TO SOUTH AFRICA.
Sailings from DENMARK, NORWAY, SWEDEN and BALTIC PORTS to CAPE TOWN, ALGOA BAY, EAST LONDON, DURBAN, DELAGOA BAY and BEIRA.

TO AUSTRALIA.
Sailings from DENMARK, NORWAY, SWEDEN, HAMBURG and LISBON to FREMANTLE, ADELAIDE, MELBOURNE, SYDNEY and BRISBANE.

TO NORTH PACIFIC.
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to ST. THOMAS (with transhipment to the GREATER and LESSER ANTILLES), CRISTOBAL (with transhipment to CENTRAL AMERICAN PORTS), LOS ANGELES HARBOUR, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND (Oreg.), SEATTLE, TACOMA and VANCOUVER (with transhipment to other NORTH PACIFIC PORTS).

TO SOUTH PACIFIC.
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to ST. THOMAS (with transhipment to the GREATER and LESSER ANTILLES), CRISTOBAL (with transhipment to CENTRAL AMERICAN PORTS), GUAYAQUIL, CALLAO, MOLLENDO, IQUIQUE, ANTOFAGASTA, VALPARAISO, TALCHUANO and CORRAL (with transhipment to other SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS).

For further particulars apply to—
THE EAST ASIATIC CO., LTD., COPENHAGEN.
Telegrams: "Orient."

UNITED KINGDOM—JAPAN and BANGKOK LINES: Escombe, McGrath & Co., London, Glasgow, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, Grimsby, Middlesbrough, Greenock, Immingham and Southampton.
JAVA, SOUTH AFRICA and AUSTRALIA LINES: J. E. HYDE & Co., London.
PACIFIC LINES: United Baltic Corporation, Ltd., 158 Fenchurch Street, London.
Tel.: "Orienteako."
SHANGHAI.—The East Asiatic Co., Ltd.

Printed and Published for the Proprietors of the North-China Daily News & Herald, Limited, at the office of the Company, 17 The Bund, Shanghai, China.

The North-China Herald

AND SUPREME COURT AND CONSULAR GAZETTE

WEEKLY EDITION OF THE NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS

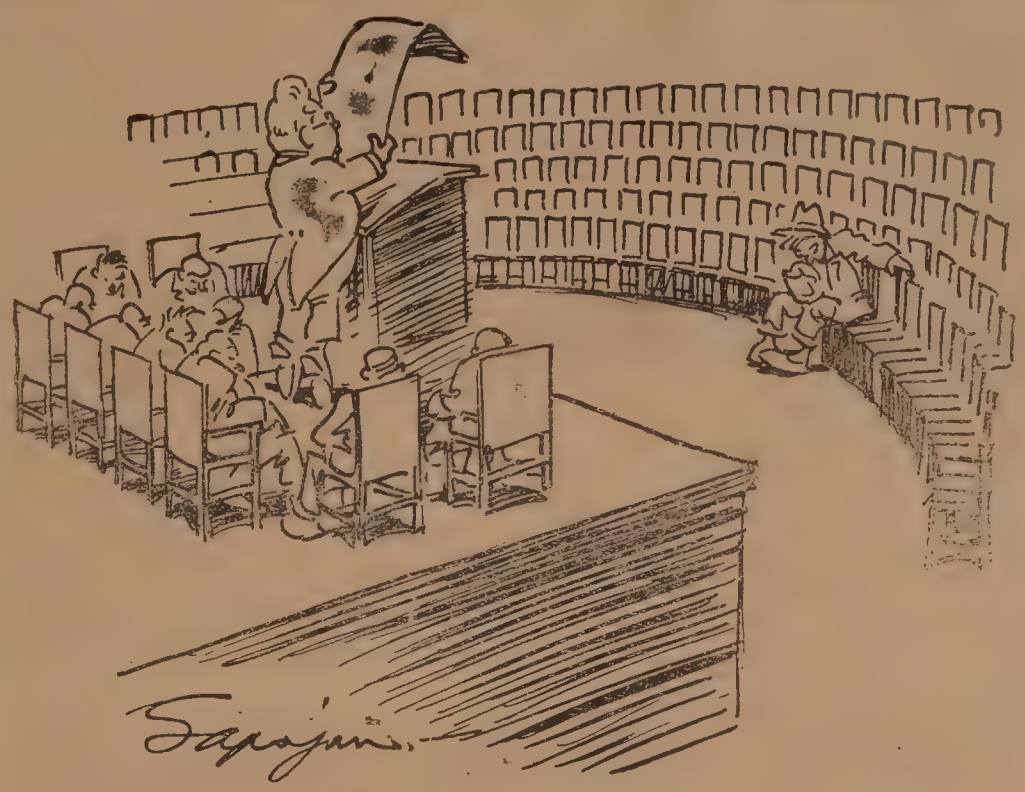
Registered at the Chinese P. O. for transmission as mail matter under Class B.

(Tsz-ling-sing-chi-chow-kan 字林星期週刊)

VOL. CLI. No. 2958. SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1924. TAELS 12 PER ANNUM.

CONTENTS

CHINESE POLITICS—
Selection of a Vice-President ... 31
Premier Not Intending to Resign ... 31
Cabinet Changes in Peking ... 31
More Peking Paper ... 31
Rendition of the Mixed Court 31
Customs Surtax ... 31
Lincheng Outrage ... 31
Position in Regard to Trade-mark Law Reviewed ... 32
Dr. Koo Back at Work ... 32
Marshal Wu to Visit Peking ... 32
"Circulating Notes" and Octroi Dues ... 32
Resignation of Mr. Wang Ko-ming ... 32
China and Bolivia ... 32
LEADING ARTICLES—
Missionary and His Critics ... 33
Trademarks Law ... 33
Ratepayers Meeting ... 33
With the Nonagenarians ... 34
NOTES AND COMMENTS ... 35
NEWS FROM THE OUTPORTS—
Tsingtao's Business Government 36
China and Japan ... 36
Japan and the Soviet ... 36
Soochow's City Wall ... 36
Hongkong Sensation ... 36
American Outlay in China ... 36
Signs of War in Kuangtung ... 36
Unjust Taxation in Canton ... 37
Net Loss in Java for Japanese ... 37
Piracy in Hongkong Waters 37
Foreigners Assaulted in Peking 37
Japanese Interest in Russian Fisheries ... 37
Japan's Expansion Abroad ... 38
Peiyang Students on Strike 38
English Church in Japan ... 38
Cossacks Stranded in Manila 38
Governor of Anhui Publicly Snubbed ... 38
Soldier Politicians of Japan ... 38
New Province of N. W. China 38
Japanese Newspaper Editors ... 39
Tax on Cigarettes in Kiangsi ... 39
Canton Notes ... 39
Japan's Forest Lands ... 39
Kuangsi Fear of Fukien ... 39
Nature Obedient to Chinese Calendar ... 39
Peasant Meanness ... 39
Result of Typhoons in the Babuyans ... 39
Tragedy at Miechow ... 90
Japanese Consuls in Conference 90
Sir W. Rees Davies 90
Wireless Stations in Japan ... 90
Navigation in the Upper Yangtze ... 90
Land Reclamation in Mongolia 90
Physical Examination for Girls 90
Tientsin's Telephone Problem 90
Rocks of the Rapids ... 90
America and Japanese Immigrants ... 91
Fire-Ball Over Sage's Birthplace ... 91
Pirates' Hideous Crimes ... 91
"Joining Marshal Chang Tso-lin's Army" ... 91
Hokkaido's Hermit Schoolmaster ... 91
Cargo Congestion at Tsingtao 92
World's Dirtiest Village ... 92
"Confiscated" Property of Mr. Elly Widler ... 92
SHANGHAI NEWS—
Flag of Ermanno Carlotto ... 93
Obituary ... 93
M. Munz's Chopin Recital ... 93
Rabindrarath Tagore ... 93
New American Judge ... 94
Homing Pigeons Slaughtered ... 94
Rotary Club Tiffin ... 94
Wedding ... 94
Pilgrim Ship's Gallant Captain 94
Early Spring Flowers ... 94
Luncheon to Mr. F. J. Raven 94
CORRESPONDENCE ... 95—96
COMPANY MEETINGS ... 97—98
COMMERCE AND FINANCE ... 99
MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS—
Ratepayer's Meeting, The 102
SPORTS AND PASTIMES ... 105
LAW REPORTS—
H. M. Supreme Court—
Tragic Recital, A ... 106
Shipping Judgment ... 106
Sikh Witness's Conduct in the Box ... 107
Hole in a Persian Carpet ... 107
H. M. Police Court—
Rowarth Trial Perjury Charges ... 107
U. S. Court for China—
Miscellaneous Cases 108
Mixed Court—
Labour Intimidation ... 108
FOREIGN TELEGRAMS ... 110—113
FROM THE FOUR WINDS ... 113—115
SPECIAL ARTICLES—
Our Faculties and the Fact of Religion ... 116
Peking Impressions 116
Lessons in Golf ... 117
BOOK PAGE ... 118
WOMAN'S PAGE ... 119



The Chairman—Yes. The Council can confidently rely upon the public feeling of the whole body of ratepayers . . .

THE CUSTOMS SURTAX

Powers Still Disinclined to Reply to China's Request for a Conference

Peking, Apr. 9.

No reply has yet been given by the Legations to the Chinese Government's request for a preliminary conference to discuss the increase of two and a half per cent. of Customs duties provided for in the Washington Nine Power Treaty.

It seems probable that separate replies will be sent, and here is no doubt that the French Government will make participation in such a conference contingent upon a satisfactory settlement of the gold franc case.

Several of the Legations have not yet received final instructions from their Governments about the matter.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

LINCHENG OUTRAGE

Further British and American Claims Filed: Others Likely to Follow

Peking, Apr. 10.

The British and American Legations have now submitted some additional claims, supplementary to the list recently published in connexion with the Lincheng outrage.

On behalf of its nationals, the British Legation claims an additional $70,800, while the American Legation claims a further $47,991.37 on behalf of eight of its nationals and may submit further claims later on behalf of the other Americans who suffered through the outrage.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

PEKING, Apr. 7.—The Sze Koo Chuan Shou, the four-volume library of the Manchu House, is to be sent to Shanghai for reprinting by the Commercial Press. Special arrangements are to be made for the transportation of this valuable collection. It is understood that these works will subsequently be offered for sale.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

PREMIER NOT INTENDING TO RESIGN

Peking, Apr. 8.

The Chinese press to-day states that there is no truth in the reports that have been appearing in the Chinese newspapers off and on for weeks that Premier Sun Pao-chi would resign and a new Cabinet be formed by Mr. Wang Yu-chih, Chief Secretary of the Presidency. The papers say that on the contrary Mr. Wang is urging Premier Sun to ignore propaganda intended to undermine their friendship, and to carry on the Premiership, assured of the support of Mr. Wang and other friends whose names have been mentioned in the press as intriguing for the downfall of the Cabinet.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

CABINET CHANGES IN PEKING

Vice-Minister of Justice Intending to Resign

Peking, Apr. 11.

It is reported to-day that Mr. Hsueh Tu-pi, Vice-Minister of Justice, intends to resign, and it is understood that the Cabinet contemplates transferring Mr. Chang Kuo-kan from the Ministry of Education to that of Justice; for this it would be necessary to transfer Dr. Wang Chung-huai from the Ministry of Justice to that of Education. Mr. Hsueh Tu-pi apparently desires chiefly to surrender the position of Acting Minister of Justice, and it is thought likely that he would be agreeable to retain the Vice-Ministership if a Minister of Justice took over the affairs of that department. A mandate containing these changes was sent to the President yesterday, but it has not yet been signed. President Tsao indicated the intention to discuss the matter with Premier Sun Pao-chi before taking action.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

CHINESE MOHAMMEDANS AND PARLIAMENT

Peking, Apr. 11.

The Mohammedan gentry of Pengpu have submitted a request to the Ministry of the Interior that Chinese Turkestan be granted representation in Parliament. They have been asked to submit their petition to Parliament direct.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

MORE PEKING PAPER

To Pay Salaries in Government Colleges: Finance Minister Anxious to Resign

Peking, Apr. 9.

It is learned from a semi-official source that, in order to meet the teachers' salaries and other expenses of the eight Government colleges, the Government has decided to issue $1,000,000 worth of treasury bonds secured on the suspended Russian Boxer indemnity.

It is semi-officially reported that the Minister of Finance, Mr. Mr. Wang Ko-ming, having fulfilled his undertaking to tide the Government over its immediate financial difficulties, is about to resign. Mr. Wang is expected to tender a report to the Cabinet at to-morrow's meeting and then tender his resignation to the President to-morrow evening.

April 10.

It is understood that Mr. Wang Ko-ming tendered a report on the financial situation and informed the Cabinet of his intention to resign. It is anticipated, however, that his resignation will be rejected by the President.

The members of both Houses of Parliament yesterday received 70 per cent. of a month's salary, and, as a result the bill of impeachment against Mr. Ko-ming has been laid over indefinitely.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE ANGLO-RUSSIAN NEGOTIATIONS

Moscow Not Pleased at Being Found Out

Moscow, Apr. 17.

Disappointment is expressed at Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's speech at the Anglo-Russian Conference.

The "Izvestia" says that under the cloak of a Sunday sermon appear the hard demands of the British bankers, acceptance of which would change the whole socialistic Soviet system.—Reuter.

RENDITION OF THE MIXED COURT

Diplomatic Body Ready to Consent if Other Outstanding Questions Are Settled

IMPORTANT MATTERS REGARDING SHANGHAI

Peking, Apr. 12.

The Diplomatic Body informed the Waichiaopu on April 10 that it was prepared to discuss the rendition of the Shanghai Mixed Court, but in agreeing to such discussion, to which the Chinese Government attached much importance, the Diplomatic Body desired to point out that there were other outstanding matters affecting the welfare and development of the International Settlement of Shanghai, to a speedy solution of which the Diplomatic Body and the foreign communities of Shanghai attached no less importance.

Among these were enlargement and improvement of the port, extension of the present boundary of the Settlement and the question of Chinese and foreign representation on the Municipal Councils of the International Settlement and the adjoining Chinese areas.

The Diplomatic Body, therefore, asked the Chinese Government to embark in negotiations affecting these matters as well as the rendition of the Mixed Court.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE SELECTION OF A VICE-PRESIDENT

Possibility that Marshal Wu May Be Offered the Position

Peking, Apr. 8.

The "Hsingpao" is responsible for the report that Dr. C. T. Wang will leave here this evening for Loyang to offer his congratulations to Marshal Wu Pei-fu in connexion with the latter's birthday. The paper says that Dr. Wang will take advantage of this opportunity to put before Marshal Wu his views regarding the Sino-Russian negotiations.

Other Chinese papers say that a group of members of Parliament, under the leadership of Mr. Li Tsai-hung, started for Loyang last evening, and that it is generally believed that their visit is to pave the way for the selection of a Vice-President. They hint that Marshal Wu will be asked to accept the post himself. Other papers are of opinion that either Marshal Wu or Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan will be appointed Vice-President. They suggest that Marshal Wu wants the post and believe that Marshal Wu merely put forward the name of Gen. Lu Yung-hsiang in order to arouse opposition to General Lu's rival at Nanking.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

EX-DIRECTOR OF TSINGTAO

Caught Again After Leaving City: The Missing $3,000,000

Tsingtao, Apr. 17.

Mr. Tsou Wen-wei, former Director-General of Affairs here, who mysteriously left the city last week during the questioning relative to the leak in the Treasury during the Hsiung régime, has been found by detectives in Tsinan.

Mr. Tsou was forced to choose between arrest and an immediate return here. He chose the latter alternative.

The investigation of the disappearance of public funds, amounting to $3,000,000, may now continue.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE POSITION IN REGARD TO TRADEMARK LAW REVIEWED

Retrospect of China's Undertakings to Protect Trademarks: The New Law's Sudden Appearance: Strong Foreign Objections and a Generally Unsatisfactory Position

Peking, Apr. 10.

The following is a review of the trademarks question:—The subject has been dealt with by notes and discussions so many times that it is difficult to understand the exact position without going back many years. It was first given an official character by the Mackay Treaty of 1902, when China undertook to afford protection to British trademarks against infringement, imitation or colourable imitation by Chinese. In the same treaty China undertook that the Superintendents of Northern and Southern Trade should establish offices within their respective jurisdiction under control of the Maritime Customs where foreign trademarks might be registered on payment of a reasonable fee.

JAPAN AND U. S. TREATIES.

In the Treaty between China and Japan of 1903 the Chinese Government agreed "to make and faithfully enforce such regulations as are necessary for preventing Chinese subjects from infringing registered trademarks held by Japanese subjects." It was further agreed that the Chinese Government should establish registration offices where foreign trademarks and copyrights, upon application for the protection of the Chinese Government, should be registered in accordance with the provisions of the regulations to be hereafter framed by the Chinese Government for the purpose of protecting trademarks and copyrights."

The Treaty between China and the United States of 1903 states that "China now agrees fully to protect any citizen or corporation of the United States in the exclusive use in the Empire of China of any lawful trademark to the exclusive use of which in the United States they are entitled, or which they have adopted and used, or intend to adopt and use as soon as registered, [illegible] within the Empire of China. To this end the Chinese Government agrees to issue by its proper authorities proclamations, having the force of law, forbidding all subjects of China from infringing on, imitating, colourably imitating, or knowingly passing off an imitation of trademarks belonging to citizens of the United States, which shall have been registered by the proper authorities of the United States at such offices as the Chinese Government will establish for such purpose, on payment of a reasonable fee, after due investigation by the Chinese authorities, and in compliance with reasonable regulations."

The foregoing deals only with infringement by Chinese, but reciprocal protection of trademarks has been arranged between Britain on the one part and Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal and the United States on the other, and by agreement between most of these countries.

A DIFFICULTY TO ADJUST.

The treaties of 1902 and 1903 show that China undertook to proclaim regulations having the force of law for the protection of foreign trademarks in China, but some misunderstanding has arisen in connexion with the "registration" by the Maritime Customs. This was undertaken by the Superintendents of Northern and Southern Trade only as a temporary measure, pending the establishment of registration offices by the Chinese Government. The filing of trade marks by the Customs has not been registration in the technical sense but merely a recording for purposes of future reference. The wording of the Customs Notification on this point is quite clear. It said: "Pending promulgation of regulations governing the registration of trademarks the (Shanghai and Tientsin) Customs accept applications for provisional filing of trademarks. Thus the protection enjoyed by foreign trademarks in China has been derived not from any recording or provisional registration by the Maritime Customs but from agreements in force between the Powers concerned and China and between the Foreign Powers themselves regarding mutual protection of their marks.

From the beginning the Powers were not satisfied with this recording by the Customs, and they kept on bringing the matter of the establishment of registration offices to the attention of the Chinese Government until 1904, when the Government submitted to the Diplomatic Body a set of regulations drafted by the Ministry of Commerce. This draft proved unacceptable to the Powers concerned, and in 1905 the Diplomatic Body sent to the Chinese Government a code embodying the views of their Governments. Some correspondence took place and the matter was then dropped until the end of 1906. The Chinese Government then forwarded to the legations a second draft. This was obviously based on the draft of 1904 and showed little if any consideration for the suggestions made by the Powers the previous year. It was also rejected.

LAW SUDDENLY PROMULGATED.

The subject was subsequently brought forward by the Powers in 1907, 1908 and many other occasions throughout the following 14 years, but no substantial progress was made until 1922, when the Associated British Chambers of Commerce submitted, through the British Legation, the draft of a trademarks law for China. The Chambers had taken great pains in drafting this law to make it acceptable to all the Powers concerned.

The draft was well received by the Chinese Government, and there then seemed a prospect at last of this long-standing question being settled satisfactorily. The Chinese Government took the matter in hand and in May, 1923, the Chinese Trademarks Law was suddenly promulgated. It was undoubtedly based principally on the foreign recommendations, and the first impression created in foreign circles was favourable. Careful study of the Law, however, brought to light several points which were considered potential sources of friction if not of injustice.

GENERAL DISSATISFACTION.

It was keenly felt that the Chinese Government, having taken a long step towards fulfilling its treaty obligations and meeting the requirements of modern trade, would have saved much anxiety and trouble if it had followed its former practice of referring the draft to the Legations before promulgation. That such reference was expected may be seen from the concluding sentence of the passages quoted from the treaty between China and the United States, namely, "and in compliance with reasonable regulations," while the precedent had been established in 1904 and confirmed in 1906.

Strong objection was shown by the foreign Chambers of Commerce at Shanghai and other treaty ports not so much to the Law itself as to the administration of the Law. What the Chambers of Commerce wanted principally was for a foreign expert to be employed in the Trademarks Bureau, but no definite step was taken by the Diplomatic Body until December 1, 1922. A Note was then sent to the Chinese Government requesting a general assurance that the new Law would not operate in a manner detrimental to foreign treaty rights.

THE LEGATIONS' FIRST DEMANDS.

No reply had been received to this Note on January 28, when the Diplomatic Body sent another Note to the Chinese Government giving three considerations and one essential condition on which the Powers would be prepared to accord recognition to the Trademarks Law. The Note objected to Article 10 of the Law, which gives the Trademarks Bureau the right to apply for a change of representatives applying for registration. This was characterized by the Note as arbitrary and useless and one that should be abolished. The second consideration was that foreign expert assistance should be employed in the Bureau in order to facilitate dealing with the complicated questions bound to arise. The third asked for an assurance that the Trademarks Gazette would publish fully and expeditiously all the registrations and all details connected therewith, adding that the value of this would be greatly enhanced if it were accompanied by a translation in English. The essential condition was that the period for registration should be extended so as to give six clear months from the date on which the Trademarks Law should be formally recognized by the Powers.

AN UNSATISFACTORY REPLY.

The Chinese Government took a long time to answer this Note, for the reply was not received until March 20. It was vague and non-committal. It agreed to extend the period for registration arbitrarily until next June. Compliance was expressed with "the request for an English supplement of the Trademarks Gazette," but this would contain only foreign registrations. With regard to the employment of foreign expert assistance the reply was particularly unsatisfactory, as it merely stated that such might be employed when found necessary.

It was found difficult to reconcile this vague reply with the good intentions that have been conceded to the Chinese Government in connexion with the trademarks question. The Legations did not hesitate to describe it as unsatisfactory. They were, however, faced with a fait accompli. The position had been complicated by the fact that many foreign firms, principally Japanese and German, had already registered under the Law.

THE REGISTRATION MONOPOLY.

The foreign Chambers of Commerce had been bringing much pressure to bear not only upon their Legations but also upon their own Governments. The concern felt at Shanghai abroad was increased by publication of a statement that the Chinese Government had given a monopoly to one Chinese firm for the issue of registration certificates. This was promptly denied by the Trademarks Bureau, but the report had created serious misgivings regarding the manner in which the Law would be applied, and further representations were made to the Legations at Peking. It became evident that the foreign Chambers of Commerce in China and abroad did not realize how far diplomatic methods towards China had changed in recent years, that the days had passed when peremptory demands would be put forward with the virtual certainty of compliance by the Chinese Government (a change which no one realizes more clearly than the Chinese themselves).

The Legations continued as opportunity offered to discuss the question with the Chinese officials concerned. That met with earnest assurances that the Chinese keenly desired to establish a department whose laws and administration would be fair to foreign trade as well as to Chinese, but throughout the whole of the negotiations the Chinese showed a peculiar disinclination to give a clear and binding assurance such as was asked for in the Note of December 1, and as the matter developed the dissatisfaction of the foreign Chambers of Commerce increased.

During the next two weeks the Chinese reply was considered abroad and in Peking. Further views were sent by the Chambers of Commerce to the Legations in Peking, and the impression created by the Chniese reply seems to have been much the same in all quarters.

INSISTANCE ON TREATY RIGHT.

On April 5 the Diplomatic Body sent a brief Note to the Waichiaopu stating that the assurances given by the Chinese Government were not sufficient for the Foreign Representatives in Peking to advise their Governments to recognize the Chinese Trademarks Law or to advise their nationals to register their trade marks with the new Trademarks Bureau. The Note pointed out that, whether or not their nationals registered their trademarks, cases of complaint would have to be dealt with in accordance with the stipulations of the treaties concerning the settlement of disputes between Chinese and the nationals of the Treaty Powers.

The present position, therefore, is that while the foreign Powers have not recognized the Law foreign firms may register if they feel so inclined but the Trademarks Law will not free China from her treaty obligations to protect foreign trademarks. In the event of cause for complaint being found by foreign firms the aid of their Legations will have to be invoked. Each complaint is thus likely to become a separate diplomatic question, involving trouble and delay to all concerned. The Chinese Government, the Legations, and foreign firms will be saddled with needless work. Official and commercial business will be retarded. The Chinese Government will have to deal diplomatically with questions which ought to be settled expeditiously and satisfactorily by the Trademarks Bureau. The loss of revenue to the Bureau will be a small matter compared with the failure to have the Law recognized by the Powers, and make the Bureau an organ competent to deal finally and satisfactorily with its own affairs.

PLEA FOR REASONABLENESS.

In these circumstances it may be hoped that the Chinese Government will see its way to meet the very reasonable demands made by the Diplomatic Body, take the necessary steps to ensure the efficient administration of the new Law, and thereby set up machinery in China for the protection of foreign and Chinese trademarks, which has become an urgent necessity owing to the industrial development in China.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

DR. KOO BACK AT WORK

The New Danish Minister

Peking, Apr. 11.

Dr. Wellington Koo, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has resumed attendance at his office, although he has not completely recovered from his recent illness. The new Danish Minister, Mr. Kauffman, called on Dr. Koo at noon to-day and discussed the presentation of his credentials to the President. The date for this ceremony has not yet been fixed.

The Belgian Minister, M. Everts, who is shortly leaving for home, also called on Dr. Koo this morning to bid him good-bye.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

ELECTORAL JURISDICTION IN KIAOCHOU

Peking, Apr. 11.

The Kiaochou Citizens' Association recently sent a despatch to the Cabinet asking for information regarding the forthcoming parliamentary elections. Kiaochou for several years has sent no representatives to Parliament and the citizens of that port did not know whether their elections should be carried out under the jurisdiction of the Hsien authorities or that of the Tupan of the port. The Ministry of the Interior has sent a reply stating that the elections must come under the authority of the Tsimo Magistrate.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

MARSHAL WU TO VISIT PEKING

Peking, Apr. 11.

A Chinese local newspaper states that Marshal Wu Pei-fu is expected to come to Peking on the conclusion of his birthday celebrations, which are now in progress at Loyang. It is believed that the object of this rumoured visit would be a discussion with the Government of Sino-Russian affairs and the political situation in the South and West.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

"CIRCULATING NOTES" AND OCTROI DUES

Strong Protest by Chinese Chamber of Commerce as to Non-acceptance

Peking, Apr. 12.

A delegation from the Peking Chinese Chamber of Commerce, headed by Mr. Sun Hsiao-shih, Chairman of the Chamber, went to the Cabinet Office this morning with the object of lodging a protest against the action of the Peking Octroi authorities who recently announced that "circulating notes" would no longer be received in payment of octroi dues. The petitioners request that the order shall be cancelled. Hitherto 20 per cent. of octroi duties could be paid in these notes, which have depreciated greatly in value. A statement on the back of each note states that they are negotiable for payment of telegraph and postal dues, railway charges and octroi dues.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

CHIHLI PROVINCIAL ASSEMBLY

Division of Districts

Peking, Apr. 12

Marshal Wang Chen-ping, Tuli of Chihli, arrived in Peking today at noon and called on the President this afternoon. It is understood that he came here to discuss with the President and the Cabinet the proposal to separate the Metropolitan Area, Suiyuan, Chahar and Jehol districts from the Chihli Provincial Assembly. Marshal Wang will stay at the residence of Mr. Wu Ching-lian during his stay in Peking.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE RESIGNATION OF MR. WANG KO-MING

Peking, Apr. 12.

It is reported that Mr. Wang Ko-ming again forwarded to the President this morning the resignation which was sent back to him yesterday.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Peking, Apr. 13.

It is reported that Mr. Wang Ko-ming, having sent in his resignation again yesterday, will leave for the Western Hills today for a rest from the cares of office.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

PEKING'S OVERSTAFFED CIVIL SERVICE

Peking, Apr. 13.

The difficulties met with in providing funds for the Cabinet staff appear to have brought to the notice of the authorities concerned the large number of junior officials, attendants and coolies who are on the pay roll of that department. It is asserted that the number of these employees is three times that of the official establishment. Instructions have now been given for all superfluous employees to be dismissed.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

ANTI-SOVIET MOVEMENT IN KIRIN

Peking, Apr. 13.

The Kirin Provincial, Assembly, it is reported on good authority, has issued a circular telegram to the provincial assemblies urging that measures should be undertaken to bring about the recall to Russia of the Soviet representative in Peking. Mr. Huang Ming-lan has filed a bill in the Senate on similar lines. It suggests that the Government should be requested to ask the Soviet Government to recall Mr. Karakhan.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

CHINA AND BOLIVIA

Peking, Apr. 13.

The Chinese Government has decided to appoint Mr. Oyang Keng, Chargé d'Affaires in Chile, its delegate to sign the commercial treaty with Bolivia.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

LEADING ARTICLES

The North-China Herald
Published every Saturday evening.
PREPAID SUBSCRIPTION
(INCLUDING DELIVERY):
Shanghai ... ... Tls. 12 per annum
Other parts of China „ 13 „

All communications should be addressed to the Secretary, NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS & HERALD LD., to whom all remittances should be made payable.

THE MISSIONARY AND HIS CRITICS

Apr. 14.

We are all familiar with the vagaries of the globe-trotter turned author. His effusions are usually interesting to stay-at-homes and frequently add to the gaiety of exiles in the lands he describes, though, occasionally, they raise the question whether, after all, truth is really stranger than fiction. It is seldom that Nemesis so swiftly overtakes the offender as in the case of T. Simpson Carson, who was compelled to render an apology to the Rev. Fred. Brown, formerly a missionary in Tientsin, pay an indemnity and withdraw his book from circulation. The details were published in our issue of the 8th instant. The probabilities are that Mr. Carson sinned in Dr. Johnson's good company through "ignorance, pure ignorance." He may have been unfortunate too, in his friends, for he who takes his Chinese history from the tales of sea captains on the coast or from loungers near "the longest bar in the Far East" had better imitate him who was "so wary wise he scarce received for gospel what the Church believed." There are some seven thousand missionaries in China; indeed, we might parody the remark of a recent distinguished visitor to our city and say that China is "infested with missionaries" and yet it is possbile for an innocent globe-trotter to rub shoulders with them and never recognize them. The Shanghai Missionary Association has recognized the gravity of this unfortunate state of affairs and appointed a committee to deal with it. These gentlemen have formed themselves into a "Traveller's Aid Association." They intend to have a notice card hung in the vestibules of all hotels and in a prominent place on the liners which make Shanghai a port of call. These will notify travellers who wish to see something of the missionary work done in this city that if they will ring up a certain telephone number they will have a guide placed at their disposal and trips will be arranged covering a period of from one hour to a whole day, in which they may acquire information that will save them from the fate of the gentleman who was unfortunate enough to give names and dates in his fairy tale of missionary activities in 1900, and so rendered himself liable for an action for defamation of character and was mulcted in heavy damages.

Missionaries are, in a sense, public men and are engaged in an enterprise which cannot be carried on without appeals for public support. They are therefore targets for criticism as are statesmen, municipal councillors and even editors of newspapers. No one in such a position may resent criticism if it is fair and expressed in language of parliamentary propriety. And so we venture to say, with apologies to our missionary friends, that we think there is a certain amount of truth in the popular belief that missionaries are "queer." Long ago Macaulay described the Puritans as men in whom "One overpowering sentiment had subjected to itself pity and hatred, ambition and fear." Now men of one idea are always interesting and unavoidably eccentric for, the mind being dominated by one thought, has little room left for the common trivialities that make up our daily life. The pioneers in the world-wide missionary enterprise which historians will, perhaps, regard as the outstanding characteristic of the century we live in, were men of this type. Read Longford's "Story of Korea" and marvel at the endurance of the Catholic missionaries who, little more than a generation ago, stole into the Hermit Kingdom and, after enduring untold hardships, were tortured and barbarously executed in the market place. And there was never lack of volunteers eager to take the place of those who had thus perished. Or, to take a less gruesome example, it is not so very long since there passed away a missionary in China who was obsessed with the idea that when the gospel had been preached in all the cities of this, then unopened, land the golden age would come. With a single coolie to carry his exiguous luggage he traversed the country delivering what he called his "message" in every place he passed through until the route of his wanderings, when traced on a map, looked like a projected railway line. What the people who listened to this strange apparition of a foreign devil, who talked to them of things utterly beyond their comprehension, thought of him it is impossible to say, but they would certainly have agreed that he was "queer."

This type of missionary, fairly common some thirty years ago, is now rapidly passing away. Indeed, the high water mark of missions in China was reached in April, 1922, when the foreign missionaries in conference assembled in this city of Shanghai formally handed over to the Chinese leaders pre-eminence in the task of Christianizing their own country. Henceforth the foreigner is to be the co-adjutor of the Chinese worker, his friend and fellow-worker, but, not necessarily, his leader. Presumably he feels that the weight of responsibility does not now rest so heavily on his shoulders and the globe-trotter must make haste or the old interesting and "queer" type will be as extinct as the Dodo before he arrives on the scene.

THE TRADEMARKS LAW

Apr. 15.

The current number of the "British Chamber of Commerce Journal" deals at length and most incisively with the trademarks controversy. The "Journal" was so near publication when the news of the Diplomatic Body's last Note to the Waichiaopu arrived, that the fact of that reply could only be recorded. But while the Legations have informed the Peking Government that they cannot recommend their respective Governments to accept the law and that, whether firms register under it or not, complaints will have to be dealt with according to extraterritorial rights, the "Journal" shows convincingly that this does not dispose of all the difficulties which the law involves. In the same issue Mr. David Fraser, writing on the Trademark Law from Peking and (in the "Journal's" opinion) "almost certainly not expressing a personal opinion," says:—

> The whole question seems to be divided into two parts, that relating to registration and that relating to infringement. In case of the latter, foreign firms always have their remedy, as heretofore, under the Treaties, and no legislation by the Chinese can deprive them of it.

In this connexion the "Journal" gives a number of imaginary cases of what would happen if the Law were not recognized and if some firms registered, others did not. These are too long to quote but are very convincingly put and the Journal goes on:—

> What has been said above shows clearly that the matter is not thus (i.e. as Mr. David Fraser argues) capable of division into two distinct parts: that the questions of registration and infringement will in practice in most cases be inseparably linked, and that recognition of a law which provides for registration in the manner in which the proposed law provides for it must either abandon certain foreign rights or else, in retaining them, make the law unworkable as far as foreigners are concerned. If the Diplomatic Body can point to a road of escape from this alternative, if they can show that the preceding analysis of the problem is incorrect, it is surely not beneath their dignity to indicate where it is at fault. After all, the interests at stake are considerable. They are in fact bigger than any which the Legations have been called upon to defend since 1900. And the mercantile community will be only too thankful to learn that they have all the time been mistaken. But the mere re-iteration of such phrases as recognition without prejudice to treaty rights will not satisfy them. They sound like mere mumbo-jumbo.

There is rather a suggestion in the above that the Diplomatic Body "opes not its ponderous and marble jaws" as freely as it might and that it might be more communicative as to its opinion of the law and what it means to do about it. Mr. Fraser assures us that "what seems clear is that the Diplomatic Body is not going to be rushed into recognizing the Trademark Law", which is very good news indeed. The difficulty is that the Law is, so far as we understand, already a part of the law of the land. In general principle, the Peking foreign official view appears to be that it is not a bad law and that if China were administered like any other country it could be accepted without demur, while it is impossible for any other nationality to dictate to China what laws she should frame. Unfortunately China is not administered like other countries, if she can even be said to be administered at all; and while foreigners may not be entitled to dictate to China how her laws are to be framed, they are entitled to insist that those laws shall contain ample recognition of the rights secured to them by the Treaties—especially as it is plain that a large number of influential Chinese are determined to ignore, and frustrate those rights wherever possible. However excellent in theory the new Law may be, in practice it is no improvement on anything done in the past thirty years to protect trademarks in China, in fact very much the reverse. The very last amendment acceptable is that there should be foreign experts in the Bureau and foreign Assessors on the bench when disputes arise. But the Mackay Treaty's provision is really best of all, if we can only get back to that.

THE RATEPAYERS MEETING

Apr. 16.

Nothing spectacular offers at to-day's meeting but plenty that is of importance. It is greatly to be hoped that all ratepayers will do their best to be present, in order to provide a quorum at the special meeting. This is the more to be urged because the absentee vote is now so large that it almost becomes a question whether there are enough ratepayers corporeally present in Shanghai to form a quorum for a special meeting, at which absentees do not count, every vote having to be recorded personally. To meet the complaint that men cannot get away from their offices for a meeting at 2 p.m., the Council has fixed this year's parliament at 4.30. Even that may be too early for many; but the opening resolutions are largely formal and as most people can leave their business at 5, they will still be in plenty of time for the most important features. The apathy with which too many ratepayers regard the annual meeting is an indirect compliment to the Council: indeed Shanghai is very well administered for all that may be said to the contrary in the heat of occasional moments. If this be the feeling of those who stay away, as we believe it is, they might bethink them that the Councillors, who give up a great deal of time in the public service, would not be averse to having that compliment paid them for once in the material form of well packed seats.

Of the agenda for the special meeting, the proposed licensing of exchange shops appears to have excited no opposition: there is no reason why it should. Some of the Chinese guilds, as noted yesterday, are opposing the increase of wharfage dues, but their arguments read rather half-heartedly and their appearance in the field looks rather as if they were seeking an excuse for adding something about the registration of printers and publishers. The latter associations have really gone to extraordinary lengths in propaganda against registration. They have received no assistance this year from any foreign newspaper, a contrast with what happened in the first year of the registration being mooted on which they might have pondered with possible profit to their cause. For if their former supporters support them no more, what is the obvious inference but that those who think calmly have found that the by-law is reasonable? We can assure the Chinese printing associations that nothing has so much increased the chances of a quorum being assured this afternoon as their wholly unreasonable and obstinate propaganda. For the plain fact about the by-law is that while experience has fully proved its necessity for the maintenance of good order, it is entirely harmless to respectable people.

Turning to the ordinary annual meeting we find a resolution regarding the Telephone Company's agreement which indicates that the Council's suggestions dealt with by us last week have proved acceptable: those suggestions were, briefly, that shareholders should be secured an eight per cent. dividend, that the Council should be represented on the Board of Directors, that surplus earnings should accumulate for the benefit of subscribers and that the automatic telephone should be approved for general use. It seems a very excellent arrangement. It is likely that the rates will go up at first, but that is hardly avoidable on such a change as from manual to automatic. But there is a clear prospect that in years to come they will be revised down again.

As regards the Waterworks, to-day's agenda presents the alternative of much the same kind of agreement as in the Telephone Company's case, or authorization to purchase. We take it that that authorization would not, indeed could not be exercised without a further confirmatory meeting. This point will no doubt be made clear to-day. The position is one of great dubiety. On the one hand, ratepayers undoubtedly endorse the Council's view that it must exercise a control over the operation of public utility companies, which is by no means assured to it where a large number if not the majority of shareholders are absentees. On the other hand, the prospect of heavy borrowing for purchase is certainly not relished. In this connexion attention may be called to Mr. Bruce Lockhart's letter. We cannot follow him altogether in his argument that big municipal loans mean high cost of living; nor do we think his fears as regards the wharfage dues are well founded. The Council seeks authority to increase these to three per cent. of the Customs duty; but it can hardly be expected that it will immediately jump the dues up to that point from the present one tenth of one per cent. On the other hand, the reason why we can never pay for extraordinary undertakings out of ordinary revenue is that so much of the latter must go in paying interest on loans and every effort should be made to avoid increasing the latter. Fortunately we believe that there is every prospect of the Council and the Waterworks coming to an amicable arrangement at last. They will have the best wishes of all that it may be so.

Apr. 17.

Our Dumb Friends' League—as those members of the House of Commons who were never known in any circumstances to open their lips used affectionately to be known in the Press Gallery—were overwhelmingly in evidence at the Town Hall yesterday. Apart from the official speakers but one solitary voice was heard crying in the wilderness of the ratepayers' benches. It was raised on a technical point—namely, that the fourth clause of the Waterworks resolution really amounted to an amendment of the other three, thus invalidating the whole as a single resolution.

daring to disturb the sacred somnolence of the assembly with silly conundrums (though we believed him to be right), was immediately and successfully snuffed out by the Chairman. And the meeting ended in one hour and five minutes. For the first time in many years we actually heard the names of the gentlemen proposed as Land Commissioner and Hospital Governors. Usually these resolutions are inaudible for the scuffle of people collecting their coats and hats and pushing for the open air. But yesterday it is to be supposed they were under the delusion that a quorum was really present at last. The hall certainly appeared unusually full. In point of fact, there were just half the requisite number of voters. So the Special Meeting "went west" once more, as in another sense presumably most of the ratepayers had gone, and the Chinese publishing associations and Mr. Bruce Lockhart may sleep soundly again. No registration of the press: no extra wharfage dues and added H.C.L.

It was humorously suggested in the hall that the only chance of raising a quorum would be to persuade the Moral Welfare League, when there are no more pretty ladies for them to tilt at, to enlarge their activities and promote a special meeting of ratepayers on the issue that Shanghai immediately "go dry." Then we shall see what we shall see. Meanwhile interest in municipal affairs tends to vary inversely with the size of the Budget. We remember one year when the Budget was actually thrown out and could only be got through by the expedient of a poll, which infuriated all village Hampdens. Nowadays we pass loans for millions with less emotion than was once exhibited over fewer lakhs. And indeed all is very good and the work of administration in the hands of nine devoted volunteers, fortified by as many strong-minded permanent officials, goes ahead most smoothly and efficiently. But for all that, the fact that the requisite 900 ratepayers out of some 2,400 resident cannot be induced to spare an hour or two at the special request of the Council for a matter which, though not outwardly sensational, is of real importance for the cause of good government, is a serious thing. It means that Shanghai, which used to pride itself on its civic sense, is approaching the condition of the average big provincial town at Home, in which municipal affairs are considered beneath the notice of any but butchers and bakers and candlestick makers. No one can wonder then that a shocking lot of back-scratching and log-rolling ensues. In [illegible] always been that our Coun[illegible] been small in comparison with the magnitude of the work. But apart from traffic, while there is a very de[illegible] limit to the number of [illegible] had to be [illegible] of ninety-five years, in order to [illegible] sent cost or future loss. We know, of course, that it will not do so. Mr. Fessenden gave us some most welcome information as to the conciliatory spirit now visible in the negotiations, of which the first evidence is that all the old bickering correspondence is by mutual consent to be treated as if it had never been and the discussions start de novo. All of which, although, as Mr. Fessenden emphasized, the matter is by no means settled, augurs well for the proposed compromise. But the point is that the extensive powers contained in the resolution were granted with no criticism offered but the purely technical one mentioned above. That is a compliment to the Council, which they certainly deserve. But, remembering the prodigious fuss there has been over far less important matters, culverting of the Yangkingpang for instance, we do not think Resolution VII would have gone through so easily in bygone days and it is not a good sign that it should have done so yesterday.

Impressions of the Ratepayers Meeting.

One passage in the Budget speech deserves attention; that in which the chairman of the Council alluded to the difficulty of estimating for prospective road widening and extensions and the extreme probability that more and more would have to be spent on this item. The secret of all civic convenience lies in wide roads. For example: Bub[illegible] could be laid. Therefore by all means let the Council estimate as liberally as possible for roads. But here, too, there is a limit, that of expense, which has also kept the City of London streets to their ancient narrowness. And as in London, the time will come when people will have to be content to ride by tram or bus to the periphery of the business quarter and thence to use Shanks's mare.

WITH THE NONAGENARIANS

Apr. 19.

Among the Chinese the three auspicious stars are those of happiness, wealth and longevity; the three kinds of abundance to be prayed for are abundance of good fortune, of years, of male children; the five felicities are longevity, riches, serenity, the love of virtue, and the crowning of life. Of all these blessings longevity seems to be most valued as it holds the foremost place in the list of felicities. In the West some of these values may be differently estimated, but certainly longevity is greatly desired. We have the proverb, "All that a man hath will he give for his life," and the Chinese bandits act on this assumption when they capture foreigners and hold them to ransom. Apart from external circumstances over which we have no power, what must we do or avoid to attain to a good old age? Whatever the answer is, it should correspond with the actual facts of life.

Instead of reaching a priori conclusions, starting off with hypotheses and [illegible] experts in the art of living what were the factors which conduced to their longevity. At first he thought there would be little response and that the replies might not be accurate. Two years experience dissipated these fears. Aged people like to talk about themselves, and their neighbours are proud of them and after critical investigation are glad to furnish whatever information they possess. Over three hundred replies were received, the elaborate questionaire sent to each nonagenarian being filled in with painstaking accuracy. It is hoped that before long one thousand histories will be received. In the meantime, in a paper in the official journal of the American Medical Association careful statistics are given of the first fifty-one. The mean age of the women is 96.98 years; that of the men, 97.98. Twenty out of the fifty-one are centenarians, the oldest, a man, being 105. Twenty-six of the twenty-seven men and twenty-two of the twenty-four women had been married one or more times, so marriage has a very favourable influence. By far the most important factor, however, is heredity. Nearly all were members of long-lived families, the years of both direct and collateral kinsfolk being much above the average. Questions were asked as to the use of alcohol and tobacco. Fourteen (54 per cent.) of the men had used alcohol as a beverage during their lives, one excessively so, and twelve (46 per cent) had been total abstainers. The mean present age of users is 97.2 years, and of the non-users, 97.8 years. As the scientist observes, it is thus evident that it is possible to attain great age either with or without the use of alcohol as a beverage. Of the women, 68 per cent. were total abstainers, with a mean percentage of 98.8 years. Thirty-two per cent. were moderate drinkers with an average present age of 98.7 years. As to tobacco, of the twenty-six men, six smoked, five chewed, and two both smoked and chewed tobacco. The remaining thirteen have never used tobacco in any form. Of twenty-one women, only one has used tobacco and she has smoked all her life. Again, it appears that the use or non-use of tobacco is equally compatible with the attainment of great longevity. We quote one more question. Does the use of alcohol or tobacco blast the prospects of parenthood? The twenty persons who used alcohol as a beverage had 150 children, giving an average of 7.5 children per family. The twenty-five persons who were total abstainers had 169 children, an average of 6.76 children per family. Again the abstainers do not lead. The whole paper is very interesting, and the statements should receive careful and unbiassed consideration.

What is the moral of it all? In the first place, prohibition advocates should not weaken their cause by over-statement. Indugence in alcohol, excessive and habitual, is certainly injurious, but to assert that even to drink in moderation always means financial ruin, [illegible] misery and early death is not in accord with the facts. Secondly, if an inherited predisposition to long life is at least very favourable [illegible] to longevity, as it appears to be, then it is most probable that the majority of persons whose lives are ruined by excessive indulgence in alcohol are of weak, defective stock; consequently from the point of view of practical eugenics the wisdom of perpetuating such stocks by [illegible] seed production is questionable. Thirdly, when a nation deems it necessary to enforce prohibition laws for the protection of the large proportion of the weak and defective, it should not be regarded with inordinate pride if it were evidence of a moral triumph of the whole nation, the substitution of state control for self-control is a confession of weakness. Finally, it is well for all to be modest and cautious. Prohibition is a vast experiment and what the moral and physical results will be individually and nationally, cannot as yet be foretold.

THE INTRUDER

[After the Chinese of Li-Tai-Po.]

The plashing of my oars hath broken through
The song the water-lilies sang in tune,
On the green waters of the Lake Nan-hou,
To the beloved image of the moon.

I. G.

The Peking public is surprised by the invention of a new kind of coffin. Hitherto coffins were made of wood and the quality of wood depended upon the financial standing of the dead person's relatives. A certain enterprising coffin shop in the West City has invented a cement coffin lined with hard wood. It will last three times as long as the ordinary wooden coffin and costs only a little more. The fortune tellers have, however lodged a strong protest on the ground that the new coffin separates the corpse from the earth which will materially effect the luck of the posterity.

A very pleasant function took place at the Customs House [illegible] the staff of the appraising department said good-bye to the Chief Appraiser, Mr. E. Watson, who [illegible] for home on Saturday for a well earned holiday. Mr. Watson, who has been in the Customs service for 23 years, was attached to the Customs College at Peking for a long period, where he was very popular with all with whom he came in contact. He has been Chief Appraiser in Shanghai, since 1919, has a very thorough knowledge of imports and exports of China and is the author of the widely read volume called "The Principal Articles of China's Commerce—Imports and Exports." A very beautiful copy of this work decoratively finished in silver with his monogram in gold was presented to him by the appraisers, and he was the recipient of many hearty wishes for a very pleasant holiday in the homeland and a speedy and safe return to China. This is Mr. Watson's first home leave during the 23 years of arduous service.

The statement was made the other day that Mr. Henderson, the Home Secretary, who has two sons who are members of the House of Commons, is the only member of the House of Commons to sit in that assembly with two sons as colleagues. Mr. O'Connell, however, had four sons who were members of the House of Commons, of whom three sat simultaneously with him in that House. Mr. O'Connell's Parliamentary career commenced in 1829 and continued till his death in 1847. Mr. O'Connell's eldest son, Maurice, was a member of the House of Commons from 1833 till 1855; his second son, Morgan, from 1832 till 1846; his third son, John, from 1852 till 1852; and were accordingly members of the House of Commons together for a part of their Parliamentary careers, and sat simultaneously with their father. Mr. O'Connell's fourth son, Daniel, was also a member of the House of Commons, to which, however he was elected in 1850, after the death of his father.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Late Herr Stinnes

An interesting story was current some time ago about the great German magnate who has just died, Herr Hugo Stinnes. When he started his steamship line after the war, the story goes, he proposed to christen his ships after the epithets used by the Allies towards the Germans, and one boat was going to be The Hun, another The Bosch, and so forth. Then, it is related, the German Government intervened and delivered an injunction against his doing anything of the kind. We have not the faintest notion whether there is the slightest truth in the report, but give it for what it is worth It certainly contains no reflexion on the man, but on the contrary shows a humour and courage of no ordinary kind. As a matter of fact epithets applied in disdain and anger have in subsequent years become the treasured possessions of the people receiving them. The British, for instance, simply love the idea that they are a "nation of shopkeepers," although no doubt they were extremely annoyed when the phrase was first coined, for it had an infinite amount of contempt in it. And Herr Stinnes perhaps thought along these lines, besides probably wishing to show how little it worried him that these [illegible] should have been used.

Early Closing

The early closing order—cabarets and other places of entertainment at 1 a.m. with certain dispensations until 3 a.m.—is causing, we learn, a certain amount of feeling between proprietors of these establishments in the French Concession and those in the Foreign Settlement. To put the matter bluntly the cabaret keepers of the Concession say that the Settlement authorities are winking at evasions of the regulation, and the Settlement proprietors say exactly the same thing about the Concession. In the circumstances one can only sympathize with authorities concerned who after all are doing their best to enforce a rule which was brought into being with a very good intention, to the effect that the youth of the port should get home at any rate in moderately good time. We do not know how general the complaints are on the part of the proprietors, but we know that they have been made and certain of those concerned in the measure are wondering what to do about it. That any of the authorities have winked at evasions we decline to believe, but there are so many of these places of entertainment that it is quite possible that some have succeeded in prolonging their hours of revenue-making. It must be borne in mind, in thinking of these allegations, that nothing would please a section of the establishments concerned better than a rescinding of the present regulation, and if they could prove it unworkable that might be brought about. But before any such course is taken there must be something more than the mere suggestions that have so far been put forward.

A Chinese Battle

Mr. Thomas Bowen Partington has recently been giving a series of lectures on China at Wolverhampton in which appeared the following delightful account of a Chinese battle.

There was said the lecturer, plenty of fighting in China; in fact, they were always fighting among themselves, but it was of the comic opera variety, and the winning army was the one which made the most noise. After a whole day's noisy firing the casualties would be absolutely nil.

The lecturer gave an amusing account of how, when traversing a certain stretch of country, he came upon a couple of Chinese rival armies indulging in one of their periodical engagements.

"One would be perfectly safe so long as a Chinese soldier was shooting at oneself," he said, "but there was a certain amount of danger when firing at someone else."

Knowing the polite and courteous nature of the Chinese, he sent his servant to the Commander of the nearer force to tell him that an important English gentleman wished to traverse the area of their battlefield, and would they please suspend operations for a short while. This request was immediately granted and both armies stopped all action until he had passed safely through.

The lecturer said that trade unionism had become a fine art with the Chinese. Their unions were called guilds, however, and there was even a Beggars' Guild and a Thieves' Guild.

Mr. Partington said that he subscribed regularly to both these guilds and consequently was never bothered by the presence of beggars on his verandah—one did not have to see them to know they were there, especially in the summer—and had never had anything stolen.

One is not quite certain that the same experience would hold good in all parts of China. What about the shipping in the upper Yangtze? However, perhaps if it practised Mr. Partington's methods the results might be equally favourable. One understands his being able to reassure us as to the Singapore base being in no sense necessary as a defence against the Chinese. The amazing thing to us out here is that there should, apparently, be people who thought it was.

The Paper Roads

The National Road Construction Association of China was not long in replying to our criticism of its organization and methods, but it did not make exactly the kind of reply that had been expected. It explained that its chief aim is not to build roads, but to talk about them, and the obvious reply to that is that it is doing some very expensive talking. According to its own statement it had funds of $110,000 and as it is now making a most touching appeal for more, it is to be assumed that the treasury is empty. The secretary's letter shows, just as did the report which provoked our comment, that the Association's work amounts to nothing more than extending its membership and issuing a flood of pamphlets. Of proof that the Association can claim the honour for any actual road-building there is absolutely none. The appeal now is for funds to build palatial headquarters "with board room, exhibition room, deposit room, parlour, dining room, etc." What is the need? The British Chamber of Commerce can get along with three very moderate rooms and the General Chamber of Commerce with one very dingy one, so why this splendour for a mere talking shop? The real surprise, however, was that the N.R.C.A.C. did not attempt to deny that it is the Good Roads Movement under another name, or else to announce that it had reformed its ways. The Good Roads Movement, meeting at the Y.M.C.A. (an organization financed by foreigners to the extent of many million dollars) proposed to build a road round the Settlements to prevent the foreigners building roads which the Chinese would not build themselves. Has the N.R.C.A.C. done a single thing to remove the opposition which prevents the building of the Road to the Hills, or will it build that road itself If not, why appeal to foreigners for funds for cosy headquarters for pamphlet writers?

The "Morning Post"

For many months past rumours have been current that Lady Bathurst was on the point of relinquishing her proprietorship of the "Morning Post," and although these have been generally denied they are now confirmed. A group of Conservatives headed by the Duke of Northumberland is to take the paper over, Lady Bathurst having announced that she has sold it because of the heavy taxation it has to bear. Thus ends the family connexion and control which has existed ever since the paper was founded. It was a Scotsman named Borthwick who founded the "Morning Post," the lure of London having carried him to the metropolis as so many of his countrymen, and not only did he play an important part in political journalism but his successors as well, their names recurring constantly in the biographies of statesmen. The last male in direct descent from the founder was created Baron Glenesk, and, the male line becoming extinct, the proprietorship descended to his daughter, now Lady Bathurst. One always regrets that a great paper such as the "Morning Post" should leave private hands and become the property of a public limited liability company, for it is so often too much to be feared that the tradition it has carried with it for years may at length disappear. The caprices of numerous shareholders or their clamour for greater dividends may readily cause a change in policy or, what might easily prove worse, in style, and so a great institution might be no more, at least its generation of readers would fail to recognize it. In the present instance these fears will not be so pronounced as would be the case had the paper fallen into other hands. The Duke of Northumberland, who is at the head of the Conservative group making the purchase has for long been a constant contributor to the columns of the "Morning Post," and it is safe to say that while he is at the head of affairs it will maintain its pure conservatism and rare literary flavour.

Foreign Protests

The British Consul-General in Canton has just protested against the latest act of the Kuangtung Government in imposing a tax on alcohol and another on soda water. To-day the Chinese Press tells us that H. M. Minister in Peking has delivered a further protest against the cigarette tax in Chêkiang and Kiangsu and proposes to hold the Central Government responsible for any damage or loss which British firms may suffer in consequence. A third communication, somewhat by way of protest, is also mentioned in the Chinese Press, this being on the part of the Netherlands Minister, who is said to have called the attention of Peking to the grave depreciation of the copper coinage and asked that an order be issued to stop the minting of further coins. This latter case is different from the other two only in degree, for as a matter of fact the minting of underweight coins has imposed for several years past practically a surtax on an important foreign company here—the Tramways. How many other foreign firms it has also affected it is difficult to say. What the man in the street is incuined to ask to-day is how much tangible good these protests can do, for as the arm of Peking's authority is not long enough to reach the provinces there is only a slender hope that any effect will be exercised. Some day, however, things are bound to be different, and it may be trusted that when these protests are pointed to as being on record the injustices may be remedied.

[Matters of Pronunciation

A couple of correspondents of the "Glasgow Herald" have latterly been dealing with the subject of the different pronunciations adopted by Englishmen and Scotsmen, and when it is considered what these amount to it presents a fascinating study. One of the first examples given are "tied" and "tide," which the writers say the English pronounce alike while the Scots very strongly differentiate between them, the former word being given a long intonation and the latter a short, sharp one. We are next told that what an Englishman would describe as a "morning caller," a Scotsman would pronounce a "morning collar," which is rather bad and suggestive of that very pernicious matutinal beverage known as a "horse's neck." Then comes the subject of water, which one of the writers says is pronounced in Scotland "wotter." This is rather a surprising statement, as we were always under the impression that the majority of Burns's countrymen spoke it as "wa'er," this being accomplished by choking the "t" away up at the top of the back of the throat. Scotland, however, seems to have got England badly over one word, and that is "bow-wow," which the authority in the "Herald" says is how all decent dogs talk and is the way Scotsmen pronounce it. On the other hand Englishmen make this particular word rhyme with the "miaow" of a cat, and that must surely be wrong.

A Restive Electorate

A telegram on Tuesday mentioned that the electorate of Kiaochou were distinctly restive. For a long time no member of Parliament has represented Kiaochou, nor have any elections been held, and worst of all it is not quite certain how elections should be held there. So Kiaochou shows distinct annoyance, but we do not know that the district is any worse off than any other constituency in China, for it must be confessed that Chinese M.P.'s as a whole have not made a conspicuous success of their job. Their history has been one largely composed of journeyings between Peking, Tientsin, Shanghai and Canton according to the prospects of emolument in the different centres, and their legislative achievements have not benefited the country in the very least. Kiaochou might also remember that in other constituencies elections have been absolutely lacking for years past, and it is doubtful whether some of the present members were ever elected at all. In fact one authority goes the length of saying that when a member has vacated his seat for whatever cause it might be, somebody else has quietly slipped into it without even the semblance of obtaining popular approval. In the circumstances Kiaochou need hardly excite itself over its lack of an M.P., for at the worst it means one less individual to batten on the country's revenue.

A Scottish Snowstorm

Scottish papers just to hand denote that that country has been visited by a snowstorm of a character which it is difficult for those who live in milder climes to realize can take place so close to England. It is in certain respects the same surprising sort of thing which occurred there last year when rivers burst their bounds and swept whole tracts of railways away. This latter storm occurred after a perfectly sunny and more or less warm week-end at the beginning of March, but then a terrible blizzard followed, during which four people met their deaths. The most remarkable of these tragedies occurred in Banffshire where a woman was suddenly caught by a terrific gust of wind in a gully. It took away her breath; she fell to the ground unconscious; and died almost immediately from suffocation. The wind must have been of the utmost violence, for it is reported that motor-cars were blown across roads, while it was inevitable that in these circumstances pedestrians should have been knocked down. At the same time the snow seems to have been of an appalling heaviness, for before many hours had passed snow wreaths had gathered in the Highlands, and it was in these dreadful accumulations that the other fatalities occurred. Near Aberdeen a man drove a motor lorry into one of them, and exhausted by his efforts to get it out lay down and perished. The snow ploughs were quickly at work, but even so trains were arriving at their destinations a day late. The Hebrides were cut off entirely, and the distress prevalent there which has already brought the inhabitants to the verge of starvation was greatly accentuated. It has been described as probably the worst storm since the Tay Bridge was blown down, and bearing in mind that catastrophe and such subsequent occurrences as the Elliot railway disaster, it must be considered a fortunate circumstance that no more serious consequences occurred.

Homing Pigeons

We publish certain facts to-day about the destruction of homing pigeons, apparently by "sportsmen," which must make the majority of the fraternity blush for the sins of the minority. It ought to be a criminal offence to kill one of these birds, and this for two outstanding reasons. Nobody who goes shooting should be ignorant of the difference of appearance between one of these, or any other tame pigeon, and the well-known wild variety, and a man who would shoot a tame creature is a vile animal. The second principal reason is the amazing utility of the birds. How many lives did they not save during the war? There is that thrilling story of the naval airman who was forced to descend with his seaplane in the North Sea, and liberated his homer with a message giving his position and the probabilities of how long his machine would float. The bird was wounded on the way home, but—he must have been a gallant creature—got in in time with his message, utterly exhausted through loss of blood. Destroyers went out, and the airman was saved. And it is a great thing to think that the pigeon who did that job of work was doctored and attended to by the finest possible skill, recovered and is believed to be still alive. He deserved a decoration. It is the same class of creature that is in such serious danger to-day in the vicinity of Shanghai. Some of them have done flights from Nanking to here, and if for the time being they constitute merely the sport of a few fanciers, let us never forget what they may do for us.

Bolshevik Diplomacy

The Bolsheviks are really the most extraordinary people. Not perhaps an original observation but that they appear never to have exhausted their faculty for surprising us. Their proneness to make a mess of things diplomatically has been vividly illustrated in this country. Both Joffe and Karakhan at the time of their arrival were represented as being something quite out of the way. They certainly were, though not in the sense implied by their press agents. Joffe bungled everything both in Peking and Tokio; Karakhan's failure is too fresh in every memory to need repetition. But neither of these gentlemen's exploits can compare with that of Trotsky in the speech at Tiflis reported yesterday. Trotsky, be it remembered, is Commissary for War and President of the Revolutionary Council, altogether "the big noise" in Bolshevism. After the usual tirade against France and Poland, he addressed himself to Great Britain as follows:—

"Mr. MacDonald's Cabinet has absolutely no principles, nevertheless the success of the Anglo-Russian conference would strengthen its position."

At the moment this choicely insulting remark was made the Soviet mission must have been landing in England, to negotiate an agreement with the British Government of which from its own point of view the most important part is to obtain business credits and if possible a loan. In actual fact it does not really much matter what Trotsky says, because credits and loans are not going to be supplied until the Bolsheviks give back the British property that they stole, pay for what they cannot restore and give convincing proof that henceforward they will duly regard the sanctity of contracts. But that Trotsky should choose the precise moment to insult Mr. Ramsay MacDonald when he is trying to get something out of him is marvellous.

PUBLIC organizations in Manchuria have wired to the Cabinet and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, urging them to demand of Moscow the withdrawal of M. L. Karakhan and the despatch of another envoy to Peking in his place, reports a Peking telegram to the Dah Tong News Bureau. The Cabinet and the Ministry are now considering the matter.

THE obsolete four-funnel cruiser Susie which was sold to a London firm of steel merchants to be broken up, sailed from Rosyth for Belfast with eight men aboard recently. She ran into a gale, broke adrift from her attendant tugs and disappeared and was still wandering in the North Sea on March 12. The vessel was seen over a week previous off Frane Islands and then disappeared. She was seen a few days later 60 miles off Peterhead. Tugs were frequently sent to look for her but unsuccessfully owing to storms and fogs. It is believed that the men aboard have plenty of food.

NEWS FROM THE OUTPORTS

TSINGTAO'S BUSINESS GOVERNMENT

Mr. Kao En-hung in Conference with Commercial Groups: Big Harbour Improvements Projected: Financing the Southern Squadron?

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, Apr. 9.

Mr. Kao En-hung, the new Tupan, convened a meeting on Friday (the 7th instant.) and another this afternoon at which various business groups attended, for the purpose of discussing ways and means to improve local harbour facilities.

Mr. Kao said that inasmuch as the coolie monoply hitherto held by the Kiao-Tsi Transportation Co., has now been dissolved, the Administration welcomed any suggestions which local business men might wish to make.

None were advanced on Friday, however. The various groups retired for the purpose of discussing the whole issue amongst themselves. This afternoon, the Tupan received a group of foreign merchants and heard their views. The suggestions of the Japanese will be received later. One foreign merchant suggested the following:— (1) Allotment of special wharves for ocean steamers; (2) Special facilities for coal loading; (3) Facilities for transfer of cargoes from railroad cars to steamers and vice versâ; (4) Reduction of delay in loading and unloading to a minimum.

The opinion in some quarters appears to be that a foreign expert should be attached to the Harbour Department who could be engaged in the process of reorganizing the functions of the Department to the entire satisfaction of the business community. Two further suggestions were that special bonded receipts should be issued by the Department that will be accepted by local banks as negotiable instruments, and that some efficient system of protection against fire should be inaugurated.

Local mercharts have been very favourably impressed with the business-like attitude of the new Administration. Improvements in various directions are foreseen.

ADMIRAL WEN'S SQUADRON.

But there is just one point in which the business community is greatly interested and which has not yet been cleared up: the question of the maintenance of Admiral Wen's squadron at the expense of public utilities. It is feared that the idea of the new régime is to reduce necessary expenditure to a minimum and increase in various ways the sources of revenue for the purpose of using a portion of the surplus for the upkeep of the men-o'-war from the South. I have endeavoured to obtain a statement from Mr. Kao on this matter, but have so far only elicited the promise that such a statement will be made in a few days. Mr. Kao, the Governor's Chief Secretary and Director for General Affairs, pointed out that a good deal of the rumours circulated in connexion with the alleged intention of the new administration to milk the earnings of public utilities for the support of Admiral Wen's squadron were without foundation, for example, the one that the administration was endeavouring to mortgage the telephone system so as to raise money for this purpose.

It is now learnt that Mr. Kao is pressing the Railway Administration for either the return of the Headquarters Building and ground or payment therefor. The Japanese cashier's idea is that inasmuch as Admiral Wen had already secured $150,000 out of the treasury of the Railway, the whole matter can now be called square. It is opined by outsiders that Mr. Kao will value the property at a figure considerably higher than the foregoing sum.

LAND SOLD TO JAPANESE.

The greatest problem the new Administration has to face is undoubtedly the property question. The old Administration sold countless plots of land and it is an open secret that plots in central districts have been sold to Japanese at ridiculous figures in the hurry to raise money with which to patch things up. The old administration's property cow has been milked fairly dry by Chinese and Japanese ever watchful of opportunities to get something for almost nothing, although it must be admitted that the Japanese consular authorities have maintained a very fair attitude, refusing to press the claims of their nationals when such claims are not substantiated by lawful documents. Broadminded Japanese admit that fully 70 per cent. of land held by their countrymen cannot be substantiated.

SOOCHOW'S CITY WALL

Another Picturesque Relic of the Old China in Absolute Disrepair

From Our Own Correspondent.

Soochow, April 8.

There is an old local saying, "Six gates and six dialects," because after the Taiping Rebellion thousands moved into Soochow from other parts of China, thus creating many dialects, so that even to-day the question is often asked, "What is the pure Soochow dialect." This local saying must now go into the "junk file," for two new gates are being opened through the city wall.

One is being opened in the west wall south of the Chang Men, the busiest city gate. This will connect with a new bridge, that was built two years ago, across the outside moat, and also the main canal outside the city. This new gate will leave the Chang Men free for pedestrians, for all ricshas will now take the route through this new gate.

The more important new gate is being opened in the north wall just opposite to the railway station. In the years to come this promises to be the busiest gate of the city, for practically all the traffic from inside the city walls, to the railway station, will pass through this gate. This north gate has been under discussion for 18 years, ever since the Shanghai-Nanking Railway was opened as far as Soochow, in the summer of 1906; but business interests around the Chang Men have long fought this plan, fearing that turning this volume of traffic from the Chang Men would mean a great financial loss. However, for the greater convenience of the entire city, the business men inside and outside the Chang Men have been forced now to yield to the opening of this new gate. The work on both of these new city gates will probably be completed in the early summer.

The bridge over the small inside moat, at this new north gate, is also now being built, but funds are still wanted for the very long bridge across the outside moat, connecting this new gate with the station: so that for the present a ferry will be used. When this new bridge is built, it will be wide enough to carry carriages: and there is a plan to open a carriage road inside the city to the Big Pagoda.

Another carriage road is planned straight south through the western part of the city, by filling in a little used canal. Fifteen years ago this canal was dredged, but since the city canals are chiefly used as a dumping place for all refuse, this canal was soon again blocked at many points, and in the present low state of the water, its fragrance ascends to high heaven, and its waters in colour and consistency remind one of printer's ink. Filling in this canal for a "horse road" will be a municipal gain rather than a loss.

WITHSTOOD SIEGE BY GEN. GORDON.

There are really a dozen places in Soochow's city wall where one may ascend or descend on the outside with the greatest ease, for the noble old wall is gradually falling down for lack of repair. In the days of the old Empire the wall was kept in a state of good repair, but since the Republic was established, public funds are required for official private gambling debts, and other such necessities, so that there are not enough funds for public works. It seems sad to see this picturesque old bulwark falling into ruin, but from a modern viewpoint it has past its days of usefulness, even though 60 years ago it could withstand the siege of "Chinese" Gordon and Li Hung-chang.

Tradition has it that some of the old foundations are the original foundations, and some semi-mythological histories make the date of these foundations to correspond with the founding of Rome. These same histories state that the city originally had 12 gates instead of six, and that the Chang Men suburb ran 15 miles to the northwest; half way to Wusih. And the Bur Men suburb stretched 12 miles to the south, linking up with the city of Wukiang. However, this may be, from the old ruins, Soochow must have been indeed a vast city in the centuries long past, and even modern New York and London would not seem very great in comparison.

HONGKONG SENSATION

Portuguese Captain's Arrest on Attempted Murder Charge: Said to Have Been Accidental

Hongkong, Apr. 13.

Capt. Silvares, a visiting Portuguese army officer from Macao, has been arrested by the police on a charge of attempted murder.

Capt. Silvares and his wife and Lt. Costa Sequeira returned from Repulse Bay Hotel at 1.30 this morning, and, while alighting from the motor-car, outside the Astor House Hotel, it is alleged that Capt Silvares drew his pistol and shot his wife and Lt. Sequeira. The latter collapsed, wounded in the arm and leg. He is expected to recover. The lady was wounded in the stomach. Both were taken to hospital.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Hongkong, Apr. 13.

Lieut. Costa Sequeira and Mrs. Silvares, who were wounded in the shooting affair yesterday, declared that the shooting was accidental. After a conference between the Portuguese Consul-General and the Criminal Investigation Department, Captain Silvares, who was proceeding to Portugal, was allowed to go.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

AMERICAN OUTLAY IN CHINA

Tsingtao Critics of the Return on Educational Expenditure

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, April 6.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dadisman, the Principal of the Tsingtao American Academy, gave a dinner on Friday night to the advisors and teachers of the Academy and their wives and husbands as well as guests, the object being to ascertain in what way the Academy could benefit from the movement now in progress amongst Americans in the Far East for the support of American schools out here.

At the conclusion of the dinner, Mrs. Dadisman outlined the purpose of the gathering. After detailing the efforts of Tientsin Americans to arouse interest in American schools in China, Mrs. Dadisman declared that in order to attend a conference of teachers to be shortly convened in the north, she proposed leaving for Peking in a few days, and will convey to Americans in Tientsin any expression of opinion that those present may make.

There was then some discussion, opinion being divided as to whether the American Chambers of Commerce in China should support the American schools in this country, or whether the United States Government should do so. Mr. Sears thought it should be up to the Government to aid the schools inasmuch as Americans in the Orient were paying their taxes to the Government without being able to obtain the same privileges which Americans at home had. Mrs. Dadisman declared that to some extent Americans in China did not get a good return for their money. Mr. Adams thought a special law would have to be passed before Government aid could be secured. At the present time, each State supported its own schools, so that it would mean waiting for some considerable period before the desired object could be achieved. Mr. Jernigan's idea was that the American Chambers of Commerce in China should support the American schools in this country. The taxes paid to the Government were in lieu of the protection it gave to American citizens in the Orient.

Nothing definite was arrived at, but undoubtedly the whole point will be discussed again, after further details of the movement in Tientsin and Shanghai had become available.

Those present were:—Mrs. Elizabeth Dadisman, Mrs. M. Bergen, Miss G. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. T. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. P. Jernigan, Mr. and Mrs. D. Y Lin, Mr. Sears, Mr. and Mrs Hendry, Mrs. Gatrell, Mr. and Mrs. Telberg, Mr. James Giauque, Mr. Wong and your correspondent.

SIGNS OF WAR IN KUANGTUNG

Troop Movements on West and East Rivers: Crime in Canton and Short Money

From Our Own Correspondent.

Canton, April 7.

The situation in and around Canton shows signs of developing. The movements of troops to the East River are continuing, and it is expected that shortly the situation there will be in hand. The troops under Chen Chiung-ming appear to be withdrawing from Poklo and Waichow to Swatow and Amoy, and the advance of the Sun troops to Poklo is announced.

The reason for this withdrawal of the Chen troops is not very clear, but it is probable that the advance of Tsang Chi-p'ing from the Fukien border may have some connection with it. On the other hand it is believed by supporters of Chen Chiung-ming that this withdrawal is being conducted in order to concentrate his forces and shorten the line of operations preparatory to an advance.

On the West River during the last week there was also a certain amount of activity, culminating in the disarmament of Gen Chau Chi-ching by the troops under Liu Yu-shan at Dosing. At the same time there were reports to the effect that Wuchow was again in danger of being retaken by Lu Yung-t'ing, but up to the time of writing nothing further has been received, and it is claimed in Canton that the situation is well in hand.

DISORDER IN THE CITY.

In the City conditions continue to be somewhat disturbed, and murders and robberies are daily occurrences. The murders in nearly all cases are committed by soldiers quarrelling over gambling, and are carried out in the most cold-blooded way, the corpses being left lying in the streets. At the same time the number of troops in the City is decreasing and it is to be hoped that that it will not be long before as many as possible have been removed from its precients.

The question of money still remains an urgent one and it is reported that Cheng Hung-nin, the Commissioner of Finance has handed in his resignation. As has already been reported the Opium Commission are finding the greatest difficulty in carrying on in the face of the opposition from the troops, and now the whole question of opium is in the hands of a Hunanese General, Lo Tik-p'ing.

FORCED COLLECTIONS.

The fourth month's house rent is now being collected by the Police for the Military expenses, and a certain amount of difficulty is being experienced in its collection. This is the fourth time during the last year that a month's rent has been collected by the Government.

General Li Fuk-lam continues his operations against the pirates in the Delta and during last week several successful raids were made resulting in the shooting of five well-known pirates, and the apprehension of many others.

SHAMEEN NEWS.

The fine new building which has been in course of erection for the accomodation of H.B.M.'s Consular offices and Vice-Consuls quarters is now practically finished and the offices are now being transferred to the new building.

CHINA AND JAPAN

Conference on Manchurian Questions in Peking

Peking, Apr. 9.

The Japanese Consuls in China meet once a year to exchange views on various questions such as the education of Japanese children in China, the imposition of illegal taxes, protection of Japanese lives and property in China, and general trade matters. Hitherto meetings have taken place at Mukden, where Japanese Consuls in Manchuria met, at Tientsin of Consuls throughout North China, at Hankow of Consuls in Central China and at Taihoku, Formosa, of Consuls of South China, This year an alteration of this procedure has occurred. The meeting in Mukden concluded on the 7th instant and the Consuls of North China will meet at Peking for a week's session beginning tomorrow. The Manchurian Consuls have come on to Peking and will attend the conference here. The place of meeting was changed from Tientsin to Peking so that the Legation could receive reports from the Consuls of North China and Manchuria. Eighteen Consuls of North China and five of Manchuria will attend the Peking Conference. — Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPAN AND THE SOVIET

Recognition Demand a Barrier to Trade Agreement

Peking, Apr. 9.

The Japanese Minister had another meeting with Mr. Karakhan yesterday. The discussions between the Japanese and Russian representatives have not yet been concerned with the question of Japanese recognition of the Soviet Government.

The Japanese view is that recent incidents that have arisen between Japan and Russia should be settled before recognition should be discussed, whereas the Russians want to discuss recognition first. With this confliction of views no real progress have yet been made.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

The Emperor of Japan, through the Japanese Ambassador in London, has sent to Lady Moore a pair of large silver vases, with the Imperial crest inlaid in gold, as a token of his appreciation of the valuable services rendered by her late husband, Sir Edward Cecil Moore, while Lord Mayor of London last year, in alleviating the distress caused by the earthquake in Japan by raising a Mansion House Fund which realized over £250,000.

UNJUST TAXATION IN CANTON

Native Bankers' Successful Protest: Two Offending Measures Repealed

Canton, Apr. 4.

The suspension of business by the native bankers of Canton on March 31 has led to the final repeal by the Administration of the two offending new taxes—the requirement for bankers to use stamped paper for their business transactions in addition to the ordinary revenue stamps on negotiable papers, and the levy of 1½ per cent. extra duty on the export of subsidiary coins from Canton. The latter tax had been made more intolerable by the ruling of Dr. Sun Yat-sen that export included carrying coins from the City of Canton to the country districts of the same province. This would practically have cut off business transactions between the city and the country, as farmers bring their produce into the city in the morning and return home with the money for what they have sold, thereby "exporting" coinage. Other taxes repealed during the past few days include the common welfare tax, collected from the boat population in Kuangtung. The boat people in Canton and the district are now paying more taxes than they can possibly afford. In Canton, for example, they have to pay the police tax, the fee for the annual registration and numbering of their craft and similar taxes, which amount to a considerable sum.

H. M. CONSUL-GENERAL'S PROTEST.

The main outstanding taxation question is now the alcohol tax, to which the British Consular authorities in Canton have taken exception on the ground that it is simply a further duty on the goods, as alcohol and similar articles are mostly imported from abroad and thus have already paid duty.

The British Consul-General has also protested against the recently created tax on soda-water. The Watson Factory, the largest concern in Canton manufacturing aerated waters, is very seriously affected. The Canton Government has imposed a tax of one dollar for every 120 bottles sold by the wholesale merchants to the retail shops, which will be authorized to collect one cent extra for every bottle sold to customers.

POLICE COLLECTING RENT.

All tenants have been ordered by the police to pay their April rent to the police instead of to the landlords of their houses or shops. Persons who own their own homes or shops and are doing business in their property are required to pay 6 to 10 per cent. of the value of their property. This is the fourth time the people of Canton have had to pay this levy. The proceeds will go towards Dr. Sun's military budget. The military commanders of every district in Kuangtung are doing the same thing in their own districts. Last week the rival commanders in the West River districts had a dispute over the division of territory for the collection of taxes, which resulted in the practical annihilation of a regiment under Gen. Chen Tien-ti, of the Kuangsi army.

THE NORTHERN EXPEDITION.

Mr. Yang Shu-kan, the Civil Governor of Canton, has written to the most prominent Cantonese still remaining in the city to ask them to assist the Government in the raising of funds for the Northern Expedition, which Dr. Sun intends to undertake against Peking. He adds that the followers of Gen. Chen Chiung-ming, who are "unfriendly" to Dr. Sun, on the eastern front will shortly be routed. There has been fighting on the eastern front for months past, but so far the Northern Expedition has failed to make any advance.

PROTECTION OF FOREIGN SHIPPING.

The new commander of the Kuangtung Coast Defence force has made his headquarters at Whampoa instead of Kongmoon, which has been the headquarters of the gunboat flotilla for nearly a year. The river flotilla is the only naval force left to Dr. Sun since the recent desertion of Admiral Wen Shu-teh and his squadron to the North. In Canton Harbour one now sees very few gunboats flying the Chinese colours. The larger boats at Canton are all foreign. At present the U. S. S. Helena, the U. S. destroyer No. 217, H.M.S. Foxglove, the French gunboat Craonne and a Japanese destroyer are stationed at Canton. The British river gunboats, including the Cicala, Moorhen, Tarantula, Moth and Robin, are patrolling the West River to protect British shipping.

Some British shipping companies are arranging for their own protection in Kuangtung waters, in addition to the aid they may expect from the Hongkong Government. The Hongkong and South China Launch Company, which has many vessels to protect, has chartered an armed boat, the Ilha de Dom Joard, with Indian watchmen on board under European officers, to follow up their vessels.

CO-OPERATION AGAINST PIRATES.

Piracy is so common these days in Canton waters that nothing but self-protection will be effective. The river steamers plying between Hongkong and inland towns have adopted a co-operative system, by which they will travel together and render assistance when one is in danger. Travelling on the tow-boats on the rivers of the Delta is exceedingly dangerous because of the number of military stations and pirate strongholds the craft have to pass. In order to make their way through, the boats sometimes have to pay as many as 35 tributes, likins and other contributions to the bandits and troops as well as the regular tax-collectors.

M. Merlin, the Governor-General of Indo-China, will visit Canton about April 23 in the interest of trade between the two countries. He will be accompanied by the Presidents of the Chambers of Commerce of Saigon and Hanoi and other prominent personages of the two cities. The Chinese merchants in Canton, through the General Chamber of Commerce, have appointed a committee to prepare for the reception of the distinguished visitors.

JUDGE NOT A POLITICIAN.

Dr. Chao S. Bok, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of South China, has been relieved of office by mandate of Dr. Sun because of his unwillingness to become a member of the Kuomintang while in office. Dr. Bok believes that a judge in office should take no active part in party politics.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

NO ROOM IN JAVA FOR JAPANESE

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, April 5.

That there is no room in the Dutch East Indies for Japanese immigrants because the chief island, Java, is already overpopulated and the Dutch colonial government is, in consequence, devising ways and means of sending the superfluous population to Borneo and Sumatra, was a hint thrown out by General J. C. Pabst, Netherlands Minister to Tokio, when Japanese press men interviewed him on the subject.

"Java is densely populated," he said, "almost as bad as Holland, my own country. As a result of the rapid increase in the population, the area of uncultivated land in the Dutch East Indies is growing smaller and smaller every day, and even the bush lands of Sumatra and Borneo have been transformed into rice fields at amazing speed. There is no possibility of the Dutch East Indies, therefore, receiving immigrants from other countries."

Referring to the dropping of the bill for the expansion of the Dutch Far Eastern navy by the Dutch parliament recently, General Pabst said: "Luckily or unluckily, the bill was beaten by 50 to 49 in the Lower House, 100 members absenting themselves because the opposition to the bill became very strong owing to the present financial difficulties of the Netherlands. The Japanese earthquake helped to strengthen the hands of the elements opposed to an augmentation of the Dutch fleet in the East."

KIAOCHOU-TSINANFU RAILWAY

Managing Director Transferred to Lunghai Railway: an Interchange of Posts

Tsingtao, Apr. 9.

Mr. Liu Kun, the Managing Director of the Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway, has been transferred to the Lunghai Railway as Manager. The Manager of the Lunghai Railway, Mr. Shao Hung-chun, is succeeding Mr. Liu Kun and is expected to arrive here tomorrow. Mr. Liu Kun will leave for Peking for instructions prior to taking up his new post.

The order from Peking was not unexpected as Mr. Liu's administration has been the object of several attacks lately. He was responsible for the transference of $150,000 from the coffers of the railway to Admiral Wen Shu-teh's treasury for the upkeep of the naval detachment in the bay, it is stated at the instigation of Marshal Wu Pei-fu. It is also said that he was endeavouring to find a way to transfer additional sums to the squadron, but had been baulked by the Chinese chief accountant and the Japanese accountant. Fault was also found with the line of his conduct of the case of Mr. S. S. Keh, the district engineer at Changtien, who was murdered by bandits.

The new Managing Director was formerly President of Chao Tung University and was once Chinese Consul at Vladivostok. He is a close personal friend of both Marshal Wu Pei-fu and Governor Kao En-hung and formerly was a member of the staff of the latter when Mr. Kao was Minister of Communications. —Reuter's Pacific Service.

Commission of Inquiry into Its Affairs: Foreign Experts Among Members

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, April 10.

Co-inciding with the arrival of the new territorial governor, the Railway Commission especially appointed to investigate and report upon the conditions of and along the Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway has arrived. The Commission is divided into several sections, Mr. Kin, the Director-General of the Kirin-Changchun Railway being Chairman, Mr. P. D. Griffith, Assistant-Manager of the Shanghai-Nanking Railway, in charge of engineering matters, Mr. Chuan, formerly with the Peking-Hankow Railway, in charge of Traffic matters, Mr. G. E. Baker, advisor to the Ministry of Communications, in charge of Financial affairs, and Mr. Sheng Chi, Technical Expert to the Ministry of Communications, in charge of Technical matters, such as workshop operation etc. Mr. Chuan replaces Mr. Chow, of the Tientsin-Pukow Line, who is unable to attend owing to a death in the family.

The Commission is fully empowered to institute an investigation into the economic and financial resources of the Kiao-Tsi Railway and to ascertain how to introduce reforms. Furthermore, measures will be devised for the effective protection of the interests of both China and Japan until the former has fulfilled her obligations in accordance with the provisions of the Washington Treaty. Mr. Koo, the Chief Chinese Accountant of the Railway, has been persuaded by the Ministry of Communications to remain at his post. It is considered that there can be no question that the Kiao-Tsi Railway if efficiently managed, and freed from all attempts to have its earnings support the fighting units of one Tuchun or another, could itself meet the obligations with Japan at the expiration of the 15-year period prescribed in the Sino-Japanese agreement concerning its amortization.

The Railway Administration is now under the Managing-directorship of Mr. Shao Hun-chung who has replaced Mr. Liu Kun, since dismissed. The dismissal of the former Managing-Director came in an order from the Ministry of Communications and caused not a little surprise in view of the fact that Mr. Shao is a Wu Pei-fu man. This is considered as complicating matters for the Commission is supposed to be here for the purpose of submitting a report to show why the Railway would not bear any straining of its resources for the support of Admiral Wen's squadron taken over by Marshal Wu Pei-fu. Had Mr. Liu Kun been replaced by a non-Wu Pei-fu man, the whole position would have become clear, but in appointing Mr. Shao as Managing-Director of the Railway, the Ministry of Communications has given a puzzle to the people of this territory.

PIRACY IN HONGKONG WATERS

Str. Tailee Assailed: Sunning to Rescue: 3 Pirates Killed and One Passenger

Hongkong, Apr. 12.

While the steamer Tailee was voyaging from Kongmoon to Hongkong yesterday evening, a number of pirates disguised as passengers rushed to the engine-room. Simultaneously confederates on the river bank opened fire on the steamer with rifles. The Tailee blew its whistle and fired a rocket and a Verey light.

The steamer Sunning, answering the calls, proceeded to the assistance of the Tailee. A European police sergeant and four special and six Indian guards returned the fire of the pirates. Several passengers were wounded.

The pirates jumped overboard and swam to the shore, three of them being killed. A Chinese woman passenger on board the Sunning was killed by a stray bullet. —Reuter's Pacific Service.

Hongkong-Kongmoon Steamer Service Suspended by Ships' Officers

Hongkong, Apr. 14.

A combined meeting of the China Coast Officers' and Marine Engineers' Guilds at noon yesterday decided to suspend the service on the Hongkong-Kongmoon run until naval escorts are provided against piracy.

Later.

It has been arranged that armed naval launches shall escort steamers on the Kongmoon run. H.M.S. Tarantula and H.M.S. Cicala have been assigned to the duty.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

FOREIGNER ASSAULTED IN PEKING

Unprovoked Attack on British Visitor by Member of the Chinese Guard

Peking, Apr. 13.

Another case of assault against a foreigner by a Chinese soldier occurred near the Water Gate on the Tartar Wall this morning, when Mr. A. P. Campbell, a British subject who is visiting Peking on business, was the victim of an unprovoked attack by one of the guards of the Ministry of War. His assailant is in the hands of the Legation Quarter Police.

Mr. Campbell had left the Wagons-Lits Hotel for a walk on the wall and met the soldier in question near the top of the rampart. The latter halted in front of him and endeavoured to bar his way. Not understanding the man's intention, Mr. Campbell brushed past him and went on his way, but had only gone a few steps when the soldier struck him on the jaw from behind. Mr. Campbell promptly knocked him down, but the man rushed him again and struck him on the head with a handkerchief full of coppers which he was carrying. Again Mr. Campbell retaliated, and again his assailant struck him with his awkward weapon, this time inflicting a nasty cut on the jaw.

The encounter had been observed by the police at the Water Gate and also by an American soldier, and they promptly came to Mr. Campbell's assistance and placed the soldier under arrest. There is no indication of what the latter's motive in making trouble can have been, but he is reported to have interfered with another foreigner earlier in the day, and it is evident that for some reason he was spoiling for a fight.

An investigation is proceeding. —Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPAN'S INTEREST IN RUSSIAN FISHERIES

New Agreement: Japan Paying Rent and Submitting to Restrictions

According to information so far available, the number of Siberian fishing grounds to be leased by Japanese fishing interests from Russia on a three-year contract is 232 against last year's 268. Notwith standing this decrease, the rent shows an increase of some Y. 160,000, the price agreed upon for the present year being Y.1, 450,000. As Japanese fishing interests will be called upon a pay Y. 400,000, together with interest thereupon, which amounts to some Y.20,000, representing a portion of the unpaid rent falling due in October, the total sum to be paid by them under the new agreement this year will reach Y.2,420,000. Besides the above disadvantages, they are to put up with restrictions upon the amount of catches, methods of fishing, etc. In such circumstances, some Japanese are complaining that it is impossible to carry on.

The Government, on the other hand, thinks that the contract concluded was the best that could be obtained under existing circumstances. Japan's insistance upon her terms would have rendered the conclusion of a general contract impossible, with the result that the Japanese would have been obliged to take "French leave." The practice of free fishing might not have produced very serious consequences in the days when the Vladivostok Administration stood on a weak basis, but the pursuit of such a course at the present time would not fail to affect relations with Russia to a serious extent. All Japanese residents in Siberia might then be forced to withdraw from that territory. The conclusion of the present agreement has obviated the possibility of such contingencies, and consequently, the authorities believe, it cannot be regarded as a failure.

Japanese fishing interests are going to ask the Government for financial aid to enable them to carry on operation without loss. The rent under the new arrangement is Y. 920,000 higher than the price which they think proper, and they desire that the Government may come to their help to that extent for three years. It is estimated that the free fishing during the last three years involved the Government in an outlay of some Y.5,000,000 in the dispatch of warships and the provision of other safeguards for the protection of Japanese interests. The arrangement just made saves the Government this expenditure, and consequently, they argue, they are justified in their claim of the Government's financial help to save from losses which may be caused by the new contract.—"Japan Chronicle"

JAPAN'S FISHERY IN RUSSIAN WATERS

Secured from Vladivostok So No More Use for Karakhan

From Rodney Gilbert.

Peking, Apr. 16.

It is reliably reported here today that the Russo-Japanese negotiations have been completely broken off.

The Japanese, it is rumoured, have secured the fishery rights, which are their chief economic interest, from Vladivostok by independent purchase. They are therefore indifferent to M. Karakhan's proposals and are satisfied to break off the negotiations.

JAPAN'S EXPANSION ABROAD

Finance Minister's View of Earthquake Consequences: The Fall in Exchange

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, April 5.

Declaring that the Government will make every effort to assist Japanese in Manchuria, China and the South Seas "because attempts to assist them will eventually lead to expansion of Japan abroad," Mr. Shoda, Minister of Finance, exhorted merchant princes of Osaka, Japan's commercial metropolis, to cooperate with the Government in this direction. "It is important and essential for Japan to expand abroad," declared Mr. Shoda, "for Japan's population is already too large and she lacks important natural products."

The Japanese press interprets Mr. Shoda's speech as part of a pro-Government electioneering campaign, and asks why the Finance Minister was not more explicit in declaring what ways and means will be taken to establish Japanese expansion in foreign lands.

Touching on the depreciation of the yen Mr. Shoda said that he intends to stabilize the rate on America at 42 or 43 cents to the Japanese unit of currency. He declared that the more the yen rises, the better is it for importers and the worse for exporters and that the Government is trying to reach a point which will prove favourable both to importers and exporters.

"I regret that the unfavourable terms at which Japan's foreign loans were closed have led to a fall in exchange," said the Minister of Finance, who then went into an explanation of the "difficult circumstances under which the loans were negotiated."

"As the result of the earthquake last year," went on Mr. Shoda, "the budget for the fiscal year of 1924 has swollen to an enormous sum. The Government seeks to secure an understanding with Kwansai (Western Japan in which Kobe and Osaka are situated) business men, now that Osaka has become the source of Japan's industrial and commercial activity."

Mr. Shoda concluded by urging Kwansai business men to buy Government domestic bonds to the full extent their exchequers permit.

SINGAPORE AND HAWAII.

"If the fortification of Singapore by Great Britain is to be regarded as contrary to the spirit of the Washington conference for the limitation of naval armament, then the fortification of Pearl Harbour, in Hawaii, by the United States should also be regarded as such," declared Vice-Admiral Kenkichi Ide, of the Japanese Navy, who returned to Japan yesterday after a trip abroad.

Vice-Admiral Ide was Vice-Minister of the Navy under the late Premier Tomosaburo Kato when the latter held both the position of Premier and Navy Minister after he returned from Washington where he was Japan's chief spokesman during the armament limitation parleys.

"I have heard various reports regarding the possibility of President Coolidge calling another arms limitation conference," said Vice-Admiral Ide to your representative, "but, in my opinion, there is no need, under the present circumstances, for convening such a conference. The nations which sat at the round table conference convened by President Harding are faithfully fulfilling their obligations, and if there is any attempt to pile up armaments, this is only being done in the realm of aircraft, and, as aircraft made to serve peace purposes can be converted overnight for combatant purposes, how can restrictions be imposed. In the matter of auxiliary vessels, there is no contravention at all.

Reverting to the Singapore base question Vice-Admiral Ide said: "It is strange that the Japanese people are talking so much about Singapore which is outside the scope of the agreement reached at Washington, so that Great Britain is perfectly free to do as she likes with Singapore. If the erection of a naval base at Singapore is to be regarded as contrary to the spirit underlying the Washington Conference, then the fortifications being thrown up at Pearl Harbour, Hawaii, should also be so regarded, yet no comment is being made in Japan regarding Hawaii. Now, however, since the Singapore base plan has been temporarily dropped, there is no need to talk about it, for it is, for the time being, a dead issue."

PEIYANG STUDENTS ON STRIKE

185 Now Expelled: Attempts to Intimidate Those Who emain at Work

Tientsin News Service.

Tientsin, Apr. 9.

A proclamation issued this afternoon by the Peiyang University and posted in a prominent place on the Campus dismisses 185 students for failing to return to classes yesterday, or to apply for official leave. This leaves 164 students on the rolls, 62 of whom have been in continuous attendance and 102 of whom have obtained leave of absence.

The proclamation mentions each student by name and cites the University's reasons for dropping him from the rolls. The University caused to be published in the Chinese press during the past few days a notification requesting striking students to return or apply for leave by yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This notice also mentioned each student by name.

In an effort to intimidate students remaining at their studies a delegation of strikers visited the campus three days ago. They met with no success except that several faithful students, afraid of what might happen to them if they acted otherwise, obtained official leave of absence for a few days until the situation becomes calmer.

Some non-striking students, who took advantage of the temporary lull in school activities to visit their families in Peking, were prevented from returning at the Chien Mên station by striking students in the capital. It is reported that some were also turned back at Tientsin Central and East Stations.

It is learned that the students have petitioned the Provincial Assembly, with a long recital of grievances, most of which are considered [illegible]. It is reported that the students have received some financial assistance from Peking and Tientsin student associations as well as from other interested sources.

In response to the closest inquiries this service is informed that the University, which includes the Chihli Governmental authorities behind it, is resolved to maintain its stand vis-à-vis of the students without the slightest suggestion of compromise. It is felt that an Institution which spends $350 per annum per student, who pays back only $30 has some right to determine its own schedule and system of education.

ENGLISH CHURCH IN JAPAN

Movement to Raiee £30,000 for Restoration Fund

London, Apr. 10.

The Japanese Ambassador, Baron Hayashi, and other distinguished personages to-day attended a meeting at the Mansion House, presided over by the Lord Mayor, in support of the movement to raise £30,000 for the English Church in Tokio and Yokohama restoration fund, of which the Prince of Wales has agreed to become patron.

The Japanese Ambassador presented the Lord Mayor with a book containing the signatures of a thousand leading Japanese in Tokio and Yokohama as an expression of gratitude for the help afforded by the Lord Mayor's earthquake fund.—Reuter.

COSSACKS STRANDED IN MANILA

Anxious to Secure Entry into United States But Prospects Poor

Manila, Apr. 3.

A dozen Russian Cossacks, who came to Manila from Shanghai to give exhibitions in horsemanship during the annual carnival in February, are stranded and are now living on charity. They had expected to continue their voyage to Singapore, where further exhibitions were to be given, but their plans did not materialize.

The Cossacks, like Admiral Stark and his 250 countrymen who have been quartered at the Olongapo naval station for more than a year, believe their difficulties would be ended if they could reach the United States. In company with Mr. Teodoro R. Yangco, philanthropist and former resident commissioner at Washington, the Cossacks called on Governor-General Wood to enlist his aid in securing their entry into the United States. The Governor-General held out little encouragement to the refugees in view of strict immigration regulations, but told them he would present their case to the authorities at Washington through the War Department.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

GOVERNOR OF ANHUI PUBLICLY SNUBBED

Students' Opportunity to Take Vengeance for Educational Funds' Disappearance

From Our Own Correspondent.

Anking, April 8.

The annual tree-planting festival which for some years past has taken the place of the usual grave dressing rites or Ch'ing Ming, was celebrated with the usual display and vainglorious show here on Saturday, April 5.

All the schools of the city marched out in fine order with flags flying and drums beating to the appointed place on the neighbouring hills. Here a large canopy of gay bunting had been erected in a natural amphitheatre which affords an advantageous view of the surrounding country. After setting out a few trees by way of ceremony the long lines of students each school—both girls and boys—in some uniform colour, drew up in good order in front of the canopied stage in the hot sunshine to listen to the many speakers who were better sheltered.

Long lines of soldiers guarded the place as though trouble might momentarily be expected, while all along the road were stationed single sentinels with fixed bayonets doubtless affording ample protection for the thousands of city folks who flocked out in the wake of the students and officials. But protection of the existing trees was apparently not a part of the guards' duty for ruthless crowds spread over the country in all directions despoiling fruit trees of their blossoms, climbing into the branches and tearing off every flower in reach, leaving only the bare denuded trees.

STUDENTS' SNUB FOR GOVERNOR.

Toward the end of the ceremony the Governor, Ma Lien-chia, appeared upon the scene heavily guarded by trusty troops all carrying bayoneted rifles in which cartridge clips had been placed, ready for any emergency which a guilty conscience always fears. However, one thing he had not taken into account and that was the "non-cooperative" attitude of the students themselves. In spite of the fact that schools have been open and running for a month, even though short of funds, the students apparently had not forgotten the rebuffs of last year, or else they did not want to lose an opportunity to discredit the present military régime. Whatever their motive, concerted action must have been previously decided upon for no sooner had the Governor mounted the platform and begun his speech than the students turned their backs, fell into line and marched off the hill; and without so much as turning their heads nor stopping the din of their instruments at once set off on the return march to the city as though the affair, for them at least, was all over. Enraged and chagrined the Governor returned to his yamên and refused to see anyone for the rest of the day. What the result will be no one seems to know, but the teachers, the payment of whose salaries is already uncertain, fear that the consequence may fall upon them.

SOLDIER POLITICIANS OF JAPAN

Candidates for Elections: The Meiji Era Upheld: More Secret Influence

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, April 5.

Retired army and navy men, thirsting after political glory, have emerged from the obscurity of being on the inactive list and have thrown their hats into the political arena of the coming general elections. They include three retired admirals and three retired generals. In addition, a number of officers of lesser rank of the army and navy have come forth as candidates seeking election to the Diet. About 150 general officers on the retired list have organized a political body and propose canvassing actively on behalf of the candidates from the fighting forces.

In the course of a statement they declare that, in supporting candidates from the Army and the Navy, it is their object "to bring forward the illustrious achievements of the late Emperor Meiji and to follow and extend the august wishes of the Reigning Emperor."

Among the sailor candidates out to secure legislative honours is Admiral Tochinai, a former Vice-Minister of the Navy and commander of the Japanese squadron in the South Seas during the European war. Admiral Tochinai proposes to run from Morioka city, the home town of the late Premier Hara.

Vice-Admiral Keizaburo Moriyama, who was recommended by the artisans of Kure as Japan's delegate to the international labour conference last year, will run from the naval port of Kure.

Rear Admiral Ichizen Yamaji, son in law of former Premier Count Yamamoto, himself a naval man holding the rank of admiral, also proposes to take the field. Admiral Yamaji was commander of the Japanese squadron in the Mediterranean during the recent war.

General Horiuchi, who played an important part in the operations conducted by the Japanese army against the Germans at Tsingtao, is the chief Army figure desirous of entering politics. Another well-known Army man is General Tsunekichi Kono, famous here for his brilliant essays on military life who is regarded as the "new type" of Army man in Japan.

The significance of the Army and Navy men seeking political office is not only that they are entering politics, for they have exercised political influence from behind the scenes through the War and the Navy offices, but that they are drifting away from the career of a professional fighter. The inelasticity of naval and military pay envelopes is largely responsible for this and even more the waning prestige of careers that once were held as the most honourable in the land. For the past half a century, the Army and the Navy offered the quickest and surest road to fame, to rich marriages, to social and other distinction. Of late, and especially since the end of the recent war, this glory has become dimmed and the once despised commercial man and merchant is now the ambition of the youthful aspirants of Japan.

A lawsuit brought in Mukden regarding the rouble notes issued by the Russo-Asiatic Bank, has led to a speculation in the Russian notes by local Chinese. From 200 to 300 million roubles worth changed hands in a day.

A NEW PROVINCE OF NORTH WEST CHINA

With a Most Unromantic Name: Cannot Government Find One More Appropriate?

From Our Own Correspondent.

Sining, Mar. 19.

"Kan-pien"—By the side of Kansuh. Surely a more interesting name might be found for this most entrancing New Province. Ch'wan-pien for the New Province to the West of Szechuan is very tame indeed for that weird land with its scores of tribes, but it is now too late to change. But the Government surely can find a better name than "Kan pien." Far better stick to Ch'ing-hai, which gives it a halo. The very name of Ch'ing-hai creates a longing in the heart to pierce into the wilds and survey the wonderful sea and all its surroundings whereas "Kan-pien" seems like a dry log, no beauty in it.

Critics may say that Kan-pien has a similarity to the names in the other provinces such as Hopeh, Honan, Shansi, Shantung, etc. Quite true. These homely names seem appropriate for the quiet, easy-going, industrious matter-of-fact Chinese. But we want a name for that fascinating, mysterious, weird land of Northern Tibet, something partaking of its character and that retains an enchantment about it.

Will not the Government authorities try again and find a better name? In the event of their failing, why not retain Ch'ing-hai?

STEADY ADVANCE.

The High Commissioner is steadily making headway in bringing the New Province into life. Already the city wall of Dulan-sz has been built by the soldiers and a magistrate appointed. The office is certainly not a very opulent one. Most of the inhabitants at present are soldiers, who are not accustomed to pay taxes. We might well call the official a Hermit Official, for he has nothing to do but sit in his yamên all day long meditating how long it will be ere he will be transferred from his lonely position to an office where he can afford to keep his family from poverty's door. Such a position as his would be a unique place for the official who finds in Buddhism a balm for his longing soul.

Jykegundo is a little more lively than Dulan-sz, for there are a few Shansi merchants there, and 100 soldiers. The city is small but there is a large district inhabited by Tibetans and several important Lamaseries.

Labrang and Paongan districts are to be made into Hsiens.

A fine new barracks has just been erected outside the east gate of Huangpien, which has given a more imposing entrance to that border city.

AN ENTERPRISING OFFICIAL.

When an official devotes nearly all his time and energy for the benefit of the people under his care, it gives one much pleasure to cheer him on, as we find so few that care for little else than what they can get out of their position. Mr. Ch'en Tseh-fan has been the Huang-yuen magistrate for four years, and during his office has been just and upright, seeking the welfare of his people. He also has made the plans and superintended the building of the New Schools, which are a model for other schools. Recently he has been removed to Nienpeh Hsien, and no sooner has he taken up office, than he has had men employed to repair the mule road in the Laoya pass, which has been in a dangerous condition owing to past floods Though over 60 he is still very active. A native of Ch'angsha, he has spent most of his time in the New Dominion, having held office in Kashgar.

JAPANESE SUBMARINE DISASTER

Tokio, Apr. 13

The submarine which sank on March 19 has been towed into Sasebo harbour, which the work of raising it will be made easier. —Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPANESE NEWSPAPER EDITORS

Irresponsibility that Needs to Be Curbed: Typical Cases in Tsingtao

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, April 10.

The irresponsibility of Japanese newspaper editors has been the subject of comment on the part of foreigners from time to time. This is not only true of Japan but is also a feature here. Since the advent of the new Administration, foreigners in Tsingtao have been furnished with two examples of this irresponsibility, and in one case a denial issued by the American Consulate in connexion with a grossly misleading and harmful report is published without any expression of regret.

The first report was that Mr. W. Adams, the American Consul, had approached Mr. Kao En-hung with the recommendation that Mr. D. Y. Lin, Chief of the Bureau of Agriculture and Forestry, should not be dismissed with the 147 advisors and officials who were struck off the pay roll Acting upon this recommendation, the report went on to say, Mr. Kao decided to allow Mr. Lin to remain at his post.

Foreign residents are surprised that it did not occur to the Japanese editor who passed this report that it was inconceivable how a foreign official could interfere with a domestic Administration in the matter of its personnel, unless it directly concerned the foreign community.

The other report was that since his assumption of office, Mr. Kao had gone out of his way to befriend the white people. This, unquestionably, is an untruth. The fact of the matter is that Mr. Kao had conferred on several occasions with foreign business men over the question of harbour facilities, following the dissolution of the coolie monopoly hitherto held by the Kao-Tsi Transportation Company. There was no attempt to "befriend the white people" at the expense of the Japanese at all. The first meeting convened by Mr. Kao was also attended by Japanese business men, but the latter, following their usual custom, retired for the purpose of deliberating amongst themselves and, unquestionably, for the purpose of conferring with their consular authorities for it is quite well-known that Japanese business men seldom take a decisive step in a substantial issue without first reaching an agreement with their Consulate-General. While the Japanese were deliberating, the foreign merchants called on Mr. Kao on several occasions for the purpose of expressing their views.

Then, in the matter of news reports, no Japanese newspaper man would seem to have taken the trouble of calling upon the Administration for information. Unlike your correspondent and other foreign newspaper men, Japanese pressmen would seem to have relied upon reports submitted by questionable sources.

The irresponsibility of Japanese papers do not rest on incidents reported here. Their own nationals are not immune. Some time ago, a series of articles was run to the detriment of the reputation of the wife of a prominent local Japanese, and simply because she and her husband had attended foreign dances. It was claimed that any indulgence in Western forms of amusement was detrimental to the prestige of Japanese women who should observe the rules of Ryosai-Kenbo (good wife-good mother). Foreign residents declare that if Japanese editors could eschew the output of usotsuki (lying) writers half of the battle would be won.

It must be admitted, however, that the Japanese-owned English-language newspaper has not been a party to this irresponsibility. In connexion with the report that Mr. Adams had recommended the retention of Mr. Lin, it wrote:—"The "Leader" was informed of this report but naturally refrained from publishing it. It occurred to us as being inconceivable that any foreign official representative would deem it his duty to interfere with the Administration in the selection of its personnel, unless it directly concerned the foreign community. In retaining Mr. Lin, the Administration was merely showing its appreciation of his honest efforts when he was with the former régime."

TAX ON CIGARETTES IN KIANGSI

Provincial Government Seeking to Raise Funds for Militarist Aims

From a Correspondent.

Kiukiang, Apr. 11.

It is reported that, in order to raise funds, the Provincial Government of Kiangsi intends to impose a tax on cigarettes, following the example of Kiangsu and Anhui.

It was reported in the vernacular press several weeks ago that a group of business men, headed by Mr. Pan Shio-hai, had already applied to the Kiangsi Government for the right to farm such tax on payment of a certain sum of money. As the amount offered was too small, however, and the tax had not then been put into force in the other provinces, the matter was postponed. Now, it is officially reported that Mr. Tsao Er-huei, former Taoyin of Southern Kiangsi, is anxious to secure the monopoly and, in the name of his brother, Tsao Er-tsai, has sent several letters on the subject to Gen. Tsai.

Henceforward the tax on cigarettes will be another effective tool for the strengthening of militarism in Kiangsi.

CANTON NOTES

Soviet Not Recognized Yet: War on Gen. Chen Chiung-ming

Peking, Apr. 9.

Advices from Canton indicate that apprehension that Dr. Sun Yat-sen would, independently of Peking, recognize the Soviet Government, is now abating. The Canton Government is, however, sympathetic toward the Russian delegates in their negotiations with Peking, and the local press is placing the responsibility for failure to reach an agreement on the Chinese Government.

It is stated that an attack on Gen. Chen Chiung-ming is still contemplated, but is likely to be delayed indefinitely owing to the attitude of Dr. Sun's Hunanese troops, who are unruly and troublesome.

An interesting report has it that Dr. Sun has two German military experts in his employ, one of whom is attached to police headquarters and the other to the arsenal where he is said to be giving instruction in the preparation and use of poison-gas.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

JAPANESE NAVAL ESTIMATES

Tokio, Apr. 13.

The supplementary naval estimaes for reconstruction in consequence of the damage caused by the earthquake last September were announced to-day. They amount to Y.92,000,000, of which Y.26,000,000 is for buildings and Y.66,000,000 for armament. The former is spread over eight years and the latter over 10 years.

The appropriation for 1924 amounts to Y.4,000,000, of which Y.1,500,000 is for Yokosuka naval station. There is also an appropriation of Y.6,500,000 for the discharge allowances of 10,000 navy-yard employees who are being dismissed according to the Navy readjustment plans.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

A peculiar effect of an earthquake is reported in messages received from Tayabas province, Phillipine Islands, where many tons of coconuts were shaken to the ground by the waving trees set in motion by a shock. No other damage was done.

JAPAN'S FOREST LANDS

Treeless Hills Appearing: Pressing Need to Replace Timber Felled for Reconstruction

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio: Apr. 2.

The indifferent attitude of the Japanese to afforestation and the large number of trees that have had to be cut down to furnish lumber for reconstruction following the earthquake disaster has resulted in the appearance of a number of treeless mountains throughout the country. This has prompted the Department of the Imperial Household to establish a large forestry experimental station at the base of Mount Takao, near Hachioji, where various saplings are being grown for the purpose of transplanting to forests where the large trees have been out down for lumber. In order recall the attention of the nation to the importance of re-afforestation, the Imperial Household Department has requested an endowment from the Emperor to establish the station. The endowment has just been granted.

One of the first acts in the way of reconstructing Tokio was taken by the Emperor who, in September last, gave direct orders for the cutting down of several stately cryptomeria trees—for decades the pride and joy of Tokio and which the fires failed to reach. These trees could not be felled without direct orders from the Emperor and these orders to utilize them for more utilitarian purposes were issued soon after the calamity through the Imperial Household Department.

The number of trees already felled and to be felled to meet the demands for rehabilitation of the stricken regions are already beginning to tell on the timber supply of the country. and many persons fear that if matters in this direction are allowed to drift as they have been doing Japan will be faced with a timber famine before long.

The authorities are of the opinion that the most glaring cases of neglect in regard to afforestation are to be found in private-owned lands and estates, and steps are to be taken to compel everyone to replace trees cut down by others.

Income taxes on forest earnings are the lowest of the taxes levied on landed property in Japan and are made only at the time the trees are cut down, while the tax is only about 3.3 per cent. of the value of the forest property.

KIANGSI'S FEAR OF FUKIEN

Rumours of Invasion Ended: Steadier Tone on Markets: Opium Trade

From Our Own Correspondent.

Kanchow, Ki., April 1.

The rumours of an invasion from Fukien served their purpose, and are now a thing of the past. The money market is again steadier, and the Kiangsi banknotes have re-acquired their former value. It seems that the Fukien rumours were spread by Suen Ts'ung-fan, for his own strategical reasons, in connexion with local fighting in that province, and that there was no serious intention to attack this province. Soldiers have returned here. Commander-in-chief Ting, of the Northern army, came in here from the south of the province on the 28th, and received an ovation from the merchants, who say that the peace of the city has not been so secure for some time. It seems that at a city 60 miles south of here he had 1,000 disaffected men of Kao Liu-chang's brigade disarmed in a surprise attack, and took over all their guns, and equipment without losing man. The act added to the security of his force. No fighting is now reported on the border. Trade is a little better than it has been, but there is still a good deal of restriction from the conscripting of boats, and coolies. The Government Middle, and Normal Schools have been reopened, although there are still soldiers quartered in them. They are carrying on under difficulties.

The opium trade here has gained a great impetus from the new policy of the officials, who now allow it to be sold openly everwhere in the district. There is now no restriction whatever placed on the trade, except the customary taxes. Up till the present the trade has been carried on under fancy names, such as "Star cloth," "Earth," and so on, but now these are quite unnecessary.

NATURE OBEDIENT TO CHINESE CALENDAR

Usual Sunshine for Festival of "Pure Brightness" at Wuchang

From Our Own Correspondent:

Wuchang, April 5.

To-day is Ching Ming, or "Pure Brightness," and as so often seems to be the case with the Chinese weather, nature is obedient to the calendar, for the sun is shining brightly, the sky is clear, and the warmest day so far this year has to be recorded. This is the day of the tree-planting, when all the chief officials of the city come to the plantation below the Hung Shan and take part in the ceremony. It is also the day when people visit the graves of their relatives, to burn silver paper shoes and to mourn the departed.

Between the hours of 9 and 10 a.m., the stream of holiday-makers issuing from the East Gate was typical of the crowds who will be spending the day out in the open. First, one met a detachment of police in black uniforms, then a boys' school, marching in twos, neatly dressed in khaki jackets and shorts, and preceded by their own drum and fife band playing merrily. These were followed by a girls' school, in blue uniform with short skirts. After these a boys' school in white, a small troop of soldiers, and a band of boy scouts. Mixed with these more orderly detachments were many people in rickshas, more elderly folk in sedan chairs, and an official in a horse carriage. Several picnickers' carried baskets, in which thermos flasks were mixed up with paper shoes, a hideous clash of East with West.

BUDDHIST DREAMS TRUE.

A story comes from Huangkang about some idols which are said to have been dug up there. According to the native press, a devout Buddhist gentleman had a dream, in which it was revealed to him that some idols were hidden in the ground. He hired some coolies to dig in a certain spot, and sure enough, at a depth of seven or eight feet they came across three idols. They are said to be not very old, but probably belong to the close of the late Ching Dynasty. A characteristic touch is given to the story by the fact that "one of the coolies was taken ill, but became better again on worshipping the idols."

GOVERNOR'S YOUTHFUL MENTOR.

During the recent birthday celebrations of the Governor, marshal Hsiao Yaonan, a schoolboy from Boone University did an unusual thing. He took it into his head to send a birthday present to the Governor of a pair of scrolls written by himself. One of the scrolls presented the usual respects and congratulations due to the great. The other, referred to the unhappy condition of the people, and conveyed more than a broad hint that the Governor might do much to amend it, if he would. The youth, it is said, marched boldly into the yamên and deposited his gift among the many other presents of various kinds collected there. It is said also that he managed to secure a seat at the feast which accompanied the celebrations.

THE death is announced at Dumfries, on February 27, of Marjorie Struthers, eldest daughter of the Rev. George Douglas, of Manchuria, aged 27 years.

PEASANT MEANNESS

Japanese Rural Population's Utter Lack of Sympatqʎ for Quake Victims in Towns

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, Apr. 2.

Tokio people are wringing their hands over the alleged ingratitude of their country cousins. Violent thrusts and parries are being made in the metropolitan press by the country people defending themselves and the townsfolk insisting that the earthquake proved that the people of the rural regions, when the test came, were lacking in the fundamentals of gratitude.

When the calamity of September broke loose, nearly every Japanese in Tokio and Yokohama conjured up in his mind's eye his country relatives. The country seemed to be such an Arcadia, with, so it was thought, the good village folks bursting with anxiety to assist victims. But the average Tokioite complains that the disillusionment was as painful as it was real.

Country people, so complain denizens of the cities, looked upon the visitations on Tokio and Yokohama as richly deserved—as the finger of God, smiting them for their wickedness. The country folks are taxed with having given themselves all manner of sanctimonious airs and delivering clever homilies on the luxury and sinfulness of the cities which had drawn on them the heavenly wrath.

Have the country folk changed? That is the question that is being discussed in the columns of the press and in magazines with even greater heat and ardour than the prospects for defeating the Ministry at the coming general elections. As a matter of fact, the consensus of unbiased opinion states, the country folks have not changed one whit. What has happened is that Tokio people overestimated the humanity of the country relative, and forget that, whether urban or rural, a human is at the best but a human, invested largely with the same vicious tendencies over which the Saints have mourned from time immemorial. The country people generally took the stand that God helps him who helps himself and watched to see the refugees help themselves first.

DISILLUSIONED.

Townspeople now state that they had not given the villager credit for even greater shrewdness than the city people claim to possess. They say that the earthquake showed that the rural being has more commercial acumen and diplomatic dexterity.

RESULT OF TYPHOONS IN THE BABUYANS

Large Death Roll Amongst Male Population: an Excess of Women

Manila, Apr. 2.

The recent earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in the Babuyan Islands, situated about 60 miles north of the island of Luzon, have brought forth statements from mariners, who recently have been in that region, that a large portion of the population is composed of women. It is said that the situation is due to the fact that so many of the men have lost their lives at sea.

The male population are engaged almost entirely in fishing as a means of livelihood, and the frequent typhoons which sweep over that region play havoc with the frail fishing craft.

It is stated that on one island of the group with a population of about 200 there are 15 women to one man.

Transportation to the Babuyan group is difficult as small craft are unable to cross the channel on account of rough waters, and large vessels seldom call at the islands because the volume of business does not warrant it.

The constabulary of Cagayan province have been ordered to ascertain the condition of the people of the Babuyans and to furnish them with supplies.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

TRAGEDY AT MIENCHOW

Cruel Fate of Young Bride and Her Father: A Sorrowing Soldier Husband

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mienchow, Sze., Mar. 24.

There has been an extraordinary case in the local courts recently which combined tragedy and drama coincidence in a way that equals China's best novels. A sergeant, Hsiung, who was stationed at Tongchuan married a Mienchow girl. After the wedding they settled at Tongchuan for a time. In the course of events he was removed to another place, and sent his wife to her parents at Mienchow. He afterwards wrote to his father-in-law asking him to bring his wife to join him at his new post. The father set off with his daughter little dreaming of the fateful journey. When they reached Fuhluhchi, 60 li from Mienchow they fell in with the villain of the piece. He was a local street warden, a man of some influence in the Tongchuan district. He got into conversation with the two travellers and cast his eyes on the girl.

"Where are you taking the girl to?" he inquired.

"On she is going to join her husband at your request," was the reply.

"It is false," then said he, "you are abducting her." The man so contrived that the father was killed, and buried by one of his minions. He then appropriated the woman, but she died in a few days.

Meanwhile the sergeant wondered what had happened to his wife and her father. Eventually he returned to Mienchow and inquired of his mother-in-law. She in unfeigned surprise asked what he meant. "They left weeks ago to join you." This he did not believe, and accused her to the magistrate, who put her in prison to await inquiries.

GIRL'S MOTHER FALSELY ACCUSED.

The man who had acted as middleman at the betrothal of the two was a street warden as well as an old friend of the family. Feeling convinced that the mother was innocent he sent a member of the local militia down to Tongchuan to seek for information of the missing couple. He arrived there just at the time when the 1st Army were engaged in strengthening the position they were so soon to lose. The military took him and put him in prison for a spy. There was another militia man there in the same prison and of course the two talked. The man from Mienchow told his companion in misfortune the story of the missing father and daughter, and how having come to find news of them he had been imprisoned as a spy.

MURDERER TAKEN AT LAST.

But now comes the climax. "I know all about them," said the other. "I am the servant of Yin, the man who killed them, and I helped to bury them. He now thinks I know too much, and has put me here on a false charge to screen himself."

The Mienchow man wrote a letter to his employer telling of his plight, and his dramatic discovery. The street warden at once informed the magistrate with the result that the murderer was taken. Unfortunately as the sequel proved, owing to his influence at Tongchuan he was taken to that city instead of to Mienchow. While he lay there at the end of last January the 2nd Army bombarded Tongchuan. The prison was badly damaged, he escaped, and is apparently still at large. Another version is that he was helped to evade the punishment he so richly deserves.

BANDITS ON THEIR BEST BEHAVIOUR.

At present the bandits are quite friendly. A traveller on the road between Mienchow and Sintu recently writes: "Brigands kindly escorted us through their spheres of influence. I have never seen so many before. They were on their best behaviour, and talked to us most politely in the inns."

They have a lot to atone for. Only one of their sins is the way they treated the Government school inspector of the Tehyang District last year. His brother, inspector of Mienchow, told me that they took him while out on his rounds and treated him so badly that he only came home to die.

JAPANESE CONSULS IN CONFERENCE

Peking, Apr. 11.

The conference of Japanese Consuls in North and Central China was opened this morning at 10 o'clock at the Japanese Legation here, under the chairmanship of Mr. Yoskizawa, the Japanese Minister.

The following are the important items of the agenda to be discussed at the conference: (1) Protection of and control over Japanese residents in China; (2) Control over Japanese trafficking in opium, morphia, and cocaine; (3) Investigation into unreasonable taxation upon Japanese residents in China; (4) Improvement of Japanese judicial affairs in China; (5) Education of Japanese children in China; (6) Furtherance of Japan's trade with China; (7) Protection and development of Japanese shipping in Chinese waters.—Eastern News Agency.

SIR W. REES DAVIES

Enthusiastic Gathering at Farewell Dinner to Hongkong's Retiring Chief Justice

Hongkong, Apr. 14.

Following a dinner given in his honour by the Chinese community last week, Sir William Rees Davies, the retiring Chief Justice, was last night entertained at dinner by the British and foreign communities. Sir Reginald Stubbs and Sir John Fowler were present, and Sir Paul Chater presided. A large number of representatives of the Chinese and foreign communities attended.

Mr. A. G. Stephen, who made a characteristically witty speech, proposed the toast of the guest of the evening. He alluded to Sir William Rees Davies's exceptionally successful career and high sense of justice and fair play, and spoke of how Sir William had consented to serve as a steward of the Jockey Club and of the committee of the Hongkong Club.

The Chief Justice, in a brilliant reply, thanked those present for their spontaneous demonstration, and his old friend Sir Paul Chater. He laid stress on his association with the social and sporting life of the Colony at which he had spent 17 very heavy years, 12 of them as Chief Justice. He hoped that Hongkong would retain kindly thoughts of him after his departure.

On behalf of his Welsh fellow-countrymen, Mr. J. Owen Hughes presented Sir William with a Welsh flag.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

WIRELESS STATIONS IN JAPAN

Establishment of Direct Communication With Europe

Tokio, Apr. 8.

In order to put this country into direct radio communication with Europe, particularly with the Nauen and Bordeaux wireless stations, plans are being matured for the erection of two wireless plants, transmitting and receiving, in Central Japan.

The former is to be erected at Isami-mura in Aichi prefecture, and the latter at Kaizo-mura, Mie prefecture.

When in operation, these two stations will complete the present plans laid down by the Government for Japan's radio system. Communications with Europe will be maintained through these stations. The Iwaki station will handle the American service, and the Hirano station in Osaka will be used for messages to and from Japanese colonies and territories, Formosa, Korea, Manchuria, etc.

The domestic radio service will be handled through the Central radio station.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

NAVIGATION IN THE UPPER YANGTZE

Accident to Steamers in Low Water Season: Disastrous Fire at Ichang

Ichang, Apr. 9.

Another steamer belonging to the Yangtze Rapid Steamship Company has had an accident on the Upper Yangtze. The Chichuen struck rocks above Kueifu, and also at Miaobo, and has been rather badly holed. Fortunately they managed to patch her up sufficiently to bring her down here, though she was long delayed, and now, after having been surveyed in this port, she has been ordered to Shanghai for repairs to her bottom. This is the second time the Chichuen has been holed during the low water period.

The river has now started to rise, but is not yet deep enough for the larger steamers to venture the trip up river. They are slowly collecting here, waiting for a depth of water that will take them up safely, when several will make a rush for Chungking. The water mark to-day is 3.4.

There was a disastrous fire here on April 5. It broke out amongst some houses below the new Salt Administration premises, and as there was a strong wind fanning the flames, it looked, for a time, as if some of these new buildings might catch fire. However, the flames were stopped before reaching them, and it was very fortunate, for just beyond that again is the upper installation of the Standard Oil Company. It was pitiful to see the poor people who had lost almost all they possessed standing by the ruins, in the hope of perhaps salvaging something of their belongings.

YIHYANG MARU CAPTIVES.

Inquirers at the office of the N.Y.K. about the two officers of the Yih-yang Maru, who are still in the hands of soldiers or bandits in Szechuan, have elicited the information that the Japanese Consul at Chungking has now got into touch with them. They are at a place called Hokiang, and the ransom for their release has been reduced to $100,000. The Company is prepared to pay this sum and the agent here expects that they will reach this port in three weeks or a month from now.

JAPANESE BOYCOTT REVIVED.

There is apparently an attempt being made to re-establish the Japanese boycott here. Posters are already appearing on the walls, declaring that "We will not recognize the 21 demands" and similar sentiments, and another long one refers to the boycott. These bear the name of a Shanghai printer and a rubber stamp indicates that they have been issued by some merchants' company of Shanghai. As yet the local boycott committee has taken no action and, if it does not get to work, it is probable that nothing further will be heard.

A SCHOOL PARADE.

Last Saturday was "Ching Ming" the festival of "Pure Brightness" and the Magistrate made it the occasion of a school parade. He had all the schools which have recently been started march out to one of the neighbouring hills, where he inspected them in person. The new Magistrate is the former principal of a school, and so he is much interested in education. Quite a number of new schools have been opened this year, and have taken away pupils from the Mission Schools, as these new schools are providing everything free of charge. There was a very large turn-out of scholars at this inspection.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE Tokio Metropolitan Police Board has announced its intention not to permit a labour demonstration or any parade of similar nature to take place on the streets on May Day on the ground that it will interfere with traffic, which is already in a deplorable condition since the September earthquake. The announcement was published shortly before labour leaders called at the police headquarters to obtain permission for a May Day demonstration.

CROWN PRINCE OF JAPAN'S ALLEGED ASSASSIN

Tokio, Apr. 13.

The public trial of the youth charged with attempting to take the life of Prince Regent on December 27 will be held towards the end of this month.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

LAND RECLAMATION IN MONGOLIA

How a Thriving Enterprise Has Been Ruined

The Chinese Economic Bulletin publishes the following article on a land reclamation project in Mongolia:—

Wuyuan with a population of 25,000, is on the northern frontier of the Ordos Territory, Mongolia, situated near the point where the Yellow River makes a northward bend into the Mongolian Steppes. It was a sub-prefecture in the Tsing Dynasty, but was converted into a hsien district on the establishment of the Republic. Hsinglungchang is its busiest market town.

Out of the 328,000 square li of its territory, 216,000 chin or 21,000,000 mow are arable land. Reclamation of Wuyuan waste land was started under Government auspices is the latter part of the last century, when a reclamation bureau was organized. Seven trunk irrigation canals, each about 50 feet wide and over 100 li long, were dug by the bureau, in addition to two canals which were dug under private auspices. Lots of land were granted to applicants at a certain charge, in addition to which the tiller of the soil was to pay the Kuan Chu or Government rent, to the officials, and the Sui Chu or annual rent, to the Mongolian owners.

The Kuan Chu amounted to between $1 and $3 per chin, or 100 mow, a year and the Sui Chu ranged between 60 cents and a dollar. Payment for the land was to be made in three yearly instalments. This system was in vogue in the Tsing dynasty and seems to have worked well. Colonists, most of them ex-soldiers, flocked to Wuyuan and large tracts of undeveloped land were cultivated.

AN END TO PROSPERITY.

After the establishment of the Republic a military official under a special contract obtained the right to collect the rent for the Government, to which he pays a royalty of Tls. 40,000 yearly. This, however, marked the turning point of Wuyuan's prosperity. Farms have been deserted by colonists owing to the defective irrigation system caused by neglect in keeping the canals in good condition.

The greater part of the land at Wuyuan is composed of the silted up beds of the Yellow River, which frequently changes its course. The soil is alluvium and rich. Little fertilizer is used by Wuyuan farmers. The climate is rather severe during the winter months, and only one crop can be raised. The following figures showing monthly temperature at Wuyuan were taken in 1919: January, 13.30 Centigrade; February, 6.76; March, 1.54; April, 7.29; May, 18.21; June, 20.20; July, 25.53; August, 21.76; September, 16.28; October, 7.43; November, 2.71; December 10.68.

The yield per acre is not, however, bountiful as compared with yields in the interior. This is partly due to the neglect of the farmers, to whom weeding and harrowing are little known. Truck gardening is well developed, the yields of vegetables being better than those of cereals. At present there are about 900,000 mow of land cultivated at Wuyuan.

THE Hankow Chinese press states that Sun Yat-sen has decided to send Dr. Wu Chiao-hsu, son of the late Dr. Wu Ting-fang, to Russia. Dr. Sun declares that the Canton Government is willing to recognize Soviet Russia without demanding any terms in exchange.

PHYSICAL EXAMINATION FOR GIRLS

Order that Raised a Storm in Shaohsing

From Our Own Correspondent.

Shaohsing, Chê., April 12.

At the opening of this term the Tsing Tuh Girls' School of this city instituted physical examinations by a Chinese lady physician for all girls in the school. Considerable opposition developed against such an innovation. The local papers took up the matter and declared that as a result of the new requirement all but eight of the 130 pupils had left the school. Letters have been coming to the principal from Hangchow and Shanghai inquiring about the matter. The facts of the case are that not a single pupil left the school, but that rather some were added as a result of the agitation.

Carpenters, masons, and painters are finding this a hard year. The "feng shui" has decreed that no houses shall be built during this year facing south. Only Houses which face east or west may be built. As most people prefer a southern exposure the building trade languishes.

The annual meeting of the Chêkiang-Shanghai Baptist Association has just been held in this city, 144 delegates and visitors were in attendance representing 3238 members in Chêkiang and Shanghai. Among the visitors from out of town were the Rev. Peter Chuan of the National Christian Council and Mr. Gordon Poteat of Shanghai Baptist College. Reports presented indicated special progress in the matter of self support and the erection of chapel buildings.

TIENTSIN'S TELEPHONE PROBLEM

The Automatic in View

Tientsin, Apr. 11.

The question of whether or not Tientsin will have automatic telephones to replace the antiquated manual system will come up shortly for settlement between the Chinese Government Telephone Administration and the British Municipal Council. If the decision is against the automatic system it will mean the passage of another 10 years before it can again be considered, for to maintain the manual installation in proper proportion to the steady demand for increased service the Telephone Administration must shortly enlarge its plant at a considerably large cost.

Negotiations between the principals have continued for some time past and only now have reached the stage where a definite settlement may be expected. The Administration has been holding out for an increase in the present mannal 'phone rates of from $72 to $96 for business service and of from $60 to $84 for private service. If, however, the automatic system is agreed upon, this increase will be augmented by a further two dollars at least and possibly slightly more when the figures are finally worked out. Imperative demand for an early solution of the telephone problem is seen in the gradually diminishing number of available telephone numbers in the South Office, which covers the principal business district of Tientsin, and where only about 300 numbers remain. Inasmuch as it will take fully 18 months to install and begin service with an automatic system these numbers will be hardly sufficient to meet the most ordinary increased demand.

ROCKS OF THE RAPIDS

Accident to I.-C. S. Kingwo in Upper Yangtze

Ichang, Apr. 14.

The Indo-China Steam Navigation Co.'s str. Kingwo, proceeding to Chungking, yesterday morning struck the rocks at the Kungling rapid. The engine-room was holed, but the hole was covered with a tarpaulin and the steamer has returned here. The engineers had to work waist deep in water. The ship is now being surveyed.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

AMERICA AND JAPANESE IMMIGRANTS

Exclusion Amendment Adopted by Senate: Action of Congress Condemned by the Press as an Offensive Measure: Friendly Relations Imperilled

Washington, Apr. 12.

The House of Representatives to-day approved the Johnson Immigration Bill, which fixes the quotas of immigrants at two per cent., based on the census of 1890.—Reuter's American Service.

Washington, Apr. 11.

Japan has lodged a vigorous protest against the proposal before Congress further to restrict Japanese immigration.—Reuter's American Service.

Washington, Apr. 12.

The House of Representatives has approved the section of the Immigration Bill which practically bars Japanese from the United States.—Reuter's American Service.

London, Apr. 14.

The Washington correspondent of the "Morning Post," discussing the Japanese Note, says that rarely has a Great Power sent another such a stiff Note. He points out that Secretary of State Hughes sympathizes with the Japanese position and previously urged the House of Representatives to expunge the "obnoxious" provision. He declares that many Senators see the impolicy of needlessly irritating Japan and do not take Mr. Hanihara's warning lightly, but the Californian Senators are rabid on the subject and have the support of the other Pacific Coast Senators who say that there is nothing to be feared.

The correspondent states that the belief prevails that Japan will institute reprisals, which will not only disturb Japan-American commercial relations, but will have a serious bearing on the entire commercial and political relations of the Far East.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Tokio, Apr. 14.

The Japanese Ambassador's Note to the United States Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, which has been published here, embodies the methods whereby Japan is restricting emigration to the United States under the Gentlemen's Agreement respecting the issuance of passports and their close supervision. Passports are issued to those labourers, skilled or unskilled, only who "were previously domiciled in America, and their parents, their wives and their children under twenty years," and then only after production of definite proofs of identity. Passports to picture brides have not been issued since March 1, 1920. The methods are similarly being applied in the case of emigrants to Hawaii and foreign territories contiguous to the United States, with a view to preventing surreptitious entry.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Japan's Note Severely Criticized

Washington, Apr. 14.

In the course of the immigration debate in the Senate to-day Senator Lodge declared with regret that the Japanese Note was an improper one to be addressed by the representative of one great country to another friendly one. He contended that the question of immigration was the greatest of fundamental rights. He also objected to the Note because it contained a veiled threat.

Senator Borah and other Republicans and Democrats supported Senator Lodge's views.

The Senate afterwards discussed the Immigration Bill and rejected a committee amendment by 76 votes to two for ratification of continuation of the so-called Gentlemen's Agreement. The vote on the proposed Japanese exclusion amendment is postponed until to-morrow.—Reuter's American Service.

JAPAN'S RESENTMENT.

Tokio, Apr. 15.

The action of the United States Congress in regard to immigration is causing much excitement in Tokio, where the frequent newspaper extras show that every move made by Washington is being closely watched.

The Cabinet met in camera to-day to discuss the situation.

The press strongly resents the bitter talk among some sections of Americans, but declares that it does not despair of the American sense of justice. The papers express regret that the Japanese Ambassador's expression "grave consequences" has been misunderstood in Washington. They believed that it merely meant that a moral reaction against America would be created among the Japanese people, which could not be controlled by the Government.

The "Jiji," in a typical condemnation of the action of the American House of Representatives, declares it to be "the height of abuse and injury toward the Japanese nation," and continues: "They have disregarded all the dictates of international courtesy and morality. The Japanese nation appeals to the American people seriously to consider the situation at this critical juncture."

Later.

The attitude of Senator Lodge is creating grave uneasiness.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Japanese Ambassador's Note.

Washington, Apr. 15.

The Senate has adopted the Japanese exclusion amendment in the Immigration Bill. The Bill is practically identical with that ratified by the House of Representatives on April 12.

The Note which Mr. Hanihara, the Japanese Ambassador at Washington, sent to the Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, accompanied by a resume of the Gentlemen's Agreement, declared that the substitution of the proposed legislation, practically debarring Japanese, would not only offend a friendly nation, but would also seem to involve the good faith and honour of the Japanese Government. In conclusion, Mr. Hanihara said: "Relying on the confidence you have been good enough to show me always, I have stated, or rather repeated, all this to you very candidly and in a most friendly spirit, for I realize, as I believe you do, the grave consequences which the enactment of the Bill would bring upon the otherwise happy and mutually advantageous relations of our two countries."

Before the publication of Mr. Hanihara's note, many Senators favoured the amendment intended to have regard for the sensibilities of Japan by continuing the Gentlemen's Agreement, but now Senators express the strongest resentment at what is construed as an effort on the part of another nation to influence Congress by an implied suggestion of retaliation.

It is understood that the Administration regards the exclusion of the Japanese as a minor detail of the larger policy of maintaining on the Pacific the understanding reached at the Conference on the limitation of naval armaments.

Authoritative circles believe that the President may vote the Immigration Bill on account of its Japanese feature, but, in view of the bitter feeling aroused by the "veiled threat" of the Japanese Note, his veto appears likely to be over-ridden by Congress.—Reuter's American Service.

Press Condemnation.

New York, Apr. 15.

The morning newspapers, commenting on restriction of Japanese immigration in to the United States, condemn the action of Congress.

The "New York Times" declares that it is a wholly uncalled for affront to the Japanese people. The "New York World" says that the measure is offensive, unnecessary, brutal and dangerous, and does not represent the real will of the American people. The country will expect the President to save it, by his veto, from the consequences of this folly.

The "New York Herald" accuses the House of Representatives of imperilling friendly relations with Japan. The Senators, owing to their wretched exhibition of jingoism, are petulantly jeopardizing the work of the Washington Conference.—Reuter

Tokio, Apr. 15.

"Though we have not yet given up hope that our sacrifices and efforts to develop friendship with America will be successful, we have cause for grave anxiety," said Baron Matsui, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, this afternoon to an American correspondent in connexion with the action of Congress with regard to immigration in the course of a statement in which he made a strong appeal against the final passage of the exclusion provision. "It seems to us that we are appealing only against an action that can wound us to some extent and bring little satisfaction to you."

CASE FOR MUTUAL CONFIDENCE.

The Foreign Minister suggested that the operation of quotas by America, as well as the Gentlemen's Agreement by Japan, would provide the most effective control of emigration. Japan, on her part, was ready to give all the assistance possible to make control effective. Such a method would maintain the mutual confidence, respect and good-will, which Japan, the nation and the Government, were most anxious to retain and promote. He drew attention to the close and interlocking mutual interest of the two countries in trade and for the preservation of the stability and security of the Pacific nations.

Describing America as "in the enviable position of a Power privileged to take arbitrary action or to behave with fine magnanimity, setting an example to other nations or inducing resentment," Baron Matsui urged that nothing should be done to weaken the spirit of friendship and esteem in which Japan had long regarded her.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Canada's Foual Right to Exclude

Ottawa, Apr. 16.

In the course of the budget debate in the Dominion House of Commons to-day, Mr. Neill (Independent), representing British Columbia, referring to the question of oriental immigration, regretted that the restrictions with regard to Chinese had not been extended to the Japanese. He said that he was sick of hearing about the "grave international complications" which Japan threatened whenever restriction was mooted. He believed that Japan should recognise Canada's right to restrict the influx of a people whose standard of living was lower than that of Canadians.—Reuter's American Service.

FIRE-BALL OVER SAGE'S BIRTHPLACE

Mysterious Phenomenon in Confucius's Country

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsinan, Sung., Apr. 11.

Reports of a mysterious fireball have been repeatedly appearing in the local newspapers, which say that it is to be seen night after night in the district of Chu-Fu, the birthplace of Confucius.

The ball is of pure white light, from which rays shoot upwards. It is not stationary but rises and falls and moves rapidly from place to place. It goes so fast that watchers have not been able to come up with it (!). This remarkable phenomenon is declared not to be a will-o'-the-wisp, and the Chinese are quite puzzled to account for it.

MERCHANT CAPTURED BY BANDITS.

Local robbers are making their their presence felt. A well-to-do merchant of Tsingchowfu, whose place of business is near the railway station there, was carried off recently by a small band of robbers. They also captured the policeman who stood on guard at the merchant's door, but later on they released him and sent him back with a demand for a large ransom.

The merchant's family have not heard anything from the captive himself, and are at a loss to know where his hiding-place may be.

"JOINING MARSHAL CHANG TSO-LIN'S ARMY"

North Kiangsu Bandits' Story Told to Captives Just Released

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingkiangpu, Ku., Apr. 11.

A missionary, who has just returned by motor-cycle from the North country, reports that all of the bandits in that section have just left, releasing all of their captives and saying they were going north to join Marshal Chang Tso-lin. That the captives have been all released, without ransom being paid, is a certainty and many of them report that the bandits told them, should they not get jobs with Chang's Army that they would be back and capture them again.

If it is true that these men are trying to join Chang it would be most interesting to find what route they take to reach him, and who is supplying the funds. Travel overland all of that distance would be impossible, or certainly impracticable, so the only other routes are by water, viâ Haichow, or rail viâ Hsuchowfu. Why are these routes safe for large bands of robbers, going to join potential enemies of this section of the country!

HOKKAIDO'S HERMIT SCHOOLMASTER

Ex-Samurai Heaping Up Merit by Educating Woodland Beggar Colony

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, Apr. 10.

His stock in trade a few battered books and some old newspapers; his pupils the children of beggars; and his remuneration a proportion of what his mendicant-students get from generous-hearted citizens, Shunsai Anzai, a former samurai, conducts what is perhaps the strangest school in the world. There is no classroom; there are no forms, desks or seats. The unique educational institution is located in the midst of a dense forest in the Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island, a forest that is carefully avoided by the inhabitants of the island because of its being also the abode of fierce bears.

In the days when Japan was still encased like an oyster in its shell, Anzai sported two swords and a top-knot. With the abolition of feudalism and the armies and retinues of feudal days, this samurai who still professes the greatest contempt for the rifle and machine gun on the ground that these methods of warfare are ungallant and cowardly, turned his back on a warrior's life and decided to devote his days to the education of the most neglected in the land.

For some time he laboured in the slums of Tokio, but social relief bureaux and municipal aid societies invaded his domains. He then trekked northwards and when he came to the Hokkaido forests and saw its beggar denizens, he decided that he would establish himself here as the schoolmaster of this queer colony.

From time to time Shunsai Anzai makes trips to the nearest village, principally to lay hold of discarded newspapers and books. He has 34 pupils. Those villagers who have paid the forest beggar colony a visit say that the children are being well instructed by the ex-warrior Anzai.

On the evening of the April 6, a robbery was committed in Tsinan. Between 9 and 10 o'clock three men entered a coalyard some distance outside the East Suburb gate. They carried revolvers and held up the staff, demanding dollars from the frightened inmates. The three men were dressed like students, and they proceeded to seach the office. They were able to find over $70 in silver and coppers, and made off before any alarm could be raised.

PIRATES' HIDEOUS CRIMES

Slaughtered to a Man: Two Ships' Crews: Exploits of a Former College Graduate

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tokio, Apr. 8.

The public has been following with considerable interest the trial of one Ezure, a notorious Japanese pirate, and his accomplices, which has just been concluded in the Tokio courts. All the accused have been found guilty, but sentences have not been pronounced as yet. The trial which concluded yesterday drops the curtain on one of the most sensational human tragedies that has occurred for many years in Japan.

The first scene takes us back to 1921 when Ezure, a college graduate, believing that vast fortunes were to be reaped from the fisheries off the Siberian Pacific coast—especially with the Japanese fishing fleets operating under the protection of the guns of the Japanese Navy—abruptly terminated the prosaic career of clerk in a banking house, gathered about him a band of young men thirsting for adventure and, of course, for easily-made fortunes, and left en route to the fishing banks. Their vessel, however, was wrecked in the Inland Sea and the band was forced to return impoverished.

Ezure, however, managed to obtain from a Yokohama merchant a loan of Y. 20,000, saying that now his ambition had turned from reaping a fortune in fish to securing a bigger fortune in gathering gold dust from the rivers of the Siberian littoral. The merchant believed that there was more than a gambler's chance in the venture, so gave Ezure the money. A 2,000-ton ship, the Taikoo Maru, was chartered and the vessel sailed from Shibaura, Tokio, on September 17, 1921. Ezure, prior to sailing, bought a large amount of arms and food, the tale revealed in court by some of his subordinates who turned King's evidence, stating that 22 rifles, 67 Japanese swords, 2,000 rounds of ammunition, 250 bags of rice, 370 bags of wheat, with ample supplies of drinking water were included. The crew of 37 whom Ezure gathered about him were ex-service men who swore solemn oaths to obey him unquestioningly.

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES.

One of the first "exploits" of Ezure and his accomplices was to get alongside of a Russian fishing smack, the Anna, pour a rain of lead into the vessels rigging and command it to heave to. Ezure and his men then boarded the vessel, seized every thing on board and dealt death to everyone on the ship. The next boat to fall foul of the pirates was the Wesker, a 100-ton vessel, manned by 24 Russians and Chinese. This ship too, being unarmed, fell an easy prey to Ezure who slaughtered its entire crew, the wholesale murders being perpetrated, perhaps, because of the good old piratical belief that dead men tell no tales. In court, however, Ezure stated that he was furious at the massacre of Japanese by Russian partisans at Nikolaievsk and had determined to deal out vengeance himself.

The Taikoo Maru returned to Japan laden with loot which was disposed of at an enormous profit, and Ezure and his companions decided to take a holiday before embarking on further piratical exploits. The prickings of remorse and the inevitable quarrels that follow the division of stolen loot proved the undoing of the marauders and one of them, conscience-smitten, revealed the whole sordid tale to the police.

Ezure at this time was at a "spa" in the country, enjoying the waters with his fancy, when the police pounced on him. That was in 1921. The case has just ended. With all the allowance one may make for the dislocation in State business caused by the earthquake, the Ezure case is a further illustration of how slowly Japan's judicial machinery works.

CARGO CONGESTION AT TSINGTAO

Rlwy.'s Terminal Depot Small: Co-ordination Between Harbour and Rlwy.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, Apr. 11.

In connexion with the question of loading and unloading facilities now under discussion between local foreign business men and the new Administration, a number of merchants favour a scheme to let the Kiao-Tsi Railway control the business of the Harbour Department in view of the fact that Tsingtao is the railway's terminal port. It is felt that unless there is co-ordination between the Harbour Department and the railway, congestions of cargo could never be satisfactorily eliminated.

The well-known principle is affirmed that the volume of traffic which a line would carry cannot exceed the capacity of the terminal, as has been proved by the American practice of railway control of terminal facilities. During the progress of the war, when the railways did not control terminal facilities, abnormal congestions occurred, causing huge shipments to be held back. It is admitted that those were abnormal times, but even in the ordinary course of commerce, congestions are liable to occur where there is not some co-ordination between harbour departments and the railways carrying merchandise to seaports for shipment abroad.

The example is cited of the chaos which resulted under the former Harbour Administration.

HUGE POTENTIAL COAL EXPORT.

The amount of merchandize now exported from this port is very great, and in the years to come will increase on a huge scale, especially in the case of coal. Merchants interested in the coal business affirm that there is no doubt the annual tonnage of coal transportation from the mines at Tzuchuan, Poshan, Takunlun and elsewhere will amount to at least 2,500,000 tons by the year 1930, and that fully one-half will be exported. The demand abroad for Chinese coal is so great that it is felt the foregoing estimated export tonnage is not an exaggerated one.

In order to handle this huge tonnage, it would be necessary to provide a yard which must be sufficient to store at least the amount of coal for one month, so as to be able to handle the fluctuations which occur from time to time in both water and rail transportations. It would be necessary to have a sufficient sea frontage along this yard for the mooring of coal-carriers, but in the interval an efficient system of lighterage should be inaugurated, enabling lighters to approach the coal piles on land.

Local business men are of opinion that the volume of traffic carried by any railway is more or less governed by the capacity of terminal facilities. Unless the terminal facilities are offered the [illegible] would be [illegible] the progress of the Kiao-tsi Railway. It is, therefore, [illegible] that there should be a closer co-operation between the Wharf Administration and the railway. It is well known to business men here that the [illegible] on business connexion is going to [illegible] with the Wharf Administration, with a view to discussing ways and means of a satisfactory transhipment of goods between land and water for the mutual benefit of the authorities and the business public.

The management of the Wharf business should be appointed [illegible] several prominent business men, should be in the hands of the Railway Administration, while the Municipal Authorities should be at liberty to make any suggestions tending to the improvement of the whole concern, seeing to it that the entire work is carried out satisfactorily. In compensation for the loss of revenue as a result of the transfer of the management of harbour facilities from the Harbour Department to the Kiao-tsi Railway, the latter should pay certain sums regularly to the Municipal Administration. All surpluses should be devoted to improvements in harbour facilities.

WORLD'S DIRTIEST VILLAGE

Busy Tibetan Trade Mart: The Great Unwashed

Yatung (Tibet).

Phari-jong, where the Mount Everest Expedition proposes to spend several weeks, is the filthiest village in the world, (writes the correspondent of the "Daily Mail.")

Situated on a small knoll in the centre of the plain from which it takes its name and a few miles from the foot of Mt. Chomolhari, one of the most magnificent mountains in Tibet, Phari consists of a fortress, round which are huddled about 200 hovels in which are people live.

When the village was first built, at least 500 years ago, the houses were above ground level, but nowadays, owing to the prevalent practice of the inhabitants of using the front of their houses as a rubbish heap, the buildings are buried in mounds of filth, through which are cut passage ways to the road. The road level is nowadays in many places far above the roofs of the houses lining it.

The people never wash.

During the visit of the Mount Everest Expedition, who contemplate a reconnaissance of Mt. Chomolhari, the members will not have to live in native quarters, as there is an excellent bungalow, maintained by the Government of India, for use by its officials stationed in Tibet. There is also a post and telegraph office, probably the highest in the world. From this news of the expedition will be sent out to the world.

Phari is one of the principal trademarts of Tibet, being situated at the head of the Chumbi Valley, down which travels the bulk of the Tibetan export trade, including the largest product of the country, wool.

The conditions under which the inhabitants live are very hard. No crops will ripen owing to the shortness of the summer and also to the altitude. Because of the scarcity of fuel, most food is eaten raw. Dried mutton and barley flour, which is imported from Chumbi, form the principal articles of diet, washed down with the inevitable butter tea.

In winter the people combat the intense cold—the thermometer sometimes drops to 20deg. F.—by donning more fur-lined clothing.

"CONFISCATED" PROPERTY OF MR. ELLY WIDLER

Gen. Yang Sen's Perquisites

We are informed that Mr. Elly Widler, who was for more than six months a captive in the hands of the Chinese Szechuan Second Army, by instructions from Gen. Yang Sen, has entered a strong protest to the Bureau of Foreign Affairs in Chungking regarding the seizure of his private effects at the time of his arrest. In the matter of the general seizure of money, commercial goods, furniture, etc., Mr. Widler is entering a claim against the Peking Government, but with reference to the "confiscation" of his private effects, such as three sporting rifles and two pistols, used by him on hunting trips in the country, personal effects and clothing, the retention by Gen Yang Sen, for his own personal use, of jewellery, etc., and the retention of documents and other documents, Mr. Widler is bringing as a personal claim against Gen. Yang Sen, in whose possession, he alleges, this property is held.

THE "Japan Chronicle" states that one foreign press correspondent left by the American destroyer proceeding to the Kuriles with supplies for the American round-the-world fliers. He is Mr. Dinton Wells, who will represent Kokousai, the Associated Press and through Kokusai Reuter.

NIENDORF

BIJOU GRAND

The Favourite "Little" Grand.

Charming Architectural Lines.

Occupies Little Space and Cost No More Than an Upright.

Tropical Construction.

Absolutely High Grade.

Details on Request.

ROBINSON PIANO CO./LD.

During February, 50 per cent. Discount for each while they last!

Our Annual January Stock-taking brings to light this compendious

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

A Grand Miscellancy—1,500 Titles

From every corner of our stores and godowns

Your choice of good reading in Fiction, Essays, Religion, and the Teaching Branches at

HALF PRICE

Send for complete lists

EDWARD EVANS & SONS, LTD.

30 N. SZECHUEN ROAD, SHANGHAI. 137 VICTORIA ROAD, TIENTSIN

SHANGHAI NEWS

FLAG OF ERMANNO CARLOTTO

Presentation by Italian Women of Shanghai to New Station Gunboat

An occasion of great significance to the Italian community of Shanghai and their guests was the presentation on Sunday afternoon of the Italian colours to the gunboat Ermanno Carlotto of the Royal Navy, commanded by Commander Zappi. In accordance with immemorial custom, since the days when ladies tied their favours to their knights' helmets and sent them to the tournament the women of Italy have presented a flag to every naval ship. The Carlotto, which was built by the Old Dock Company of Shanghai, though hardly two years in service has travelled many miles on the Yangtze. If has of course never been in action. This flag is the gift of the ladies of the Shanghai Italian community and was presented on their behalf by Mme. de'Rossi, the wife of the Italian Consul-General.

From three o'clock on, gaily decked launches plied between the French Bund and the I.R.N. Carlotto and I.R.N. Sebastiano Caboto which were lashed together with a connecting gangway in order to accommodate the large number of guests present. The I.R.N. Calabria which left for Italy on Sunday morning was anchored near by, her crew standing to attention and saluting while the flag was run up. I.R.N. Libia is now on her way to Shanghai to replace the Calabria.

The scene of the presentation was extremely picturesque, the dress naval uniforms, heavily gold braided, with the effective flag of Savoy blue, over the shoulder, contrasting with the Italian military uniforms, and the full regalis of the diplomatic representatives present. The forward deck was decorated with palms and potted plants. After the bugles had called those present to attention Mme. de' Rossi took the flag from its handsome Chinese chest and with a short speech of presentation placed it in commander Zappi's hands. Then, while the flag was held at its four corners by Mme. de' Rossi, Commander Zappi, Miss Flora Nocera and Miss Itala Chieri, Farther Gharzi, an Italian Padre with the French Mission at Siccawei, Observatory, read the service of dedication, sprinkling the flag with holy water at the conclusion. Commander Zappi then took the flag and with his own hands ran it up to the mast-head, after which the buglers sounded the call to the colours, the salute to the King was given, and the national anthem played by the band.

Commander Zappi then made a very eloquent speech, thanking the Italian ladies of Shanghai for their gift and recognizing his responsibility as captain for seeing that at all times the safety and honour of the Italian ladies and Italian interests generally were protected. The object of the ship was purely a peaceful one, he said to assure the safety of the property and commerce of her Nationals; Italy was emerging from the effects of the war and her glory increasing under the new régime. In conclusion Commander Zappi addressed the officers and crew, reminding them of the responsibilities conferred upon them by the presentation of this flag.

Comm. Cerruti, Minister to China, next spoke, saying that this was the first occasion that such a flag had been given to a ship in China and the importance of the event should be realized. He proposed sending cables to His Majesty, to the Premier Signor Mussolini, and to First Admiral Thaon de Revel announcing the hoisting of the flag. Commander Caccia, of the Calabria which is returning to Italy, brought the congratulations from the older vessel to the younger, and presented its best wishes in departure. Consul-General de' Rossi concluded the speeches with some humorous references this martial token being presented by the fairer sex of the Italian community and expressed his felicitations upon the significant occasion.

A large number were present at the ceremony, including Mme. Cerruti, from Peking, Commander Jaihino of the Sabastiano Caboto, and Commander Viganoni, formerly of the gunboat Caboto, now returning home. Others of the Italian community present were Chev. E. Denegri, Mr. A. P. Bena, delagate of the Italian Naval League, and Mrs. Bena, Chev. Badoni, Mr. V. Chieri of the Postal Supply Dept., and Mrs. Chieri, Mr. P. de Grisogano of the Lloyd Triestino Dr. O. Fischer, Mr. de Luca of the Statistical Dept. of the Customs, Mr. G Biondell, Vice-Consul, Capt. R. Ferrajolo, Assessor of the Mixed Court, Messrs. Gironi, Armidani and Fumagalli. A delightful reception followed the ceremony, at which refreshments were served by Bianchi, and the ladies were presented with bouquets of carnations tied up with the gunboat's ribbons to which were attached little silver boxes bearing the Carlotto's picture and the date.

OBITUARY

Mr. E. G. Hillier. C. M. G.

Peking, Apr. 13.

Mr. E. G. Hillier, Agent of The Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation in Peking, died to-day of bronchial pneumonia.

The death of Mr. Hillier has created a gap in the life of Peking such as had hitherto not been seen.

Very great regret and sympathy is expressed by Chinese and foreigners throughout North China. Chinese and foreign official circles feel the loss of an able counsellor whose opinion on all matters relating to finance was invariably sought and always received the closest attention, while his personal friends deplore the passing of a man of the highest British type.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

On Saturday morning the flags on the building of the Hongkong & Shanghai Bank were half-masted out of respect to the late Mr. Hillier and very general regret was expressed in the community that so distinguished a man should have passed away. He was very well known in Shanghai, having been a resident here for several years and a great many friends of his are left in the Settlement to mourn his loss.

Mr. Hillier was a son of Mr. C. B. Hillier, at one time H. M. Consul to Siam and he was born in 1857. He was educated, and Blundell's School, Tiverton, and then was at Trinity College, Cambridge. There appears to be some uncertainty regarding his early career in the Far East. A friend of his says that he came out as a secretary of the British North Borneo Chartered Company, and the reason for his leaving that service and coming to China is not quite apparent. Arriving in Shanghai he was originally in the service of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co., being employed in the shipping office under Mr. Brodie Clarke. He joined the service of the Hongkong & Shanghai Bank in April, 1883. He was stationed in Shanghai and the present generation of oarsmen will learn with interest that in the early eighties he was a keen rowing man. He was married in 1885 or 1886 to a sister of Lady Pearce, another sister having married Mr. "Bob" Little.

In 1891 Mr. Hillier became manager of the Peking branch of Wayfoong and it is from this time that his great distinction in the affairs of China starts. He may be described better as a politico-financier than a banker for his work has always been in in the realm of Government finance. He took a leading part in the negotiations for the Anglo-German loan to China of £16,000,000 in 1896, and the strain of these negotiations seriously affected his eye-siight which was congenitally weak. It became worse as time wore on and he ultimately was totally blind. This, however, did not hinder his work and in spite of it he continued to act for British financial interests in China as represented by the Hongkong Bank in the in the most brilliant manner. He was the British delegate on the Commissioner of Bankers for the Chinese Indemnity in 1902 and may be described as being the most valuable member of that body. From that time until his death he was continually engaged in the work of financial negotiations between the Bank and the Chinese government, all of which he performed with marked ability.

BLINDNESS NO HINDRANCE.

The loss of his eyesight seems to have brought out in marked measure the wonderful genius of the man. At all times he had an extraordinary memery and could quote dates of business letters 10 or 20 years back. He typed all his business correspondence himself and to the very end was an enthusiastic bridge player. He was able to do this by means of Braille cards; he was told what was in "dummy's" hand, and each player named his card as he played. More amazing than this, however, was the fact that notwithstanding his blindess he kept up cross-country riding. He had always been an enthusiastic horseman and after the loss of his eyesight was able to get about the country by having a mafoo riding in touch with him. The same mafoo used to attend with him at the training for the Peking race meetings and tell him in Chinese what was going on and what times were being done and Mr. Hillier's konwledge of what the different ponies could do was quite striking. Mention of Chinese recalls the fact that Mr. Hillier was a very great Sinologue and his knowledge of the language and people undoubtedly assured that success which he achieved in his particular realm of finance. He was also a very keen musician. Mr. Hillier's work on behalf of British interests received recognition in 1904 when the C.M.G. was conferred uopn him.

Mr. Hillier was twice married, his first wife having died several years ago. He is survived by his second wife, who is a daughter of the late Dr. Timothy Richard. His eldest son was killed during the war while his other son, who paid a visit to China lsat year, is at Cambridge. One of his daughters, who married Capt. Booker, is now in London, while another married Mr. Charles Todd and resides in Tientsin.

The Funeral

Peking, Apr. 13.

The funeral of Mr. E. G. Hillier took place at 12.30 to-day and was attended by a representative of the President, all the Chinese Ministers, various organizations, banks and commercial institutions, and numerous personal Chinese friends.

Mrs. Hillier, Mr. and Mrs. Todd and Mr. R. C. Allen were the chief mourners and Messrs. D. A. Johnston and A. Dividson the ushers.

Among the foreigners present were representatives of all the Legations, Sir Francis and Lady Aglen, Sir Ernest Wilton, Mr. H. P. Destalan and representatives of all classes of the community. There were many beautiful wreatrs.

The Rev. Father Mullins said the Requiem Mass at St. Michel's Church and Father O'Gorman conducted the service at the graveside at Peitang Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were M. Oudendijk (Netherlands Minister and Dean of the Diplomatic Body), Sir Ronald Macleay (British Minister) and M. de Fleuriau (French Minister), Sir Francis Aglen (Inspector-General of the Customs), Sir Ernest Wilton (Inspector-General of the Salt Gabelle) and M. Picard Destalan (Co-Director of Posts), and representatives of various banking groups — M. Baylin (French), Mr. C. R. Bennet (American), M. Raindre (Russian) and M. Takeuchi (Japanese).

MAJOR BUCK'S FUNERAL

The funeral of Major Morton W. Buck, R.E. (T.), a Lieutenant in the Maritime Co., S.V.C., took place at Bubbling Well Cemetery last Friday afternoon, where a large gathering of friends, civilians and volunteers, assembled to pay their last respects to the deceased officer. The funeral service was read in the Chapel by the Very Rev. C. J. F. Symons, as were the last rites at the graveside. The Masonic (Scottish Rite) Ritual here was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Darroch. Military honours were accorded by members of the Maritime Co., three volleys being fired as a last salute, which was followed by the "Last Post." As it was the wish of the deceased that he be carried to the grave by sappers, the bearers of the coffin were members of the Engineer branch of the Volunteers Commanded by Lt.-Col. M. H. Logan. Volunteer pall-bearers were Capt. Hay, Lieuts. Spence, Baker, Poate, Divers, Wood and Tilley.

The funeral cortege formed at Carter Road, the coffin being placed upon a gun carriage from the Field Artillery, while nearly the full strength of the Maritime Co., acted as escort, joined by a detail from every other company, consisting off an N.C.O. and eight men. In addition most of the commissioned officers in church parade order fell in, the Band preceding the party. On approaching the gate of the cemetery, the band broke into the funeral march and after the military section had passed the Masonic orders (District Grand Lodge of Scottish Freemasonary in North China, Lodge St. Andrew in the Far East, 493. S.C. and Lodge Saltoun 936 S.C.) fell in behind, followed by friends.

A MAKER OF MUSIC

Mieczyslaw Munz in Melodious Mood

M. MUNZ'S CHOPIN RECITAL

The programme chosen by M. Munz for Chopin recital on Saturday evening was of a decidedly original character. Excepting the A flat major Polonaise none of the usual "big" works by Chopin appeared, neither the Sonata nor any of the Scherzos. The result would have been charming in a chamber music concert but was a trifle slender in a big hall. The pièce de résistance was the Twenty-four Preludes, which M. Munz played with brilliant execution and lavish attention to detail. His fingering is extraordinary and the clearness of his playing we have never heard surpassed. No matter how rapid and complicated the passage not a note is lost; the inside parts are as distinct as the outside. On the other hand, M. Munz errs occasionally through excessive scholarliness. He appears so anxious to give each note and phrase its exact value and importance, that feeling is sometimes lost in intellect. Chopin was one of the most careful composers that ever lived and these players make a mistake who treat him too emotionally. But the great quality in his music is colour and suggestiveness, and these are apt to be lost if one treats him too analytically. In one other point one would venture to differ from M. Munz and that is that he plays too quickly. Nothing certainly is blurred, but the listener has a sensation of being hurried. Opinions will differ as to whether the Preludes were meant to be taken right through at one draught. They do not suggest the homogeneous character of, say, the "Papillons" or "Kinder Scenen" and the name they bear would indicate that they are meant to lead up to something else. However, M. Munz certainly acted up to his belief that they are meant to go together very skilfully. He played the three Mazurkas charmingly, full of light and delight. But really the best part of the programme was the three concluding encores. We have no idea what they were. If, as some one suggested, they were his own composition, he is destined to make a name for himself as a composer. They were full of melody and cunning workmanship and in playing them, M. Munz forgot to be scholarly and without extravagance played with abandon and expressiveness.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE

Arrival of Famous Indian Philosopher and Poet in Shanghai

Sir Rabindranath Tagore, the noted Indian philosopher and poet, arrived in Shanghai from Hongkong on Saturday afternoon on the str. Atsuta, and remained here a few days before continuing his journey to Peking where is to deliver a series of lectures on philosophy.

Sir Rabindranath was met in Shanghai by Mr. Tse Mou-hsu, of the Peking Lecture Bureau, who came to the Settlement to greet China's noted guest and to conduct him to Peking. It is to be hoped that he will be induced to deliver a lecture here either before or after his trip to the capital, where he is to appear in public on six occasions. Foreigners and educated Chinese there are proposing to portray his play "Chitra" in the Peking Union Medical Auditorium if that hall may be obtained.

The poet, who is now 63 years old, refused to see any but special callers at his quarters in the Burlington Hotel, as the voyage proved quite a strain. He is a prolific writer and has published not less than 30 poetical works including novels, short stories, essays, sermons and dramas. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1913. Not only has he written in the Bengali dialect but he has also himself translated many of his works into English, in addition to which scholars have further translated them into other languages, several into Chinese, which have been greatly appreciated by scholars in this country.

THE NEW AMERICAN JUDGE

Warmly Welcomed by Bar Association on First Appearance in Court

In the presence of a large gathering which included the entire membership of the American Bar Association, Mr. Edwin S. Cunningham, U. S. Consul-General, Mr. J. P. Davis, Executive Consul, Court officials and numerous friends, Judge Milton Dwight Purdy formally assumed office at the American Court last Friday.

Mr. Sterling Fessenden, as President of the Far Eastern American Bar Association, and also as one of the senior members of the Bar, extended to the new Judge the heartiest welcome of the Bar and their congratulations to him on taking his seat for the first time on the bench of that Court. Some of those present had practised there for many years and they all realized the existence of difficulties surrounding the administration of the law in an extra-territorial country—difficulties which were not encountered at home. Nevertheless he felt sure, and he could assure his Honour to that effect, that he would find in the Bar a hearty spirit of co-operation and that its members would loyally uphold the Court and its Judge.

DIFFERENCES IN LEGAL RANKS.

There was one thing he would like to refer to. There had been for some time past more or less friction within the Bar itself, but he felt, and he was sure all the other members of the Bar felt, that the occasion of his Honour taking his seat upon the Bench of the Court was an opportune time for these difficulties to be forgotten and for the Bar to go on once more as a united and friendly Bar, loyal to the Court, loyal to its traditions and with a desire to uphold and maintain in the highest degree possible the traditions of their country which they all prized so highly.

JUDGE PURDY'S REPLY.

Judge Purdy, responding, voiced the pleasure he felt in listening to the kindly expressions of esteem and loyalty which had been so succinctly expressed by Mr. Fessenden. He wanted to thank the Bar here, from the bottom of his heart for their expressions of cordiality and hearty accord, and he wanted to assure them at the same time that it would be his constant aim and endeavour to maintain the present high standard of the Court and the excellent reputation that it had attained under his predecessor Judge Lobingier and all his predecessors in office. He thought it might be timely to state at that time that it had been his experience, during the 30 odd years that he had been at the Bar, that in those jurisdictions where there had been hearty co-operation and kindly sympathy between the members of the Bar and the Court they achieved the best results and the highest order of justice administered.

PROBLEMS TO SOLVE.

He invited all the members of the Bar to meet him, to come to his chambers at any time and discuss matters of importance to the administration of the law in this jurisdiction. It would always be a pleasure for him to meet and see them and he hoped very soon to have an opportunity of making the personal acquaintance of every one of them. They had, as Mr Fessenden had well said, many intricate, difficult and perplexing problems to solve and he would have to rely upon each and all of them to help him so that the Court would have a standing in China second to none, as it had had in the past.

Mr. Leonard G Husar, District Attorney, on behalf of the officials of the Court extended a welcome to the Judge and assured him of their earnest co-operation.

In reply Judge Purdy said he had seen evidence of that in the few days he had been here. In fact he had already thought many times how fortunate had been the U. S. Government in getting men of such excellent quality and such ability as the officials of that Court.

The increasing number of mammoth office buildings in Shanghai suggests a simple means of settling the parking question.

HOMING PIGEONS SLAUGHTERED

Sportsmen Who Shoot at Carriers: Valuable Birds Destroyed

Unbeknown to a good many, there are a few keen pigeon fanciers in the Settlement and it is understood they are making inquiries to trace the so-called sportsmen who during the past few weeks are credited with having shot a number of valuable homing pigeons.

Recently six birds were released 60 miles up-country. Four returned well under two hours, one arrived at the loft four hours later in a very exhausted condition and upon examination was found to have a gun-shot wound through both legs, and in fairness to the bird it had to be destroyed. The fate of the other bird is unknown, but seeing that all the birds had previously flown over the same ground several times and that the missing bird had also made a flight of 120 miles, the owner has written it down—lost—"Killed by sportsmen!"

A homing pigeon if attacked by hawks will seek safety by going to ground, which is very often the reason for a bird being a day late. Unfortunately going to ground is no protection against a shot-gun, and the poor pigeon who perhaps is on the last few miles of a hundred mile flight is greeted with a charge of No. 6.

No true sportsman would knowingly shoot a homing pigeon, and any man who cannot distinguish between a homing pigeon and a dove must be classed as a pot-filler.

ROTARY CLUB TIFFIN

At the weekly tiffin of the Shanghai Rotary Club, held on the 9th instant at the Astor House Hotel, Mr. Percy Fowler, managing director of Messrs. Brunner Mond (China) & Co., Ltd., spoke of his recollections of European and American Rotary Clubs. Mr. T. O. Britton, the new President, presided.

The chairmen of the various standing committees of the club for the ensuing year were appointed by the board of directors:—

Education, Mr Marshall Dunn; Fellowship, Mr. H. A Wiley; Boys' Work, Mr H. C Norman; Publicity, Mr Jabin Hsu; Business Ethics, Mr. Jack C. Shengle; Public Affairs, Mr. E. C. Stooker; Music, Mr. Geo. J. McCarthy; Publication, Mr. W. E. Souter; Programme, Mr. H. Holgate; by-laws, Mr. James B. Davies; Entertainment, Mr. J. Fichwald; and Bursury, Mr. W. J. Hawkings. Mr. F. J. Raven, of the Raven Trust Co., said farewell to the club. He is leaving for the United States and Europe and expects to return to Shanghai in September.

PILGRIM SHIP'S GALLANT CAPTAIN

Frangestan's Passengers Now in Mecca

Further details of the burning of the pilgrim ship Frangestan have reached the local office of Messrs. H. M. H. Nemazee & Co.

The greatest praise, we are informed, is due to the Captain of the steamer, who by his heroic conduct, infused among his officers such an example of attention to duty while his vessel was in greatest peril, that the enormous task of shifting, apart from the European first-class passengers, 1,200 pilgrims with all their baggage was satisfactorily accomplished.

All the pilgrims have reached Jeddah safely, where they will be specially entertained and sent on to Mecca, free.

The King of the Hejaz generously offered to Mr. H. M. H. Nemazee, owner of the Frangestan, to bear all the expenses for transporting these pilgrims to Mecca, but Mr. Nemazee has declined, and has asked and been granted the privilege of bearing this expense himself.

WEDDING

Huang-How

At Union Church on the 9th instant, the Rev. A. N. Rowland officiating, Miss Mo Li-how, a graduate of McTyeire School and a student of the Boston Conservatory, became the bride of Mr Hao Liang-huang, Ph. D., manager of the Ho Hong Bong Bank, Ld., of Hongkong, a graduate of Princeton and Columbia Universities.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Bang How, wore white silver lace, over white satin, the train embroidered in pearls in true lovers' knots. The veil was of tulle, caught with a wrath of orange blossoms and the bouquet was white roses and maiden hair ferns. Miss Loo Funhow, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honour, wearing saxe blue crêpe satin and carrying pink carnations. Miss Rene Chur was the flower girl, Master Mark Wei, page, and Master Mossy Lai carried the train.

The bridegroom was accompanied by Mr. C. P. Ling as best man. After a reception and dinner at the Great Eastern Hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Huang left for Hongkong.

FIRE IN SHIP'S HOLD

Outbreak in P. & O. S. Mirzapore: Shanghai Cargo Undamaged

At about 7.30 on Thursday morning fire broke out in the No. 3 hold of the P. & O. str. Mirzapore, lying at the Shanghai & Hongkew Wharf Company's Pootung Wharf. A call to Central Fire station was promptly answered, Chief Officer Pett and Mr. Dyson going out with a squad of men on the Municipal fire float, and were at work on the ship for the greater part of the day. The outbreak was confined to this hold and while little of the blaze was visible, there was a dense discharge of smoke and several of the Chinese firemen were overcome by the fumes. They were attended to by Dr. Gauntlett and afterwards sent back to Shanghai. It was found necessary to flood the hold, and this effectually neutralized and general danger to the vessel, though some hours passed before the outbreak was completely under control. Late in the afternoon, pumps were at work clearing the hold.

No. 3 hold was loaded with some 3,500 bales of cotton, all for Japan. No damage was done to Shanghai cargo.

THE Diplomatic Body's Note last week concerning the status of the Mixed Court which referred to extensions of the Settlement boundary was sure to provoke the Chinese press and local Chinese organizations. We read that there has been a steady stream of protests by Chapei organizations to Nanking against any enlargement of the Settlement. The idea of foreign representation on municipal councils in adjoining Chinese territory appears still more obnoxious.

LUNCHEON TO MR. F. J. RAVEN

Tribute to a Successful Business Man by American Community

A jovial party of Americans gathered at the Astor House at tiffin last Friday for the purpose of bidding farewell to Mr. Frank Raven, a director of the American-Oriental Banking Corporation, who left Shanghai later in the day for Home leave. Some 70 persons were in attendance. Major S. A. Ransom presided, supported by Judge Milton Purdy, Mr. Edwin Cunningham, American Consul-General, Mr. G. Seitz and others.

Major Ransom, who presided, characterised Mr. Raven as one of those rare characters whose energies compel success in practically every venture in which they embark. He prefaced his remarks with a reference to Judge Purdy, to whom he offered a warm welcome on behalf of the assembly and the community in general in Shanghai.

Turning to the guest of honour, Major Ransom sketched his career since he started in China twenty years ago. Educated as a civil engineer, Mr. Raven came out to China 20 years ago to join the Shanghai Municipal Council. After a very short stay there he electrified things and threw down the gauntlet in real estate business. Mr. Raven had to go against a strong organization in this particular field. But results justified his self-confidence and he built up the China Realty Company.

A standing monument of his ability and work was a large portion of the French Settlement which was built in American style. That was due to Mr. Raven. Continuing, Major Ransom said: "Mr. Raven had ideals and probably still has (Laughter). His principal ideal was to become a figure in financial work, and to that end he retired from the China Realty Company, and organized the Raven Trust Company and a little later the American-Oriental Bank. In the early days of his residence 20 years ago he united with a good many others in the Settlement in forming the Shanghai American Company of which he became second-in-command. He commanded the unit several times.

"His field of activity extended to the American Association, of which he was a member and became vice-president.

Mr. Frank Raven, in reply, thanked Major Ransom for the kind remarks made. Major Ransom was his friend when he landed in China 20 years ago and he had valued his friendship ever since. Tracing the success of his various ventures, Mr. Raven attributed everything that had been done to the fact that his men had been handpicked. The men in charge of the Raven Trust, the American-Oriental Banking Corporation, the Asia Life Insurance Company, and the American-Asiatic Underwriters and others had all been watched for two years before being asked to join. The result was he had managed to get men of very high character: they were cogs in the one machine and had worked hand in hand with remarkable success. Development in China had been phenomenal during the past 20 years and in the next 10 years he thought it would be greater. The Bank had started in a small way and five years ago their finances could be counted in thousands. To-day they were reckoned in millions. When he reached America it was his intention to cement connexion between banks there and companies in China.

Judge Milton Purdy said he appreciated the kind sentiments of the toastmaster and those from Mr. Raven. Since he was a small boy (the speaker added) he had a great admiration, for bankers. He had no doubt that when Mr. Raven came back from the United States they would learn that the national City Bank, the Riggs National Bank and other big banks in that country had become branches of the American Oriental Bank.—(laughter).

CORRESPONDENCE

EDUCATION FOR CHINESE.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—Will you allow me to thank Mr. Square through the hospitality of your columns for his pertinent remarks on the prevailing educational system among the Chinese? I receive a number of applications almost every day for positions from graduates of the numerous day and evening schools in Shanghai. Very rarely is the applicant qualified for or himself aspires to any higher or more useful position than that of a junior clerk. All the time, we have many important kinds of work to be done in the office, which require an enterprising spirit and initiative, and it is becoming ever more acute a problem with us how to find the men for the work. There must be something fundamentally wrong with the system if this is the general result, and I heartily endorse Mr. Square's view that we shall be very grateful to Mr. Lockwood and others who are interested in the educational work of the Chinese if they will engage their mind to find out where the fault lies and what can be done to remedy it.

Both Bertrand Russell and Liang Chi-chao are of the opinion that what the West can teach China is not philosophy, ethics or political wisdom, but science and technical knowledge. But the general tendency of education in this country is going in just the opposite direction. There are at least twenty students studying western philosophy, political economy and ethics of life to one who is equipping himself to earn an honest living by doing some really useful work such as road-building and so on.

I am, etc.,
K. C. K.

Shanghai, April 11, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—In reply to T. Square's letter of April 10th concerning Education for the Chinese, I would like to point out that what is called an education" by thoughtful people is not "Stringing a few English words together and acquiring the use of a steel pen." Mr. Lockwood particularly remarks on the need of primary education which probably would not include teaching English at all. As to half-baked clerks who are unwilling to do manual work, T. Square will find that species in any country. Granted we need skilled mechanics and artisans; but we need skilled mechanics who are literate, and are not forced to get all their ideas second-hand. If T. Square investigates carefully, he will find that fewer responsible men are to be found among a definite number of illiterates than among the same number of the educated.

I am, etc.,
E. K. M.

Shanghai, Apr. 11, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—I read with much interest the letter some days ago from Mr. Lockwood re education of Chinese children, also the oration from the pen of Mr. Bruce Lockhart on . . . I hardly know what today. Was it written to give his views on the educational question or was it to give his views on the "Commerce of Uplift"? Truly it is good to know that the "Commerce of Uplift" is recognized. It really is a good name, and many will be thankful to Mr. Lockhart for coining it. The business is very old too. Confucius said, "The progress of the superior man is upwards, the progress of the mean man is downwards." A still greater Master said, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul." So the "Commerce of Uplift" is a very apt expression.

As regards Mr. Lockwood's versus Mr. Lockhart's views on the educational question, I find myself somewhere between the two. To give all the children in the Settlement an elementary education would be ideal, but at present not practical. There are many thousands of children in Shanghai, and the buildings and the teachers necessary could not be obtained even if our Municipal Council were able to provide the money.

But I do emphatically believe that we have some responsibility in the matter. The Council now supports four schools for Chinese boys. These schools are equal to any, and far better than many schools in our Homelands, and are equipped both with apparatus and teachers in first rate style. Being at one time a teacher myself, I have often pondered over those schools. I believe in well equipped schools, I believe in advanced ducation. But I would like to ask these questions. Are all the scholars in the Municipal Schools for Chinese bonâ fide residents of the Settlement, or do many of them come from points outside municipal jurisdiction? Is it not true that a large majority of the boys in the Municipal Schools would and could get an education if these schools did not exist? Is it not true that we are educating boys who could afford to pay in full for their own education much better than the majority of foreigners here?

I believe it is the right of every Chinese child, boy or girl, to learn to read and to write, but at the same time, I believe that if the Chinese want to have a foreign education including football, tennis, etc., they should and could pay for it in most cases. Supposing the money spent on these few schools were used for elementary education, I am convinced at least twenty times as many children could receive instruction. In connexion with these elementary schools, scholarships could be given to poor but promising scholars. By elementary education, I mean reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, and hygiene. China needs an intelligent working class, not a large number of half-educated boys who are looking for soft jobs with big pay, and who do not want to soil their hands.

I claim that we have responsibility towards these little children in our midst. It is the easier path to throw off responsibility, but in the market of the "Commerce of Uplift" things cost.

The Child Labour Commission is now sitting. We hope something will be done for the Little toilers of China. Reform must begin somewhere. Why not commence here, and see that these children at least get half a day in schools?

Another thing has often puzzled me. Why is it that all municipal effort is directed towards the Chinese boy, and nothing done for the girl? It all amounts to this. Why does the Municipal Council recognize and assume responsibility for the well-to-do boy and nobody else? Surely the poor should come first. The rich can look after themselves whether they be foreign or Chinese.

Assuring you of my belief in the "Commerce of Uplift," and with many thanks to Mr. Bruce Lockhart for giving us the term,

I am, etc.,
Belated.

Shanghai, Apr. 11, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—A correspondent, who signs himself "Hsin Mei" in a letter printed in your issue of the 5th instant refers to the refunding of the Boxer indemnity by America for the education of Chinese students and dismisses the results achieved by the sentence—"What this has meant we all know."

Personally, I think that there is too much taken for granted in this remark as I at least cannot say what it all has meant and would therefore request "Hsin Mei" to explain himself more fully.

Enclosing my card,

I am, etc.,
Curious.

Harbin, April 10, 1924.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—The desire on the part of the Chinese community, which I take it is the cause of starting the stone rolling, to have an additional Municipal School for Chinese in the Settlement, can only be interpreted as an unsolicited compliment to the excellent manner and efficiency in which other such already existing schools have been conducted. From my point of view as a teacher of Chinese boys during the last half-a-dozen years, this seems very natural, as most of the Chinese private schools which have sprung into existence in late years cannot claim any such proficiency.

There are certain causes of this, firstly, the ridiculously low remuneration offered for teaching, and besides the erratic payment of teachers' salaries, sometimes overdue for many months, the consequence of which is the impossibility of having efficient tutors. Secondly, the political influence under which the boys try to boss by going on strike, and the general lack of discipline when, as is the case in some schools, only 15 to 20 per cent. of the students attend class. Thirdly, the selection of absolutely unsuitable books for use, often far beyond the competency of the students to understand, or compiled by some returned student who, in spite of his "M. A.," does not know English.

Surely Chinese rate-payers, but only these, are entitled to have Municipal schools for the education of their children in the Shanghai International Settlement. If they have the desire of an education for their children on par with that given to foreign boys in the Public School, by all means let them have it, but let them also pay the same fees as the parents of foreign boys do, for they are able to do it. Let them purchase the requisite grounds, erect the necessary up-to-date buildings, provide a couple of lakhs as an endowment for scholarships and then invite the Council to take over the management of the institution. In such a case no foreign rate-payer would have cause to cry about contributing towards education of Chinese boys.

When the Chinese boys have studied under real discipline, there will then be less lack of young Chinese from the student class who are fitted to be more than office boys.

I am, etc.,
H. Kliene.

Shanghai, Apr. 15, 1924.

NATIONAL ROADS IN CHINA.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—An article under the title of "Paper Roads Movement" appeared in your yesterday's issue gave us much wonder. Probably the said writer has pitiably misunderstood why the Association is and ignored what it has been doing.

Before our explanation given below, we wish to call the strictest attention of the public especially the said writer to the fact that the chief aim of the Association is not at all to build roads itself. It is, however, to encourage, persuade and assist the officials who might utilize their soldiers and the people interested in road business, to do it actually.

Therefore, to make the actual survey of routes proposed, to introduce engineers and contractors, to answer questions on road building and maintenance, to help raising capital on behalf of road-undertakers and so forth—these are altogether within the function of the Association.

Furthermore, as the interest of roads is concerned with the whole nation, so the function of the Association is enforced through out the whole territory and is never limited in one province nor in one district.

All understand that at present time it is utterly impossible to build roads actually without encountering unsurmountable obstacles because of prevailing evils and ignorance of common people of road interest. So the only important thing the Association does and is doing is to eradicate the evils while propagating the idea amongst all communities of necessities of roads building.

It is just the work of propagation that we have organized travelling lecture parties, shown to public the pictures and distributed to all concerned the booklets, pamphlets, etc. which would serve to stimulate their interest in road enterprises.

Fortunately our work is not in vain. These are moved by none but this Association that 25 motor-bus services started by our members have already operated, that roads of 30,000 li accomplished, that 21 branches established, that 33 branches organized and that roads built by soldiers in different localities covered 13 provinces. All these that have been reported in both our "Monthly" and booklets might not be said of as "absence of roads."

What is more, our president Dr. C. T. Wang did often declare that the membership fee collected during annual campaigns is not only for the purpose of carrying on the affairs of the Association, but of getting more and more members so as to impress the very word "ROAD" in the brain of every one of the people.

We should, however, thank the said writer for his kind criticism which, besides bestowing upon the Association a chance of showing more of its reality, would encourage it to more exertion in its work. But, in order that the public views towards this Association may not be misdirected, we earnestly hope that you will be good enough to allow us your valuable space for the insertion of this letter.

I am, etc.,
Wu San
General Secretary, The National Road Construction Assoc. of China.

Shanghai, Apr. 10, 1924.

MUNICIPAL COUNCILLORS AND VESTED INTERESTS.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—"Few things in history are more remarkable than the total eclipse of all political thought and total abandonment of all effort to improve political conditions in a highly educated and intelligent population such as. . ." The above is a quotation from Bryce's "Modern Democracies," and could well apply to Shanghai. Some of the articles in your paper, and letters from correspondents, almost make me writhe in agony. Can there really be a more benighted spot on the face of the earth?

I want to refer to the proposed water and telephone agreements: as nobody else has written, I suppose I must. This is as it appears to me. The Council consists wholly of representatives of the shareholding class of a small oligarchy who dominate and control everything here. On the Council there is not one single person representing the great bulk of foreign residents. The tacit understanding between this oligarchy and its creatures on the Council is that the interests of the great bulk of the populace must always be secondary to those of the shareholding oligarchy—that everything is to centre around earning dividends for shareholders.

Since 1916 the sum of electricity profits has been handed over to the Council in relief of the rates: if only the telephone and water services were municipal, these also would be providing revenue to relieve the rates. At the present time, by appealing to municipal patriotism, a democratically elected Council would obtain plenty of funds at 5 per cent. Yet now it is proposed to extend the charters of the telephone and water companies for a long term of years, with an arrangement that guarantees dividends, not of 8 per cent. and 9 per cent. but allowing for the bonus shares which the Councillors thought fully suggest, may bring the effective guaranteed dividend up to 12 per cent. or more! The only interest our Councillors have before them is the small shareholding coterie in which they live and move and have their being. No great blame can be attached to the Councillors, as they have been brought up to think along these lines. Some of them may be religious men, and attend Church on the Sabbath: but from early training they unconsciously make modifications, so that during the six days of the week their ethical principles are those of current commercial Christianity: "Always do others as others would do you, but do them first" and "Blessed are the shareholders, for they shall inherit the earth."

Such blatant narrow-mindedness is generally checked on public bodies by different points of view being represented: but here in Shanghai the representation is monotonously and unrelievedly that of the small oligarchy. The Chinese have a good illustration of narrowmindedness: a toad at the bottom of a well looking up at the wee circle of light, and thinking how small heaven must be! And that is about the size the interests of the bulk of Shanghai residents appear in the eyes of our shareholding Councillors. One would think they themselves would realize this serious defect in personnel, and that they would send Diogenes around with his lantern to find an honest man, who could be appointed on the Council to represent "the poor, and him that hath no helper:" the "top back room" types of residents, whose interests are now wholly ignored.

One more point. In your article on "The Telephone Co. and Council," you make the remark "We have quite enough loans outstanding." What would be thought of a chairman of a railway or steamer company who at the annual meeting spoke in this strain? That "we had the opportunity of taking over an excellent coalmine, which would in effect have earned 12 to 15 per cent. on the additional capital involved: but your directors thought that we should now bend our efforts to reducing capital." The shareholders would have answered, "Reducing capital be blowed: let us have the mine." The interest of the whole community in Shanghai is that if the Council can obtain funds at 5 or 6 per cent. and thereby can avoid the public being mulcted to provide dividends of an effective 12 to 15 per cent, it is clearly "good business" to increase the loans: and only marauding barons will be benefited by repaying existing loans.

I am, etc.,
Fairplay.

Shanghai, April 12, 1924.

PROHIBITION.

To the Editor of the
"North-China Daily News."

Sir,—In connexion with the recent editorial comment and correspondence on the subject of prohibition in the United States, I take the liberty of sending you a clipping which indicates that behind prohibition in that country there are forces which are not piously sentimental, which are already satisfied with the results of prohibition and which will fight to the last ditch any attempt to remove the restrictions which the Constitutional Amendment has imposed.

Mr. Warren S. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has issued the following statement:

"Prohibition has come to stay. We are not going back to the old condition of things, with their misery, want and poverty—never again.

"There are those, I know, who are labouring under the delusion that the prohibition law will be modified or abolished. Someone should wake them from their Rip Van Winkle sleep. I wish such people could go with me for 30 days as I travel over this broad land of ours, and see the homes being erected everywhere: note the accounts being opened in the savings banks; see the families out together in the recreation centres. They would see the children taken out of the sweat-shops well fed, with shoes to wear and warm clothing, going to school. They would see prosperity, happiness and sunshine existing now where formerly there was only squalor and misery. All this as a result of prohibition.

"One might just as well talk about stopping the waves from beating on the shore, or the sunlight descending from heaven, as to stop the world-wide onward march of the prohibition movement.

"There are those who may think it a far cry from the problems of organized labour to the question

...prohibition. And yet organized labour was ready to...
...part in the prohibition movement. Ten years before the churches began their notorious prohibition crusade, years before Labour officials began issuing orders about drinking, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was fighting the drink evil. A few of the organizations that has been in effect during all of the 40 years that I have been connected with railroads.

...
...
...

COMPANY MEETINGS

BATU ANAM ESTATES

Annual General Meeting

The annual meeting of the Batu Anam (Johore) Rubber Estates Ld., was held on the 10th instant at the offices of the secretaries, Messrs. J. A. Wattie & Co., Ld., at which Mr. G. Grayrigge presided, supported by Messrs. C. R. Burkill, L. E. Canning, E. S. Kadoorie, (directors) and W. S. Royston, representing the general managers. After the notice convening the meeting and the auditor's report had been read the Chairman said:—

Gentlemen, most of the speeches made at the annual meetings of our local rubber companies have eulogized the restriction measures adopted by the British rubber producing countries and after nearly 18 months experience of its benefits I can say, as a rubber investor, how thankful I am that the British had the good sense and courage to step in and save an industry that otherwise would have largely reverted to the jungle out of which it had been wrested.

The benefits of restriction are reflected in the report and accounts before you. It enabled us to improve the estate during the year and to make a little money, sufficient to permit the recommendation of a very modest 5 per cent. dividend, the first since that on 1919 working. We won't get very fat on that, gentlemen, but we have to be thankful for small mercies these days, and 5 per cent. and a good carry forward are better than the fare served you for four years past.

The price of rubber was really never very robust last year; it rose to 1/6½ London terms in January and dropped to 1/1¾ in December, averaging 1/3 on the year. As the chairman of Repah mentioned in his speech, a price of 2/- per lb. makes very little difference to the eventual consumer, but the difference between 1/3 and 2/- to the producer means pretty well everything in the way of a fair profit and provision of adequate reserves.

Early in 1922 I cherished hopes that my dream of dollar rubber was coming true but such must remain a phantasy until our with us and instead of snatching the chance of pirating a profit from our endeavours, take up their share of the burden of regulating supply to demand and help to place this great enterprise on its feet again. With the world in its present position, with the Dutch producing almost pound for pound what we restrict the marvel is that the price of rubber has not gone still lower. The Dutch must be aware that if it comes to a survival of the fittest the British countries stand just as good if not a better chance of survival than they (the Dutch) do, whereas by working together fair and reasonable profits could be assured without hurting either manufacturer or consumer. We must listen to no further platitudes about the danger of interfering with the law of supply and demand, that twaddle is out of date, though I see it is still voiced by certain Dutch anti-restrictors, stubborn men, who are blind to what restriction has already accomplished. These are the days of combination and in combination lies strength and safety. Therefore we should welcome Dutch co-operation and we have no doubt a scheme of restriction acceptable to all parties could be evolved. It only needs the will, the way can soon be made.

Last year I dwelt upon the necessity of building up a reserve and hoped we should do something in this direction as well as pay dividends. In the report before you we recommend a 5 per cent. dividend and carry forward a fair amount, but we can allocate nothing to reserve on last year's working.

The smaller crop allowed us naturally enhanced our cost of production over 1½d. per lb. but this was well offset by a sale price of over 1/3 as compared with 8¾ in 1922.

To produce our restricted crop we have had recourse to light tapping, rotational tapping and complete resting of some older areas. We are told the benefits are very apparent. Thus restriction, besides preserving the industry as a whole, is also improving the trees by curtailing the demands upon them. Batu Anam must be piling up bark reserves, which remark also applies to most properties in Malaya and will place us in a position to produce largely when, if ever, the time comes to do this.

A deal of progressive work was put in during the year by our energetic manager, Mr. Ridgewell, to whom our thanks are due. Mr. Welch visited the Estate in July last and seemed well pleased with it. As regards the well-being of the estate we may rest content that all is in order and is carefully attended to.

The accounts, gentlemen, show you that we made a net profit of Tls. 23,522.36 and that the total divisible profits to be dealt with are Tls. 54,311.73. These are all represented by liquid assets except the sum of Tls. 11,234.74 which we recommend be disposed of by writing a similar sum off the development account, all our other fixed assets being already written down to one tael each. After the payment of a 5 candareen per share dividend, the carry forward proposed viz., Tls. 22,776.99 is composed of actual cash and rubber stocks.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were formally adopted:—

That the directors' report and statement of accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923, as presented be adopted and passed; proposed by Mr. G. Grayrigge and seconded by Mr. L. E. Canning.

That the balance at credit of profit and loss account be dealt with as follows:—

	Tls.
To pay a dividend of 5 candareens per share	20,000.00
To write off development a/c.	11,234.74
To pay commission to General managers	300.00
To carry forward to a new account	22,776.99
	Tls. 54,311.73

Proposed by Mr. G. Grayrigge and seconded by Mr. C. R. Burkill.

That Mr. G. Grayrigge be and hereby is re-elected a director of the company—proposed by Mr. L. E. Canning and seconded by Mr. C. R. Burkill.

That the appointments of Messrs. C. R. Burkill and E. S. Kadoorie as directors of the company be and are hereby confirmed—proposed by Mr. C. J. L. Stewart and seconded by Mr. A. J. Welch.

That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be and are hereby elected auditors to the company for the ensuing year—proposed by Mr. C. J. L. Stewart and seconded by Mr. A. J. Welch.

There were represented 76,751 shares.

SHANGHAI MALAY RUBBER ESTATES

The Benefits of Restriction: Hopeful Outlook for Estate's Future

The annual general meeting of the Shanghai-Malay Rubber Estates, Ld., was held on Monday at the offices of the secretaries (Messrs. Beck & Swann), Mr. G. Grayrigge (chairman) presiding. The other directors present were Messrs. L. E. Canning, E. S. Kadoorie, and A. J. Welch, and altogether 25,617 shares were represented.

The notice convening the meeting, and the auditors' report, having been read,

The Chairman said: Gentlemen,—When I last had this privilege, our hopes of the future course of prices were more optimistic than subsequent events and to-day's position justified; nevertheless a glance at the report will show you that the recurn from 226,687 lb. sold in 1923 at 14.83d. is larger than the return from 339,726 sold in 1922 at 8.69d. There you have the first benefit of restriction in a nutshell. The other benefits that are not shown by figures are the improved physical condition of our main asset, the trees, through the lessened demand on them, and the large increase in our bark reserves, and in this business bark is the bank we have to rely upon. If our good neighbours, the Dutch, could but recognize these outstanding facts and join in with us in the good work of putting the rubber industry on its legs again, the future outlook would indeed be pleasant. This could be done without oppressing manufacturers or consumers, and in any case they have had a long enough innings at cheap prices and should have the good sense not to squeal when the producer asks to live and to save a little besides. The amount of rubber in a tyre, for instance, is small, and the difference caused on the cost of same between 1s. and 2s. rubber is negligible to those who can afford motor-cars, whereas the extra shilling would make all the difference imaginable to the rubber grower. But rubber still continues one of the cheapest commodities in the world and I am afraid will remain so until the Dutch cooperate with our policy of suiting supply to demand.

ESTATES DEVELOPING.

Our two estates during the year under review were carefully administered and a good deal of work of a beneficial nature has been done. Visiting agents' reports are of a satisfactory nature and complimentary to both of the estate managers. One of our directors, Mr. Welch, visited the properties last summer and his reports indicate that he was pleased with what he saw.

Our standard production is 408,961 lb. per annum, but it remains to be seen how the new assessment affects us, whether we get an increased or a decreased allowance. Pending this, we are permitted to export at the ratio of 60 per cent. of our standard production. When the call comes, if ever, for intensive production, these estates should respond readily and demonstrate the advantages they have gained from resting and light tapping.

The accounts for 1923 are more attractive than their predeceasors. The net profit for the year amounted to Tls. 23,322.27 which, added to the carry forward from the previous year, gave us Tls. 42,446.25 to deal with. Out of this we paid Tls. 40,000 by way of arrears of dividend on the cumulative and participating preference shares, which leaves us with the dividend due for the year 1923 still to overtake. We have the hard cash, but have not the necessary profit in the profit and loss account; in fact, after deducting all known liabilities we began 1924 with liquid assets amounting to Tls. 32,866.85, which is quite a satisfactory position.

Subject to your approval it is our intention to utilize the small balance in profit and loss account viz: Tls. 9,446.25 to write down certain of the assets to a nominal sum of one tael each.

We closed 1922 owing a big sum to our bankers; we closed 1923 in a comfortable financial position, but with an increase in capital of Tls. 73,800 or a total of Tls. 573,800. The new issue of shares hung fire until Mr. Kadoorie came in and took up Tls. 63,860 out of Tls. 73,800, and it is thus solely due to his courage and confidence that the company is now not only out of debt and danger, but is in funds.

There were no questions, and the following resolutions were formally carried:—

That the report and accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923, as printed and circulated to the shareholders, be passed.—Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Canning.

That Mr. L. E. Canning be re-elected a director of the company.—Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Kadoorie.

That Messrs. Lowe Bingham & Matthews be re-elected auditors of the company until next anuual meeting at a fee of Tls. 300, such fee to include the audit in the Straits.—Proposed by Mr. Welch, seconded by Mr. Y. C. Chu.

THE ANGLO-JAVA ESTATES

Reduction of the Areas Under Hemp: Excellent Results of Thinning Process

The annual meeting of the Anglo-Java Rubber Estates, Ld., was held on Monday afternoon in the offices of the general agents, Messrs. J. A. Wattie & Co., 10 Canton Road. Mr. A. J. Welch, Chairman, presided, supported by Messrs. W. W. Cox, W. R. McBain, E. S. Kadoorie (directors) and Mr. C. J. L. Stewart, representing the secretaries. There were 94,308 shares represented.

The notice convening the meeting and the auditors' report having been read by Mr. C. J. L. Stewart, the Chairman said:—

Gentlemen,—The report and accounts having been in your hands for some days, I will, with your permission, follow the usual procedure and take them as read.

The report is compiled in the usual form and gives you a fairly comprehensive survey of the company's operations during the year.

You will have noticed that on Limburg Estate the area under rubber has been increased and the area under hemp reduced by 164 acres during the year, and it is the intention of your Board to continue this process as successive areas of the hemp gardens fall due for replanting until finally hemp will disappear as one of our cultures. As already explained the land where the hemp is grown has hitherto been considered unsuitable for the growth of Hevea on account of the presence of a layer of hard ground a short distance below the surface, in some places this is only a few inches thick and in others over a foot, which prevents the tap root of the Hevea from going down to any depth. It appears that at some period in the past these areas were originally rice fields which accounts for the formation of this crust.

In 1920 the hard crust was broken through over about 90 acres of old hemp gardens which were then planted with budded stumps. These plants have come along splendidly thus proving the soil to be suitable for the growth of rubber. Test holes in other parts of the area have shown that splendid soil exists below the obstruction.

Such being the case, your directors decided gradually to replace hemp with Hevea. The reasons that prompted them to come to this decision are manifold.

INDIFFERENT RESULTS FROM HEMP.

Firstly the handling of hemp is cumbersome and troublesome necessitating as it does a great deal of power to work the machinery and a large amount of space for drying and godown accommodation, furthermore, in order to derive the full benefit from our hemp area by permitting the preparation of fibre during the wet weather, which we cannot do at present and to improve the quality of our product it would be necessary to buy a centrifugal drier, a hydraulic baling press, two or three Kilometres more of rails for the tram line and certain other machinery the cost of which is estimated at from F. 65.000 to 70,000.

Secondly, the profit for the five years 1919-1923 has averaged only F. 12,667.30 per annum without allowing anything for depreciation of the machinery, which is heavy. Over 948 acres this only represents a profit of F. 13.36 per acre per annum or assuming that the same area under rubber yields at the rate of 300 lb. per acre per annum a profit equivalent to 4½ cents per lb.

In the light of these facts your directors do not feel that the possible profit justifies the large additional expenditure necessary.

70 ACRES MORE RUBBER.

On Barek Division there are about 70 acres that are at present planted with foodstuffs, this area will be planted with budded stumps and selected seed as soon as sufficient material is available in the nurseries.

On the same division all coffee having been cut out, the coffee factory has been converted into a rubber factory so that latex can now be coagulated, made into Sheets and smoked on Barek and then sent to Limburg for final drying and packing, instead of being merely coagulated on Barek and sent to Limburg for further treatment as at present.

The production from the whole estate will now be of the same standard which was impossible before.

The dredger worked satisfactorily during the year, its daily capacity being some 175 cubic metres against a guaranteed capacity of 150 cubic metres.

By the end of the year the whole lake had been dredged to a depth of 6½ feet but work will proceed until a uniform depth of 13 feet has been attained.

The standard of tapping has been maintained at its usual high level and bark consumption is well within the prescribed limits. Pests or diseases gave practically no trouble during the year.

As regards Djarangan Estate tapping is being well and carefully done, bark consumption is kept within the standard limit and Bark renewal is steadily improving as the stoppage of wash and the benefit of the humus from the mimosa make their effects felt. The growth of the trees on Loengoer Hedjo division has very much improved since the coffee was cut out and mimosa planted. The major portion of this area will be ready for the knife by the end of this year, but it is our intention to defer opening it up so long as we can obtain with ease our restricted allowance from the older areas.

TEST OF THE THINNING PROCESS.

Thinning out is being done in accordance with the results shown by the records of yield from individual trees, and a very interesting experiment designed to test the soundness of the principles on which our selection by yield is based has just been completed over an area of 35 acres.

This area was originally planted with 4,436 trees of which the records taken during 1922 and 1923 showed 2,072 trees to be very poor yielders. These inferior trees were accordingly all removed with the astonishing result that during the three months October to December, 1923, the yield from this area was 1,742 lb. as compared with 1,255 lb. for the same period last year from practically double the number of trees under the same tapping system. The remaining trees are reported to be in splendid condition and rapidly closing up the open spaces with their crown development.

Over other areas that have been thinned out by selection the results are the same, either no noticeable reduction in crop or a very small one and that quickly made good and the yield showing a steady upward movement.

THE ACCOUNTS.

If you will turn, now, to the accounts you will see that the year's working has resulted in a profit of Guilders 667,508 to which Limburg contributed Guilders 514,466 and Djarangan Guilders 153,042.

After certain Reserves and transfers have been made the net profits amount to Guilders 439,-621 which I think may be considered very satisfactory.

There was very little capital expenditure during the year, the only considerable items being new buildings and rolling stock on Limburg and the upkeep of the immature area on Djarangan.

The accounts of the Shanghai company are quite straightforward. Your directors propose to transfer Tls. 84,838.62 from premium on shares account and to write this amount off the cost of the shares in the two Dutch companies. This will have the effect of making the cost of the shares correspond with the issued capital of the company.

If you pass the appropriations recommended by your directors the company will start the new year with a surplus of liquid assets over liabilities of Tls. 234,550 which should be sufficient to enable us to meet any contingencies that may arise.

In conclusion, Gentlemen, I would like to express on behalf of the Board our appreciation of the good work done by both the managers and their staffs to whose efforts are due the very satisfactory position in which we find ourselves to-day.

That is all I have to say.

Gentlemen, but, before formally proposing the adoption of the report and accounts, I shall be pleased to answer any questions to the best of my ability.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were formally adopted:—

That the directors' report and statement of accounts as presented be adopted and passed proposed by the chairman and seconded by Mr Wakefield Cox.

That a final dividend of 50 cents per share, making 55 cents per share for the year, be paid proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr W R McBain.

That the appointment of Mr E S Kadoorie as a director of the company be confirmed proposed by Father Saliba and seconded by Mr. G. Grayrigge.

That Mr W. W. Cox be re-elected a Director of the company proposed by Mr E. S. Kadoorie and seconded by Mr. S. M Joseph

That Messrs Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-elected auditors to the company for the ensuing year proposed by Father Saliba and seconded by Mr. G. Grayrigge.

GORDON & CO., LD.

Successful Year: Annual Meeting

The eighth annual general meeting of Gordon & Co., Ltd., was held at the offices of Messrs Lowe Bingham & Matthews on Monday Mr D W. Crawford (Chairman) presided, supported by Mr C H Ryde (director) and Mr P T. Hillman (managing director), and shareholders and proxies representing 1,841 shares.

The Chairman, proposing the adoption of the report and accounts, said:

The report and accounts have not been in your hands quite as long as usual owing to the very short time at disposal in closing down the books consequent upon the managing director's early departure on Horse leave. I will, nevertheless, assume your permission to take them as read. Owing to a printer's error the profit is given for the year ended February 28. This should, of course, be February 29, 1924. In spite of very keen competition the year has again been quite a successful one and I think we have reason for congratulations. No further shares have been issued.

Turning to the balance sheet, our liabilities are about the same as last year. Stock of land, and work in progress are Tls. 19,[illegible]5 less. Bills payable and sundry deposit do not appear as all our commitments were paid as at February 29. Sundry debtors are higher, but this is probably to be expected with the present depression of trade conditions. You may rest assured that full provision has been made for bad or doubtful debts.

Cash at the bank is Tls. 9,546.13 less. The item cash in hand is principally represented by pay ments made at the end of February and eligible to be banked and our dollar account with the bankers. The combined cash assets are greater than last year.

INVESTMENT ACCOUNT

A new item appears this year—investment account. Certain of the company's cash assets have been invested in local debentures. A better rate of interest is thereby obtained, and as the securities are all gilt edged they are easily realizable. A list of such is here for any shareholder's inspection. Their value is taken at cost.

In regard to the profit and loss account, allocations are made to this with the object of conserving the company's resources to the utmost. Amounts proposed to be written off machinery and tools, lorry, and furniture and fixtures, are the balances of purchases made during the year after deducting depreciation. Passage reserve account is the result of a suggestion made by your auditors.

If you agree to the proposed allocation your reserves will then stand as follows:—

	Tls.
General Reserve	100,000.00
Stock Reserve	25,000.00
Sundry Debtors' Reserve	10,015.46
Passage Reserve	5,000.00
Total Tls.	140,015.46

—which, I think you will agree, is a very sound position. Under present conditions a larger dividend and bonus distribution appears inadvisable, but as such is on a parity with last year, and conditions have not been nearly so favourable, your directors hope the amounts have your entire approval.

The accounts are presented in the usual form and I trust are clear to you all.

Mr. C H. Ryde seconded the motion, and it was carried unanimously.

The following resolutions were also passed:—

That the balance at credit of profit and loss account be disposed of as recommended.—Proposed by Mr C H Ryde, seconded by Mr P T Hillman.

That Messrs C H Ryde and R. J. Bowerman be re-elected directors of the company.—Proposed by Mr D W Crawford, seconded by Mr. P T Hillman.

That Messrs Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-appointed auditors of the company Proposed by Mr F. B. Gange, seconded by Mr R. J. Cowell.

The Chairman I think we may all take the opportunity of wishing Mr. Hillman a very pleasant holiday and a happy return.—(Applause).

SHANGHAI HORSE BAZAAR

Annual Meeting of Shareholders: Satisfactory Business in a Year of Great Depression

Mr. J. Ambrose presided at the 21st annual general meeting of shareholders in the Shanghai Horse Bazaar & Motor Co., Ltd., held on Tuesday Messrs. A. W. Burkill and P.W.O. Liddell were the other directors present, and the whole attendance represented 1319 shares.

The notice covening the meeting, and the auditor's report, having been read:

The Chairman said:—Gentlemen: The report and accounts having been in your hands for some days, I will, with your permission, follow the usual course and take them as read.

Your Directors trust you will find the result of the year's working under review quite satisfactory, more especially that it was one of great business depression and adversely affected a business like ours, and unfortunately the outlook shows no change for the better.

It must be obvious to you all that the present political situation in China only aggravates trade and financial conditions which is bound to affect any business dealing in what might be termed luxuries such as our business supplies, and until conditions change there is very little hope for any marked improvement.

THE ACCOUNTS.

Turning to the accounts you will notice that Directors' fees are lower by Tls 750, as we have found that at present a Board of three is quite able to carry on the work of the company in a satisfactory manner.

Bank interest in the company's overdraft shows a decrease from the previous year of Tls. 3,010.66, and we have every reason to anticipate a further decrease during the current year.

You will notice from the balance sheet that our overdraft with the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation on December 31, last was Tls. 282,548.56, as against Tls. 334,470.36 at the end of 1922 or a reduction during the of Tls. 50,030.56.

To day the Bank overdraft has been further reduced to Tls 269,-650.55.

General reserve is unchanged at Tls 60,000.00 but your directors propose allocating to it out of the profits of 1923 a further sum of Tls 15,000.00 thereby bringing this reserve to Tls 75,-000.00. Your directors consider it in the best interests of the company to add to general reserve as it is not earmarked for any specific purpose, but may be used as decided by the Board.

Bad debts at the end our financial year stood at Tls. 15,900.-41 and you will later be asked to increase this to Tls. 20,000.00 by allocating to it the sum of Tls. 4,099.59 out of the profits of 1923.

Stock reserve stands as Tls. 125,000.00 which your directors consider ample at present as it represents, roughly, 25 per cent. of our total stocks.

Buildings reserve which at December 31, 1923, stood at Tls. 10,-256.71 has disappeared from this year's accounts, it having been used to meet the cost of additions during the year.

Sundry creditors, which included bills payable of Tls. 63,-612.53, amounted on December 21, last to Tls. 81,695.47, all of which have since been paid.

Suspense Account Tls. 4,881.61 consists of various items which it was impossible to settle by the end of the year, but most of these accounts have since been paid.

NETT PROFITS.

Profits and loss account shows a nett profit for the year of Tls. 63,096.44, to which must be added the balance of Tls. 18,546.04 brought forward from the previous year making a total of Tls. 81,552.48 at credit of this account as on December 31 last.

As you will have seen from the report before you your directors will recommend that this be disposed of in the manner therein proposed.

Turning to the assets you will see that your land which stands in the books at Tls. 118,141.17 is assessed at Tls. 246,899.00 or a difference in your favour of Tls. 128,757.83.

Buildings stand at Tls. 141,-688.34. Certain additions were made during the year principally in the erection of a new forge and godown over same, and depreciation on the usual lines has been provided for.

Furniture and fittings now stand at Tls. 1,610.58 after the usual depreciation has been provided for, but your Directors propose reducing this item to Tls. 500 by allocating to this account Tls. 1,110.58 out of the profits of the past year. It may not be out of place to remark that since 1918 reductions on this account have amounted to Tls. 10,560.13 exclusive of the usual depreciation.

Machinery and plant now stands at Tls. 8,310.15 and you will be asked to reduce this to Tls. 3,000 by the allocation of Tls. 5,310.15 out of the profits of 1923. Since 1920 there has been written off this account the sum of Tls. 20,660.40.

Electrical fittings stand at Tls. 628.05 and you will be requested to reduce this item to the nominal figure of Tls. 100 at which it stood at the commencement of 1923.

Telephone shares of which we hold 20 shares show a loss at December 21 last of Tls. 10 the difference between book and market value at that date.

General stocks has been taken item by item by Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews and all stocks have been certified by the general manager, the total of these for the last three years being:—

	Tls.
1921	486,110.40
1922	569,275.58
1923	473,960.30

and your directors anticipate these stocks will be still further reduced during the current year.

Sundry Debtors. Out of the amount of Tls. 157,003.13 general sundry debtors amount to Tls. 154,587.30, the difference of Tls. 2,415.83 representing various deposits of which Tls. 1,020 have since been paid The above may seem to you very large, but out of this amount December accounts amount to Tls. 75,628.48. Of these sundry debtors due at December 31, last Tls. 80,481.14 has been collected which your directors consider highly satisfactory considering the fact that it is often necessary to sell cars on terms.

I do not think I have anything more to say in connexion with the accounts for 1923, but I shall be glad to do my best to answer any question shareholders may wish to ask in connexion with same.

The following resolutions were formally carried:—

Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Liddell: That the report and accounts as presented be accepted and passed.

Proposed by Mr. G. H. Purcell, seconded by Mr. R. Paterson: That Mr. A. W Burkill be re-elected a director of the company.

Proposed by Mr. R. I. Fearon, seconded by Mr. G. H. Purcell: That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-elected auditors for the coming year.

This was all the business of the meeting, which closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman, proposed by Mr. Fearon.

BUTE PLANTATIONS LIMITED

Improved Position of the Company: Now Entirely Free of Debt

The annual general meeting of the Bute Plantations (1913) was held on Tuesday at the offices of the general managers, 2 Canton Road. Mr. A. W. Burkill presiding over an attendance representing 68,171 shares.

The notice convening the meeting having been read the Chairman said:

Gentlemen,—The report and accounts having been in your hands for some time I will, with your permission, take them as read.

When I addressed you last year, I had occasion to refer to the unsatisfactory financial spoition of the company. At that time we were burdened with a debt of Tls. 30,500 loans outstanding and an amount of Tls. 13,076.14 standing at debit of profit and loss account. In other words, the company, at the beginning of the year, was faced with a deficit of approximately Tls. 43,500 which, in the ordinary course of events, would have taken some considerable time to wipe out. I am glad to say that the position at the close of the company's financial year had very much improved, our loan account having been reduced by Tls. 20,500 and the profit on the year's working more than covering the losses incured during the past three years. This satisfactory result is due to the better price realized from the sale of our crop and also to the sale of a portion of our reserve jungle land. I might say that the balance of the proceeds from the sale of the land was received during the early part of this year, thus enabling us to pay off the balance of the loan account.

The company is now entirely free of debt and, at present prices, is producing its rubber at a profit but hardly sufficient to warrant any immediate expectation of a return to shareholders. Should, however, there be any improvement in the price of rubber, the directors will, at the first opportunity, give every consideration to the payment of a dividend.

The planted area of the company remains the same as last year, viz: 870 acres. During the year 860 acres of reserve land were sold and the proceeds from the sale of this land, as you will note from the report, have been credited to the estate account which now stands in our books at Tls 119,079.07 The company still has a sufficiently large area of reserve land for any future development that is likely to be undertaken.

Several changes have been made in the Estate staff. Mr. Hawes left the Estate at the end of August and was succeeded by Mr. P. F. Debieux who resigned the management last month. We have now engaged the services of Mr. Ch. O. Strettell, late of the Shanghai-Klebang Estate, who comes to us well recommended. Mr. Strettell proceeds to the estate early in May and in the meantime the property is being administered by Mr. Morgan of the Dominion Estate.

PROGRESS ON THE ESTATE

Notwithstanding the changes in management, the estate has not been allowed to retrogress, in fact excellent progress has been made during the year. Lallang which made its appearance last year has been completely eradicated and the whole estate is in a clean condition. The health of the force is very much improved and labour is adequate for present requirements. The position as regards diseases is normal and quite a lot of useful work in clearing Division "B" of surface timber was accomplished. The estate has been regularly visited by Major Stevens whose reports confirm the steady improvement that has taken place throughout the year.

The following resolutions were carried:—

That the report and accounts for the year ended December 31, 1923, together with the recommendation as to appropriation of balance at credit of profit and loss account as presented, be accepted. Proposed by the Chairmen, seconded by Mr. E. T. Byrne

That Mr E. T. Byrne be re-elected a director of the company.—Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. A K Craddock.

That Messrs. Thomson & Co be re-elected Auditors to the Company. Proposed by Mr. W. A. Ogden, seconded by Mr A K Craddock.

DOMINION RUBBER COMPANY

Reduction in Producing Cost and Higher Prices for Rubber

The annual general meeting of the Dominion Rubber Co., Ld., was held at the offices of A. R Burkill & sons on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. E. T. Byrne (Chairman) presided, and was supported by Messrs. G. Grayrigge and A. W. Burkill (Directors), and 20,-604 shares were represented.

Gentlemen,—The report and accounts having been in your hands for some time I will, with your permission, follow the usual course and take them as read.

Since the last report, 1,338 shares have been issued, bringing the subscribed capital up to Tls. 166,670. These shares represent applications received from shareholders living abroad and from shareholders wishing to round off their holdings. With regard to the latter shares, these were issued at market rates and the premium on the issue of these shares amounting to Tls. 172.70 has been written off property account.

A comparison of the results of the past year's working with those of the previous year will show you that the better prospects forecasted in my speech last year have been realized. The f.o.b. cost of production, including Shanghai charges, shows a reduction of 1.41d. and the price received from the rubber is better by 5.63d. per lb. Our output exceeded the previous year's crop by 53,396 lb. This increase, as you will note from the report, is due to the fact that during 1922 Dominion Estate was only tapped for six months of that year. The profit for the year amounted to Tls. 35,792.36 from which must be deducted the loss of Tls. 13,812.53 brought forward from last year's accounts, leaving a balance of Tls. 21,979.83 to be dealt with. With regard to the appropriation of this amount, the directors consider that the result of the year's working justifies the payment of a small dividend and I will shortly propose that a dividend of Tls. 0.10 per share be paid, and that the sum of Tls. 1,537.47 be written off certain assets: Tls. 1,000, bonus to estate managers be paid and that the balance of Tls. 2,775.36 be carried forward to next year's accounts.

SATISFACTORY WORKING

The working of both estates throughout the year was uniformly satisfactory. After completing the first round of thinning out in 1922 on Dominion Estate, no further work of this nature was undertaken during the year under review. The trees selected for the second round have improved to such an extent that they will only be taken out if the yield testing demonstrates they merit it. Diseases and white ants gave a certain amount of trouble but the preventive treatment accorded has been entirely successful. A sum of $3,006 has been spent in timber clearing, 268 acres being treated and excellent work is reported to have been done. The estate is in perfect order from a weeding point of view and weeding costs show considerable reduction over the previous year. In his report on Dominion, Major Stevens, our visiting agent, states: "We finish the year with the property in a vastly improved condition from a maintenance point of view, the bark position

(Continued on Page 102.)

COMMERCE AND FINANCE

Money and Exchange

OFFICIAL RATES.

Shanghai, Apr. 17.

Bank's Demand Selling Rate for 61 at 3/2⅜=Tls. 6.25 at 7160=$8.73
Bank's Demand Selling Rate for G.$100 at 69¾=Tls. 143.37 at 7160=$200.24
Mex. Dollars, market rate	7185
Native Interest	08
Copper Cash	264,000
Bar Silver	33¼
Bank rate of Discount	4%
Paris on London	Frs. 70.05
New York on London	G.$4.35 1/16

BANK'S OPENING SELLING RATES.

	Per Tael
LONDON—
Telegraphic Transfer	3/2¼
Demand	3/2⅜
NEW YORK—
Telegraphic Transfer	69½
Demand	69¾
PARIS—
Demand	1113
INDIA—
Demand	226¾
HONGKONG—
Demand	73¾
JAPAN—
Demand	59½
BATAVIA—
Demand	192
SINGAPORE—
Demand	73½

BANK'S OPENING BUYING RATES.

LONDON—
Demand	3/3
4 m/s. Credits	3/4¼
4 m/s. Docs.	3/4⅜
6 m/s. credits	3/4⅜
6 m/s. Docs.	3/5¼
NEW YORK—
Demand	70¾
4 m/s. Credits	73
4 m/s. Docs.	73½
PARIS—
4 m/s. Docs.	1190
Closing business done at
London T.T.	3/2⅝
New York T.T.	70

CUSTOMS EXCHANGE RATES FOR APRIL

Hk. Tls. 5.49 at 3/3¼	£1
,, 1 at 1631½	Frs. 18.17
,, 1.28 at 69⅞	Gold $1
,, 1 at 62⅜	Yen 1.79
,, 1 at 233½	Rupees 2.60
,, 1 at 1.50	Mex. $1.50
,, 1 at 16.35	It. Lire 18.21
Marks and Roubles	no quotation

Sino-Italian Bank Quotations

Selling Rates, Apr. 17.

It. Lire 15.55	Tl. 1
Swiss Frs. 3.93	Tl. 1
It. Lire 9.10	Y. 1

Week's Exchange Notes

Apr. 18.

At the close of business on the 16th instant the stock of silver in Shanghai was Tls. 32,507,000 and $44,970,000.

These figures include Tls. 8,060,000 and $28,140,000 in Chinese banks in which there were 2,066 bars.

BAR SILVER.

Arrivals:—
Nil.
Shipments:—
5 bars to Hongkong.

SYCEE.

Arrivals:—
Nil.
Shipments:—
Tls. 150,000 to Foochow.

DOLLARS.

Arrivals:—
$400,000 from River Ports.
160,000 ,, Soochow.
130,000 ,, Chinkiang.
$690,000

Shipments:—
$300,000 to Amoy.
180,000 ,, Tungchow.
100,000 ,, Hankow.
50,000 ,, Hangchow.
$630,000

SILVER.

The price came yesterday at 33½d. ready and forward against 33d. ready and forward at the date of our last report.

India has bought and China both bought and sold. During the week the market has been quiet and steady.

EXCHANGE.

The official rate for T.T. has remained unchanged for a fortnight at 3/2½. The market has been quiet and steady during the period under review. There are however sellers for any delivery up to December at 3/2⅝d. and at times the forward quotation has been at a premium over near delivery. Very few export bills have been offering; they would be placed generally at 3/3⅜d. and G.$71¾ near and forward.

LONDON BULLION

Samuel Montagu & Co.'s Report

Writing on March 5 Messrs. Samuel Montagu & Co. say:—

The Bank of England gold reserve against its note issue on February 27, amounted to £126,272,360, as compared with £126,270,560 on the previous Wednesday.

A good proportion of the substantial amount of gold on offer this week has been taken for India.

Gold valued at $10,080,000 has arrived in New York from London.

The "Indian Labour Gazette" for January, 1924, thus deals with gold and prices:—

"Since pre-war days there has been a fall in the value of gold of between 40 and 45 per cent. The calculations of the Labour Office show that the fall at the end of December, 1923, as compared with the pre-war month July, 1914, is 44.6 per cent. The Federal Reserve Board of America estimates the fall at 40 per cent. This is due to the discarding of the metal for currency in almost all countries. The price of gold has, in other words, not advanced with the general level of prices. Had it done so the price would have been Rs. 24/10/0 multiplied by 188 and divided by 100 (188 being the index number of wholesale prices in Bombay on December 31, 1923 and Rs. 24/10/0 the price of gold in July, 1914), i.e. Rs. 46/4/9 instead of which the market rate on January 11 "was Rs. 25/12/0, i.e. a fall of nearly 44.4 per cent. below its pre-war value. The price of gold for Bombay has been calculated because the real value of gold is very nearly the same throughout the world. The result does not differ very greatly from that arrived at by calculation from the American index number."

SILVER.

Again the silver market has been quiet and buyers and sellers disinclined to operate. Indian dealers have refrained from doing much business in this market. Sales have been made by China and the Continent, and, support coming from somewhat reluctant bear covering, prices have eased to some extent. The tone just now is inclined to be flat, but offerings of silver are so moderate that a better tendency would soon show itself if serious inquiry set in from India or China.

The "Times" correspondent telegraphs from Berlin under date of the 4th instant as follows:—"It has been decided that silver coinage up to the amount of five marks per head of the population shall be issued to augment the currency. If the whole amount is issued it would represent an additional 300,000,000 gold marks. The report that the Reichsbank has been buying silver in the open market is denied. The bank is stated to possess sufficient silver for the purpose." Apart from the silver held by the Reichsbank under the heading of "other assets" (which has been stated to be the source from which the silver for coinage is to be provided), there must be a very substantial holding of silver in the Metallic Reserve. On February 23, last the total shown under the latter heading was Mks. 867,000,000, of which gold was returned as Mks. 465,000,000, leaving Mks. 402,000,000 or say £19,700,000 composed of silver or other metals.

SHANGHAI MARKET REPORT

An Uninteresting Week in Imports and Exports: No Outstanding Feature

Apr. 18.

Nothing of great interest can be recorded about the markets this week. Imports appear to be as dull as exports, and if there is any outstanding feature in the week's business it can only be described as a slight improvement in the piece goods demand.

PIECE GOODS.

Very low rates of interest are now ruling with native banks, these having dropped to as low as Tls. 0.15, and this has apparently given Chinese piece goods dealers an incentive to operate. The result is that a certain amount of orders have been forthcoming during the past week, although the scale on which business is taking place is not large. Hankow is a much better market than for some time past, while Tientsin and Ningpo are taking an interest in Fancies, Greys and Whites. The trend of prices is towards firmness.

There is a suggestion that stocks of Spring Fancies may have to be carried over, owing to the disappointing demand which has recently been experienced. It is difficult to arrive at a correct estimation of the position in this respect, and too much should not be made of the view quoted.

As far as the auctions are concerned there is little change to record from a week ago. The principal feature of the sales has been the demand for Whites, while as regards Blacks little interest has been shown, speculative buying having been largely absent. There is the usual search for cheap cargo on the part of this element, but it is not forthcoming.

COTTON AND YARN.

China Cotton—China cotton has been firm during the week, and the sentiment is bullish. Mills, however, have only made small purchases, and only supplies for immediate requirements have been made. On the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange the following prices are quoted:—April 47; May 46.45; June 45.90; July 45.35; August 44.10; September 41.55. Spot quotations are as follows:—Tungchow 48.50; Shanghai 45.50; Shensi 46.50/47.50; Hankow 45/45.50; Nanzu 45; Kashing 45.50; Hokushi 45.50.

Yarn.—The market for yarn remains steady. The mills are not securing any further business worth mentioning, but yarn already in dealers' hands is being disposed of at stronger rates. The sentiment of the market is reported as bullish. On the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange the quotations given are as follows:—April 178.50; May 176.50; June 174.50; July 173.20; August 171.30; September 169.50.

Messrs. J. Spunt & Co. report:

China Cotton.—While our market did not prove to be as active as was expected by the trade, prices ruled steady and fluctuations moved within a narrow range. At the close, however, a slight weakness became noticeable due principally to declines, apparently of a temporary nature, evolving in the yarn markets. As to the future trend of the local raw cotton market there appears, at the moment, nothing on its horizon to encourage any bearish sentiment, notwithstanding the comparatively poor demand on the part of consumers in general for the staple and notwithstanding the decline of about 80 points in Mid Americans and about Rs. 9 per kandy in Indians on what was last reported.

The effect of the latter is offset by the unfavourable exchange rates for importations of the foreign fibre and the mills in China can have recourse only to the domestic growth which naturally will affect the rates if not to a higher basis then to a steady to firm tendency until such time when the new crop features become in so far visible as to induce a more definite outlook for the future. Tone of the market, steady.

SILK.

The silk market is dead, and no demand is noted from any quarter.

Local prices show a tendency to go lower.

PRODUCE.

The produce market reflects the present world trade depression, and with uninterested Home markets no business worth mentioning is taking place. Local stocks are in short supply.

YOKOHAMA SPECIE BANK

Half-Year's Profit

The report of the directors of the Yokohama Specie Bank for the half year ending December 31 last has now been issued, the balance sheet being as follows:—

	Y.	Y.
Profit for the past half year		11,646,000
Less:
Contribution to Yokohama re-construction	1,000,000
Reserve for doubtful debts in consequence of earthquake	2,034,000
Depreciation of properties in Yokohama and Tokio	1,100,000	4,134,000
Net Profit		7,512,000

The Directors propose that Y.1,500,000 be added to the reserve fund, and recommend a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, which will absorb Y.6,000,000.

The balance, Y.5,120,364, will be carried forward to the credit of next account.

LANCASHIRE COTTON MILLS

Short Time Continued

London, Apr. 13.

The Federation of Master Cottonspinners of Manchester have decided to continue short time in the American cotton section until the end of September, instead of reverting to full time in May, as had previously been arranged. The scheme affects two-thirds of the whole trade.—Reuter.

TEBONG RUBBER ESTATE

Dividend of 5 Candareens

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Tebong Rubber Estate, Ld. held on Tuesday it was decided to recommend to shareholders at the forthcoming annual general meeting that a dividend of 5 candareens per share be paid.

FRANCE'S INCREASE IN REVENUE

Paris, Apr. 14.

The revenue returns for March totalled Frs. 2,110,000,000, making the total returns for the first three months of the year Frs. 5,861,000,000 as compared with Frs. 4,656,000,000 for the same period last year. All returns exceed the estimates by about 40 per cent.

As yet the new Finance Bill has not noticeably affected the revenue.—Reuter.

Japan's March Trade Returns

Tokio, Apr. 8.

Japan's foreign trade returns for March show a total for imports of Y.305,536,000 and for exports of Y.120,075,000.

Since the beginning of the year imports have totalled Y.813,860,000, and exports Y.336,274,000. The country's unfavourable balance of trade for the first three months of 1923 is thus Y.477,686,000.

Compared with March of last year imports have increased by Y.107,491,000, while exports have fallen off by Y.11,815,000.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Japan's Railway Revenue

Tokio, Apr. 8.

Railway revenue during the year 1923 amounted to Y.428,688,677. Of this sum passenger receipts accounted for Y.253,557,831, the balance, Y.175,130,846, being freight earnings.

Compared with the returns for 1922, passenger receipts show an increase of Y.17,510,000, but the freight receipts have fallen off to the amount of about Y.2,000,000, the decrease being attributed to the difficulties arising from the disaster of last September.

Still both totals for the year under review have exceeded their estimates by Y.5,000,000 and Y.4,000,000 respectively.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

OIL DEMAND AND OUTPUT

Industry Improving

The "Financial Review" (New York) says in its issue of March 8:—

Indicating that the corner has at last been turned in the oil industry, the Geological Survey reports that in January, for the first time since 1922, "apparent consumption" exceeded new production. While "apparent consumption" is actually refinery takings, and although refined stocks will doubtless continue to increase until May or June, nevertheless, the reversal in overproduction shows that conditions are at last improving.

Output is now more or less stabilized close to 1,900,000 bbls. a day. This rate, however, will certainly be increased shortly, when the cold weather is over and results of heavier scale of new drilling are felt. In February, there were 176 more completions than in January, and the initial productivity was 104,786 bbls. higher, at 200,987. At the end of the month, there were 50 more drilling operations in progress, or 4,392. Any talk of a "famine" in crude oil supplies this year is therefore clearly unsound.

The political angle of the oil industry still commands the centre of interest. It is understood that Senator La Follette is making progress in framing a drastic measure to "regulate" the industry. Although but little information has been given out, it is said that export of petroleum and products is to be prohibited, presumably in answer to those alarmists who continually preach an impending famine in oil and exhaustion of our natural resources. Price regulation may also be an important feature of the La Follette bill.

The continuous vociferation of the oil trade press, even before any harm has been felt, conclusively indicates the degree of apprehension existing within the industry.

The refined oil market has been hard hit by unreasonable weather, and wholesale prices have broken badly in many quarters. This reverse, however, is nowhere apparent in the retail gasoline price lists, where the calendar is the dominant influence. Now that the heavy winter demand for kerosene is ended, however, it is strikingly noticeable that these prices are beginning to recede.

German chemists have prepared a synthetic substitute for gasoline, produced from coal, and which is said to possess points of superiority over other fuels. The utilization of alcohol with gasoline by the U. S. Navy, however, is a more significant development.

Increasing activity in oil company financing indicates the extent to which working capital has been "frozen" in slowly moving oil inventories. While huge "quotational" profits are being shown, the actual cash gains are not realizable until the goods have actually been sold at the higher prices.

POSITION VACANT

SALESMAN, Drapery and/or Outfitting, wanted. References as to ability and character required. Apply to General Manager, Hall & Holtz, Ld.

ARE YOU ILL?

Are you ill with any disease due to impure blood such as Eczema, Scrofula, Scurvy, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Boils, Sores, Eruptions, Piles, Glandular Swellings, Blood Poison, Rheumatism, &c.? If so, don't delay, start taking Clarke's Blood Mixture to-day and the experience of thousands who have it has permanently cured will soon be yours. It cures by reason of its great blood purifying properties. Over 50 years success. Pleasant to take. Of all Chemists, &c.

Clarke's Blood Mixture

CURES ALL SKIN AND BLOOD DISEASES.

COMPANIES NOTICES, MEETINGS, ETC.

The Chartered Bank of I. A. & C.—At the approaching annual general meeting of shareholders the Directors will recommend that a dividend be declared for the past half-year at the rate of 14 per cent. annum and a bonus of 6s. 3d. per share free of income tax (equal to 20½% per annum).

The Semambu Rubber Estates, Ltd.—The 11th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, April 24, 1924, at 11.30 a.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 16 to 24, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Hall & Holtz, Ltd.—The 32nd Ordinary General Meeting will be held at No. 14 Nanking Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, May 1, 1924, at 11 a.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 24 to May 1, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Tebong Rubber Estate, Ltd.—The 4th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Thursday, May 1, 1924, at 11.45 a.m.

A dividend of 5 candareens per share will be recommended.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 24 to May 1, 1924, both days inclusive.

The Senawang Rubber Estates Co. (1921), Ltd.—The 4th Annual General Meeting will be held at No. 10 Canton Road, Shanghai, on Tuesday, April 29, 1924, at 11.45 a.m.

The Transfer Books will be closed from April 23 to 29, 1924, both days inclusive.

Share Report for Week Ending April 18, 1924.

No. 24/15

J. P. BISSET & CO.

Telegraphic Address: "BISSET SHANGHAI"
Code in use: A1 Cable
A.B.C. 6th Edition and 5th Edition
B. Broomhall's Imperial Commercial Code
Bentley's Complete Phrase Code.
Telephone Cent. 171 & 171.

Members of Shanghai Stock Exchange.
Lloyd's Licensed Insurance Agents.
Hongkong & Shanghai Bank Building.
12 The Bund.
Post Office Box No. 211, Shanghai.

Business on the Local Stock Market has continued very dull during the past week and beyond an occasional enquiry for Debentures and Land Investment Shares the market is lifeless.

Exchange remains unchanged, but Bill conditions in their Market also and the following are the latest rates at the time of writing:—

Chinese Govt. 5% Reorg. Gold Loan 1913, H.I.	$ 71. 0. 0 (Middle Price)
" " " " P.I.	67. 0. 0 (Buyers) ex B.R.I.S.
Chinese Engineering & Mining Co., "B"	3. 2 1/2 (Middle Price)
Gula Kalumpong Rubber Estates, Ltd. Fully Pd. ..	1. 5. 4½ "
" " 10/- Pd. ..	0. 13. 8 (Buyers)
Shanghai Electric Cons. Co., "B"	2. 14. 7½ (Middle Price)
Shell Transport & Trading Co., "B"	4. 10. 0 (Buyers)
Shanghai Electric Tramways, Ltd	0. 1 1/2 (Middle Price)
Yangtsze Insurance Ass'n	0 15. 7/2 "

Sterling Quotation.—The opening T.T. Rate on London to-day is 3/2½.

Shanghai, April 17, 1924.

Following is the official business recorded on the Shanghai Stock Exchange:—

APRIL	12th Cash	12th June	14th Cash	14th June	15th Cash	15th June	16th Cash	16th June	17th Cash	17th June	18th Cash	18th June
SHARES
Anglo Dutch Plant. Ltd. .. Tls.	2	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Semambu Rubber Est., Ltd. .. "	..	..	..	..	0.85	..	..	..	..	..
Tanah Merah Rub. Est., Ltd. "	..	..	..	..	0.50	..	..	..	0.50	..
MISCELLANEOUS STOCKS
Hall & Holtz Ld. .. .. $	..	..	..	..	6	..	..	..	..	..
Langkats (single) .. .. Tls.	..	..	..	..	8½	..	..	..	..	..
S'hai Exploration & D. Co., Ld. "	..	..	..	..	10½	11	..	..	..	..
Langkats (combined) .. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	25½	..	..	..
S'hai Waterworks Co., Ld. .. "	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	150	..
COTTONS
DEBENTURES
S. M. C. 1922, 7% Debs. .. Tls.	105	..	105	..	..	..	105	..	105	..
" 1923, 8% " " "	..	..	99	..	..	..	..	..	99	..
" 1921, 8% " " "	..	..	110	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
" 1911, 6% " " "	..	..	..	..	99	..	..	..	..	..
" 1907, 6% " " "	..	..	..	..	99	..	..	..	..	..
" 1916, 6% " " "	..	..	..	..	99	..	..	..	..	..

BANK HOLIDAY (GOOD FRIDAY)

FORWARD SETTLEMENTS FOR 1924.

CLOSING QUOTATIONS, APRIL 17, 1924.

STOCK	Last business done.		Buyers	Sellers	No. of Shares	Authorized Value	Reserve, etc:	Financ. year ended	Last Dividend etc:	Paid or Due
BANKS.
London	£	1424
Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Cor.	$	1160	1165	1180	61) 400,000	H $125	(a H $8,379,314 (c H $64,494,394	Dec.	Final $3 & Bonus $2 (mkg. $3 1923) less I/T	25-2-24
Chartered Bank of I., A. & C. ..London	£	19 3/16			600,000	£5	(a £222,201 (c £3,800,000	Dec.	Final 7s. & Bonus 6s. 3d. (mkg. £1 0s. 3d.) free of I/T, 1922	5-4-24
INSURANCE.
Union In. Society of Canton, Ld.	H $	240			55) 200,000	A $4	(ae $437,380 (b $80,500 (c $3,571,004	Dec.	Final 16s. (mkg. 40s.) ex 1921 Work. a/c., Interim 24s. & Bonus to Contributors, 20% ex 1922 Work a/c.	20-3-24
North China Insurance Co., Ld.	T	138			10,000	£5	(ae T610,0[illegible] (c T1,[illegible]	Dec.	Final 15s. (mkg. 30s.) ex 1921 Work a/c. and Interim 15s. ex 1922 Works. a/c.	30-3-24
Yangtsze Insurance Association, Ld. ..	$	27	28½		21) 250,000	$10	(ae $1,921,500 (ae $2,[illegible] (c $1,[illegible]	Dec.	$2 (or T1.45) ex 1922 Work. a/c. payable in Taels at Exchg. 73	30-3-24
Far Eastern Insurance Co., Ld.	T	22			1) 50,000	T20	(ae T[illegible] (ae T2,[illegible] (c T[illegible]	Dec.	T1.20 ex 1922 Work. a/c.	30-3-24
Canton Insurance Office, Ld.	H $	730			10,000	f H $100	(ae H $2,172,[illegible] (c H $[illegible]	Dec.	Final H $22 (mkg. H $10) ex 1921 Work. a/c. and Interim H $18 ex 1922 Work. a/c. ..	11-3-24
Hongkong Fire Insurance Co., Ld. ..	H $	550	525		8,000	g H $50	(ae H $[illegible] (c H $1,[illegible]	Dec.	H $35 ex 1922 Working a/c.	24-3-24
China Fire Insurance Co., Ld.	H $	145			20,000	h H $20	(ae H $1,[illegible] (c H $[illegible]	Dec.	H $7 and Bonus H $3 ex 1921 Work. a/c. ..	25-3-24
Assurance Franco-Asiatique	F	500			14,000	F500	(a T491,[illegible] (c F3,781,[illegible]	Dec.	None, Floated 1918	....
SHIPPING.
Indo China S.N. Co., Ld. .. (Ordinary pref.	H $	38	38½		2) 120,000	£5	(a £2,137	Dec.	Pref. 6s. ex Exchg. - $2/1 London Warrants less I/T a/c., 1922. Def. Ord. Nil	15-3-23
Def. ord.	H $	110			2) 120,000	£5	(c £2,103,182
Shell Transport & Trading Co., Ld. ("B" £1 ordinary)	"B"			£4-10-0	56) 30,000,000	£1
(7% cum. pref.	£				24) 250,000	£10	(a£ £2,029,058	Dec.	Interim 2s., free of I/T, Coupon 42	5-1-24
(7% cum. 2nd pref.	£				57) 10,000,000	£1	(c £5,000,000
S'hai Tug & Lighter Co., Ld. 7% ord.	T	85	87		20,000	T25	(a T[illegible]	Dec.	Final Ord. T1.50 (mkg. T7., 1923)	11-3-24
(5% pref.	T	514	53½		10,000	T50	(c T410,000		Final Pref. T1.75 (mkg. T3.50, 1923	11-3-24
DOCKS AND WHARVES.
Shanghai Dock & Engineering Co., Ld. ..	T	95		95	47) 55,700	T75	(a T102,535 (c T1,[illegible]	Apr.	T7.50, 1922-23	27-7-23
Hongkong & W'poo Dock Co., Ld.	H $	155			‡ 60,000	H $50	(a H $[illegible] (c H $1,081,[illegible]	Dec.	Final H $5 (mkg. H $9, 1923)	20-3-24
New Engr. and Shipbuil Haz Works, Ld. (ord.	T	54	54		42) 500,000	T5	(a T59,[illegible]	Dec.	Ord. T0.25, 1923	10-2-24
8% pref.	T	4.95	5		65) 500,000	T5	(b T300,000 (c T1,[illegible]		Pref. T0.40 1923..	10-2-24
Shanghai & H'kow Wharf Co., Ld.	T	192½	190	192	‡31) 40,000	T100	(a H $[illegible] (b T [illegible] (c T1,[illegible]	Dec.	Final T10 (mkg. T13, 1923)	4-3-24
H'kong & K'loon W. & G. Co., Ld. ..	H $	168		167	80,000	H $50	(a H $290,819 (b H $300,000 (c H $59,240	Dec.	H. $6 & Bonus H. $3, 1923	20-2-24
MINING.
Oriental Consolidated Min. Co., Ld. ..	£	12/-			24) 500,000	G. $10	——	June	G $0.50, 1920-21	26-7-23
Chinese Eng. & Mining Co., Ld. (Bearer).	T	20½	20½		‡164) 2,000,000	£1	(a 210,537	June	Final 35% (Coupon No. 23) free of I/T,
London	£		£3:3:6	£3:11:3			(c £252,000		1922-1923	11-12-23
Raub Australian Gold Min. Co., Ld. ..	H $	5			200,000	£1	(a £23,613 (c £1,872	Mar.	1s. 2d., 1909-10	21-5-10
LANDS AND HOTELS.
Shanghai Land Investment Co., Ld. ..	T	118	118½	120	‡) 78,000	T50	(a T34,110 (b T275,000 (c H $2,220,317	Dec.	Final T3 & Bonus T2 (mkg. T8. 1923)	21-3-24
H'kong Land Invest. & Agcy. Co., Ld. ..	H $	117		117	240,000	H $25	(a H $157,886 (b H $250,000 (c H $6,000,000	Dec.	Final H $1.50 & Bonus $2 on 200,000 shares (mkg. H $5, 1923) H $2.50 on 40,000 new shs.	28-1-24
Humphreys Est. & Finance Co., Ld. ..	H $	24			150,000	H $10	(a H $158,299 (b H $50,000 (c H $121,488	Dec	H $0.30 and Bonus H $0.30, 1923	11-2-24
Weihaiwei L. & B. Co., Ld.	T	6			3,674	T20	(a T2,940 (c T7,000	Dec.	T1.20, 1923	13-2-24
Anglo-French Land Invest. Co., Ld. ..	T	115½	119		‡23) 18,000	T100	(a T9,269 (b T20,000 (c T375,000	Feb.	Final T4.50 (mkg. T6, 1923-24)	3-4-24
Hongkong & Shanghai Hotels, Ld. ..	H $	20 old 13 new			33) 500,000	H $10	(a H $85,238 (c H $5,203,767	Dec.	Final H $0.75 & Bonus H $0.50 on 375,000 shares (mkg. H $2 (old)..	22-3-24
Carlton, Ld.	T	53			14) 10,000	T50		Mar.	Floated April 1, 1922..
Asia Realty Co., Inc...	G $	100			‡18) 10,000	G $100		Dec.	Incorporated under the laws of Delaware 1922, 7%	4-1-23
Haven Trust Co., Inc. .. .. .. (ord.	G $	10	12½		100,000	G $10	(1
pref	G $	10	10			G $10			Ord. Pref. 1st gr. 1923, 12%	4-1-23
PLANTATIONS.
Alma Estates, Ld.	T	5¾		5½	70,000	£1 at T9	a T28,940	Sept.	T0.50, 1922-23	19-12-23
New Amherst Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	0.95						Oct.
Anglo-Dutch (Java) Plantations, Ld. ..	T	2		2	‡62) 500,000	T1
Anglo-Java Estates, Ld.	T	5.55	5		12) 400,000	10s.	a T30,242	Dec.	T0.30, 1923	1-4-24
					4) 500,000	10s.	(a T12,442 (c T372,107	Dec.	Final T0.30 (mkg. T0.55, 1923..	15-4-24
Ayer Tawah Rubber Co., Ld.	T	21		22	27) 30,000	T10	(a T16,223 (b T22,000 (c T69,960	Sept.	Final T2.00, (mkg. T2½) 1922-23	28-12-23
Batu Anam (Johore) Rub. Ests., Ld. ..	T	0.75			400,000	T1	a T22,777	Dec.	T0.05, 1923
Bukit Toh Alang Rubber Ests., Ld. ..	T	1.12½			500,000	T1	a T20,402	Mar.	Final T0.25 (mkg. T0.50, 1916-17)	11-4-24
Bute Plantation (1913), Ld.	T	0.75			28) 500,000	T1	a T3,505	Dec.	Final T0.05 (mkg. T0.10, 1916)	25-7-17
Chemor United Rubber Co., Ld.	T	0.85			400,000	T0.90	(a T17,973 (c T12,000	Dec.	Final T0.05 (mkg. T0.10, 1923)..	29-3-17
Chempodak Rub. & G'bier Est., Ld. ..	T	4½			39) 35,000	£1	a (Loss) T13,435	Oct.	2nd Interim, T0.50, (mkg. T1, 1916-17)	3-[illegible]-24
Cheng Rubber Estates, Ld.	T	1½			135,000	T5	a T4,120	June	T0.20, 1916-17	10-1[illegible]-17
Consolidated Rubber Estates (1914), Ld.	T	2.12½		2.10	25) 500,000	2s.—T0.75	(a T10,988 (c T[illegible],000	Dec.	Final T0.15 (mkg. T0.21, 1923)..	1-17-17
Dominion Rubber Co., Ld.	T	1½		1.80	19) 350,000	T1	a T2,775	Dec.	T0.10, 1923	9-4-24
Gula Kalumpong Rubber Ests., Ld. ..	T	7½			(14a) 750,000	(21;450,000 (5s;200,000	(a (c		2s. less I/T 4s. 7½d in £ (Coupon 21) .. — ..	10-4-24
Java-Consolidated Rubber & Coffee Est., Ld.	T	11			8) 85,000	$1 at 2/3	a T17,215			15-[illegible]-24
Kali Gludik Coffee Estates, Ld.	T	6.15	6		70,000	T5	c T2,685	Dec.	Final T0.75 (mkg. T1.25, 1923)..	18-[illegible]-24
Kapayang Rubber Estates Co., Ld. ..	T	9.10			85) 15,000	T10	(a T6,977 (c T4,023	Dec:	Incorporated 1923	....
Karan Rubber Estate Co., Ld:	T	4			25,000	T10	(a T3,008		T0.50, 1922	19-4-23
Kota Bahroe Rubber Estates (1921), Ld.	T	0.75					(b T30,000	Mar.	(Interim 1923, T0.50	17-7-23
Kroe Java Plantations, Ld.	T	12	11½		20) 300,000	£1 at T8.00	a (Loss T[illegible],200	June	T0.60, 1922-23	1-6-23
					70,000		(a T[illegible],000			....
							(a T[illegible],000	Dec.	T1 (mkg. T1.50, 1923)	[illegible]-11-24

The following telegraphic advices have been received:—

Singapore, April 17, 1924.

Spot or April	41⅞	cents
May/June	42	,,
July/Sept.	43	,,
July/Dec.	43¾	,,

Market very quiet, nothing doing.

DEBENTURES.

LOANS	Term in years	Last business recorded		Loan Amt.	Int %	Payable
S'hai Municipal Council	1905	6 to 20	5-4-24	T97	d 320,000	6	June-Dec.
	1907	do.	15-4-24	T99	500,000	6	do.
	1908	do.	11-3-24	T99	650,000	6	do.
	1909	do.	15-3-23	T99	300,000	6	do.
	1910	do.	17-4-24	T99	313,809	6	do.
	1911	10 to 30	15-4-24	T99	350,000	6	do.
	1912	do.	3-1-24	T99	340,000	6	do.
	1913	do.	3-5-23	T100	756,300	6	do.
	1913	do.	8-5-22	T98	500,000	5½	do.
	1913	10 to 50	8-5-22	T98	900,000	5½	do.
	1914	10 to 30	11-4-24	T99	900,000	5½	do.
	1915	do.	11-3-24	T94	800,000	5½	do.
	1916	do.	16-4-24	T98¼	1,400,000	6	do.
	1918	10	18-10-23	T103	507,300	7	do.
	1919	10	4-12-23	T104	1,793,300	7	do.
	1920	10	8-4-24	T103	2,240,000	7	do.
		10 to 30	29-3-24	¢101	¢75,000	6	do.
	1921	do.	18-2-24	$110	$1,000,000	8	do.
	1921	do.	14-4-24	T110	T5,000,000	8	do.
	1922	do.	16-4-24	T105	T5,000,000	7	do.
	1923	do.	17-4-24	T99	??000,000	6	do.
French Municipal Council	1911	do.	8-10-23	T96	400,000	6	May-Nov.
	1911	do.	12-2-23	T88	500,000	5½	June-Dec.
	1914	do.	5-3-24	T90	350,000	5½	do.
	1915	do.	20-11-23	T108½	a T800,000	6	May-Nov.
	1921	do.	17-12-23	T95	2,000,000	8	June-Dec.
	1923	do.	2-10-23	T112	2,000,000	8	do.
S'hai Waterworks Co., Ltd.	1921	10 to 30	6-6-22	T108	T500,000	8	do.
S'hai Gas Co., Ltd.	1922	do.	2-10-23	T105	T1,000,000	7	do.
	1922	do.	2-4-23	T94	e 800,000	6	do.
S'hai Municipal Council	1905	5 to 20	31-8-22	T96½	T250,000	6	June-Dec.
	1909	do.	1-4-24	T98	750,000	6	do.
	1911	do.	26-9-22	T92	250,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
	,,	do.	28-3-24	T93	250,000	6	May-Nov.
	,,	do.			250, 00	6	Jan-July
Shanghai Land Investment Co., Ltd.	1912	do.	2-4-24	T98	250,000	6	June-Dec.
	1913	do.	3-4-23	T98	250,000	6	April-Oct.
	,,	do.	11-1-24	T94	250,000	6	Mar-Nov.
	,,	do.			250,000	6	April-Oct.
	1914	do.	22-3-23	T98	350 000	6	June-Dec.
	1916	5 to 25	3-4-23	T88	??5,000	5½	do.
	1922	do.	12-2-23	T95	750,000	6	Mar.-Sept
	1922	do.	10-1-24	T98	500 000	6	May-Nov.
Shanghai Club	1907	20	1-2-24	T93	450,000	6	do.
Country Club	1901	Perpetual			139,000	6	June-Dec.
Lane, Crawford & Co., Ltd.	1914	5 to 20			130,000	6	May-Nov.
	1915	do.			110,000	6	Mar.-Sept.
Anglo-French Land Invest. Co., Ld.	1908	do.			250,000	6	June-Dec.
	1911	do.	7-6-23	T98	300,000	6	do.
S'hai Mutual Tel. Co., Ltd.	1923	10 to 20	27-2-23	T95½	h 270,000	6	do.
S'hai Race Club	1923	25	14-4-24	T100	1,200,000	6½	Mar.-Sept.
Culty Dairy Co., Ltd.	1915	10			50,000	7	Feb.-Aug.
Hall & Holtz Ld.	1914	5 to 20	14-10-22	$92	230,000	7	Jan.-July
Asia Realty Co., Inc.	1922	5 to 20	..	..	T500,000	7	Jan.-July

*Plus interest accrued since last half-yearly payment.

a—Now Issuing; Redeemed or Unissued:—b—Tls.65,100; c—Tls.61,100; d—Tls.34,100; e—Tls.68,500; f—Tls.262,400; g—Tls.139,800; h—Tls.12,300; i—$18,90

RUBBER OUTPUT STATISTICS.

Company	Authorized Capital	Financial yr. closes end of	Output last 2 fin. year: Year before	Output last 2 fin. year: Last year	Estimated output present fin. year	All in cost per lb.	Output from end last fin. year to 31-12-23	1923: Jan.	1923: Feb.	1923: Mar.	Total output this fin.yr: to date
			lb.	b.	lb.	d.	lb.	lb.	lb.	lb.	lb:
Alma	Tls. 630,000	Sept.	232,500	259,100	246,648	8.87d	68,000	22,000	18,000	17,000	125,000
Amherst (New).. ..	,, 500,000	Oct.	72,442	80,892	90,751	*8.86d.	19,020	8,214	8,475	14,663	50,371
Anglo-Dutch	£200,000	Dec.	630,000	540,000	600,000	8.45d.	..	61,000	50,000	65,000	179,000
Anglo-Java	£250,000	Dec.	1,524,711	1,663,150	..	6.70d	..	184,000	164,100	187,000	535,100
Ayer Tawah	Tls. 350,000	Sept.	369,447	58,042	360,000	†0.24.41	..	..	..	..	..
Batu Anam	,, 400,000	Dec.	25,510	217,322	185,793	9.01d.	..	12,500	11,500	15,000	39,006
Bukit Toh Alang	,, 500,000	Mar.	309,254	305,845	345,000	7.54d.	222,632	25,590	No.	..	248,182
Bute	,, 500,000	Dec.	230,067	177,350	159,510	11.11d.	..	17,500	16,800	13,600	47,700
Chemor United	,, 360,000	Dec.	340,794	297,027	..	8.40d.	..	27,200	23,300	9,500	60,000
Chempedak	£35,000	Oct.	145,760	163,063	..	1/5.42d.	30,700	14,000	4,400	1,000	50,100
Cheng	Tls. 675,000	June	151,923	145,338	..	11.09d.	102,014	10,500	9,700	11,800	134,014
Consolidated (1914) ..	,, 375,000	Dec.	668,500	637,777	761,500	7.17d.	..	53,000	56,779	44,437	149,216
Dominion	,, £500,000	Dec.	271,150	321,516	306,867	9.63d.	..	28,032	27,654	15,999	71,685
Gula-Kalumpong	£85,000	Dec.	1,113,000	975,000	1,215,000	1/0.24d.	..	88,000	78,000	66,000	232,000
Java Consolidated	,, 150,000	Dec.	689,524	642,455	..	6.22d.	..	65,500	60,000	72,300	201,500
Kapayang	,, 250,000	Mar.	189,239	146,710	..	12.90	..	10,592	8,315	7,636	26,543
Karau	,, 300,000	June	111,875	101,782	84,000	8d.	60,067	8,146	6,448	4,913	79,576
Kota Bahroe (1921) ..	,, 470,000	Dec.	125,630	339,070	..	..	160,918	29,156	26,919	19,180	236,103
Kroewoek	Gs. 2,500,000	Oct.	842,589	943,000	975,000	Glds.0.28	179,300	82,500	71,500	70,000	413,300
Langkat	Tls. 500,000	April	200,711	229,232	..	10d.	120,500	19,700	11,100	8,600	159,900
Padang	£50,000	Mar.	172,022	135,753	176,088	£0.19	..	..	2,780	..	2,780
Pengkalan (1921)	,, 250,000	Oct.	98,303	86,299	..	0/8d.	17,585	8,080	6,603	..	31,668
Permata	,, 275,000	Dec.	68,354	217,287	..	..	..	17,400	8,700	15,900	42,000
Repah	,, 600,000	Sept.	361,816	250,413	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Sanggaga	,, 100,000	June	179,665	142,000	115,183	11.37d.	120,509	8,500	11,000	10,500	150,509
See Kee (1918)	,, 300,000	Dec.	193,135	245,560	158,264	0/9.37d.	..	13,400	13,400	7,600	51,400
Semanco	,, 375,000	Jan.	272,500	275,100	..	*17.35d.	..	..	14,500	16,400	30,900
Serdang (1921)	,, 400,000	Sept.	314,414	246,442	..	8.12d.	67,625	21,196	17,250	17,024	126,101
Shanghai Kedah	,, 315,000	Dec.	126,166	100,054	..	11.35d.	..	8,749	8,000	..	16,749
Shai-Klebang	,, 600,000	Dec.	373,111	288,810	408,961	..	..	22,782	21,474	16,254	70,510
Shai-Malay	,, 200,000	June	205,811	188,946	..	9.94d.	100,573	16,432	14,475	11,846	142,726
Shai Pahang	,, 250,000	Dec.	171 213	117,112	..	9.82d.	..	14,400	13,300	7,100	35,100
Shai Seremban	,, 650,000	Oct.	661,139	670,716	650,000	Glds.0.38	111,341	61,110	51,170	43,537	267,158
Shai-Sumatra	,, 250,000	Dec.	185,000	157,100	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Sua-Manggis	,, 100,000	Mar.	30,229	165,757	..	17.20	14,010	8,802	..	..	22,802
Sungei Duri	£40,000	June	308,073	296,563	229,000	11.61d.	126,409	23,698	22,272	10,048	182,427
Tapang (1913)	Tls. 200,000	Dec.	107,011	103,035	99,000	*130	..	8,184	6,572	..	14,756
Tanah Merah	,, 750,000	Mar.	415,000	371,700	..	7.82d.	231,000	21,000	22,000	21,700	303,700
Tebong	,, 750,000	Jan.	699,855	723,000	717,725	0/7.66d.	..	..	61,000	66,959	130,000
Ziangbe	£150,000	Dec.	514,506	623,000	600,000	7.24d.	..	67,500	58,200	58,000	183,700

*Excluding Depreciation and Shanghai Expense†

† Straits ¢ cents

Gen. Engg Rubber Estc. (ord. Co. (1921), Ld. (12½ Cum. Pref.	T	0.82½				63)	300,000	T1	a (Loss) T20,975	Jan.	....
Shanghai Kedah Rubber	T	0.75				67)	100,000	T1	a	Sept.	1-9-23, 1-3-24			27-12-23
S'hai Klebang Rubber Estate, Ld. .. ord	T	0.60				34)	195,000	T1	a T11,123	Dec.	1-9-23, 1-3-24			27-12-23
S'ha Malay Rubber Estates, Ld. .. ord	T	3				18)	345,000	T1	a T14,000	Dec.	(Ord. T0.60 for 9 months ended 31/12/22			2-5-17
,, 8 % cum. part. pref.	T	9				22)	80,000	T10	a T621	Dec.	(Pref. T0.40, for 6 months ended 31/12/22 ..			31-10-23
S'hai Pahang Rubber Estates, Ld. ..	T	0.75					200,000	T1	(Loss) T1,213	June	Final T1.00 (mkg. T0.10, 1916-17)			12-10-17
S'hai Seremban Rubber Estates, Ld. ..	T	0.60					325,000	T1	a (Loss) T16,352	Dec.	T0.04 for 10 months, ended 31/12/22			31-3-17
S'hai-Sumatra Tobacco Co., Ld.	T	105	101]			7)	30,000	T20	a (Loss) 325,810
Sua Manggis Rubber Co., Ld.	T	3				30)	56,000	T5	a T312,170	Oct.	T2, 1918-19			1-4-20
Sungaia Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	0.80	0.85½			‡5)	100,000	T1	a T4,625
Sungei Duri Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	7½	6				40,000	£1 at T8.50	a T10,000	Mar.	T0.10, 1916-17			12-7-17
Tapang Rubber Estates (1913), Ld. ..	T	0.50					200,000	T1	a T22,766	June	T0.85, 1922-23			12-10-23
Tanah Merah Estates (1916), Ld.	T	0.50	0.45			32)	750,000	T1	a (Loss) T851	Dec.	T0.08, 1919			20-5-20
Tebong Rubber Estate, Ld.	T	1.05		1		‡54)	750,000	T1	a T31,851
Ziangbe Rubber Co., Ld.	T	2½				32)	300,000	10s.	a T17,851	Mar.	Interim T0.05 1916-17 (Final, Nil)			7-12-17
									a (Loss) T13,874	Jan.	....††			....
									a T17,851	Dec.	T0.25, 1923			8-4-24
COTTONS, ETC.
Ewo Cotton Mills, Ld. (ord.	T	11½	11½			15)	1,000,000	T5	a T5,257
,, (8 % cum. pref.	T	105	106			43)	10 000	T100	b T1,400,000
									c T2,802,020		Ord. T0.55, 1923			5-3-24
Laou Kung Mow C. S. & W. Co., Ld. ..	T	8	5				80,000	T10	a (Loss) T86,057	Dec.	Pref. T8, 1923			5-3-24
Oriental C. S. & W. Co., Ld. .. .. .. ord.	T	5		1.00		60)	500,000	T3	b T120,000
pref.	T					3)	5,000	T100	c T7,612	Dec.	Final T2, (mkg. T4, 1921)			8-3-22
Shanghai Cotton Mfg. Co., Ld. (Shanghai Boshoku K.K.)	T	61 old 36 new				(	80,000	T50	a (Loss) T38,590
						‡	40,000	T50	b T200,000
									c T2,551,760	Dec.	Final T0.50 (mkg. T1.50, 1921)			25-3-22
INDUSTRIAL.
British-American Tobacco Co., Ld. (ord.	£		£5 3/16	£5 4/16		66)	13,000,000	£1	a £3,531,846
,, (5 % cum. pref.							4,500,000	£1	c £2,251,649	Sept.	Final Ord. 1922-23, 9% (mkg. 25%) free of I/T			11-1-24
China Im. & Ex. Lumber Co., Ld.	T	350					5,000	T100	a T161,833
									b T300,000
China Sugar Refining Co., Ld.	H $	218					20,000	H$100	c T2,100,000	Feb.	T8, 1922-23			31-5-23
Gordon & Co., Ltd.	T	25				37)	3,000	T25	a H $10,763
Green Island Cement Co., Ld.	H $	34			27 old 310 new		400,000	H$7.50	b H $600,000
Maatschappij, &c., In Langkat	T	8½					200,000	Gs.10	c H $1,200,000	Dec.	Final H $1.50 (mkg. H $2, 1923)			1-4-24
									a (Loss) T158,433
Shanghai Loan & Investment Co., Ld. ..	T	6½	6.40 (comb. T25½)	(comb T)			250,000	T5	c T190,184	Oct.	T0.50, 1918-19			30-3-20
									a T35,638
S'hai Exploration & Development Co., Ld.	T	10½	10½	(comb T)			250,000	T5	c T300,000	Dec.	T0.50, 1923			5-3-24
Major Brothers, Ld.	T	5				10)	6,000	T20	a (Loss) T13,341	Dec.	....			....
									a T6,941	Dec.	....			....
John Richards & Co., Ld.	T	10				11)	25,000	T10	c T70,000
									a T3,130	Dec.	10%, 1921			24-6-22
Shanghai Gas Co., Ld.	T	41	41			?)	24,000	T50	c T30,000
									a T24,375	Dec.	T4.00, 1923			11-4-24
Shanghai Waterworks Co., Ld.	T	150	145			‡9)	50,000	$20	b T30,000
									c T65,241
STORES.									a T24,475	Dec.	(Final 10s./- (at Exchg. 3/2½ = T3.09) mkg. 20s./-, 1923			4-4-24
									b T75,000
									c T1,770,985
Hall & Holtz, Ld.	$	6				‡16)	28 000	$20	a
S. Llewellyn & Co., Ld.	$	30					1,200	$80	b $116,937	Feb.	$2, 1917-18			1-5-18
S. Moutrie & Co., Ld.	$	50				17)	10,000	$50	a $10,697	Dec.	$6, 1922			12-5-23
Weeks & Co., Ld.	$	11				‡50)	30,000	$20	c $26,000
									a $20,282	Mar.	(Final $2 & Bonus $4 (mkg. $9, 1922-23) ..			2-6-23
									c $323,195		(Int. 6%, 1923-24			30-11-23
									a $57,633	Feb.	$1.50, 1922-22			3 -5-22
Lane, Crawford & Co., Ld.	$	102	106½			?)	2,500	$100	a $210,000
									b $5,539
MISCELLANEOUS.									a $20,000
Culty Dairy Co., Ld.	T	13		12			10,000	T10	b $250 000		$8, 1922-23			24-5-23
									a Loss) T26,956	Oct.	T0.60, 1921-22			30-12-23
S'hai Electric Construction Co., Ld., "B" London	T	16½	16½						c T119,293
	£1		£2:13:0	£2:16:3			40,000	£1	a £17,022
									c £114,315	Dec.	(1st Int. 1923, 12s./- (Coupon 23)			1-10 23
S'hai Horse Bazaar & Motor Co., Ld. ..	T	50					5,400	T50	a T23,118		(2nd Int. 1923, 12s./- (Coupon 24) both less I/T at 4/7½ in £			1-2-24
									c T220,000		T5, 1923			16-4-24
Shanghai Mercury, Ld.	T	25					3 000	T50		Apr.	T1 50 1913-14			31-3-15
Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co. Ld. ..	T	76½	78			‡19)	40,000	T50	a T10,285
									b T70,000	Mar.	T4.50, 1922-23			31-5-23
Oriental Press (L'Imprimerie Francaise)	$	100					940	$100	c T920,016
									a $109,513
									b $9,000	Mar.	$10 ,1922-23			5-7-23
									c $21,101

For all Dollar shares quoted on the Shanghai Stock Exchange the Exchange rate is fixed at 73.

REFERENCES.

a Carried forward at last Ann. Genl. Meeting;
b Dividend Equalization Reserve.
c General and other Reserves.
d Uncalled liability ¥6 per sh;
,, ,, ,, ¥10 ,,
f ,, ,, ,, H $150 ,, g ,, ,, ,, $200 ,,
h ,, ,, ,, £2 10 ,,
i ,, ,, ,, Tls. 35 ,,
w Working Account 1923
x Working Account 1922
w Working Account 1921
† Registered; or Bearer (idem, "B").
†† Issued Capital: 7% Cum. Pref. 24,461 shares; Ordinary, 10,270 shares.

‡ Debentures Issues also.
‡‡ Subject to Estate Managers' Commissions
* Subject to E. P. D. and Comm. Tax.
* Contingent liability for Interest on 12% Cum. Pref. Shares of Tls. 5,089

1—14,000 sh' unis'd.
2—70,411 ,,
3— 5,000 ,,
4— 4,000 ,,
5—19,182 ,,
6—50,000 ,,
7—10,761 ,,
8—10,000 ,,
9—10,470 sh. unis'd;
10—500 ,,
11—15,230 ,,
12—50,000 ,,
13—1,387 ,,
14—3,003 ,,
15—100,000 ,,
16—1,662 ,,
17—3,882 ,,
18—5,586 ,,
19—187,330 ,,
20—15,000 ,,
21—100,000 ,,
22—2,620 ,,
23—5 000 ,,
24—70,810 ,,
25—125,000 ,,
26—60,000 sh' unis'd
27—8,121 ,,
28—200,000 ,,
29—4,683 ,,
30—2,000 ,,
31—4,000 ,,
32—50,000 ,,
33—125,000 ,,
34—102,570 ,,
35—200 ,,
36—189 000 ,,
37—1,443 ,,
39—7,695 ,,
42—200,000 ,,
43—1,000 ,,
(Net to be issued for less than 950 ea.
47—500 sh. unis'd.
48—100,602 ,,
49—5,644 ,,
50—8,178 ,,
54—40,000 ,,
55—89,000 ,, 56—10,634,36 ,,
57—5,000,000 ,,
60—16,000 ,,
61—240,000 ,,
62—401,055 ,,
63—15,000 ,,
64— 600 000 ,,
65— 200,000 ,,
66—1,953,920 ,,
67—68,057 ,,

In order to ensure accuracy of the above details, Agents and Secretaries of Companies are requested to notify Messrs. J. P. Bisset & Co; of any alterations, errors or omissions;

Comany Meetings

(Continued from Page 98)

safe and everything running on economical lines."

On Hendra the work of the estate has carried along efficiently and there is nothing special to report. The smoke house was burnt down during December, the building and contents being fully covered by insurance. During the erection of a new smoke House, a vacant one on Sungei Kruit Estate has been kindly placed at our disposal.

[illegible]

With regard to the current year's prospects I find it difficult owing to the present uncertainty of the market to express a definite opinion. With pepper at its present price the estate can produce at a fair margin of profit but I am afraid we cannot hope for better prices until the co-operation of the Dutch East Indies to support restriction is secured.

The directors wish to express their appreciation of the good work done by the managers and staffs, also to the visiting agent for the good care of our interests.

I will now propose the first resolution, but before doing so I shall be pleased to answer to the best of my ability any questions shareholders may wish to ask.

The Chairman proposed and Mr. G. Grayrigge seconded that the report and accounts for the year ended December 31st, 1923, as presented be accepted. Carried unanimously.

It was proposed by the Chairman, and seconded by Mr. A. W. Burkill: "That the following recommendation as to appropriation of balance at credit of Profit & Loss Account be severed:—

Pay a Dividend of $80.10 per share (8 per cent.)	$16,087.00
Furniture	1,520.35
Write off Bullocks & Carts	14.12
Write off Rubber Factory	1.00
Write off Plant & Machinery	1.00
Write off Wells & Water	1.00
Pay Bonus to Estate Managers	1,000.00
Carry forward to next year's Accounts	2,775.37
	$21,979.83

The resolution was carried unanimously.

On the proposition of Mr. Burkill, seconded by Mr. W. Mellor, Mr. G. Grayrigge was re-elected a director of the company.

On the proposition of Mr. A. N. Ogden, seconded by Mr. Obun Tu-san, it was agreed: "That Messrs. Lowe, Bingham & Matthews be re-elected Auditors to the Company at an annual remuneration of $400 for Shanghai and Ipoh." Carried unanimously.

Reports are current in Peking that a band of Russian [illegible] selling Russian blankets and clothings, are spies of Marshal Chang Tso-lin. They are said to be collecting information regarding the movements and organization of Chihli troops. All of the alleged spies are thought to be former White troops. Orders have been issued by Marshal Wu Pei-fu that the authorities at Loyang, Chengchow, Tsetan, Kaifeng and other military centres watch the movement of these foreigners.

Addressing the Engineering Society of China on Tuesday Mr Karl Beyin gave an account of investigations, studies and tests regarding wharf designs made by the Conservancy Board's engineering staff and himself at various times and in connexion with the Shanghai Harbour Investigation, 1921-22. The type of wharf discussed by the lecturer was that for an open dock. Although the latter costless, the necessary cost of locks exceeded the saving in other respects. Shanghai's harbour investigators had definitely recommended docks of the open type first of all, said the speaker. The definition of a "deep draught wharf" was a wharf to accommodate ocean-going vessels requiring a berth of say, 26 ft. and more at low water.

MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS

THE RATEPAYERS' MEETING

Once More No Quorum for the Special Resolutions: Support for the Council in All Directions: Big Majority for Waterworks Resolution

No great interest was displayed in the Ratepayers' Meeting which took place in the Town Hall at 4.30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. The attendance was smaller than on several occasions in recent years, and owing to lack of a quorum the special resolutions which were on the agenda could not be brought forward, only half the required number of voters being present.

Sir Skinner Turner was invited to take the chair, and on the platform were Messrs. S. Fessenden, W. P. Lambe, F. E. Mackay, V. G. Lermit, P. L. Knight and S. Sabatier, Councillors; Mr. F. S. Bullock, Rowe, Secretary of Council; and Mr. E. L. Allen, who was appointed secretary of the meeting.

Proceedings

Mr. S. Fessenden—Ladies and gentlemen, the hour appointed for the Ratepayers' Meeting having passed I have very much pleasure in moving Resolution I.—That our esteemed fellow-ratepayer, Sir Skinner Turner, be invited to take the Chair.

Mr. W. P. Lambe—I have much pleasure in seconding that resolution.

Mr. Fessenden—Will all those in favour please raise their hands . . . Any opposed? . . . Unanimous.

Sir Skinner Turner then takes the chair.

Mr. S. Fessenden—I beg to propose

Resolution II.—That Mr. E. L. Allen be appointed Secretary to the meeting.

Mr. W. P. Lambe—I have pleasure in seconding the resolution.

The Chairman—It has been proposed and seconded that Mr. E. L. Allen be appointed Secretary of the Meeting. Will those in favour hold up the right hand? Against—Carried unanimously.

The Chairman—I will now read the notice convening the meeting:

The undersigned hereby give notice:—

That a Public Meeting of Ratepayers will be held in the Town Hall on Wednesday, April 16, at 4.30 p.m., precisely, to devise ways and means of raising the requisite funds for Municipal purposes, and to pass resolutions in reference thereto and to deliberate and decide upon other Municipal matters and business. At such meeting the accounts of the Council for the year ending December 31, 1923, will be submitted for the sanction and approval of the Ratepayers.

That a Special Meeting of Ratepayers will be held in the Town Hall during an adjournment of the above meeting to consider and approve resolutions upon various matters whereof due notice will be given.

This notice is signed by the Consuls of the various Treaty Powers.

The Chairman—I will now call upon the Chairman of the Council to move Resolution No. III.

Mr. Fessenden—Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I beg to propose Resolution III.—That the [illegible] be adopted for use at this meeting and remain in force until the next annual meeting.

Mr. W. P. Lambe—I have pleasure in seconding the resolution.

The Chairman—It has been proposed and seconded that the rules of procedure be adopted at this meeting and remain in force until the next annual meeting. Will those in favour please signify in the usual way?—Against?—Carried.

The Chairman—I will now call upon Mr. Fessenden, to move Resolution No. IV.

[illegible] REPORT AND ACCOUNTS.

Mr. Fessenden—Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, before proceeding with this Resolution, I desire to deal briefly with a few outstanding matters to which your attention should be directed.

In the first place, I may mention that we have continued the policy during the year, of keeping you as fully posted as possible on Municipal activities through the medium of the Gazette. Those desiring further information will find a very complete record of Municipal affairs in the Annual Report, which was issued on March 19. The complete manner in which matters are dealt with in this publication will, I trust, save me the necessity of asking you to listen to any lengthy speech upon the year's work.

You will be pleased to know that our Volunteer Corps continues to maintain its numbers and discipline, whilst the year has seen the pleasing function of the presentation to the Corps of new Colours worked by ladies of Shanghai.

The Fire Brigade continues to develop as an all-motor Fire Brigade, and the total number of vehicles has reached the figure of 40. We think, therefore, that you may feel reasonably assured that the Settlement possesses a Brigade well equipped for the size of the Settlement.

The Police Force continues to maintain its highly efficient work in the policing of this Settlement, and forming as it does our first line of defence, I think we have every reason to be proud of this efficient body of men. In this connexion, I cannot pass without a word of renewed appreciation of the public spirited action of those members of the Community who continue to perform duty as Special Constables. They perform a duty, the value of which cannot be too highly appreciated, in the maintenance of order in the Settlement.

Our activities in the preservation of Public Health have reached a high level of attainment and the same may be said of the Council's schools, both foreign and Chinese, in which the number of children in attendance is well maintained.

Our Public Works Department as usual calls for a very large proportion of the total expenditure. The number of the public roads has not altered very materially since last year, but a great many important widenings have been carried out, and the programme of extensions adopted in 1921 is being pushed forward as rapidly as financial considerations permit.

The Traffic problem is our eternal question, which requires a large and expert staff to handle effectively. The Tramway question likewise is a problem which continues to engage our serious attention. I can only regret that, in spite of earnest endeavour to conclude the negotiations with the Tramway Company in respect to extensions, at the close of the year, although considerable progress had been made, negotiations had not then, nor have they now, reached a final settlement.

Four Special Commissions have been sitting during the year, to deal with the questions of Education, of the Supply of Pure Milk, of the Sale of Poisons, and of Child Labour in Factories. The three first named have concluded their labours, and your Council is engaged in examining their recommendations, with a view to the adoption of what may prove to be practicable. The fourth Commission, that of Child Labour in Factories, is still sitting.

The question of the control of public [illegible] was a matter which came prominently before our notice during the year, and you will observe that we have reverted to the system of issuing passes as applied for, in order to assess the operation of the law of supply and demand, since we have found that abuses result from artificial limitation in number.

During the year we have sanctioned trial services of omnibuses and pedicabs, and it is expected that before long these vehicles will be seen in the streets of Shanghai.

Our relations with the Chinese in our midst, while not entirely devoid of difficulty, have upon the whole been satisfactory, and we may take it as evidence of their respect for the law and order which we maintain that the native population of the Settlement continues to increase in numbers and appears well satisfied with conditions as it find them.

A good deal of the Council's time has been devoted to the Waterworks question, to which I will refer when introducing Resolution VII.

As regards departmental activities, I do not propose at the present time to make any detailed observations since those matters are fully dealt with in the respective sections of the annual report. Suffice it to say that the work of all departments has given satisfaction, and that the services rendered by the members of the Volunteer Corps and of the Police Reserves have continued to earn our very sincere appreciation and thanks.

The revision of the Standing Orders referred to by my predecessor last year has unfortunately had to be deferred pending certain matters of departmental reorganization which it will be the duty of the incoming Council to undertake. As a preliminary step to consideration of these matters, a room was set aside in the Administration Building for the use of the Chairman, and it may interest you to know that I have made a practice of attending this office for an hour or so each day for the purpose of conferring with the departmental heads. This practice has given me an insight into the methods of administration which I hope will assist the incoming Council in solving the problems with which they will be faced.

Before turning to the question of finance I would like to thank, on behalf of the Council, those members of the community who have served on the various Committees and Commissions which we have appointed, thus giving us the benefit of their advice and experience in the conduct of affairs.

I now propose to say a few words on the Financial Statement of 1923.

FINANCE.

The report of the Treasurer and Comptroller opens with a statement that the surplus on the Ordinary Budget carried forward to this year amounts to Tls. 402,000. This can be regarded as satisfactory as it shows an increase over the figure estimated of Tls. 249,000. Our Ordinary Income exceeded the estimate by Tls. 129,000, while the Ordinary Expenditure incurred was Tls. 110,000 less than was anticipated. The Treasurer's report sets out in detail the results of departmental expenditure as compared with the estimates, and I do not propose to waste your time in accounting for the various differences that occur between the actual and estimated departmental figures.

Turning to the accounts relating to the Extraordinary Budget where a deficit of Tls. 142,000 was anticipated, you will note that the actual deficit brought forward amounts to no less than Tls. 712,000. At first sight this may appear somewhat alarming. Indeed, I notice that the editor of one of our leading newspapers, in a leader on the Annual Report, issued a friendly hint to the Council that it really must not incur expenditure not included in the Budget. Well, Ladies and Gentlemen, I can assure you that there is nothing to be alarmed about. What actually happened was that with two exceptions (which I will refer to later) the main headings of the Budget were in fact well under-spent. We were authorized to raise a Loan of Tls. 6,000,000, but only issued debentures totalling Tls. 4,479,800. Our Extraordinary Income was therefore one and a half millions short, and it is here that the explanation is to be found. Had the full amount of the Loan been raised, we should have allotted 3 millions instead of 2 millions to the Electricity Department, and the deficit would have been, say, Tls. 50,000 in excess of the figure we estimated.

In other words, Ladies and Gentlemen, that figure of Tls. 712,000 represents merely a shortage in income and has nothing whatever to do with, or is not, increased expenditure. As things are, the Tls. 1,000,000 required by the Electricity Department this year represents the amount they were short last year, and the deficit of Tls. 712,000 with which the year 1923 closed will also have to be found in 1924.

The only item of the Extraordinary Budget which I think calls for further comment is the expenditure on Roads. You will no doubt have noticed that the appropriation for acquiring land for new roads, widening existing roads, and for making up, has been exceeded by a sum of Tls. 671,000, or Tls. 582,000 after making allowance for land transferred from Municipal properties, which is credited under another heading of the accounts. Well, Ladies and Gentlemen, this is the one heading of the Budget which is extremely difficult to control. Advantage has to be taken of fortuitous circumstances such as a sale or transfer of property or rebuilding, in order to proceed with the extremely necessary road widenings. It is impossible to estimate with accuracy to cover this appropriation. We are satisfied that every precaution has been taken to keep expenditure within reasonable grounds, but it is as well that you should realize that more and more money will be required for these urgent and necessary public improvements.

The report of the Treasurer and Comptroller gives full details as to how we raised the debentures issued during the year totalling Tls. 4,479,800, or, including the Investment Bank allotment made on February 5 of this year (Tls. 440,200), a grand total of Tls. 4,920,000.

I cannot conclude without expressing the Council's appreciation of the services rendered by the Municipal Bank, which, since its foundation on September 1, 1919, has been largely instrumental in raising close upon Tls. 7,500,000. This is a very notable achievement when it is remembered how unsettled the money markets of the world have been during the years following the war.

With these remarks I propose

Resolution IV.—That the Report and Accounts for the year ending December 31, 1923, be passed.

Mr. W. P. Lambe—I have very much pleasure in seconding that Resolution.

The Chairman—The Resolution has been duly proposed and seconded and is now open to discussion.—As no ratepayer wishes to say anything, I will put the Resolution to the meeting. It has been proposed by Mr. Fessenden and seconded by Mr. Lambe. All those in favour signify the same in the usual way—Those against?—Carried.

The Chairman—I call upon Mr. Fessenden to move the next resolution.

Mr. S. Fessenden—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, In introducing the Budget Resolution, I propose with your approval to give you a short outline of the various processes that the Estimates go through before they are finally placed before you for your approval. Towards the close of the year each department is required to prepare preliminary estimates of its requirements for the ensuing year. Those requirements are divided under two main headings, Ordinary and Extraordinary. The Ordinary Estimates of each department are forwarded to the Finance Department for examination, where they are closely scrutinised and tested with the object of determining whether they contain any items of an unusual character that may indicate a permanent addition to the activities of the department.

The Extraordinary Estimates are prepared by each department in collaboration with the Public Works Department. In due course the departmental Committees consider the proposals of the heads of departments both under the Ordinary and Extraordinary classification. Representatives of the Public Works Department and the Finance Department attend these meetings to advise the Committees on any matters requiring further explanation. The Committees are not expected to concern themselves unduly with detail; their chief concern is with questions of policy. The Ordinary Estimates are then referred back to the Finance Department, where each item is examined and checked in detail, and the figures, where necessary, amended. A revised proof is then printed and, after final agreement with the department, is submitted for the formal approval of the Committee. In the meantime the departmental requirements under the heading of Extraordinary Expenditure are being scrutinised by the Commissioner of Public Works, who inserts a revised estimate of what he considers to be the cost of the proposals. Unfortunately the requirements of the departments are occasionally in outline only and difficulty is sometimes experienced by the Public Works Department in estimating the cost of a scheme which is not sufficiently defined. This is one of the reasons why the estimated cost of works is from time to time underspent or exceeded. The Council is aware of this weakness in the Budget system, and steps are being taken to tighten matters up. In due course the preliminary estimates of Extraordinary Expenditure are forwarded to the Finance Department, more or less in the form in which they are subsequently published. By this time the accounts for the past year are well in hand, and the Finance Department is able to form some idea of the surplus or deficit for which provision will need to be made in the following year. The two budgets of Ordinary and Extraordinary income and expenditure are then considered by the Finance Committee as a whole, and a decision is arrived at as to whether the existing rating basis is adequate as regards the Ordinary Budget, and as to whether or not, having regard to the conditions of the local money market, it is policy to recommend the Loan called for by the Extraordinary Budget, or to reduce it. More often than not the latter course is considered the more prudent, and then commences the Finance Committee's somewhat unpleasant duty of wielding the blue pencil.

The Budget now before you has undergone many vicissitudes, and is but a skeleton of the one that was submitted to the Finance Committee. In view of the prevailing uncertainty of the future trend of the local money market, and the possibility of a large sum being required for the purchase of the Waterworks, it was deemed expedient to limit the Loan to Tls. 5,000,000, with the result that many desirable public improvements have had to be postponed for another year. The problem before the Finance Committee was to effect a reduction of Tls. 900,000 in the Budget total while still allowing a sufficient sum for matters of public urgency. Among the more important items it was found necessary to delete may be mentioned the following: The reconstruction of the Chapoo Road Bridge, the provision of quarters for Indians at Sinza Police Station, improvements at the Hongkew Swimming Pool, and the swimming pool proposed for the Western District.

The preliminary estimates approved by the Works Committee called for a provision of just over Tls. 2,000,000 for road improvements, but after giving the question the fullest consideration the Finance Committee decided to reduce this amount to Tls. 1,500,000, which figure is 70 per cent. higher than the allowance last year, and is over treble the appropriation for 1922. This decision was duly approved by the Council on the grounds of financial expediency. You must not infer from this that the Council thinks any drastic change is necessary in its policy of improving the roads of the Settlement, but simply that expenditure on this very necessary object will need to be spread over a greater number of years.

It is of interest to note that of the total extraordinary expenditure proposed to be incurred this year, practically half is required for the completion of works for which approval was given in former budgets.

Our ordinary income, including the amount brought forward from last year, is expected to show a total of Tls. 8,224,000, or Tls. 795,000 over that realized during 1923. On the other hand, departmental expenditure and provision for interest and loan redemption is expected to cost Tls. 991,000 more than the amount spent in 1923. These figures clearly indicate the necessity for zealously watching and controlling the growth of departmental expenditure.

Perhaps one of the most difficult matters the Council has to deal with is the salaries paid to the staff. The Council has realized for some time past that the method under which each Committee is given more or less discretionary power to fix the salaries in the departments under its care is by no means ideal, and although the decisions of the departmental Committees are invariably subject to revision by the Finance Committee, it often happens in practice that inequalities of treatment occur which subsequently need adjustment. In order to provide for the proper co-ordination of all staff matters, the Council has recently established a Staff Committee to whom has been entrusted the responsible duty of adjudicating on all staff questions. Recommendations on staff matters will in future be considered in the first place by the Staff Committee instead of by the Departmental Committee and will then come direct to the Council. This policy is one that has been in operation in England and elsewhere for some years, and we think and hope it will lead to good results.

We have no notice of any questions, but I am prepared to explain as far as I can any points upon which explanation may be desired, but first Mr. Scott will address you briefly on Electricity matters.

With the Chairman's permission I will ask Mr. Scott to address the meeting.

Mr. F. R. SCOTT—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: The Report and Accounts which have been available for some days call for very little explanation and comment on my part.

The Accounts shew that against an estimated net profit of Tls. 1,398,951, the Undertaking actually made a net profit of Tls. 1,514,883, a difference on the right side of Tls. 115,932. Of this very handsome profit Tls. 900,000 will be contributed to Municipal Funds, which will then have benefited from the working of this Department, since 1916, to the total amount of Tls. 3,760,000. Tls. 602,800 of our profits will be transferred to General Reserve in conformity with the established principle of bringing this Reserve Account to 10 per cent. of the capital outlay on plant which has been actually in commission.

This result appears thoroughly satisfactory, but is not as completely satisfactory as we would wish. A year ago the Chairman of this Committee stated that the Department was feeling the results of the industrial depression in Shanghai, and said that the estimates for the year were framed on a conservative basis. That we have achieved a better result than estimated is due to the conservatism of that estimate, and not, I am sorry to say, to any lifting of the industrial depression. On the contrary, conditions are quite unimproved and we have again to be very conservative in framing our estimates, and we estimate that in 1924 we should make a net profit of Tls. 1,354,800,—nearly Tls. 200,000, less than the profit actually made in 1923. Our expectation of a reduced profit does not mean that we look for a reduction in our sales of electricity, for as a matter of fact, we look for an increase of Tls. 935,851 in our gross revenue. Unfortunately this very considerable estimated increase in revenue is not in proportion to the great extensions of our Plant which are on the point of completion. These extensions were ordered at an expensive time, and their completion will greatly increase our charges for interest and depreciation. Thus, in 1924 we estimate that the gross profit which will be made on the additional sales of electricity will be more than balanced by the increase in these two items, and we have to estimate for a reduced net profit.

For some years the Department has struggled to get ahead of its load, and has had to work in an overloaded condition, a state of things highly profitable, but dangerous. Our large extensions of plant were ordered in the course of this struggle, and had the load continued to increase at an equal rate, they would have only left us a comfortable margin of security. The industrial depression has turned this into an uncomfortable surplus of plant, and we are now in the position of our load having to grow up to our plant. That it will do this in a reasonable time I think there is no doubt whatever, but while it is growing it will not be possible to make the same rate of profit as was made on the smaller and overloaded plant. Most of the factors in the problem are out of our control, but on the technical side I can assure you that our Engineer-in-Chief and his staff are continually and strenuously working towards greater efficiency and economy, and on the business side, that every possible effort is made to increase our sales.

The undertaking has been built up on sound lines and it is to-day so sound that the worst result we need anticipate, from the fact that the plant proves to have been too heavily extended, at too expensive a time, is reduced rate profit for a few years.

Of the loans of Tls. 3,000,000, sanctioned for this Department last year, only Tls. 2,000,000 was actually issued, and we now owe an overdraft at the Bank and temporary loans from the Council Tls. 1,290,620. We do not require any further loan this year other than the Tls. 1,000,000 which was short issued last year.

I must refer briefly to the disastrous accident which occurred last November at Riverside when the new 20,000—K. W. Parsons Turbine burst, and caused the greatly regretted loss of several valuable lives, and serious injuries to one of our foreign staff. I would take this opportunity of again expressing the sympathy of this Committee and the staff with the relatives of the killed. As shown in the Report full investigation by the Makers' representatives shewed that the accident was due to a defect in the machine, which was quite undiscoverable except by the self-revelation of the accident. The turbine will be replaced by Messrs. Parsons and we hope that in the end there will be no financial loss to the Department from this accident. As it happens, we do not at the moment need this turbine and we do not expect to be inconvenienced by losing the use of it for about two years.

I would like to conclude by expressing the Committee's appreciation of the work of Mr. Aldridge, our Engineer-in-Chief & Manager and the whole of his staff for whose loyal co-operation and keen interest in their work our thanks are due.

Mr. FESSENDEN—Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I now beg to propose ➢

Resolution V.—That the estimated expenditure for 1924, contained in the Budget proposed by the retiring Council, together with the recommendations attached thereto, be approved and adopted, and that the Council be and it is hereby authorized to impose, collect and recover the rates, taxes, dues and fees recommended therein, and to raise, should it be considered expedient to do so, upon such terms and in such manner as the Council may in its discretion think fit, a sum not exceeding Tls. 5,000,000 or the equivalent of this sum, for the purposes defined in the estimate of Extraordinary Expenditure.

Mr. W. P. LAMBE—I have very much pleasure in seconding the resolution.

The CHAIRMAN—Resolution V has been duly proposed and seconded and is now before the meeting.—If no ratepayer wishes to say anything to that resolution, I will put it to the meeting. You have just heard it read by Mr. Fessenden and I do not think you want to hear it read again by me. Those in favour of Resolution No. V kindly signify the same in the usual way—Those against?—Carried.

The CHAIRMAN—Ladies and Gentlemen, with your sanction, we will take Resolution No. VII before Resolution No. VI, the resolution dealing with the Waterworks before the resolution dealing with the Telephone Company. I will now call upon Mr. Fessenden to move Resolution No. VII.

Mr. FESSENDEN—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, You will notice that Resolution 7 is divided into four clauses, and that the first three deal with the proposal that the undertaking be purchased by the Ratepayers. I propose, with your approval, to take the somewhat unusual course of deferring my remarks on these clauses to a later stage of this speech, and to focus your attention for the time being on the fourth and last clause.

You will no doubt have read the Company's letter to the Council dated February 22, containing the Directors' views on the counter offer made by the Council in the matter of the purchase negotiations instituted last year. Towards the end of this letter there is a paragraph in which the Directors indicated that, provided the undertaking is continued as a Limited Company, they were prepared to concede certain principles which have been consistently adhered to by past Councils. The Directors further suggested that they should prepare a scheme for continuing the undertaking as a Limited Company, but on a profit sharing basis and with the Council's interests represented on the Board. In view of the entirely different viewpoints taken by the Council and the Board of the Company, it did not seem to the Council that any useful purpose would be served by encouraging the Directors to proceed with their proposal. On the other hand, the Council has taken the fullest possible advantage of the opportunity offered for devising a scheme under which it may be possible to continue the undertaking as a Limited Company, subject to such control as the Council considers essential. The Council's point of view is a very simple one to explain; it simply resolves itself into this: that the water supply of this rapidly developing Settlement is of such outstanding importance to the community, both now and in the future, that the Council cannot under any circumstances consent to leave it in the unfettered hands of a Board of Directors influenced by a London Committee. In making this statement I am not criticising the past policy of the Directors, but am endeavouring to bring home to you in plain language that under present conditions the interests of the shareholders of the Company and those of the community are in direct conflict. The Council has formed the very definite decision that it is imperative that these conditions should be changed. To be perfectly frank with you, I can definitely state that the Council has no particular desire to shoulder the responsibility of running the Waterworks undertaking as a Municipal department, and only proposes to exercise its power of purchase as a last resort. If any suitable alternative can be found for reconciling the confliction of interests which obtains under present conditions, you may rest assured that the Council is perfectly willing to accept such an alternative. I am now in a position to state with confidence that such an alternative has been found, and that the principles embodied in the Memorandum before you contain a solution of the problem. A few words from me in explanation of these principles will perhaps not be out of place. Our Treasurer and Comptroller has devoted a good deal of his time during the past year to the financial intricacies of the question, and has taken full advantage of the services of the Council's auditors in co-ordinating the mass of figures supplied by the Company. The Memorandum before you is the result of close and continued application; it is not a document that has been hastily drawn up. On the contrary, the closest touch has been maintained with the views of all interested parties, particularly those of the Commissioner of Public Works. Before reaching the Council, each item of the Memorandum had to stand the test of the keenest criticism from the Council's officials and auditors, and criticism was not lacking during the pilotage of the Memorandum through the Finance Committee and the Council.

Turning to the various clauses of the Memorandum, you will notice that the first deals with the issue of bonus shares to the shareholders of the Company. Many of the share issues of the Company have been made at a substantial premium; in other words, the shareholders of the Company have had to pay more than the par value of the shares purchased. If this policy had not been adopted by the Company, a greater number of shares would have been issued to provide the same amount of working capital. The Council considers it only just and equitable that the shareholders as a body should be given the benefit of the amounts they contributed under the heading of "Premia on Shares."

Clause 2 deals with the assets and liabilities of the Plumbing and Fittings Department. This Department has been built up by the enterprise of the Directors and officials of the Company. From time to time the Chairman of the Company has stated that the department earns substantial profits. The Council does not consider that the consumer is, strictly speaking, entitled to share in the profits of this side of the business for the reason that the profits earned are not directly due to the Franchise. The Council is not out to drive too hard a bargain with the Company, and has accordingly proposed the formation of a subsidiary company to take over this branch of the Company's activities. This is quite a simple matter to arrange, and simply means that the assets and liabilities of this department will be transferred from the Parent Company's balance sheet to that of the Subsidiary Company. To fill the void thus created in the balance sheet of the Parent Company there will appear in due course a certain number of shares in the Subsidiary Company. The Council does not propose to interest itself in any way with the doings of this Subsidiary Company. Any dividends that this company may be in a position to declare from time to time will be duly paid to the Parent Company and subsequently distributed by the directors to the shareholders in such a manner as to clearly indicate that this extra dividend is quite independent and apart from the Company's franchise from the Council.

The provisions of Clause 3 are self-explanatory, and all I need do is to explain that the Tariff of Charges which the Company will be invited to draw up will be closely scrutinised by the Council's officials, and the Council will be guided by the opinion of these officials in giving its approval to the charges. The Tariff will not aim at a surplus, but as it will operate for 5 years with interest on capital outlay constantly increasing, it is fairly obvious that a surplus may result in the initial years of its operation, which may be eventually swamped by a deficit occurring in the final year. Whatever the result of its operation may be, it is purely incidental to the Tariff. I want you particularly to note that the dividend offered, although not actually guaranteed, will be as certain as most things are in this life. The only risk that the shareholder will take is under the heading of "Exchange." In Resolution 6 you will have observed that a dividend of 8 per cent. is proposed for the Telephone Company, and you will naturally ask why we propose to allow the Waterworks Company a higher rate of dividend. The explanation is simple. The Telephone Company operates a service of less importance to the ratepayers than their water supply; the Company is a local one, and has not the years of service behind it that the Waterworks Company has. We have endeavoured to be just in recognizing the claims of the sharepany as greater than those of the Company. It is also to be noted that the 9 per cent. dividend will [illegible] bonus shares referred to in Clause [illegible] that the shareholders will also benefit by the profits of the Plumbing and Fittings Department.

The interests of the Company are admittedly on the generous side, but it is our [illegible] the shareholders' interests [illegible] the Company, but to strengthen the financial position of the Company itself in the interests of the community. It is proposed that any yearly surplus resulting from the Company's business shall be transferred to a Tariff Revision Suspense Account, and that the amount to the credit of this account, together with the [illegible] mentioned in the Memorandum, will be taken into consideration at the quinquennial revisions of the tariff by the Council, if the tariff has been framed on too high a basis for the first 5 years (which of course we shall endeavour to prevent), the resulting surplus will be taken into account when framing the tariff for the next 5 years.

Clauses 4, 5, 6 and 7 provide for that measure of control which the Council considers it necessary to exercise over all public utility companies operating in Shanghai. [illegible] meaning and effect of Clause 5 may avoid any misunderstanding arising in the future. What the Council in effect proposes is that a definite line be drawn between the present interests of the shareholders and those of the future. The Council proposes to treat the shareholders of the Company, as regards their interests as they exist to-day, on what it considers to be a fair and [illegible] basis, [illegible] 9 per cent. in gold, plus any profits the Subsidiary Company may earn, compensates the shareholders very adequately for any risks they may have run in the past, and therefore does not propose that the shareholders as they exist to-day shall in any way benefit by the future prosperity of the Company (except to the extent that their security is thereby increased), unless their assistance is necessary in the raising of further capital. In other words, if it is found possible to finance the Company by more economical means than the issue of additional shares, no addition to the share capital will be permitted. On the other hand, the condition of the money market may justify the Council in a further issue of shares. The deciding factor as regards the financing of additional capital outlay will be the interests of the community, and not those of the shareholder. The Council is aware that the Company's Articles of Association contain a clause that the debenture capital shall not be permitted to exceed the nominal share capital without the sanction of a general meeting. The Company's Articles of Association will therefore need revision in this and possibly other particulars at a later stage of the negotiations.

The last paragraph dealing with the extension of the revised Agreement allows the Company to [illegible] undisturbed for the next 20 years, and provides for the option of purchase by the Municipality at the end of this period. When this time arrives, the basis of valuing the Company's property as a going concern without any allowance being made for compulsory purchase or good will may, I do not say will, somewhat simplify the problem that will face a future arbitrator.

Now with regard to Clauses 1, 2 and 3 of Resolution 7, which are similar to those before you last year except that they are entirely free from any qualifications, you will naturally wonder, as the Council is so confident of the equity of its alternative proposals, why it still wishes to have authority to purchase the Undertaking. The reason is quite simple to explain. Although the Council is confident that the Memorandum referred to in Clause 4 contains the solution of this long outstanding question, [illegible] forecast the attitude which the Company will finally adopt towards the Council's proposals. You must remember [illegible] that the Company's Directors have [illegible] justified in placing the shareholders' interests before those of the community. While the Council is of the opinion that the Directors would be acting against the best interests of the shareholders should they [illegible] decisions in the matter of a settlement on the lines of the Memorandum, still, if these decisions do in fact arise, the Council must be prepared to exercise the power of purchase as the only means of obtaining that control over the Company's activities which is deemed essential in the interests of the community. You must understand that in whatever way this question is settled, you will have to pay more for your water. Even if the high price demanded by the Company were agreed to, the Council would still be able to supply the community with water at a price approximately that suggested by the Company. There is, however, every reason to believe that the arbitrators' award would fall short of the Company's figure by some 3 to 4 million of taels, and if this proved to be the case, the Council's price for water would be appreciably lower than the price proposed by the Company.

It does not seem necessary for me to further elaborate this side of the question, except to say that you can rest assured that the Council does not propose to exercise the option of purchase unless and until all efforts at a compromise on a reasonable basis have finally and definitely failed.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to add that since our last exchange of letters with the Company, two informal discussions [illegible] between the Company and the Council. The Memorandum was discussed in all its aspects and it was mutually agreed that no good purpose would be served by confusing the important issues at stake by reference to past correspondence between the Council and the Company. I mention this in order that you may know that a conciliatory atmosphere has been created round this subject, and it will certainly not be the Council's fault if this atmosphere becomes in any way clouded. At the same time I should be wrong in allowing you to infer that the problem is definitely solved. It is not. The Company's representatives have brought forward certain additional proposals which are now being examined. To meet these proposals the Council has already intimated its willingness to stretch a point here and there, particularly as regards a slight reduction in the exchange figure mentioned in the Memorandum. Certain of these points are considered matters of detail which are already covered by Clause 4 of the Resolution. There is one matter, however, which the Council considers a question of principle, and that is whether or not the assets and liabilities of the Shipping Department shall be transferred to the proposed Subsidiary Company in addition to those of the Plumbing & Fittings Department. The Council is prepared to advise you to concede this principle, always however provided that this concession, together with others of minor importance of which I have given you an indication, is accepted by the Company as a "quid pro quo" to be set against those proposals of the Company which the Council cannot under any circumstances agree to. In order to allow the Council a little more latitude than is given in the Memorandum, I now propose, with the Chairman's approval, to delete the words "as to detail" from the fourth Clause of Resolution 7.

I now propose the adoption of Resolution 7 with the omission of the words just mentioned by me from Clause 4.—

Resolution VII. That the Council be and it is hereby authorized:—

(1) To take such action as may be requisite to exercise the powers of purchase vested in the Council under Clause 9 of the agreement made between the Shanghai Waterworks Company, Ltd., and the Council, dated July 1, 1905. And, in the exercise of [illegible] powers, to purchase the business and undertaking of the said Company and all the lands, buildings, plant, machinery and effects belonging to the said Company, and,

(2) To raise upon such terms [illegible] as the Council may, in its discretion, think fit, such sum as may be required to complete the purchase hereinbefore authorised: and, following upon such purchase,

(3) To carry on the business so purchased as a Municipal undertaking (on the general principles laid down in the Report of the Special Electricity Committee, 1915, and adopted by the Ratepayers).

or as an alternative:—

(4) To revise the Agreement made between the Shanghai Waterworks Company, Ltd., and the Council, dated July 1, 1905, so as to embody the principles outlined in the Council's Memorandum dated April 7, 1924, with such modifications (if any) as the Council shall think expedient.

I have now pleasure in proposing the adoption of Resolution No. VII, with the omission from Clause 4 of the words I have just mentioned.

Mr. W. P. Lambe—I have great pleasure in seconding the resolution.

The Chairman—Resolution No. VII has been proposed and seconded and is now before the meeting and open to discussion. If no ratepayer has any remarks to offer or questions to ask about this resolution I will now put it to the vote, but as it is an important one I will read it again (Resolution read).

Mr. P. W. Goldring—Mr. Chairman, May I make one remark. It seems to me, Sir, that this resolution cannot be passed as one, because the 'alternative' should be an amendment. I do not see how any sensible body of people can possibly pass the resolution as it stands. The fourth clause is nothing but an amendment. I make that comment. I ask every sensible person here to read it as such. It can be nothing but an amendment and should be moved independently. I would also say, with deference, that each of the clauses should be proposed separately. I put it to you that that would be the proper way. It is not a properly framed resolution.

The Chairman—With regard to the point which has just been raised, it seems to me that this meeting is perfectly in order if it authorizes the Council to take one of two steps, whichever it may choose in its discretion, which is the form in which the resolution runs, clauses one to three being one scheme and the alternative scheme being clause four. If no other ratepayer has anything to say, I will put the resolution and read it to you again. That resolution has been proposed by Mr. Fessenden and seconded by Mr. Lambe. Those in favour signify the same in the usual way.—Those against?—Carried by an overwhelming majority.

The Chairman—Resolution No. VI.—I call upon Mr. Fessenden.

Mr. S. Fessenden—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, Before formally proposing this Resolution, I should like you to know that a letter was received from the Company yesterday agreeing to a revision of the 1907 Agreement on the lines laid down in the Council's Memorandum dated April 3. I have already explained to the best of my ability the various clauses of the Waterworks memorandum, and it does not seem necessary for me to go over what is practically the same ground in connexion with the Telephone memorandum. The Company has asked for some unimportant modifications, and also for further information as to the Council's intentions under certain of the Clauses of the Memorandum. There has not been time for the Council to give any detailed consideration to the letter, but I think I am safe in saying that the points raised by the Company will not be difficult to adjust, and that the matter is on the highway to complete final agreement.

The correspondence between the Council and the Company was published in the Municipal Gazette of April 5, and as both parties are practically agreed on questions of principle, it does not seem necessary for me to do more than hastily congratulate all those who have taken a hand in the negotiations on the highly successful outcome of their labours, which, I may add, have been conducted without even a suggestion of friction on either side. Both parties have made it their business to understand the viewpoint of the other, and if we can only succeed in introducing this principle into discussions on other problems the work of the Council will be materially lightened.

I have much pleasure in proposing:—

Resolution VI.—That the Council be and it is hereby authorized to revise the Agreement made between the Shanghai Mutual Telephone Co., Ld., and the Council dated April 1, 1907, so as to embody the principles outlined in the Council's Memorandum dated April 3, 1924 with such modifications (if any) as to detail as the Council shall think expedient.

Mr. E. F. Mackay—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, I beg to second that resolution.

The Chairman—Resolution No. VI has been duly proposed and seconded and is now before the meeting.—Those in favour signify the same in the usual way?—Against? Carried.

The Chairman—I now call on Mr. Fessenden to move Resolution No. VIII.

REASSESSMENT OF LAND.

Mr. Fessenden—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, it is interesting to note that assessments of land, though supposed to last for a full term of five years, have, in practice, required revision at considerably less periods. In fact, during recent history, only one assessment has remained in operation for its full term, that of 1911. The assessment of 1903 was increased by one third in 1905, and a reassessment was made in 1907: the assessment of 1916 was replaced in 1920 and was again revised in 1922, and it is now proposed, under your direction, to undertake a new assessment during the current year, to come into operation on January 1, 1925.

It is within your knowledge that occupiers of houses, in their contributions to Municipal revenue, are taxed upon the basis of actual rentals, or in the case of houses in the occupation of their owners on the basis of current rental values. Thus taxation in the case of house tax, or, as we call it, General Municipal Rate, is always levied on the values actually obtaining from time to time. On the other hand, in the case of land, taxation is based on the values as ascertained at the time of the last assessment. If, therefore, reassessment is not undertaken when such values have admittedly increased, the balance as between land owners and occupiers of houses in their contributions towards the expenses of the administration is naturally upset.

From the numerous cases of land expropriation which have come before the Council in the course of the past year it is evident that land values, generally speaking, have advanced very considerably since the last assessment. This being so, land is not at the present time bearing its fair share of taxation vis-a-vis the General Municipal Rate, and reassessment should accordingly be undertaken.

I have therefore no hesitation in asking your support of Resolution VIII which reads:—

Resolution VIII.—That the Council be and it is hereby authorized and directed to arrange for the re-assessment of the land comprised within the limits of the Settlement, during the current year, such re-assessment to come into force as from the first day of January, 1925, and to engage such professional assistance for the performance of the work as may be found expedient.

Mr. W. P. Lambe—I have much pleasure in seconding that resolution.

The Chairman—Resolution No. VIII has been duly proposed and seconded and is now before the meeting. Those in favour signify the same in the usual way.—Those against?—Carried.

The Chairman—Mr. Fessenden, Resolution No. IX.

Mr. Fessenden—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen I have much pleasure in moving:—

Resolution IX.—That Mr. C. M. G. Burnie be elected Land Commissioner for the ensuing Municipal year.

Mr. Lambe—I have much pleasure in seconding that resolution.

The Chairman—It has been proposed and seconded that Mr. C. M. G. Burnie be elected Land Commissioner for the ensuing Municipal year. Those in favour?—Those against?—Carried.

The Chairman—Mr. Mackay, Resolution No. X.

Mr. E. F. Mackay—I beg to propose:—

Resolution X.—That Drs. F. M. Neild and S. A. Ransom, and Messrs. S. Fessenden and W. P. Lambe be elected to serve on the Board of Governors of the Shanghai General Hospital.

Mr. V. G. Lyman—It give me much pleasure to second that resolution.

The Chairman—Those in favour of that resolution?—Those against?—Carried. Ladies and Gentlemen, that closes the business of this meeting and I think it is a matter of regret that there is no quorum, so it is impossible to proceed with the business which was notified for the special meeting.

Mr. Fessenden—Before this meeting adjourns, I beg to propose a hearty vote of thanks to Sir Skinner Turner for his services as Chairman to-day.

The vote was carried by acclamation.

The Chairman—Ladies and Gentlemen, thank you very much. I am very glad to help and if all meetings were as kind and nice as this one my task would be a great deal happier than it sometimes is.

Sir Edward Pearce—Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen, before we disperse I should like to propose a vote of thanks, and a hearty one at that, to the Municipal Councillors who are now retiring from office. They have put in a great deal of arduous work during the year, and they have performed it exceptionally well. I ask you to carry the vote by acclamation.

The vote was carried by acclamation.

The meeting terminated at 5.35 p.m.

CHINA Journal of Science & Arts, edited by Mr. A. de C. Sowerby and Dr. J. C. Ferguson, is a bi-monthly, profusely illustrated magazine. It contains authentic articles written by experts on the Arts, Literature and Science of China. The annual subscription is $10.00 Shanghai currency, or $6.00 gold for U.S.A. and Canada. Office:—Room 102, the Ben Building, Shanghai. Central 3247.

THE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE THROUGHOUT THE EAST

QUALITY FIRST WHC PAINT

Varnishes, Enamels, etc.

Large Stocks Kept in China

Wilkinson, Heywood & Clark

SHANGHAI—HONGKONG

SPORTS AND PASTIMES

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

H. M. Consul-General Presents Season's Trophies

There was a big gathering of local football officials, players and supporters at the Customs' Club on Saturday night, the occasion being a smoking concert to mark the termination of the season's activities; and the presentation of the various trophies to the winners, by Mr. Sidney Barton, C.M.G., H. M. Consul-General, who is Patron of the Shanghai Football Association.

Mr. John Prentice, the Association's President, was in the Chair, being supported by Mr. Barton, Messrs. W. S. Campbell and R. Grimshaw, Vice-Presidents of the Association, Mr. L. A. Lyall, Commissioner of Customs, Mr. F. S. Bridges, and others.

An attractive programme of entertainment had been arranged, and excellent items were rendered by Messrs S. Webb (piano), Ferguson, Stoddart, Van Huyst (violin), G. B. Stormes and Jefferson.

A feature of the affair was the Churchwarden pipes, one of which was available for everyone present. It speaks volumes for the pluck and temerity of Shanghai's footballers that hardly a pipe remained unsmoked, though obviously the implement was new (and possibly fearsome) to most of those who decided to risk it. Few, however, managed to carry on with the pipe throughout the evening, and if a cherub-faced wicket-keeper, who usually keeps to cigarettes, threw his on to the floor after he had begun to change colour, who shall blame him?

In presenting the trophies, Mr. Barton made a very happy speech. He admitted at the outset that he was not such a regular attendant at soccer matches as was his predecessor, the late Sir Everard Fraser, the chief reason being that he usually made Saturday afternoon an opportunity for exercise. However, from what he had seen and from what he knew of the season's football, he was sure that it had been a successful one and that the play had been good.

There was one subject he meant to touch upon, and although it was bound up in the question of grounds, he ventured to express the hope that any difficulty that at present might be evident would eventually be overcome. He referred to the question of the inclusion of Chinese teams in the competition of the International Cup, and possibly the League also. He felt sure that those present would sympathise with the aspirations of the Chinese. Bringing Chinese teams into competition with the other teams would further instil into the Chinese players many of those British virtues that went with Association football. Soccer was quite as good a game as basketball and he hoped that before long we should see Chinese football teams included in some of the competitions managed by the Shanghai Football Association.

Mr. Barton then presented the various trophies. The Skottowe Cup, won by the Shanghai Recreation Club, was taken over by Mr. E. Turner, the Recs' popular captain, who also took the International Cup on behalf of England, and the Dewar Shield (First League) which again has been won by the S.R.C. In receiving the trophies, Mr. Turner made an appropriate little speech, in which he wished the Recs' rivals generally, and the S.F.C. particularly, better luck next season. Mr. L. Goldman received the Engineers' Challenge Cup on behalf of the Shanghai Football Club, returning thanks in a brief speech. The Reside Shield (Second League), won by the Portuguese Sporting Association, was received by Mr. H. Collaco, the captain of the team, and a player responsible in no small measure for his team's remarkable record in the competition. In returning thanks to Mr. Barton, he mentioned that the P.S.A. probably would enter the First Division next season, an announcement that was received with applause. The ceremony terminated with three cheers for the Consul-General, which were given with great gusto.

INTER-CLUB GOLF

Shanghai v. Hungjao

At Kiangwan on Sunday the Shanghai and Hungjao Golf Clubs met and the result was a decisive win for Shanghai. Singles were played in the morning and four ball matches in the afternoon, and in both cases the senior club's representatives proved their superiority. Details:—

SHANGHAI.

Singles.

N. M. Budd	1
E. I. M. Barrett	½
J. F. Pilcher	0
A. Gray	1½
J. L. Crompton	0
C. T. Beath	½
C. Richards	0
C. W. Porter	1
E. Lester Arnold	1½
W. S. Clay	1
O. H. Blackburn	1
R. G. MacDonald	1
	8

Four Ball Matches.

Budd and Barrett	2
Pilcher and Gray	2½
Crompton and Beath	0
Richards and Porter	0
Arnold and Clay	2
Blackburn and MacDonald	2
	8½
Grand total	16½

HUNJAO.

Singles.

H. Martin Little	½
J. Oswald	1
P. Peebles	4
J. E. Murray	0
T. M. Burton	1½
K. M. Cumming	1
W. J. Hawkings	1
A. B. Lowson	0
R. J. Marshall	0
C. M. G. Burnie	0
H. Lipson Ward	0
T. J. Fisher	0
	4½

Four Ball Matches.

Little and Oswald	0
Peebles and Murray	0
Burton and Cumming	0
Hawkings and Lowson	0
Marshall and Burnie	0
Ward and Fisher	0
	0
Grand total	4½

GOLF IN PEKING

Peking, Apr. 10.

A return inter-club match has been arranged between the Peking Golf and Country Club and the Paomachang Golf Club to take place next Sunday, April 13, on the Peking Golf and Country Club course, commencing at 10 a.m. The match will consist of singles in the morning and two-ball foursomes in the afternoon.

The Peking Golf and Country Club will be represented by Messrs. Schmorz, J. W. Stephenson, J. F. Black, Y. Mishima, Fowler, Takauchi, C. R. Bennett and T. C. White, and the Paomachang Golf Club by Mr. D. A. Johnston, Capt. N. P. Baldwin, Mr. W. A. Grant, Dr. A. Shoemaker, Messrs. B. F. Kirby, E. H. Cartwright, A. H. Forbes and another.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

INTERPORT LAWN TENNIS

Hongkong, Apr. 14.

Mr. T. Honda, the Japanese ex-champion of Malaya, to-day defeated Mr. Ng Sze-kwong, tennis champion of Hongkong for the last six years, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

SHANGHAI HARRIERS

Club Championship

The race for the trophy presented by the "North-China Daily News" and the honour of being Club champion was keenly contested on Saturday over a stiff course. In the absence of Remedios and McLaren, who have been unable to train up to championship form, Azevedo and Henry Atkinson were expected to give Rose a close race. The first mile saw McKenna leading the field, and then Rose forged ahead, with Young and Harold Atkinson a few yards behind, followed by Azevedo. At three miles Rose was leading, running very nicely, and had secured a good lead of about 200 yards. Rose maintained the lead to the finish and won a fast-run race in excellent style. Harold Atkinson sprang a surprise by finishing in second place and also won the sealed handicap, which was ably framed by C. C. Reneman. Azevedo took third place in the championship and second in the handicap.

All three placed men had put in some hard training for this event and ran exceedingly well. Azevedo was expected to be the runner-up to Rose, but had to be content with third place, Henry Atkinson had an off day and could not even give a glimpse of the form which he had shown earlier in the season.

Results:—

CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.

1.—George Rose, 36 min. 36⅘ sec.
2.—Harold Atkinson, 37 min. 47⅕ sec.
3.—Joe Azevedo, 39 min. 2⅕ sec.

SEALED HANDICAP.

1.—Harold Atkinson.
2.—Joe Azevedo.
3.—George Rose.

The Club championship closed the Harriers' cross-country season.

INTERNATIONAL CHESS TOURNAMENT

Capablanca Drawing Near Lasker

New York, Apr. 11.

In the eighteenth round of the International Chess Tournament, Mr. Yates beat M. Tartakower, Mr. Marshall beat M. Bogoljubow and M. Capablanca beat Mr. Edward Lasker. Dr. Lasker drew with M. Alekhin and M. Maroczy drew with M. Reti.

By his victory M. Capablanca has reduced the gap between him and Dr. Lasker, the leading scores at the end of the round being:—

Dr. Lasker	12 points
M. Capablanca	11 points
M. Alekhin	9½ points

Mr. Yates is now ninth with 5½ points and one game adjourned.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Apr. 12.

In the nineteenth round of the International Chess Tournament, the English player Mr. Yates, beat M. Reti, the vanquisher of M. Capablanca, at the 24th move.

M. Capablanca defeated M. Tartakower, M. Alekhine beat M. Janowski and Dr. Lasker beat Mr. Edward Lasker, while Mr. Marshall drew with M. Maroczy.

In the adjourned games of the International Chess Tournament, M. Bogoljubow beat Mr. Yates and M. Alekhine drew with W. M. Bogoljubow.—Reuter's American Service.

Dr. Lasker Still Leading

New York, Apr. 13.

The leading scores at the end of the 19th round of the International Chess Tournament are as follows:—Dr. Lasker, 13 points; M. Capablanca, 12 points; M. Alekhine, 11; Mr. Marshall and M. Reti, each 9½ points. Mr. Yates, who defeated M. Reti brilliantly, is ninth with 6½ points.

Apr. 13.

In the 20th round of the International Chess Tournament, Mr. Edward Lasker beat M. Reti, Dr. Lasker beat Maroczy, M. Capablanca drew with Mr. Yates, and M. Alekhine drew with Mr. Marshall.

Later.

By defeating M. Maroczy, whilst M. Capablanca only drew with Mr. Yates, Dr. Lasker has practically made certain of winning the first prize in the International Chess Tournament.

In order to win the first prize, M. Capablanca must win, and Dr. Lasker must lose, both the remaining games.

Mr. Edward Lasker, by surprisingly defeating M. Reti, took fourth place. M. Reti is now fifth.—Reuter's American Service.

New York, Apr. 15.

In the twenty-first round of the international Chess Tournament, M. Maroczy beat M. Boguljubow, M. Capablanca beat M. Reti, Mr. Marshall beat Mr. Yates, and Dr. Lasker beat M. Tartakower.—Reuter's American Service.

ENGLAND v. SCOTLAND

International Association Match Drawn

London, Apr. 12.

In an International Association football match at Wembley Stadium to-day, England drew with Scotland, each scoring one goal. The weather was showery. There were 65,000 spectators.

It was a splendid and open game, full of thrilling runs and quick changes of scene. Both goals had many narrow escapes. Five minutes from the interval, following a free-kick against England, Cowan, the Scottish inside, netted. The score at half-time was one nil in Scotland's favour.

Thirteen minutes after resumption Jack and Buchan headed towards the Scottish goal, and Walker, England's inside-left, dashing up, crashed the ball into the net. The game continued to be finely contested but there was no further scoring. The result, one goal all, leaves England at the bottom of the Championship table.—Reuter.

Cuticura Talcum Is Ideal For Baby's Skin

After a warm bath with Cuticura Soap baby knows there is nothing more refreshing for his tender skin than Cuticura Talcum. If his skin is irritated or rashy Cuticura Ointment is soothing and healing.

Soap 1s., Talcum 1s. 3d., Ointment 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. Sold throughout the Empire. British Depot: F. Newbery & Sons, Ltd. 27 Charterhouse Sq., London, E.C.1.

Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS

In the outports can rely on fresh supplies of Films, Plates and Papers and all Photo Sundries by sending to Mactavish & Co., Ld.

The Hongkew Medical Hall, Shanghai.

Developing and Printing by experienced operators.

OVER HALF A CENTURY REPUTATION
Dr. LE CLERC'S PILLS FOR THE LIVER & KIDNEYS
INVALUABLE for DISEASES of these important ORGANS—GRAVEL, BACKACHE, GOUT, RHEUMATISM.
Price 2s., leading CHEMISTS throughout the World.
Dr. LE CLERC Med. Co., Haverstock Rd., N.W.5, London
Dr. LE CLERC'S VEG. APERIENT PILLS.
Dr. LE CLERC'S PILLS FOR ANÆMIA.
SAFE & RELIABLE FOR LADIES AILMENTS
Dr. LE CLERC'S SOAP, 1s. or 6 Tablets 5s.

EAST ASIATIC Co., Ld.
(Aktieselskabet Det Ostasiatiske Kompagni)
COPENHAGEN
TO THE EAST.

Japan Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to HONGKONG, SHANGHAI, KOBE, YOKOHAMA, DALNY and VLADIVOSTOCK.

Bangkok Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG, MIDDLESBROUGH and ANTWERP to PORT SAID, COLOMBO, PENANG, SINGAPORE and BANGKOK.

Java Line:
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA and HAMBURG to BATAVIA, SAMARANG and SOURABAYA.

TO SOUTH AFRICA.
Sailings from DENMARK, NORWAY, SWEDEN and BALTIC PORTS to CAPE TOWN, ALGOA BAY, EAST LONDON, DURBAN, DELAGOA BAY and BEIRA.

TO AUSTRALIA.
Sailings from DENMARK, NORWAY, SWEDEN, HAMBURG and LISBON to FREMANTLE, ADELAIDE, MELBOURNE, SYDNEY and BRISBANE.

TO NORTH PACIFIC
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA, HAMBURG and ANTWERP to ST. THOMAS (with transhipment to the GREATER and LESSER ANTILLES), CRISTOBAL (with transhipment to CENTRAL AMERICAN PORTS), LOS ANGELES HARBOUR, SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND (Ore.), SEATTLE, TACOMA and VANCOUVER (with transhipment to other NORTH PACIFIC PORTS).

TO SOUTH PACIFIC.
Sailings from COPENHAGEN, GOTHENBURG, CHRISTIANIA HAMBURG and ANTWERP to ST. THOMAS (with transhipment to the GREATER and LESSER ANTILLES), CRISTOBAL (with transhipment to CENTRAL AMERICAN PORTS), GUAYAQUIL, CALLAO, MOLLENDO, IQUIQUE, ANTOFAGASTA, VALPARAISO, TALCHUANO and CORRAL (with transhipment to other SOUTH PACIFIC PORTS).

For further particulars apply to—
THE EAST ASIATIC CO., LTD., COPENHAGEN.
Telegrams: "Orient."
UNITED KINGDOM—JAPAN and BANGKOK LINES: Escombe, McGrath & Co., London, Glasgow, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, Grimsby, Middlesbrough, Greenock, Immingham and Southampton.
JAVA, SOUTH AFRICA and AUSTRALIA LINES: J. E. HYDE & Co., London.
PACIFIC LINES: United Baltic Corporation, Ltd., 158 Fenchurch Street, London. Tel.: "Orientcake."
SHANGHAI.—The East Asiatic Co., Ltd.

Himrod's ASTHMA CURE
GIVES INSTANT RELIEF

Over 40 years ago the Late Lord Beaconsfield testified to the benefits he received from Himrod's Asthma Cure, and every post brings similiar letters to-day.

FAMED FOR 50 YEARS
Sold in tins by all Chemists and Stores throughout the country
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

Never Be Without
Zam-Buk
THE GREAT HERBAL SKIN CURE
FREE FROM ALL ANIMAL FATS
ZAM-BUK is the purest, safest and most wonderful skin remedy the world has ever known. Whether it be a cut, burn or scald, a bite or sting, a festered, inflamed or poisoned wound, eczema, itch, psoriasis, heat rash, ringworm, chronic sores, ulcers, abscesses or swellings—Zam-Buk should always be applied with the least possible delay.
This precious herbal balm UPROOTS DISEASE. It soothes, heals and purifies the skin in a way utterly impossible to any crude salve or fatty animal ointment.
All medicine dealers sell Zam-Buk
17499

Agents:—Messrs. Wakefield & Co. (China), Ltd., S. Y. Sheng Building, Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

LAW REPORTS

A TRAGIC RECITAL IN BRITISH COURT

Husband's Forgery of his Wife's Name th Promissory Note: Declaration of Trust and a Cheque: Fraud Revealed by Death

In H. M. Supreme Court, on Tuesday Sir Skinner Turner heard what he subsequently declared to be "one of the saddest and most tragic cases I have ever had to try." It was an action brought by Mrs. Floy Belle Bickel against the Oriental Commercial Bank, Ld., for the return of title deeds to the house and land at 1251 Rue Lafayette, which, without her authority, were hypothecated to the bank for a loan to her late husband of Tls. 3,000 and Tls. 1,000 on promissory notes. Mr. Tycho Wing and Mr. F. J. Schuhl appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Ranald G. McDonald for the defendants.

Mr. Wing said that it was a case of a very painful nature and the plaintiff was reluctant to bring it into Court because of the revelations that would have to be made. The deeds related to Mrs. Bickel's own personal property. She had been married for six years and lived with her husband on terms of perfect mutual confidence and trust. They had a safe in their house, the combination of which was known to them both and it was in that safe that the deeds were kept. These deeds were removed from the safe and passed into the hands of the defendants, but Mrs. Bickel did not know they had gone until long afterwards. The defence was that the deeds were given to the bank for a promissory note entered into by the husband and wife jointly and the bank held a document on which appeared signatures said to be those of Bickel and the plaintiff. She did not sign the document, she had not received any part of the money, nor did she know anything of the transaction until after Bickel's death. The wife's signature on the promissory note purported to have been witnessed, but the attesting witness never did in fact see Mrs. Bickel sign and she never did sign. Perhaps it was noteworthy that the bank apparently never made any inquiry whatsoever; they did not see Mrs. Bickel, they did not ascertain that the attesting witness was in fact an attesting witess and they did not, as one would have thought any bank would have done, make inquiry as to whether Mrs. Bickel was hypothecating her personal property. The title deed was the wife's name alone and there was no doubt there had been a forgery in the case. Mrs. Bickel was not in any financial difficulty, whatever was the case with her husband, for she had other securities on which she could have negotiated a loan far larger than the other one. After Bickel's death his desk at the Oriental Press was opened and some documents were found and it could be inferred from them why Mrs. Bickel's signature was obtained. The plaintiff claimed that the promissory note was a forgery and therefore not binding and the bank should suffer for its own mistake.

The Judge—It is a question as to which of two innocent parties should suffer?

Mr. Wing—I say the bank was negligent, but not only that, for the bank's title to the deeds rests upon a forgery.

Mrs. Bickel [illegible] said that she was the widow of Phillip Luke Bickel. They were married four years ago. She lived in her own house, Rue Lafayette, which she bought with her own personal [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] ed that the rate should be fixed at the rate prevailing on the date of paying in. On the other hand they had the more recent cases in London where the point arose and in these the judgments had been against those of his predecessors. It seemed to him, therefore, (and he said it with a certain amount of deference because what he proposed to hold was contrary to what had been held in that Court before) he would have to uphold the Home decisions. In all the cases in England they had to go to the date of the breach to decide the rate of exchange. In this case there was no dispute, but what the date of the breach was the date when the collision occurred. He repeated that he felt the difficulty in which he was placed when going against previous decisions in Shanghai, but at the same time it had to be remembered that the point had never been carefully argued here. Furthermore it was possible that in those days the great fluctuations of exchange which had arisen in recent years did not apply and the matter was not then of any very great importance. A good deal had passed in the courts at Home since any one of these three judgments, and the matter had been argued very completely for both sides. It had never been settled in the Shanghai Court in any way that was binding on his Lordship, and he held, therefore, that the money must be paid into Court at the rate of exchange prevailing on the day of the breach, that was on the day of the collision. Plaintiffs liability would be limited to £8 per ton, less crew space, etc., amounting to £25,720, together with interest at 7 per cent. per annum reckoned from the date of the collision to the date of paying-in. Advertisements to be brought to the notice of claimants would be published in the "North China Daily News," the "Sinwanpao" and the "Chungying," all claims to be made within 60 days of the appearance of the advertisements. Costs of the action would be borne by plaintiffs.

SIKH WITNESS'S CONDUCT IN THE BOX

Refusal to Hold the Book: But "Just as Likely to Tell Truth"

In H. M. Supreme Court, on Monday, before his Honour Judge Grain, the Shanghai Municipal Council sued Soocha Singh, one of the ex-Granthis of the Sikh Gurdwara, on account of the non-return of a winter suit and a sheet, respectively valued at $21 and $3.71.

Mr. E. T. Maitland, prosecuting on behalf of the Municipal Council, said that Soocha Singh was allowed to resign his position as Granthi on January 1 this year and the articles mentioned were part of his equipment which he had failed to return.

Inspector Abbott, a Sikh Havildar and a Chinese storekeeper from the Gordon Road police depôt proved the issue of defendant's equipment and the return of everything except the suit and sheet.

After having been sworn, Soocha Singh, contrary to the custom of the Sikhs, who hold the Book in their hands all the time they are giving evidence, placed it on the desk and refused to take it again.

The Judge—Well, I don't mind. I suppose he is just as likely to tell the truth either way.

Capt. E. I. M. Barrett—It is a very strict Sikh custom. The Book must be held in their hands.

The Judge—And if he doesn't?

Capt. Barrett—Then his evidence is of no value.

The defendant then picked up the Book, but again put it down after saying a few words. He said that he and another Granthi were dismissed from the force, though they had committed no fault. They were bringing an action against the Municipal Council and because of this the police were taking advantage of them.

The defendant produced a receipt for the return of his equipment. This was examined by a Sikh Havildar who issued it and who said that he entered only one winter suit on it, but the figure since had been altered to "two." Defendant replied that he was told to alter the figure because he did not admit that there was a suit short. There was a sheet short: it had been taken by his washerman and he was prepared to pay for it.

The Judge said that the defendant had a right to some wear of the articles, but the Council also had the right to charge the full cost of replacement. Therefore he would give judgment for the full value and leave it to the Council's discretion as to how much they would recover.

HOLE IN A PERSIAN CARPET

Judge's Disagreement with Litigant that One Would Spoil a Rug

Before his Honour Judge Grain, at H. M. Supreme Court on Monday, H. M. D. Rizaief sued Arts & Crafts, Ld., for Tls. 500, the value of a Persian carpet alleged to have been damaged whilst in their keeping. Mr. A. C. Holborow appeared for the defendants.

Plaintiff said that on May 1, 1923, he delivered three Persian carpets to the defendants for storage. About June or July, he took two prospective buyers to see them and they then were in good condition. In November he took another prospective buyer round and then noticed that one carpet was damaged, a piece having been torn out near the fringe. The defendants offered him Tls. 5 compensation, without prejudice, and subsequently withdrew the offer when he threatened legal action. He bought the carpet for about Tls. 350, but he could not replace it for Tls. 500.

In cross-examination, plaintiff denied that the carpet ever had been hung up: it was too big for that. The Persians only hung rugs on their walls. The carpet was transferred from the warehouse to the showroom and it was his opinion that it was damaged during the journey, probably by the wheel of a cart, motor-car or wheelbarrow.

The carpet was was produced in court and besides the damage mentioned by plaintiff Mr. Holborow pointed out other marks and asked if they were nail holes, suggesting that, as they were at regular intervals, they indicated that the carpet had been hung up. Witness said that he did not think they were nail holes, but whatever they were they indicated even more damage than he had noticed before. They were not there when he had the carpet. He thanked the defendants very much for drawing his attention to them.

Mr. Holborow—I have something else to show you which you may want to thank me for.

Counsel then pointed out another mark which he suggested was a burn, possibly from a cigar. Witness agreed that it might be and it might have been caused by himself, but he would make no suggestion, because, whatever it was, it did not affect the value of the carpet. The reserve price put on the carpet at auction was Tls. 150.

LIKE MENDING HOLE IN DRESS SUIT.

Answering the Judge, plaintiff said that, if he had the carpet mended, it would be like mending a hole in a dress suit.

The Judge said that personally he had seen it done and also had had his own carpets done, both in Persia and Constantinople.

Plaintiff—A carpet mended would only be seen in very poor or low class houses.

The Judge—Oh, come come! You can see them in very rich men's houses.

Plaintiff said that he could have the carpet mended for about Tls. 25, but the carpet would be spoiled.

In support of his statements, plaintiff called an auctioneer, a removal coolie and a prospective buyer, but all said that, though they did not notice any defects in the carpet, they would not say there were none, because they had not examined it sufficiently closely.

Mr. M. Berry, an employee in Arts & Crafts, said that at the end of last season they had approximately 10,000 carpets in storage, of an insured value of Tls. 1,000,000. He described the treatment of carpets when they were taken in and the method of storage and said that it was absolutely impossible for a carpet to be damaged as this one was, either by the treatment or storage. It was his opinion that the holes were caused by nails, possibly when the carpet was on the floor and the other damage probably was caused by the carpet being hung on a wall. The holes were not of recent date.

Mr. R. Donohoe, a carpet manufacturer, said that he had lived in Persia and in that country he had seen carpets 18 ft. to 20 ft. long hanging on the walls. The small holes in the plaintiff's carpet in his opinion were caused by nails and the larger tear might have been made either by a nail or by a furniture caster catching in the fringe. It was an old tear, because the wool had come out.

A Chinese storekeeper at Arts & Crafts said that he received three carpets from the plaintiff. Two were in good condition, but the other (the one in court) was damaged and he reported that fact to the man over him. The Chinese chief storekeeper corroborated this.

On this evidence the Judge said that he need not hear Mr. Holborow. He was compelled to accept the evidence of the last two witnesses. There would be judgment for the defendants with costs.

ROWARTH TRIAL PERJURY CHARGES

Mother and Daughter Before British Magistrate

The arrest of Mrs. Judith Rowarth and her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Davis, in circumstances already reported, was followed by their appearance at H. M. Police Court on Monday before Mr. G. W. King, Against Mrs. Rowarth, who is 64 years of age, there are two charges, viz:

That between May 4 and June 29, 1923, she conspired together with Cecilia Sequeira, a Portuguese subject, to defeat the ends of justice by keeping a material witness in hiding and from appearing at the trial of Rex. v. Rowarth.

Further, that being a person legally summoned as a witness in the trial, she falsely and knowingly swore that she did not see the complainant Bakhar Singh on May 4 (the day of the attack upon him), that she knew nothing of the attack upon him, and that she was never at her daughter's house on the evening of that day.

The charge against Mrs. Davis was that she falsely and knowingly swore that Mrs. Rowarth did not go out of her house before supper, i.e. before 8.30 p.m. on May 4.

On the application of Mr. E. T. Maitland, Police Prosecutor, the name of W. H. Goulbourn, who has already been committed for trial on a charge of perjury in the case, was struck out from the present charge of conspiracy, and counsel intimated that he proposed first to deal with the charges against Mrs. Rowarth.

In answer to the Magistrate, accused said that they clearly understood the charges. Asked if they wished to be legally represented, Mrs. Davies answered that efforts were being made to engage a lawyer on their behalf.

In these circumstances no evidence was taken, and the accused were remanded in custody until next morning.

Conspiring to Keep a Witness in Hiding

The story of the murderous attack upon the Sikh moneylender, Pakhar Singh, was told again at H. M. Police Court on Tuesday.

Mr. E. T. Maitland conducted the prosecution, Mr. S. H. Lewis appeared for the defence, and Mr. Mansel Reece watched the case on behalf of W. H. Goulbourn, who has already been committed for trial on a charge of perjury.

Mr. Maitland having outlined the case for the prosecution, called Det. Sub. Inspector Quaylo to give evidence of arrest. The Inspector stated that on Sunday he arrested the accused on board the str. Sinkiang. The warrant was issued on March 10, but the two women had then left Shanghai. Mrs. Davis explained that she went away on account of some trouble with her brother. Asked why she returned, she stated that the Hongkong police had informed her that she and her mother were wanted in Shanghai, and they put them on board the Sinkiang. Mrs. Rowarth said nothing.

MR. ROWARTH'S ALIBI.

Speaking as to the trial of Mrs. Rowarth on a charge of attempting to murder Pakhar Singh, witness went on to say that Mrs. Rowarth then gave evidence that she went to her daughter's house on the afternoon the crime took place, taking some sewing with her and watching the rest of the company play mahjongg. She remained there until after dinner, and then went with a party to the Isis Theatre to see a picture (which Mr. Maitland recalled was entitled "The Power of a Lie."). Mrs Rowarth added that they left the theatre at 11.5, and she went straight home. She denied that she saw Pakhar Singh that night, and said she knew nothing of the assault until she saw it in the newspapers. Mrs. Davis gave evidence that her mother was in the house all that evening and did not leave until after dinner, when the party left for the theatre. When Mrs. Rowarth was first arrested, witness questioned Mrs. Davis as to the Chinese amah, and the reply was that the amah had left her employ but that she would endeavour to ascertain her whereabouts and inform the the police, but this she never did.

The assault took place in the country off Kwenming Road, witness continued. Mrs. Davis lived in Kwangtung Road, Mrs. Rowarth in an alleyway off Woosung Road, and Pakhar Singh in Miller Road. Witness had made a test and found that a ricsha journey from the house of Mrs. Davis to that of Mrs. Rowarth occupied 10 minutes, from the house of Mrs. Rowarth to that of Pakhar Singh three minutes, and from Pakhar Singh's house to the scene of the assault, 22 minutes, and the same time back to Mrs. Rowarth's house Leave was granted to Mr. Lewis to reserve cross-examination, counsel only just having received instructions to defend, and the same course was followed with all witnesses heard during the day.

THE WOUNDED INDIAN.

Pakhar Singh, the man who was attacked by Chinese and left for dead, re-told his story as to the visit of Mrs. Rowarth and the amah on the evening in question, with the tale that the accused had discovered the residence of a Chinese woman who owed him money, Mrs. Rowarth offering to direct him to the place. Witness demurred, as it was growing dark, but being asked by Mrs. Rowarth why he was afraid, finally consented to accompany her. On nearing the place where the assault took place witness hesitated to go forward, the spot being a lonely one, and Mrs. Rowarth, pointing to a bungalow near by, said that her daughter, Mrs. Davis, was within, and he had better go on, otherwise he would not get his money. So they went forward, the amah leading and carrying a lantern, and Mrs. Rowarth bringing up the rear. After proceeding a little way along a footpath he was attacked by Chinese, two of them holding him from behind and one in front striking at him with a chopper. He was left for dead in the cornfield through which the path ran, and was found there by the police next morning.

Detailing his financial transactions with the accused, witness said that Mrs. Rowarth had borrowed $100 and paid 2 per cent. per month interest, and Mrs. Davis borrowed $800 at the same rate of interest, but her interest had not been paid for two months before the assault took place. Mrs. Davis was guarantor for the $100, and "Dolly" (Mrs. Davis's daughter) guarantor for the $800. "Dolly" also owed witness $200, and this was guaranteed by another Mrs. Davis.

THE AMAH'S STATEMENT.

The amah also repeated the story she had told as to visiting the Sikh's house with Mrs. Rowarth and inviting him to accompany them to the house in which the Chinese debtor was said to live, witness having first been instructed by Mrs. Rowarth to say that she knew where the place was. When they got to the footpath, Mrs. Rowarth told witness to go on ahead with the lantern. When the assault took place witness ran away and, having found her way back to Mr. Rowarth's house, found the old woman inside. Upon telling her that the Sikh had been assaulted, Mrs. Rowarth said "Don't tell lies." Witness then reported the matter to Mrs. Davis, and she said she would speak to her mother about it next day. About a fortnight later, Mrs. Davis dispensed with witness's services as amah, saying that an old amah had returned to her employ, and after this a room was rented for witness by Mrs. Rowarth, who paid the rent and from time to time brought witness money and rice. "Dolly" also called occasionally. Witness did not go outside the house until payment of the rent was stopped.

Mr. R. F. le Mesurier, Chief Clerk at H. M. Supreme Court, produced the official records of the trial of Mrs. Rowarth, and said that both the accused gave evidence on oath to prove an alibi, Mrs. Rowarth being acquitted.

When the proceedings were resumed in the afternoon, the Chinese woman from whom the room was rented for the amah gave evidence, saying her house was situated in Chaoufoong Road outside the Settlement. The amah remained there in idleness for three or four months, rent and food being provided by an old foreign woman who called at the place three or four times. She came at night and went in by the back door, so that witness did not see her. She did not recognize either of the accused as having called at the house. Another foreign woman and a man were also visitors.

An itinerant shoemaker who has his stall in the street or alleyway where Mrs. Davis lived, told the Court that he became acquainted with the amah employed by Mrs. Davis. The girl left the place about a fortnight before the detectives called, and witness promised a Chinese detective he would assist in tracing her. He was particularly interested in the girl because she owed him for a pair of shoes.

This was the case for the prosecution.

THE CASE OF MRS. DAVIS

His Worship asked what evidence there was connecting Mrs. Davis with the charge of conspiracy.

Mr. Maitland, in reply, emphasized that Mrs. Rowarth, Mrs. Davis and "Dolly" were over head and ears in debt to the Sikh, and each appeared to have stood guarantor for the other. It was significant that, directly following a private conversation between Mrs. Rowarth and Mrs. Davis, the latter came from the room and told the amah that her services were no longer required, and Mrs. Rowarth then took the girl away to the room in Chaoufoong Road.

His Worship—Who is the other lady mentioned in the conspiracy charge?

Mr. Maitland—Miss Sequeira, a Portuguese lady, who gave evidence in the Supreme Court.

His Worship—What evidence is there that the two accused conspired with her to put the Chinese witness out of the way?

Mr. Maitland—I must ask you to strike out the name of Miss Sequeira from the charge, there being no evidence, making the charge that the two accused conspired together.

This amendment was made, and on the application of Mr. Lewis the hearing was adjourned until next day.

Cross-Examination of Witnesses for Prosecution: Case Against Goulbourn Abandoned

The hearing was continued on Wednesday.

Mr. E. T. Maitland prosecuted and Mr. S. H. Lewis defended.

Mr. T. W. R. Wilson, assistant surveyor in the P. W. D., put in plans showng the place where the assault is alleged to have taken place, and also the residences of people concerned in the case, and distances from point to point.

Det.-Sub.-Inspector Quayle, recalled and questioned by Mr. Lewis, stated that the Chinese amah was arrested on March 2 and, although the charge against her had been withdrawn, she had been detained at the Mixed Court. He went on to say that no charge was preferred against the two accused at Hongkong, where they stated that they would waive their rights of extradition and were perfectly willing to come back to Shanghai.

Mr. Lewis That means that their return was voluntary?

Witness—I would not say that. If they had not returned voluntarily they would have been detained by the Hongkong police.

Mr. Lewis—But they had moved from Macao, and I suggest they were on their way to Shanghai?

Witness—They went there because they knew they were wanted on a charge.

In answer to the Magistrate, witness stated that a few days after the assault took place the police had evidence implicating Mrs. Rowarth, but they did not arrest her until after the Sikh came out of hospital, wishing to be quite sure that she was the woman whose name the Sikh had pointed to on the promissory note. They also knew from the first that the amah was an important witness.

BAD LANGUAGE.

Bakhar Singh, in cross-examination, questioned with regard to the witness Hassan Ali (who has stated that he was present at Pakhar's house when Mrs. Rowarth and the amah called on him on the evening in question), said that Hassan had gone to Mexico, but he was unable to say for what reason or where he obtained the money to go. It was true, witness added, that he was so badly knocked about that when in hospital he did not remember very much of what took place. Mrs. Rowarth was there when the assault began, but he had not said she was there the whole time. He was attacked by a Chinese wearing a short black jacket, who, upon rushing at him, used very [illegible] which witness knew a little.

Mr. Lewis—You seem to know some of the bad words!

Witness—Yes, I know them all.

Pakhar [illegible] a Chinese [illegible] and this was [illegible] by a Mrs. Davis, but he did not know [illegible] Mrs. Davis's living in the neighbourhood.

THE AMAH'S EVIDENCE.

Returning to the witness-box, the Chinese amah was recalled for cross-examination by Mr. Lewis. She stated that she was 16 years of age according to Chinese reckoning, her actual age now being 15, and 14, at the time of the assault.

It was pointed out to witness that she had stated that she ran away from the scene without knowing why, but went straight to Mrs. Rowarth and reported that the Indian had been assaulted, to which the latter replied that the Indian had not been assaulted. She asked if it was true that there had been an assault, and Mrs. Rowarth's reply was Nonsense."

Asked whether Mrs. Davis ever visited her at the house in Chaoufoong Road, witness said that she did not, it was the old lady who called and who paid the rent to the landlady. Witness had seen her hand over the money on one occasion. Mrs. Rowarth only called once or twice on two occasions, but in sufficient quantity to keep witness in food during the three or four months she was at the house. Mrs Rowarth also gave her money.

"Have you any idea," the Magistrate asked, "why you were taken to the house in Chaoufoong Road, and why Mrs. Rowarth gave you rice and money?"

Witness — Because I am a motherless poor child.

The Magistrate—That was all you were told?

Witness—Yes.

The Magistrate—Then, when you were asked to leave, why did not you go back to Mrs. Davis or to Mrs. Rowarth and ask for some more money or rice for another month or two?

Witness—She had stopped paying, and I would not ask her for more.

Counsel for the Defence.

This concluded the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Lewis, before proceeding with the defence, asked the Magistrate to say that the accused had no case to answer in reference to the charge of conspiracy. Absolutely no evidence had been produced which in effect showed conspiracy, while the evidence of one witness for the prosecution was decidedly in favour of Mrs. Davis in this respect. If the court found that the conspiracy charge against Mrs. Davis was not proved, the same charge against Mrs. Rowarth must automatically fail. As to the evidence in support of the charge of perjury, the principal witness, the Chinese amah, had given an extremely garbled account of the whole affair, and Hassan Ali was not now produced. Counsel urged that the evidence was not sufficient.

Commenting on Mr. Lewis's argument with regard to the conspiracy charge, the Magistrate recalled a similar case where, one of the accused having been found not guilty, another had to be discharged although he had actually pleaded guilty.

The case was further adjourned until next morning when his Worship said he would decide whether or not charges should be framed against the accused. "You should hope for the best and be ready for the worst," his Worship advised Mr. Lewis.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENT

Charge Against Goulbourn Dropped

An important development in the case occurred in the Supreme Court on Wednesday, when the charge of perjury against William Henry Goulbourn was dropped.

This took place at a sitting before his Honour Judge Peter Grain, Mr. H. P. Wilkinson appearing for the Crown and Mr. Mansel Reece for Goulbourn.

Mr. Wilkinson said that in accordance with the China (Criminal Procedure) Rules of Court, 1913, he abandoned the prosecution of William Henry Goulbourn in this case. The rule had been observed regarding the filing of reasons for the abandonment of the charge.

His Lordship said that he understood Goulbourn had been out on bail. In the circumstances the sureties and recognizances of the bail would be discharged and also the recognizances of the witnesses for the prosecution.

Mr. Wilkinson said that the people summoned for the jury would probably see in the papers that they would not now be required

His Lordship said that that was a matter for the Registry. He [illegible] qur.

THE BARBER, BO'SUN AND BOTTLE

Ye Ho Hei And a 50 Cent Hair Cut

[illegible] the guest [illegible] Kong [illegible] charged [illegible] Mr. Ye Wang [illegible] Mr. Ho Hei [illegible] Quarter [illegible] Wednesday, [illegible] the latter [illegible] such [illegible] [illegible] number of the [illegible] [illegible] by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

YOU MAY NOT UNDERSTAND CUBIST PRINCIPLES

Don't worry about it-!

SMOKE A "Three Castles" AND UNDERSTAND
WHY THIS FAMOUS VIRGINIA CIGARETTE IS SUCH A FAVOURITE.

6-12

MADE IN ENGLAND

This advertisement is issued by the British-American Tobacco Co. (China) Ltd.

FOREIGN TELEGRAMS

THE RUHR FRANCE'S TRUMP CARD IN SETTLEMENT OF REPARATIONS

M. Poincare Not Objecting to Experts' Recommendations if Within Terms of Peace: France's Expected Conditions of Acceptance

Paris, Apr. 11.

M. Poincaré has instructed the French delegation to the Reparations Commission that he does not wish to impose his will with regard to the experts' report. He leaves the delegation a free hand provided the decisions are strictly within the terms of the Peace Treaty.

The Reparations Commission has decided that the experts' reports provide a practical basis for a speedy solution of the reparations problem, and consequently it is prepared to proceed immediately, within the limits of its functions, to approve their conclusions and adopt their methods. The Commission, however, feels compelled to reserve its approval until the Government of the Reich are ready to ensure their cooperation in the scheme.

France's Stipulations.

Later.

As the echo of general applause to the experts' report dies, the difficulty of securing unanimity of the Governments with regard to the application of the experts' plan is becoming increasingly apparent. The French Government are officially silent, but the inspired press indicates that the Ruhr will be France's trump card in the forthcoming inter-Allied negotiations. France will consent to the economic evacuation of the Ruhr on condition that her Allies promise to join her in imposing sanctions in the event of Germany's failure to carry out the plan, and also partial, if not total, cancellation of inter-Allied debts, at least France's debt to Britain.

Undoubtedly France will insist on more effective guarantees than the experts propose.

The interpretation of the text of the experts' report is also likely to be disputed. For example, the Governmental "Petit Parisien" affirms that the experts contemplate progressive economic evacuation of the Ruhr. Thus the negotiations between the Governments are likely to be at the least laborious, especially if a speedy decision, which the experts are understood to consider essential to the success of their plan, is to be reached.—Reuter.

Berlin Inclining to Accept.

Berlin, Apr. 12.

The committee of the Economic Council of the Reich has recommended conditional acceptance of the experts' report. The Government will hear the views of the Premiers of the Federal States on Monday. There appears to be no doubt that it will decide that the report is acceptable as the basis of negotiation for a final reparations settlement.—Reuter.

EXPERTS' REPORT ON REPARATIONS

British Government Ready to Support Scheme in Its Entirety

London, Apr. 15

In the House of Commons to-day, dealing with the reparation experts' report, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald said that the Government attached so much importance to the agreed recommendations, which could be brought into immediate operation, that they were prepared to support the scheme in its entirety, provided all the other parties concerned were willing to take the same course, and had already communicated that view to the Governments concerned, including the United States.

Mr. MacDonald laid stress on the statement in the Dawes committee report that it was an indivisible whole and that the signatories renounced all responsibility if certain of their recommendations were adopted and others rejected.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin declared that Mr. MacDonald would have the united support of the British peoples in his attitude (cheers).

Sir Frederic Wise, Unionist member of Ilford, asked whether the pact fixing Germany's full liability at £6,600,000,000 still stood.

Mr. MacDonald replied that he was fully aware that the report only made provision for six years, beyond which certain machinery continued to operate for an unlimited period, but if all the Governments agreed to put the reports into execution, the total amount payable by Germany would be a matter of arrangement.—Reuter.

The Ruhr Agreements.

Paris, Apr. 15.

The protocol prolonging the agreements of the M.I.C.U.M. with the Ruhr industrialists states that the approval by the Reparations Commission of the experts' report has opened the way to the settlement of reparations and is likely to facilitate the opening of credits in favour of the Rhenish-Westphalian collieries. The agreement is therefore prolonged until a general settlement of reparations and until June 15 at the latest.—Reuter.

Berlin, Apr. 15.

The Cabinet has decided to accept the experts' report as a basis for negotiations and will inform the Reparations Commission accordingly.

Apr. 16.

The leaders of the Social Democrats and also of the non-Socialist parties have intimated their approval of the Government's action in connexion with acceptance of the reports of the Reparations Committees of Experts.—Reuter.

French Premier's Policy.

Paris, Apr. 16.

Speaking at a Democratic Republican banquet last night for the first time since the publication of the reports of the Committees of Experts, M. Poincaré asseverated that the experts' reports provided the most eloquent justification of French policy, including the occupation of the Ruhr. The reports proved that Germany had fictitiously impoverished herself and was able to pay. The Reparations Commission must now draw up a definite plan to induce Germany to enact legislation and to organize the requisite control. The general lines of such a plan would undoubtedly pre-suppose the restoration of the fiscal and economic unity of the Reich. This, however, could not be restored following a mere declaration of principle. France must only exchange the pledges against more ample and more remunerative ones. There could be no question of withdrawing from the Ruhr before payment of the debts due to France, nor of releasing hold without safe-guarding means of restoring it immediately in case of need.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 15.

It is understood that the German Cabinet are prepared to accept the scheme of the Dawes Committee if the Allies will also accept it as the basis of negotiation along with certain issues outside the scope of the experts' report.—Reuter.

Paris, Apr. 14.—Parliament has adjourned till June.—Reuter.

Berlin, Apr. 14.—The negotiations between the Ruhr mine-owners and the M.I.C.U.M. have resulted in the prolongation of the agreements until June 15.—Reuter.

RUSSIAN MISSION IN ENGLAND

Premier's Address to the Delegates: Propaganda Must Cease, Contractual Agreements Be Carried Out, and British Interests in Russia Justlo Dealt With

London, Apr. 14.

The Russian Mission of about 90 persons, including 11 delegates besides experts, and headed by M. Rakowsky, arrived in taxi-cabs at the Foreign Office this morning, closely followed by an escort of detectives. The weather was cold and wet, and all of them were muffled in overcoats, with the exception of the Turkestan Commissary, who was resplendent in crimson and white robes with a turban.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald presided at the conference, which was held in the room of the Secretary of State. There were about 20 British representatives of the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade. The procedings were private, but the speeches will be published.

Mr. MacDonald in his speech welcomed the delegates. He said that the conference was for completion of the act of granting de jure recognition to Russia, but it in no way altered the fact that recognition had been granted without qualification. Mr. MacDonald pointed out that liquidation of past relations and peaceful relations of the future must be considered. He also referred to propaganda. The speech was then translated into Russian.

M. Rakowsky, replying in French, said that he was much gratified at the delegation's welcome. He expressed the opinion that close financial and commercial co-operation between Britain and Russia was necessary to both countries. Debts and treaties must be discussed in detail. M. Rakowsky laid special stress on the peace of Europe and the necessity for disarmament. He sympathetically referred to the League of Nations.

Later.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, in the course of his speech at the Anglo-Russian Conference to-day, laid stress on the fact that the first essential to friendly and profitable relations was that Russia should desist from countenancing directly or indirectly anything smacking of an attempt to conduct propaganda among British subjects either at home of abroad. The people of this country would require more on this head than formal undertakings.

He did not think that, if the conference failed to reach an understanding, the Russians would be able to repeat the attempt and he did not see where else they could turn with better prospects.

Referring to the question of trade, Mr. MacDonald said that the people would risk nothing unless they knew that contractual agreements would be honoured to the last letter.

A Clean Slate Required.

Where injury had been done, he said, they must go to the utmost possible to redress it so that they could begin with a clean slate. Credit here was not in banks and governments, but in the deposits of private individuals, and unless they satisfied the mass of their people that they were fair and honest, no agreements could be honoured and they could not help each other.

The British people and British interests must be justly dealt with, the Premier declared, and he would not give way upon anything which would be regarded by his countrymen as paying an improper price for an agreement, nor would he expect it of Russians, but within these limits, he was sure, they could come to terms.

M. Rakowsky's Assurances.

Later.

In the course of his speech at the opening of the Anglo-Russian Conference to-day, the leader of the Russian delegation, M. Rakowsky said that they considered that there was no insurmountable obstacle in the way of a complete understanding.

He believed that, if account were taken of mutual interests, nothing stood in the way of solution of the question of pre-war debts and private claims. The British Government might also count on full and sincere goodwill regarding political questions.

The Soviet Government had no intention of reverting to the Tsarist policy of conquest and the partition of Oriental States into spheres of influence. The war had awakened the national consciousness of the peoples of the East and any attempt to obstruct that legitimate consciousness would not only be a crime against their own interests, but folly, seeing that in the long run such a policy would inevitably fail. If the two Governments adopted as a starting-point the principle of respecting the sovereignty of Oriental States, they would be free from difficulty in settling all questions pertaining to their interests in the East.

Steps Towards Disarmament.

Laying stress on the acute international situation, M. Rakowsky declared that disarmament must be carried to the farthest possible limits. Although the Russian Army in the last three years had been reduced from 6,000,000 to 500,000 men, Russia was ready, provided other States would do likewise, to take further decisive steps towards disarmament, and was ready also to contribute in every way to universal decrease of naval armaments, subject to certain political guarantees.

International Organization.

With recard to the League of Nations, the Soviet Government were prepared to associate themselves with a plan of international organization, which excluded measures of coercion and reprisal and into which all Governments entered of their own free-will and on a footing of perfect equality.

The first condition of stable peace was revision of the Treaty of Versailles and the Treaties connected with it. The reorganization of Europe could only be stable if based on the peoples and if it took into account the peoples' aspirations to national independence. The Soviet Government were therefore prepared to support and pursue a policy of revising frontiers on ethnographic principles, applying a plebiscite where necessary, as in Bessarabia.

The Soviet Government, M. Rakowsky declared, fully shared the British view that mutual non-intervention in internal affairs was one of the indispensable conditions for the creation of mutual confidence.

The Conference finally appointed an organizing committee to supervise its labours.—Reuter.

Premier's Tactful Speech.

April, 15.

The newspapers generally congratulate Mr. Ramsay MacDonald on his firm and yet tactful speech at the opening of the Anglo-Russian Conference.

The Conservative organs are sceptical of the success of the Conference and are inclined to question the Russian motives, but the Liberal organs cordially welcome the Conference and approve Mr. MacDonald's policy.

The "Times" states that Mr. MacDonald made the best of an extremely unpleasant situation and encouraged no illusions. M. Rakowski's declaration, it states, was tactless.

The "Daily Telegraph" thinks that the Russians are merely out for material advantages and that, therefore, the negotiations are unlikely to lead to anything.

The "Daily Express" declares that the speech of Mr. MacDonald was worthy of the chief spokesman of the Empire.

The "Daily News" urges that the Conference should be given a fair chance by the abandonment of irritating pinpricks, as instanced by the bankers' memorandum and a section of the press.

The "Manchester Guardian" hopes and believes that the meeting is the beginning of the genuine re-settlement of Europe.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 15.

The Anglo-Russian Conference met at the Foreign Office at three this afternoon and adjourned at 3.45. The Conference will meet again to-morrow afternoon.

A communiqué states that the subject of the treaties between Britain and the former Russian Empire was raised and was referred to a sub-committee for preliminary examination.—Reuter.

RUSSIAN CREDIT IN ENGLAND

London Bankers' Scheme for Restoration: Guarantees Required from Russia

London, Apr. 13.

Leading London bankers have forwarded a memorandum to the Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, in which they suggest steps by which Russian credit in England can be restored. They are of the opinion that recognition of public and private debts should be made, that private property of foreigners should be restored, and that sanctity of private contract should be re-established. Russia should guarantee that private property should henceforth be freed of the danger of confiscation. British bankers, industrialists and traders should be enabled to deal, without Government interference, with similar private institutions in Russia. The Russian Government should abandon propaganda against the institutions of other countries.

The memorandum dissipates the view, which it is supposed is entertained by the Russian Government, that upon the settlement very large amounts would immediately be available from any source. It points out that investors will only supply money where conditions appear safest and full confidence has again been created. With regard to the numerous fields for the investment of permanent capital, it shows that Britain in the past three years has on an average lent to the British Empire £80,000,000 a year, whereas the total available to lend throughout the world last year was £97,000,000. It declares that banking credits are bound to remain limited while foreign trade is subject to Russian Government control.—Reuter.

SHIPPING LOCK-OUT IN BRITAIN

General Throughout Country to Put Pressure Upon Strikers at Southampton

London, Apr. 10.

The Southampton strikers have resolved by an overwhelming majority not to return to work.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 11.

The Shipbuilding Employers' Federation announce that the Southampton strikers not having resumed work, the lock-out notices throughout the country will be effective to-night.

Apr. 12.

The shipbuilding lock-out is in general operation throughout the country to-day, but the Southampton yards are remaining open in order to give the strikers an opportunity to obey the instructions of their executives to resume work. A few strikers returned this morning but there is no general resumption.—Reuter.

The Coal Mine Grievance.

London, Apr. 11.

No immediate crisis will result from the miners' ballot. The question of strike action is not involved. The next move will probably be in the direction of a court of inquiry.

Later.

It has officially been decided to grant the miners' request for a court of inquiry.—Reuter.

Extra Work at Wembley.

London, Apr. 11.

Mr. J. H. Thomas, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, addressing the workers at Wembley to-day, thanked them on behalf of the Cabinet and country for their decision to remove the embargo on overtime. He said that the recent strike had caused the Government anxiety because undoubtedly it

[illegible] 19, 1924.

[illegible]l retarded the progress of the [illegible]xhibition. Therefore, he took [illegible]e responsibility of asking the [illegible]ade union officials to relax the [illegible]vertime rule with regard to the [illegible]xhibition, which had got to be a [illegible]ess if only because it meant [illegible]uch to the British working-[illegible]asses.—Reuter.

Work Conditionally Resumed.

London, Apr. 13.

The Southampton shipyard workers have decided to resume work on condition of an immediate conference to secure uniformity between the Southampton and London rates of pay.—Reuter.

Engineers' Request for a Court of Inquiry

London, Apr. 14.

A mass meeting of the Southampton engineers this morning passed dramatically, a granddaughter of the late General Booth singing "Abide with me", and the audience joining in the singing of the last verse. Subsequently the meeting passed a resolution calling on the Government to institute a court of inquiry into the claim for increased wages and the cause of the Southampton dispute. The resolution will be submitted to the Premier by a deputation tomorrow.—Reuter.

THE KIEFF TRIAL

Chicherin's Discourteous Reply to French Attempt to Save Russian Professors

Moscow, Apr. 12.

M. Chicherin in a Note to M. Poincaré, in reply to the latter's telegram of April 9, indignantly rejects France's attempt to interfere in the Kieff trial on behalf of "spies."

He recapitulates the many attempts France has made to interfere in Russian affairs and the losses Russia has suffered thereby. The Soviet Government, he declares, since the earliest days has never allowed anyone to interfere and will certainly not begin now. He says that naturally France knows about the activities of the spying organization.

M. Chicherin concludes with a friendly proposal to France to cease this attitude and take a view leading to mutual good relations.—Reuter.

France had appealed to Moscow to spare the lives of certain eminent Russian men of learning on trial at Kieff on charges of counter-revolutionary work. Four of them were sentenced to death.—Ed.

British Government Unwilling to Make Representations to the Soviet

London, Apr. 14.

Replying to Mr. A. S. Sandeman, Unionist Member for Middleton and Prestwich, in the House of Commons to-day with regard to M. Poincaré's request to Britain to make representations to the Soviet with regard to the number of intelligentsia tried at Kieff for high treason, Mr. Ramsay Macdonald said that the Government did not feel that it could usefully make any official representation to the Soviet in that connexion. The Soviet was well aware of the British Government's views.—Reuter.

EXPELLED RUSSIAN BISHOP

Penniless Pilgrim Heartily Welcomed in Warsaw: Privations of Prison

Warsaw, Apr. 13.

Monsignor Cieplak arrived at Warsaw from Riga to-day. His emaciated features testified to the privations of his imprisonment. He was greeted by a number of ecclesiastical dignitaries, including Monsignor Lauri, the Papal Nuncio, representatives of many Polish societies and huge crowds. Traffic was held up. Enthusiasts unharnessed the horses of the Archbishop's carriage and dragged it along themselves.

Monsignor Cieplak states that en route from Russia he was kept 10 days at the Cheka headquarters, where he was photographed a dozen times for an unknown purpose. He was then taken to Heiwerz on the Latvian frontier and told to leave Russia immediately. He was penniless and borrowed from the Latvian railwaymen money to take him to Riga.—Reuter.

RUSSIA'S POLICY UNCHANGED

Bolshevism Still Predominant Feature of Trotsky's Creed: Insulting Britain

Moscow, Apr. 15.

M. Trotsky, Commissary for War and President of the Revolutionary Council, in the course of a speech in Tiflis on April 11, denied the report of the local press that he was opposed to war at all costs over the Bessarabian question. He said that the situation between Russia and Rumania in this connexion was abnormal. Poland and France stood behind Rumania. "France is developing a mad campaign against us in Poland and is trying to drive us into a quarrel with Turkey."

"Mr. MacDonald's Cabinet," M. Trotzky added, "has absolutely no principles, nevertheless the success of the Anglo-Russian conference would strengthen its position."

In conclusion, the Commissary for War, declared that the Bolsheviks had not changed since the night of October 25, 1917.—Reuter.

Note:—The last statement refers to the formation of the first Bolshevik Military Committee.—Reuter.

Moscow, Apr. 14.

The Committees of the National Democratic and the Menshevik Parties in Tiflis have been arrested.—Reuter.

RUMANIA'S CLAIM TO BESSARABIA

Rumours of Defensive Treaty with Japan for Protection of Possessions

London, Apr. 14.

In the House of Commons today, replying to Mr. William Ormsby-Gore, Unionist Member for Stafford, Mr. Ramsay Macdonald said that he had no information with regard to any new defensive treaty between Japan and Rumania giving mutual guarantees against Russian invasion of Bessarabia and the Japanese possessions in Saghalien.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal Member for Caithness and Sutherland, asked whether Japan had yet ratified the treaty which she signed with Britain, France and Italy with regard to Bessarabia. Mr. Macdonald asked for notice of the question.—Reuter.

"COPEC" CONFERENCE CONCLUDED

Proposal to Form a Publicity Bureau: Investigation of Causes of Unemployment

London, Apr. 13.

The International Conference on Christian Politics, Economics and Citizenship, the "Copec," has concluded. It has appointed a Continuation Committee of 50 members to carry on the work to make the influence of the "Copec" a permanent factor in the life of the churches; to establish a permanent organization to interpret the purposes of the "Copec," probably in the form of a publicity bureau, but possibly a federal council of the churches.

The Conference passed a resolution in favour of the churches making an inquiry into the causes of unemployment and decided to ask the heads of the churches for an inquiry and advice by churches in regard to birth control.—Reuter.

THE OIL SCANDAL

President Coolidge's Vigorous Criticism of Irregularities in Investigation

Washington, Apr. 11.

President Coolidge in a strongly worded message to the Senate says that the investigations of the oil scandals should be conducted in accordance with the Constitution. He protests against the whole series of investigations proceeding as, in effect, criminal prosecutions, in which the requirement that the evidence must be presented before the Grond Jury is evaded.

The President encloses a letter from Mr. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, which says that, should the unnecessary interference in the proper exercise of his duties continue, neither he nor any other man of character could take the responsibility for the Treasury.—Reuter's America Service.

AUSTRALIA'S COAST DEFENCE

Two 10,000-ton Cruisers to be Built: Port Darwin as a Naval Base

Sydney, Apr. 10.

Mr. S. M. Bruce, the Commonwealth Prime Minister, speaking at the dinner to the Admirals and senior officers of the Special Service Squadron, declared that the Government's decision to lay down two 10,000 ton cruisers was in the interests of Australia's own defence in order to provide very useful co-operation with the British Navy. The Commonwealth Government was convinced that in the interests of world peace the decision of the British Government with regard to Singapore was not final.

Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick Field, replying, said that if the Dominions provided sufficient cruisers to guard the coast lines while the main fleet was doing its proper business, they would feel perfectly safe. The most perfect base for the Australian cruisers would be Port Darwin. There was an excellent repair base in Sydney.—Reuter.

END OF THE AUSTRALIA

Sunk in Accordance With Washington Treaty Amid National Mourning

Sydney, Apr. 12.

The scuttling of the battle-cruiser Australia, 20 miles outside Sydney Heads, in accordance with the Washington Treaty, amounted to a national ceremony. The warship was laden with floral tributes with cards expressing the people's attachment and regret. Australian warships fired a salute and aeroplanes dropped wreaths. The light cruisers of the Special Service Squadron circled around the battle cruiser, fired a salute and hoisted the Australian flag. They then headed for Brisbane. The sinking occupied 25 minutes.—Reuter.

GREECE NEVER AT REST

More Arrests of Military and Naval Officers on Charges of Revolution-Plotting

Athens, Apr. 12.

Owing to indications that reactionary rouble was brewing, the Government has ordered the arrest of 18 superior military and naval retired officers, including General Leonardopoulos, the leader of the last counter-revolution, who was sentenced to death and recently pardoned, and General Constandinopoulos, a fanatical Royalist.

The Minister of the Interior announces that considerable quantities of revolvers and cartridges, recently bought in Athens by reactionaries, have been confiscated. The leaders of the projected movement, which was evidently intended to break out after the plebiscite, have been arrested.

Colonel Metaxas met the Premier, M. Papanastasiou, yesterday evening and protested against the arrests. The Premier replied that the Government were determined to crush any attempt at disorders.—Reuter.

ANTI-SOVIET PLOTS

Extensive Organization to Put Prominent Bolsheviks Under Ground

Moscow, Apr. 2.

A counter-revolutionary association called the National Society for Defending the Native Land is the subject of an inquiry at Leningrad. M. Boris Savinoff is alleged to be head of the organization, the agents of which are stated to be employees of the Polish Intelligence Service.

The association's activities are reported to have extended to the provinces. Many murders and outrages against Soviet supporters and Jews are alleged. The accused persons number 107.—Reuter.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS UNDEFINED

World-Wide Registry by Seismographs but No Trace of Locality

Victoria, B.C., Apr. 15.

The officials of the Dominion observatory were mystified yesterday by a series of very intense seismographic shocks, which lasted four hours. The Superintendent of the obervatory estimates that the centre of the disturbance was about 1,500 miles from Victoria, probably in the vicinity of the North Aleutian Islands or in Alaska.—Reuter.

Buenos Aires, Apr. 15.

An earthquake occurred at Santiago de Chile at 5.35 yesterday afternoon. The casualties and damage are up to the present unknown.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 15.

The Chilean Legation in London is in regular communication with Santiago and hopes that the earthquake recorded throughout the world occurred in the sea.

Santiago de Chile, Apr. 15.

The reports of an earthquake in Chile are baseless.—Reuter Later.

The observatories of Belgium, Italy and Egypt recorded yesterday afternoon a violent earthquake shock over 6,000 miles distant. The instruments of Faenza Observatory vibrated for four hours. The Observatory of Helouan described the shock as being equal in intensity to the Japanese earthquake in September.—Reuter.

Manila's Experience.

Manila, Apr. 15.

A severe submarine earthquake occurred at 12.30 this morning at 7 degrees north latitude on the eartern border of the Philippine Deep, 200 kilometres from Mindanao and 1,000 kilometres from Manila. A tidal wave is feared. A slightly perceptible disturbance here continued for two hours.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

WILL LABOUR CONTROL INDIA?

Debate in House of Commons: Demand for a Specific Statement of Policy

London, Apr. 15.

In the House of Commons today, the debate on India was initiated by Viscount Curzon, Conservative member for Battersea, who proposed a motion expressing anxiety with regard to recent events in India and regretting the lack of a clear statement of the Government's policy in that connexion. He asked for a specific declaration that the Government would not depart from the letter or spirit of the Government of India Act of 1919.

Mr. Robert Richards, Under-Secretary of State for India, replying, said that the Government of India were at present investigating the difficulties of the Act with full concurrence of His Majesty's Government, who considered the proposal of Mr. J. Scurr, Labour member for Mile End, to appoint a commission for this purpose as premature.—Reuter.

THE BOOTLEGGERS

New Coastguard Boats at Cost of $25,000,000 to Check Liquor Runners

Washington, Apr. 11.

For the purpose of a more active campaign against liquor runners the coastguard service has opened bids for 30 new craft to cost, with others yet to be purchased, $25,000,000.

This fleet will be supplemented with 20 destroyers.—Reuter's American Service.

HONDURAS REBELLION

American Government Sending Envoy to Mediate Between the Belligerents

Washington, Apr. 11.

The Navy Department reports that a revolutionary airman has bombed the capital of Honduras, destroying a large number of houses. The dead included many women and children. Four bombs narrowly missed the American landing forces, who were apparently mistaken for enemies. The American commander has protested.

President Coolidge has instructed Mr. Sumner Welles, the American Commissioner in Santo Domingo, to proceed to Tegucigalpa and offer the friendly assistance of the United States for the establishment of peace in Honduras.—Reuter's American Service.

SHORTAGE OF REVENUE IN THE PUNJAB

Taxation Inadequate Without Salt Levy: Water-rate to be Increased

Lahore, Apr. 13.

The serious effect of the Legislative Assembly's failure to sanction the salt tax of two rupees is reflected in the upsetting of the financial programme of the provincial Governments concerned.

The Punjab Government, who were anticipating a reduction of their contribution to the Central Government, only proposed to levy fresh taxation to the amount of 20 lakhs of rupees. This is now inadequate and they have therefore decided to increase the water-rate in order to secure 75 lakhs annually, but, as the spring crop has already been sown, the yield this year will be only 25 lakhs from the winter crop.

The Punjab Government hope to carry on in the current year with the help of the Government of India. They will have sufficient funds from next year.—Reuter.

THE LATE HERR STINNES

Embittered Comment by French Journals

Paris, Apr. 11.

A remark by the "Journal" that "Herr Stinnes died on the day the experts passed judgment on his mischievous work: a centre of Nationalist reaction, he was the evil genius of the peace," sums up generally the embittered comments of the French press.

Berlin, Apr. 11.

By the tragic irony of fate Germany's greatest industrialist and richest man died without seeing the reports of the committees of experts. He had been ill for weeks and had only recently been operated on for gall-stones. His condition did not improve and he was removed to a nursing-home ten days ago when he was operated on a second time. He died fully conscious in the presence of his family.—Reuter.

NAVAL LIMITATIONS

Action by Pres. Coolidge

Washington, Apr. 14.

It is stated that to-day the President will oppose the conversion of four coal-burning battleships into oil-burners, if this would lead other nations, who are parties to the Naval Limitation Treaty, to make a similar outlay. —Reuter's American Service.

THE MINERS' DISPUTE

A New Secretary

London, Apr. 10.

Mr. A. J. Cook, a miners' agent in Rhondda Valley, has been elected secretary of the Miners' Federation. Mr. Cook was formerly a Baptist preacher, is a fluent speaker and a disciple of Karl Marx. He is an active participant in the so-called miners' minority movement.

In an interview, Mr. Cook said that it would be difficult to avert a stoppage in the coalfields unless the demand of the miners for a living wage was conceded.

Owners' Offer Rejected.

Apr. 11.

An official announcement states that the miners' ballot has resulted in rejection of the owners' wage proposals by 558,000 to 392,000 votes.—Reuter.

London, Apr. 15.

The Minister of Labour, Mr. Tom Shaw, has appointed a court of inquiry into the coal-mining dispute, consisting of Baron Buckmaster (Chairman), Mr. Reuter Brunner and Mr. A. C. Cameron.—Reuter.

THE BENGAL BUDGET

Several Rejected Items Now Certified by Governor

Darjeeling, Apr. 14.

The Governor of Bengal has decided to certify a number of Budget items, rejected as a result of the Swarajist policy of throwing out portions of the Bengal Budget. The refusal to grant the Ministers' salaries, however, will again be submitted to the Provincial Council. A number of appointments in the Education and Medical Departments are likely to be discharged as a result of their pay not being sanctioned, which the Earl of Lytton says he has no power to restore.—Reuter.

OBITUARY

Prince Roland Bonaparte

Paris, Apr. 14.

The death is announced of Prince Roland Bonaparte, son of Prince Pierre Napoleon Bonaparte, and grandson of Prince Lucien Bonaparte, a younger brother of Napoleon I, at the age of 65.

Prince Roland Bonaparte was a Member of the Institute and was twice President of the French Geographical Society. He was much interested in travel and scientific research.—Reuter.

BRITISH ROUND-WORLD AIR FLIGHT

New Gear for Squadron Leader MacLaren at Corfu

London, Apr. 14.

A telegram from Corfu yesterday states that the new engine for the British world flight airplane will arrive to-morrow. The air-boat is lying on the beach between the lake and the sea. An attempt to tow it to Corfu in Greek and British destroyers was unsuccessful owing to the strong sea. A British destroyer will make a last attempt to tow the air-boat to-day. Simultaneously, a party of sailors will be sent overland with gear to fit up the engine on the spot if the towing is unsuccessful. —Reuter.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY OF LANCASHIRE

Competition in India and the Far East: A Plea for Protection

London, Apr. 15.

In the House of Commons to-day, at the committee stage of the Trade Facilities Bill, Mr. J. R. Remer, Conservative Member for Macclesfield, moving an amendment protesting the competition [illegible] in the Far East and India, moved an amendment that no loan or guarantee should be given in connexion with the erection of cotton-mills or provision of cotton machinery outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. W. Graham, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, emphasized that no guarantee had been given to any cotton undertaking outside the United Kingdom. The real problem behind the amendment was how employment in Britain would be affected under guarantee. The advisory committee must take all circumstances into account. The case against [illegible] that it would [illegible] exclude a large view of the problem of unemployment. Mr. Graham asked Mr. Remer to withdraw the amendment, which was negatived without a division. —Reuter.

LIBERALS DISPLEASED WITH LABOUR

Premier's Contemptuous Way with His Patrons Much Resented

London, Apr. 16.

The dissatisfaction of the Liberal Party at the attitude of the Labour members of Parliament towards it found vent at an important meeting at the House of Commons last night. Mr. Asquith presiding. Over a hundred Liberal members attended.

A feature of the gathering was a vigorous speech by Mr. Lloyd George protesting against the Government's contemptuous treatment of the Liberals although it was dependent upon them for its existence.

Mr. Asquith approved the views expressed by Mr. Lloyd George.

It was decided to hold another meeting after Easter, when the future attitude of the Party towards the Government would be decided upon.—Reuter.

EIGHT NEW 10,000 TONS CRUISER

U. S. Naval Armament

Washington, Apr. 15.

The House of Representatives Naval Committee has approved a bill authorizing construction of eight fast 10,000-ton cruisers, costing $11,000,000 each, exclusive of armament, and also six gunboats, costing $700,000 each, for use in Chinese waters. The Committee also approved a proposal to convert four battleships to oil-burners and to provide them with additional protection against submarines and aircraft.

The Committee reported another bill providing for the establishment of a naval aviation base at Sand Point, California.—Reuter's American Service.

KING OF RUMANIA VISITING FRANCE

Rumours of an Alliance

Paris, Apr. 10.

The King and Queen of Rumania arrived here to-day primarily for an official visit after their Coronation in 1922, but the presence of the Rumanian Premier and Foreign Minister, M. Duca, lends political significance to the visit. There is unofficial talk of an alliance between France and Rumania, following the alliance between France and Czecho-Slovakia.

M. Duca, in an interview, said that he hoped the negotiations between Russia and Rumania, which broke down recently in Vienna, might be resumed.—Reuter.

FRANCO-JAPANESE FAR EASTERN RELATIONS

London, Apr. 11.

Denying the reports of the conclusion of a Japanese-Rumanian defensive alliance directed against Russia, the Diplomatic Correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph" says that it is believed, however, that a Franco-Japanese understanding is now in existence, covering Pacific and Chinese questions. He refers to the recent co-operation of the French Minister and the Japanese Cabinet at Tokio and says that it has not escaped notice that the Japanese delegate on the League of Nations Council, who formerly voted on the side of Britain in Central European issues, voted with France at the two last sessions on questions like the Saar.—Reuter.

RUSSO-GERMAN CONSULAR PACT

Moscow, Apr. 12.

A Russo-German consular pact is expected to be signed shortly. In this connexion, the Russian press points out that the new pact, judging from the old international law, contains the following provisions:—(1) No honorary Consuls shall be appointed so far as Germany and Soviet Russia are concerned; (2) Consuls' premises of both countries shall not be trespassed on; (3) Consuls of both countries shall be accorded rights to manage reports on marriages, divorces, and births from their respective citizens; (4) Consuls of both countries have exactly the powers of crimes committed by those who are to be arrested according to the national laws of country.

In the meantime, the Soviet Government is also negotiating with Turkey and Persia with a view to the conclusion of consular pacts with these countries.—Eastern News Agency.

THE MASTER OF BALLIOL

London, Apr. 12.

The death is announced of Dr. Arthur Lionel Smith, M.A., LL.D., Master of Balliol College, Oxford.—Reuter.

MR. CHURCHILL'S RETURN TO POLITICS

London, Apr. 13.

Mr. Winston Churchill has accepted the invitation of Sir Archibald Salvidge, one of the stalwarts of Conservatism in Lancashire, on behalf of the Liverpool Working Men's Conservative Association and Women's Unionist Frederation, to address a political meeting early in May.—Reuter.

THE GREEK PLEBISCITE

Athens, Apr. 14.

It is semi-officially stated that the returns of the plebiscite so far show a 75 per cent. majority

BELGIUM AND GERMAN REPARATIONS

Brussels, Apr. 14.

The Cabinet consider that the report of the Reparations Commission's expert committees constitutes a useful basis for an equitable and practical settlement.—Reuter.

BELGIAN TREATY WITH JAPAN

Brussels, Apr. 14.

The Cabinet has approved the commercial treaty with Japan, based on the most-favoured nation principle.—Reuter.

CHANGE IN CONTROL OF "MORNING POST"

London, Apr. 13.

On the score of heavy taxation, Countess Bathurst announces that she has relinquished control of the "Morning Post" to a body of Conservatives, with whom the Duke of Northumberland is associated. It is stated that the paper's past traditions and policy will be preserved. Reuter.

AMERICAN ROUND WORLD FLIGHT

Major Martin Forced to Descend on Sea

Sitka, Apr. 11.

The American military aviators who are flying around the world have arrived at Sitka.—Reuter's American Service.

Tokio, Apr. 14.

The American destroyers arrived at Hitokappu Bay in the Etorofu Island yesterday morning after a fine trip. The island is surrounded by big icefloes, which precludes reaching Bettobu. This will necessitate a change in the landing place to Hitokappu Bay, which is ideal for this purpose.

Cordova, Alaska, Apr. 14.

The American aviators, who are flying around the world, arrived safety to-day at Seward, Alaska, from Sitka.—Reuter's American Service.

Chiguik, Alaska, Apr. 16.

Major Martin, the leader of the United States world flight, was forced to descend to the sea while on his way here. It is believed that he is safe in Kialogvik Bay. The remaining planes have arrived here safely.—Reuter's American Service.

AMERICA AND ARMAMENTS

Washington, Apr. 12.

Senator King has tabled a resolution authorizing the President to appoint reppresentatives to confer with the Armament Commission of the League of Nations.—Reuter's American Service.

YUGO-SLAVIA'S DEBT TO UNITED STATES

Washington, Apr. 12.

The Yugo-Slavian Debt Funding Commission, previous to its departure for Europe, announced that Yugo-Slavia was unable at present to meet her obligations to the United States but it was hoped that it would be possible at a future date to commence a plan for refunding the debts.

No action would be taken by Yugo-Slavia which would be calculated to prejudice the position of the United States among creditor nations.—Reuter's American Service.

TRADE DEPRESSION IN RUSSIA

Riga, Apr. 13.

It is reported from Moscow that the figures of the trade turnover for March show a decrease of 30 per cent. as compared with February. A section of the press regards the depression as temporary, but the "Ekonomicheskaya Zhizn" considers it lasting. —Reuter.

LAUSANNE TREATY RATIFIED

London, Apr. 11.

The House of Commons last night passed the Ratification of the Lausanne Treaty Bill by a unanimous vote.—Reuter.

CZECH TREATY WITH HOLLAND

The Hague, Apr. 10.

The Second Chamber to-day approved the commercial treaty between Holland and Czecho-Slovakia.—Reuter.

LATEST TELEGRAMS

NAVAL DISARMAMENT

How Britain is Falling Behind Owing to Washington Undertaking

London, Apr. 16.

In the House of Commons to-day, replying to Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal Member for Caithness and Sutherland, Mr. Ammon, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Admiralty, stated that since the Washington Treaty was signed Britain had laid down the submarine O1; and Japan, as far as was known, had laid down six light cruisers, 17 destroyers and 13 submarines.

Later.

The question of disarmament was raised in the House of Commons to-day by Major-Gen. J. E. B. Seely, Liberal Member for the Isle of Wight, who referred to France's great air force. He did not believe that it was directed against us, but others were joining in the air race.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald replied that he intended, immediately some of the present difficulties in Europe were removed, to face seriously the question of armament, because it was very important that there should be no reason for misunderstanding not merely between France and Britain, but between the other Powers participating in the unfortunate air race. It would be far better if we could get a sort of Washington agreement so that France, Italy, ourselves and everybody else might feel some measure of security.—Reuter.

BRITISH ROUND WORLD AIR-FLIGHT

London, Apr. 16.

A telegram from Corfu, dated yesterday, states that Squadron-Leader MacLaren's air-boat has been towed to Corfu and the engine installed by H.M.S. Emperor of India. A successful trial was made in the evening. Squadron Leader MacLaren will leave for Athens this morning.—Reuter.

Athens, Apr. 17.

Squadron Leader MacLaren left Athens for Cairo this morning.—Reuter.

CO-OPERATIVE SELLING OF RUBBER

Finances Forthcoming When Scheme Adopted: U. S. Buying Agencies

London, Apr. 16.

The Rubber-Growers' Association are circularizing rubber-producing companies in the United Kingdom asking whether in principle they favour co-operative selling of rubber under the auspices of the Association and urging members whole-heartedly to support the proposed scheme, in view of the advantage the limited number of buyers at present have over the multitude of sellers and Mr Hoover's recent letter recommending action with a view to permitting American purchasers of rubber and other raw materials to establish joint buying agencies.

The Association express their willingness to establish a strong committee for the purpose of working out details. They express the opinion that, in view of the control of exports from Malaya and Ceylon, co-operative selling presents no serious difficulties and say that it is anticipated that the necessary finance could be easily obtained if an adequately supported scheme were adopted.—Reuter.

GERMANY'S ELECTIONS

Berlin, Apr. 16.

It is reported that the Government has postponed the elections from May 4 to May 11 in order that the expected swing to the Right shall not influence the elections in France.—Reuter.

Later.

It is officially stated that the elections will be held on May 4, as originally arranged.—Reuter.

BUILDING TRADE CRISIS

London, Apr. 16.

A crisis in the building trade affecting 700,000 workers, is threatened. The men are demanding an increase of wages by 2d. an hour. The employers offered an advance of ½d. an hour. A conference of the building trade unions in London has decided to submit the employers' offer to a ballot.—Reuter.

FROM THE FOUR WINDS

MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL PAYS AT LAST

The Pessimists Defeated: Fifty Years of Work Without Wages: A Comedian's Publicity Trick: Civic Improvements to Wrangle Over

From our Manchester Correspondent.

Manchester, Mar. 2.

We have heard of angry Manchester fathers, who, instead of spanking their erring sons off with the traditional shilling fobbed them off with dusty bundles of shares in the local Ship Canal. They found it easier, and thought it cheaper, to part with their dreams than their shillings. Time, however, has been on the side of the prodigals. In 1924 their obdurate sires see the sooty Lancashire dust settling on their idle spinning frames while the prodigals may be buying Rolls Royces with the long deferred Ship Canal dividends. 5 p.c. is to be paid on all the share capital held by the public for 1923. The Ship Canal is a paying proposition at last.

The possibility of such a dividend would have been scoffed at 10 years ago. Although the Canal had been opened at that time for 20 years it had never paid a dividend. There were thousands, especially in Liverpool, who said that it never would. They were first proven wrong in 1915, when 2 p.c. was paid. When 5 p.c. was paid on all shares held by the public for 1920 these croakers said that it was only because it was a boom year—it would never happen again. The reduced dividends in the succeeding year lent some colour to this prophecy but 1923 has disproved it. It is said that 6 p.c. could have easily been paid but the directors thought it wise to pursue a cautious policy. Great things are prophesied for the future. As the Canal was held up for 16 days during 1923 as a result of the unofficial dockers' strike there seems some likelihood of even better times. During 1923 more than five million tons of seaborne merchandise traffic was handled by the Canal, and since 1913 the gross receipts have been more than doubled. The Company is now petitioning Parliament for permission to deepen by 2 ft. the lower reaches of the Canal and so attract larger shipping. We in Manchester have waited 22 years for our share in the harvest of the sea. It is coming at last, and it is going to be no inconsiderable proportion.

RECREATION IN ANCOATS.

Few men have a wider circle of friends among famous men than Mr. Charles Rowley, the founder of the "Recreation in Ancoats" movement. The news that in his 85th year he has been compelled by ill health to relinquish this good work in that insalubrious slum will cause general regret. For 47 years he has lured famous writers, lecturers, artists, poets, musicians, anarchists, socialists, bishops, travellers, Jesuits, and philosophers to a bare hall in the heart of the worst part of Ancoats to address his audiences. Bernard Shaw has said that the deaths of half the famous men in Great Britain for the last 40 years can be directly traced to visits they had made to Manchester at the siren call of Mr. Rowley. The programme invariably consisted of an hour's music, and an hour's talk by a man of note. Ancoats was the setting for it but the audience came from everywhere but Ancoats. It sorry denizens eyed inimically the weekly incursion of well dressed people from the outer suburbs who indulged in "Recreation in Ancoats." For themselves, they remained faithful to the proletarian custom of spending Sunday afternoons in bed after the best dinner in the week.

The movement was always held together by Mr. Rowley. After him the attraction was the music, and the lecture was a bad third. Despite the publicity it obtained through Mr. Rowley's well known work, "Fifty Years of Work without Wages" it never attracted more than seven or eight hundred people. They used to applaud the views of every speaker with attractive impartiality. It made no difference if the lecturer of one week was flatly contradicted by the one on the week following. The audience agreed with them both.

SUNDAY CONCERTS GONE.

The stopping of these Sunday afternoon lectures and concerts will be a great loss to the winter amenities of Manchester. It will be all the more seriously felt through the recent closing of the Sunday League Concerts. The promoters of these concerts thought they would be warmly patronized by the thousands of people in Manchester who have nothing to do on a Sunday night and nowhere to go. For months they petitioned our strait-laced City Fathers for permission to hold them. It was granted at last on condition that they were held after Church hours. But the habits of a lifetime are not broken in a week. Sunday is still taken very seriously in Manchester and although famous singers were engaged who cannot be heard for twice the money on a week-day, the concerts were ill patronized and had to be closed. Only one during the whole of the season paid for itself. The promoters ascribe their failure to the inconvenient hour imposed for starting the concerts and to the exorbitant rent charged by the municipal authorities for the Free Trade Hall where they were held. It is not improbable that the concerts broadcast by wireless every Sunday put the coup-de-grace to the enterprise.

A PUBLICITY STUNT.

One morning last week the whole of Market Street was held up by a huge crowd of people who did considerable damage to shop fronts and other property. The cause of the turmoil was a publicity "stunt" engineered by Fred Barnes, a popular comedian appearing at one of the local theatres. He said that it was a belief of his that the average man did not notice things outside his own personal range. In support of this idea he made a bet with another man that he could hide a £100 note in Market Street and leave it for 24 hours and no one would find it. Local newspapers gave publicity to the bet and for 24 hours this busy thoroughfare was the scene of extraordinary sights. The searchers removed the street grids and climbed up office and shop fronts. Much glass was broken by people poking around glass signs and shop fronts with walking sticks and umbrellas. The 24 hours were up at 11 a.m. and at that time Mr. Barnes arrived in Market St. to see if anyone had found the note. Excavations were being made in a short street leading down to the entrance to the "Manchester Guardian" offices. Mr. Barnes stooped down at this point and pulled up some stones and searched in the soil below. But the note was gone. It had been found by an unemployed workman named Browning. The police have warned Mr. Barnes that he must not indulge in these little games in future. Most of the searchers have a grudge against him for the manner and position of the hiding place. They argue that it was not strictly in Market Street and that to hide it in the ground and then cover the spot with heavy paving stones was not very sporting.

AN INSALUBRIOUS STREAM.

Manchester is well known to stand on the Irwell but its proudest citizens are a little diffident about the charms of that insalubrious river. It meanders through the Salford side of the town in a great loop, a huge ditch of black and muddy water flowing between soot-encrusted banks. A scheme has recently obtained considerable publicity which has for its object the excavation of a culvert to do away with this loop of river and convert its bed into a subteranean tram road. It is said that three tracks of trams, a roadway, and a canal could be put into the river bed.

The advocates of the scheme do not press it, however, on aesthetic grounds. The growing congestion of the city's main thoroughfares has brought it to the foreground. Opponents of the idea are demanding a tube railway of the London pattern as a solution of our difficulties. The City Council has appointed a Committee to investigate the feasibility and probable cost of such underground railway to run beneath the main arteries of the City. One of the Councillors complained that it was gloomy enough above ground in Manchester without burrowing beneath the ground like a lot of rabbits. Traffic congestion is now so acute in Manchester that on an average one person is killed and 25 injured every week as a result of street accidents.

SHORT TIME IN COTTON.

Nothing could better illustrate the present depressed condition of the cotton spinning industry in Lancashire than the overwhelming majority for systematic short time in the recent ballot. The owners of over 22 million spindles spinning American cotton have expressed their willingness to limit working hours to 26½ for the next three months. The opposition owned less than two million spindles. It is an unhappy commentary on our existing industrial organization that this should be the only way of coping with the problem. Our Lancashire operative spinners are the most highly skilled in the world. The world is crying out for the products of their nimble fingers. For the next three months those fingers are to be half idle. The loss will be greater than if the workers had a month's strike. This is ca' canny with a vengeance.

THE PICCADILLY SITE.

Manchester is once more agitated with the old question of the Piccadilly site. The city infirmary used to stand on this, the finest central site in the town. The infirmary was pulled down about 12 years ago and since then the City Fathers have been quarrelling about what they shall build on the site. It is the property of the municipality. The magnificent Manchester Reference Library used to be housed in the old Town Hall. It was first intended, when the old Town Hall site was sold, to build a magnificent Reference Library and Art Gallery on the Piccadilly site. Then Mr. Beecham promised Manchester a magnificent opera house and it was thought that the Piccadilly site would be an ideal setting for it. While the various schemes were being discussed the great library was moved to some rough sheds hastily erected on a corner of the site. That was about 10 years ago and they are there yet. Snow and rain drip through the wretched roofs on to the readers, and sometimes on to the books. Every few months someone writes an angry letter to the local press about it, or it crops up in the City Council proceedings. But nothing is ever done. The site is now laid out as a garden and is not unsightly, except for the sheds. The bone of contention is the rates. The Manchester business man steadily moves farther out into the Cheshire and Derbyshire suburbs and cares less about Manchester's amenities. Rates are high on the business properties in Central Manchester. Sheds are cheap, and fine art galleries and libraries are likely to be dear. As long as the sheds are kept up the rates can be kept down.

CHINESE OPIUM DENS.

Nine Chinese were arrested in Manchester last week for running opium dens at four addresses in the city, and for being in unlawful possession of quantities of opium and opium pipe heads. All the premises were Chinese laundries. A 19-year old English girl suffering from St. Vitus dance and in a state of nervous exhaustion was found at one address. The ringleader, Jou Sing, was sentenced to six months imprisonment and a fine of £100, and was recommended for deportation. His compatriots, some of whom had wives living in China, were sentenced to periods of imprisonment of from three to six months and, with three exceptions, to deportation also.

THE LIGHT SIDE OF LIFE

What Wembley Might Show Us: A Liking for Truth

From Our Own Correspondent.

London, Mar. 6.

We are all of us trying to make Wembley really bright and attractive so the newspapers are full of well meant and kindly suggestions. Personally I think there ought to be a section for "things we seldom see." Thereby we should be able to study at close quarters crowds of things which we almost fear do not exist at all. Among these we should of course assign a place of honour to the truthful House Agent. He is the sort of man who would issue a little adlet of his stock as follows:—

> Most undesirable residence. Twenty minutes fast walk from the nearest railway station. Infrequent trains to the City. No bathroom. Bad drainage. Very noisy neighbourhood. Chemical factory near by. Dry rot in the timbers. Excessive rent. . .

There you have the sort of man we should all like to see. People would go miles to look upon his manly features. As also upon the Too Veracious Landlady;

> Non-select boarding house. Should be avoided by everyone. Bad food and very little of it. No hot water. Terms immoderate and dozens of extras.

In addition there ought be the Noble Strainer after Accuracy who would guarantee to any prospective boarder:

> That she had not come down in the world
> That her husband was not dead but had deserted her owing to her vile cooking.
> That she was not homely and did not intend to do the lodger's darning and mending.
> That her daughter was not training for the stage, but worked in a fried fish shop round the corner.

This sort of thing appeals to us all and it is quite capable of beneficial extension. For instance there would be the Theatrical Impresario who assures us that he possesses the > Rottenest show on earth. Never produced in London. No one in it can act for toffee. Only stars those seen by the artistes when falling about after leaving the pubs at closing time. Cheapest of cheap outfits.

There ought to be room too for the politician who would tell us candidly of his ambitions;

> Keen politician because it pays, £400 a year with potential directorships. Complete ignorance of current problems but boosting myself because ready to pay my own expenses and meet the agent's salary. Nothing better to do and quite useless in father's business.

And do not leave out the Lady Who Devotes Herself to Public Work. She has virtues all her own;

> Nobody wants to marry me. Don't like cats or dogs. Can't play out of door sports. Not musical or anything else. Lover of the limelight. Hence take up public life to be useful to my fellow women and myself.

Also the Candid Doctor—we can't leave him out;

> Ready to diagnose anything without any real examination. Forgotten all learned in the schools. Never kept myself up to date. Expert at guesswork and at jollying patients. Only make up one sort of prescription but colour it variously. Warranted to overcharge.

From all this you will gather that like Mr. Pumblechook—was it not?—we have a very great liking for Ter-ew-th when we find it unsullied and pure from the Well. We never though do find it, and hence maybe at Wembley—if they made it worth the while of the potential exhibits—they could strike a really novel note. Of course there are several quite extinct types which could be reproduced with the aid of the experts at Madame Tussaud's—the Good Old British Workman and the Parson who is a Whole Hogger on the Thirty Nine Articles, the Faithful and Permanent Domestic Servant, the Wearer of Piccadilly Weepers, the Four-wheeler Cabman and the Gaiety Johnny of the Seventies, the Whig Politician and the Du-Maurian Bohemian. In fact if they extended this list a little they might have a Chamber of Horrors "all their own." They might even try a Male and Female Section—including in the latter the Damsel who Left the Cinema when it was announced that the film then about to be shown was "not for young girls," the Maiden who did not at 18 Know all there was to Know and the Mother's Darling as well as the entire crowd of the Jane Austen Type.

In short, if we are to have a really British Exhibition, let us not overlook what is truly British. Thereof I have given some indications in case they may be overlooked. I know that the overseas dependencies are doing their best to make everything bright and cheerful, but there are signs of deadly competition. It will not though be malevolent. All we want in the kindness of our hearts is to make visitors feel no side of our many-hued national temperament has been overlooked.

"LENIN" STAMPS

Interest of Bolshevik Issues

A set of four "Lenin Mourning Stamps" has been issued by the Russian Government. They bear the portrait of Lenin, surrounded by an inner frame of black and an outer border of Communist red, and will be in compulsory use for some time. The portrait, in its silhouette effect of black and white, is a remarkably good one.

After the revolution, payment of postage was abolished in Russia, but the disorganisation consequent on this change was so widespread that free postage was dropped after a not very extended trial. Then appeared some curious stamps symbolic of art, labour, Socialism slaying the Capitalist dragon, and similar devices, the nominal values of the stamps being in ever-increasing figures, up to 100,000 roubles. Then there was a sudden drop when "1922 roubles" were induced, each worth 10,000 of the old roubles.

In 1923 small stamps bearing fearsome portraits of "Red" workers and soldiers were introduced, which are not the best possible advertisement of the charms of Soviet rule. These, with Tsarist stamps overprinted with Bolshevik devices, served during 1923, when they were replaced by similar stamps with values expressed in gold kopecks.

Dealing in Russian postage stamps is a monopoly of a special department of the Soviet Government, which markets them in aid of various Famine and Child Welfare funds, punctuating the ordinary issues of Russia by special "charity" sets, sold at high prices, and bearing such inscriptions as "Philately Helps the Children." Famine stamps from several districts bear witness to the internal condition of Russia during the last two or three years.

AN OLD "SWEAT"

Sailed in the Birkenhead

At his home in Battersea, aged 91, recently died Bandmaster John Gready. He joined the Second Battalion Queen's (Royal West Surrey) Regiment, now known as the Queen's Royal Regiment, at Athlone, his birthplace, in 1847, when he was 14. First a drummer, he became a bandsman, but was a combatant in the Kaffir War of 1851 and the China War of 1861. He afterwards served for 12 years in India, becoming bandmaster of his regiment. His service extended over 50 years—32 years in the Regular Army and 18 years with the Volunteers. When he went to the Cape he sailed in the ill-fated Birkenhead on her second and last voyage. A man of fine figure, he was active to the last, walking four or five miles a day. Colonel J. Mackenzie Rogan, late of the Coldstream Guards, who was one of Gready's oldest friends, says:—

In the Army he was recognized by his colleagues as one of the ablest men who ever left Kneller Hall. It was he, with others, in the sixties and seventies who put an end to the foreign element in British Army music. In those days two-thirds of the bandmasters in the Army were Germans and it was men like bandmaster Gready who had all the spade work to do.

OUR SCOTTISH LETTER

The Prince of Scotland and Wales: A New Bore for Scottish Controversialists: Mr. Ramsay MacDonald Welcomed Back into the Fold

From Our Own Correspondent.

Edinburgh, Feb. 27.

"The Prince of Scotland" is one of the titles by which the heir to the throne has a right, though we never hear him called by it. In a lecture in University [illegible] London at which he [illegible] was present, the lecturer, Dr. Walter Seton, referred to this fact, [illegible] Scotland if, on the occasion of the forthcoming visit of His Royal Highness to Scotland, Scots were permitted to drink the health of the lad who was born to be King by his title Prince of Scotland and Wales, for which the precedent of centuries could be claimed." The suggestion as might be expected [illegible] quiet reasonableness. Dr. Seton's position is that while the title "Prince of Scotland" is not the oldest title held by the Prince of Wales among his Scottish titles; the oldest title is Earl of Carrick, 1444, and next after that probably the Dukedom of Rothesay, created in 1398; still the Scotland as soon as his royal father became King on May 6, 1910, but he was not created Prince of Wales until June 23, 1910. But in another way, while His Royal Highness became Prince of Wales by special creation he became Prince of Scotland by right of birth as soon of his Royal father became King. The objectors say that there is nothing to hinder anybody in Scotland from toasting the Prince as [illegible] in use there was a King of Scotland known to all the world by that title. That his heir should be called Prince of Scotland was then natural and incapable of originating any misconceptions. But if to-day, when there is no King of Scotland known commonly to the world by that title, the use of the title Prince of Scotland would inevitably give rise to the idea that the ancient kingdom was a Principality. Especially would this be the result if we were to accept Dr. Seton's suggestion and drink toasts to "the Prince of Scotland and Wales." The mongrel title would instantly "even us" with Wales. It will be seen, therefore, that we Scots have fine material for "a bonnie ferht" such as our hearts love, and we owe a hearty vote of thanks to Dr. Seton for starting it.

THE PREMIER AND GOLF.

The reason why Mr. Ramsay MacDonald has looked somewhat jaded lately is the lack of exercise, consequent on golf. This is his favourite recreation although he never had time to be by any means an expert player. It is curious how typical of the Briton how much he [illegible] political differences. Some golf clubs closed their doors to Mr. MacDonald as the result of his attitude during the war, notably one at Lossiemouth, his birthplace, but since his accession to power he has been welcomed by several which previously rejected him to become their president. I am told that he is trying to [illegible] towards anyone of more peace of mind effective during of his views. It is quite possible that one famous club south of the Tweed which has invited him to become its president will find the invitation irresistible to the Prime Minister.

BOUND FOR CHINA.

J. M. Gedman has played his last match at Inverness, on the Rugby field, and shortly proceed to London and leave go out to China. Although not a regular member of the Inverness team, Gedman was one of the most valuable cogs in the Caledonian side. As a rover he had few superiors and his tackling was of that kind which an opponent does not greatly relish.

Of late weeks the docker has been in the limelight in the area of [illegible] may fall into the casual category—as it generally does—it is by no means unskilled work. It is not [illegible] who could step into his shoes without feeling the pinch of them. It is team work and [illegible] He must work in time with machinery, as a recruit marches to the tick of the metronome. His business also is with the essentials of life; he carries the food of a people on his shoulders. And, like all men who deal with the essentials of life, he and his work are governed by the non-[illegible] [illegible] In the ports of the Firth of Forth this is essentially so and there his labour is casual. For the chief trade is with the Baltic ports and with the ports of the White Sea—ports which, during certain months of the year, are ice-bound. A man who takes up the calling of a docker is assumed to be equal to tackling a burden of anything from 2 to 5 cwt. This, at least, is what may be required of the average grain worker. It sounds a tall order, but it is not a matter of direct bulk. The experienced docker is the man who has cultivated the knack of handling. The best docker in the world is said to be the Chinese, and that the European has little chance of competing with him in the matter of dexterity and swiftness. Modern science has lightened the task of the docker. The newest cargo boats [illegible] been brought into play in stacking. Still, for all these improvements, it is no uncommon thing to see men at Leith Docks, stripped of coat and waistcoat, sweating on the coldest day in winter.

Sometimes, in order to earn more—overtime is paid at the rate of time and a half—the men will work night and day, off-loading fruit, cement, or coal, at night under the glare of powerful arc lamps. Unloading cement and coal is thirsty work and sobriety cannot be reckoned among the chief virtues of the docker. Most of them in the end, fall victims to varicose veins, and few of them can persist in their calling after the age of fifty. As a body, they are stated to work well and to grumble little.

THE LATE SIR WM. WALLACE.

A tablet is to be placed in Westminster Hall in memory of Sir William Wallace and to mark the place of his trial there. Mr. [illegible] Robertson, M.P., one of the Scottish Socialist Whips, who has always taken a deep interest in [illegible] historical associations of Westminster, has urged successive Ministers who have presided over the Office of Works to place in the hall some record of the trial of the Scottish patriot and at last he has persuaded his Socialist colleague, Mr. Jowett, to agree to his request. In his letter to Mr. Robertson notifying his consent, Mr. Jowett says:—"We know from contemporary documents that Wallace was tried in Westminster Hall on August 23, 1305, on a scaffold at the south end of the hall, and that a laurel crown was set on his head in reference to the alleged prophecy that he would be crowned in that hall. Doubtless the actual site was in front of the King's Bench marble seat which stood against the south wall of the hall." The tablet is to be placed on the floor of the hall at, or near, the [illegible] where the scaffold stood for the purpose of the trial.

UNIVERSITY GOLF MATCHES.

The Scottish Universities Golf Society have assumed an active role under the energetic secretaryship of Mr. G. C. Mansfield. It is a body of whom comparatively little is heard considering how representative it is, standing on this side of the Border for all that the more widely known Oxford and Cambridge Golfing Society does on the other side. The visit of the latter society to East Lothian a year ago made a very interesting curtain-raiser to the golfing season, and whether or not a return visit is contemplated we are at any rate to have a visit from the present students of the two great English Universities [illegible] of March. They are to play teams representing the present students of the Scottish Universities [illegible] Golfing Society. These encounters will find the Scottish players [illegible] advantage of constant week-end matches continued right through the winter and culminating in the Hoylake meeting. But the Universities Society at any rate should be able to put up a fight if it is represented at anything like its full playing strength.

HANSARD AND DIALECT.

When the Clydeside M.P.'s arrived in the House of Commons, there was a disturbing rumour that all the English reporters in the Press Gallery would lose their jobs because only Scotsmen could understand the Clydeside dialect. One is inclined to think that something akin to this has really happened, for in the Hansard report of the debate on unemployment tht other night Mr. Kirkwood is officially reported to have interrupted Dr. Macnamara by saying "Yes, of course, we ken ye," and then to have interjected a little later on in the same speech. "Do ye no' mind that you were in office yourself!" Earlier in the proceedings something the Scots Minister of Health did is baldly reported as "Mr. Wheatley indicated assent." Whether he nodded or said something in broad Gaelic that no one understood is not stated. Perhaps he said [illegible]

ENGLAND OR BRITAIN.

A discussion is taking place in the press on Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's quotations, and Sir D. M. Stevenson recalls that in his Rectorial Address to the Glasgow University students on "Patriotism," he quoted the lines from "Richard II."—

"This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle. This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England."

Someone in the gallery shouted out "Britain!" Fixing him with his eyeglass, Mr. Chamberlain said: "Had I been Shakespeare I would have said 'Britain,' but he said 'England.'"

SWEATING FOR IT.

Some of the new Socialist Under-Secretaries are almost overcome by the size of their salaries. One whom I met the other day was frank in his observations on the subject. His salary of some £1,200 a year struck him as being "a lot of money." After a moment he added—"But I've got to work d—d hard for it."

TINKLE OF THE COPPERS.

The broadcasting of the North U.F. Church service at Aberdeen on Sunday evening has provoked some of the usual caustic comments at the expense of the Granite City folks. One Sassenach commentator, who heard the service "as far away as London is," says what tickled him most was the tinkle of the coppers when the collection was being taken. He declares that he did not hear the reverberation of a single threepenny bit.

A NEW GOLFING STORY.

A good golfing story and, I think, a new one comes from Aberdeen. Mr A Clark, the first captain and treasurer of the Northern Golf Club, has been recalling some picturesque incidents in the early days of that now flourishing association. Most of the members were working men, and before the eight hour day came into force they used to play their rounds in the evenings—often well into the night. On one occasion darkness set in before the game was finished, and one of the members was sent ahead to shout the direction of the greens. Out of the blackness in front came a voice "Do ye see the mune?" "Aye," was the ready. "Weel," said the guide, "that's the direction, but nae see far!"

BELGIAN BOY'S ADVENTURE

A Jim Hawkins of the Battle Zone

The news published recently in Brussels of the arrest in Berlin of a young Belgian, Otto Stéphane, for attempting to rob some of the British Reparation experts, has led to the identification of this boy as one who has had a most remarkable career.

Young Stéphane was a Boy Scout, 14 years of age, when war broke out, and instead of falling in with the stream of refugees, he stayed with the Belgian [illegible] Venturing out after the [illegible] he came across two Germans in a coppice, and, finding they were in no fighting mood, he escorted them to a Belgian outpost and the men were made prisoners. Stephane afterwards enlisted as a volunteer, and was allowed to go to the front at his request. He was twice wounded.

In this way his name became famous in France, and at the end of hostilities, which he survived without further injury, Gaby Deslys, the famous actress, became "War godmother" to him. At her house in Paris many parties were arranged in his honour. Then he disappeared from Paris and was not heard of again until he received an appointment as secretary to General Wrangel in Russia. After the debacle Stéphane turned up in Constantinople, and was arrested and released.

Later he turned up in the Rhineland, and as the result of some less creditable adventures he was arrested, and a charge was preferred against him of attempting to obtain property belonging to King Albert by giving a false name and carrying false identification papers. For this he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

The police state that Stéphane speaks English, German, Russian and Turkish with marked fluency, and they are baffled over his amazing propensity for adventure.—Central News.

BOY MUSICIAN WONDER

"Lohengrin" on Piano and Organ at Six

In the middle of his music lesson at school a six-year-old Clapham boy, George Malcolm, will often stop and say: "I have some lovely sounds in my head, may I play them to you?

He has only been learning music for two terms, and the head music mistress at the Notre Dame School, Clapham, declares that she has never known a child like him. "He is a genius," she told the "Daily News." "I am teaching him the piano and the violin, and he can already play Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Heller. He has taught himself the organ.

"We discovered his talent quite accidentally. The teacher who plays for the children's drill was away ill, and the drillmistress asked, in fun, if any of the little ones could play it. He volunteered, and played the music perfectly from ear without knowing a note of music. The teacher was so astonished that she called me to hear him play.

"I have never known him to play a discord, and in chapel he often sings an alto of his own to the melodies."

Malcolm has, his teacher declared, already composed a dozen pieces, although he does not yet know how to write it down. "He gives his compositions names of his own," added the teacher. "One he composed at breakfast at home. He calls it 'A Spanish Dance in A minor,' another he calls 'The Blue River.'

Malcolm's parents, his teacher and the organ music as difficult as the Bridal March from 'Lohengrin.' He learns without the slightest difficulty."

Malcolm's parent, his teacher added, are not musicians, and cannot explain his remarkable talent. He is a perfectly normal, lively boy in all other respects, and bright and intelligent at his lessons.

MR. SNOWDEN'S LUCK

Prospective Surplus of Some £30,000,000 Due to Unionist Government Economy

From Our Own Correspondent.

London, Mar. 6.

Mr. Snowden, the [illegible] Chancellor of the Exchequer, will have a surplus of about £30,000,000.

The savings on the Civil Services and Revenue Departments compared with the present financial year show a sum of £37,000,000. The Army Estimates show a reduction of seven millions, the Navy Estimates of about three millions. The Air Force is to cost roughly two millions more, and, if it be assumed that the Consolidated Fund Services will run to about the same figure, the sum which the Chancellor of the Exchequer will have to find for 1924-5 will be, in round numbers, something over £782,000,000, made up as follows:—

Army	£45,000,000
Navy	55,000,000
Air	14,000,000
Civil Service	289,000,000
Consolidated Fund	380,000,000
	£783,000,000

This, of course, is a rough estimate, which takes no account of odd thousands. The expenditure calculated for in the Budget of 1923-4 was, again in round figures, £816,000,000. It included £25,000,000 for supplementary estimates which might become necessary during the year. If similar provision is made in the forthcoming budget, then the total above given would be increased by that amount.

The Department exhibiting the largest saving is the Ministry of Pensions, which is £6,707,400 down at £66,947,800; and decreases as big relatively can be put to the credit of the Ministry of Agriculture and the Ministry of Labour, which require £2,704,400 and £2,126,700 less respectively, at £2,018,100 and £14,060,300. As much as £10,642,400 is retrieved under the Diplomatic and Consular Vote in regard to Colonial and Middle-Eastern services, no doubt because the current period had to bear the cost of the Imperial Conference.

The sum needed for the Board of Trade comes down from £1,032,500 to £538,300. The Board of Education Vote at £41,900,000 is within £34,000 of the present year's figure, as it certainly should be. It is a good sign, too, that the inadequate sum of £466,100 formerly assigned to scientific investigation and scientific and industrial research has been advanced to £529,700. Old Age Pensions go up from £23,300,000 to £24,201,000, the increase being partly due to the promised abolition of the thrift penalization provision. The Revenue Departments exhibit little change on balance.

How will Mr. Snowden spend his surplus? It is thought that he will take a good deal off the food taxes and somthing off the entertainment tax. He may also increase the taxation on the rich, especially in the direction of the super tax and, possibly, also the death duties. It might be added that, of course, credit for this flourishing state of national finance is due to the old Unionist Government.

AN AWKWARD SITUATION

Try as I would I could not rid myself of the Bore.
He was not to be dismissed by anything I did.
"I must go uptown," I said; but he merely replied,
"Very well. I'll go with you."
I invented several chores but he stuck like a leech.
Finally I hesitated in front of a private dwelling
I had never seen before and said to the Bore,
"I must stop here to see an old friend. Good-by."
I ran up the steps and rang the bell.
The door was opened by a servant.
"Is Mrs. Robinson in?" I inquired.
"Certainly, sir," he replied. "Step this way."

OUR AUSTRALIAN LETTER

Travelling Ministers and Do They Earn Their Pay? Parliament Preparing for a Wrangle: The British Naval Squadron and Romance Killed by Wireless

From Our Own Correspondent.

Melbourne, Feb. 27.

Mr. S. M. Bruce, the Prime Minister, is expected back in Australia within the next few days, and is being met by the acting Prime Minister, Dr. Page, and staff at Fremantle on the western coast. He travels overland by the so-called desert railway, and should reach Melbourne within 10 days. His appearance here is looked forward to with considerable interest by the ordinary onlooker, and with not a little anxiety by the politicians. Dr. Page has signified his retirement from the temporary leadership of the Government party by a lengthy speech in which he has claimed that the administration during the recess, and Mr. Bruce's absence, has been highly successful. He takes credit in an extraordinary way for alleged reforms, which after all were carried into effect by his predecessors whom he claims to have driven from office for the public good. A section of the press is pointing this out, and for the first time there appears to be an inclination seriously to criticize the Government. Dr. Page contends that ministers have done well by seldom being in their offices but travelling through the country to see for themselves personally. When one realizes the immense spaces of Australia and the time necessarily lost in travelling he will wonder, as one newspaper suggests, whether ministers could not be dispensed with altogether.

One Minister claims that because he dismissed a number of caretakers, who were uselessly employed looking after some anchored hulks, he has saved as much as all the ministerial trips would cost in the course of one year. Assuredly a somewhat childish argument, and one which is frequently heard from the man who declines to pay fire insurance premiums. But the chief complaints heard from the press which would naturally support the Government are based upon the fact that this Government is continuing the policy of grants, bounties, and interference with trade and industry to just as great an extent as did the previous Hughes' Government. It is also borrowing, and the Commonwealth Treasurer has propounded the thesis that it should be our aim to keep the public debt at its present per capita level, namely £150. Dr. Page points out that taking the past year's increase in population this would give a loan expenditure for the current year of £20,000,000, with increase in the future as the population is augmented. Such a proposition, coming from a leader pledged to the strictest economy and the curtailment of borrowing, is creating uneasiness, which is reflected in some very strong public criticism.

PARLIAMENT'S MEETING.

It is expected that Mr. Bruce will agree to the suggestion of the cabinet that parliament should resume its sittings on March 26. This will give him a fortnight to consider the various matters to which his colleagues have pledged him during the long recess and while he has been out of the country. He is pledged to revise the tariff and to introduce measures to alter the constitution. These measures must be submitted to the people for confirmation, and their purpose is to subdivide the larger States, and to practically recast the political map of Australia. Either the tariff or the constitutional amendments are sufficient to wreck the Government, even if it can successfully withstand the attacks which are bound to be made in respect to its futile administration at home and the failure of Mr. Bruce's mission to London.

The Nationalist section of the ministerialists is by no means satisfied. Dr. Page, the Country party leader, has used the absence of Mr. Bruce as an opportunity to strengthen his own party, and preach the doctrine that the man on the land should have a separate party in order to gain his own ends. The Nationalists are noting that the Country party in the several States is quite prepared to filch seats from the Nationalists, and, if the latter object to give their second votes to Labour, I understand that this attitude of selfish isolation—of Sinn Feinism—ourselves alone—is being more and more resented, and the Prime Minister will be hard put to it to maintain peace in the ranks of his followers. Mr. Bruce's capacity for leadership will be put severely to the test, but as the ex-Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, will be a away for the next four months he will have every opportunity to show what he can do with the material at his command.

Before his departure for America, where he will deliver a series of lectures, Mr. Hughes warned Mr. Bruce that the Liberal and Labour sections of the Nationalist party were steadily drifting apart, and no-one is better furnished with political acumen to express an opinion.

THE BRITISH SERVICE SQUADRON.

Such is the effectiveness of wireless that greetings were exchanged between the Commonwealth and the British Special Service squadron while the warships were still 3,400 miles from the Australian coast. This sort of thing goes a long way to knock all the romance out of the seafaring yarns of the past. The Watchman on the hills at the back of the Lizard waiting to catch the first glimpse of the Spanish Armada, the hasty message to Drake and his admirals, and the assurance that they had still time to finish their game of bowls, would to-day be replaced by the reports in the newspapers each day for a fortnight or more as to the moment the fleet sailed, and its daily progress. To-day the spontaneous welcome cannot happen. Wireless has killed spontaneity.

For all that the fleet which will arrive to-day will be warmly welcomed, will visit all the important ports, and not leave Australian waters before April 26. All this might seem to have no very particular significance, but it has been endowed with unexpected importance by the fact that there has been a change of Government in Britain since the squadron set out on its mission. It is asserted that the Labour Government would have, had it been able, cancelled the Empire tour of the ships, and there were even non-Labour politicians who believed that this was quite on the cards. The hoax, therefore, which was perpetrated by an Australian Labour paper was not altogether without some grounds for belief. "The Labour Call" of Melbourne printed a few copies containing a bogus telegram, which made it appear that the British Premier, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, had indicated that he hoped there would be no superfluous patriotism in the welcoming of the fleet, and that official visits would be paid to the Trades Halls, and, where Labour was not in power, to the Leaders of Labour Oppositions. It was hinted that internationalism rather than patriotism was the keynote of the Labour policy.

Ramsay MacDonald said the message was a tissue of falsehoods, but the London daily Labour paper treated it as a joke, and said that MacDonald might well have said it, but not in such blunt language. At least two Melbourne dailies were foolish enough to take the story seriously, and one went even so far as solemnly to comment on it in its leading columns. The matter might rest at that, and the paper be satisfied that it had raised a laugh, but unfortunately the paper is controlled by the Deputy-leader of the Federal Labour Opposition. It is interpreted—at least by the opponents of Labour—as an attempt on the part of the communistic element in the trades unions to throw cold water upon the visit of the fleet, and lessen the welcome the officers and men will receive. I do not think it will have that effect, but it is certain to supply ammunition to the opponents of Labour. It is rather as if a small boy had set a bent pin for his neighbour to sit down upon, and then had sat on it himself.

SHORT-LIVED BUSHRANGING.

It transpires that the man who did the shooting at a picnic party in New South Wales had never heard of the somewhat similar crime in the Melbourne Botanic Gardens. He was a man with a grievance. He had invented something which had been stolen from him. Most inventors are like that. He had discovered, so he said, a way to poison rabbits, and he carried about a tin of cyanide of postassium which he was not game, at the last moment, to use upon himself. Of the three people he shot one is dead, but the others are likely to survive. After shooting at some police who were pursuing him he crept down to the river Murray, and swam across to the Victorian side. He discarded rifle, ammunition and much of his clothing, and the countryside being aroused he was soon described against the skyline climbing the mountainous country. He knew the people and most of them knew him. He had talked in days past of what he would do if he ever turned bushranger, and despite the evidence of the prison doctors it looks as if he were hardly responsible.

In the end he crawled to the milking-yard of a homestead, where two youths, whom he knew, were milking cows, and prayed for food. The youths gave him milk, and while he was drinking seized and bound him in the best movie-picture style. He had been about five days' out. Meanwhile, in the same neighbourhood—that is within 150 miles—some-one had been busy burning small houses. At last he shot at one of the people watching for him, and the hard-headed and hard-riding bushmen rode him down. He is already forgotten except by those whose property he destroyed.

It is permissible, perhaps, to add here that one of the two men who shot the bank manager at a Melbourne suburban railway station, as mentioned by me some months ago, has been condemned to death. The other man, who is quite well known to the police, has not been captured. He has either got out of the country, or is, to use the criminal phraseology, lying in smoke.

TRAWLING INDUSTRY.

Probably one of the most remarkable instances of how Governments can stand in the light of industry is shown by the failure hitherto to establish a fish trawling industry. Soon after the Commonwealth came into existence a trawler was secured and the services of Mr. H. C. Dannevig, a Norwegian fishery expert, temporarily in the employ of the New South Wales Government, obtained. As a result the areas where trawling was possible were mapped, and a whole library of information created. Yet no-one seemed particularly to mind, and Mr. Dannevig and his trawler disappeared with all hands down in the southern seas where they had been sent upon a quite unsuitable mission. The New South Wales State Government decided to start trawling, but being afflicted with Labour ideals also started State fish-shops, and lost money in very considerable quantities. Had the catches of their trawlers been made available to the regular sellers of fish the business might have succeeded. With a change of Government the fish shops have been closed and the trawlers sold. Queensland, also having a Labour Government, was determined to catch fish, and sell it to the public. It lost many thousands of pounds, reluctantly abandoned its scheme, and sold its one trawler. Possibly these efforts, or the after-results of the war, may have had their effect, but trawling is now being taken up by private enterprise, under the guidance of men experienced in the North Sea fisheries.

Four or five trawlers are now regularly supplying Sydney, and the other day a Sydney trawler came into Melbourne to initiate a similar trade here. It is early yet to be able to prophesy as to results, and much of course will depend upon the manner in which the State railways assist in getting the catches distributed inland. But what is of chief interest is the fact that Admiral Lord Jellicoe in 1919, when reporting on Australian naval defence, particularly mentioned the necessity of having mine-sweeping facilities, and declared that the cheapest and most efficient method was to create a large fish trawling industry. Whether the Commonwealth is encouraging these new ventures has not yet been disclosed, but there is always the danger that the fear of being charged with Socialism will keep it idle.

COTTON INDUSTRY.

The past year was a bad one for the cotton industry, which is chiefly located in Queensland. The drought which prevailed was considered the worst according to records for 50 years, yet 12,000,000-lb. of seed cotton valued at £275,-000 was obtained. For the current year the prospects, following upon general rains, are excellent. There are estimated to be some 100,000 acres under crop, and an output of 43,000,000-lb., 86,000 bales, valued at £1,000,000 is anticipated. In addition to up to date ginning plants mills have been erected to treat the cotton seed, and get all the value possible out of bye-products. There are now some 4,000 white farmers engaged in growing the staple, and the number is being rapidly increased. Reports from England tell us that there is no hope for rapid expansion because there is no large supply of cheap, coloured labour, and Lord Leverhulme, when here the other day, was most persistent that we should bring negroes into the country and establish an industry which he assured us would be worth a sum of £300,000,000 or double the value of the American crop.

Apart from the political and social objections to having a mass of negroes in this country, all Australians who have studied the matter believe that industrially the idle, shiftless, and unimaginative coloured races are less profitable than the energetic white man, with whom initiative is a commonplace. Already there is evidence enough that the white people picking cotton pick ever so much more in a short day than the plantation negro in the United States does in a long one, and as the cotton farms are all in small areas the growers and their families can for the most part do all the necessary work. At present the growing of ratoon cotton is prohibited, but a strong agitation is afoot that this prohibition be removed. It is asserted that the ratooning of cotton is liable to harbour insect pests, but this argument should equally apply to sugar cane, which is usually ratooned twice after the plant crop has been cut.

Seeing that in two or three years the area under cotton has increased from nothing to 100,000 acres there is no reason to suppose that double or treble that amount of land will not be planted within the next two or three years. Indeed it seems likely that cotton cultivation will proceed quite as quickly with white labour as would be possible with coloured, seeing that it is necessary to open up lands, build railways, and otherwise prepare the country for settlement. One thing is certain namely that the industry is being started on sound foundations. The danger of pests is fully recognized, and the best expert advice in all departments has been hired to watch developments, check mistakes, and advise the growers.

ATHERTON TABLELANDS.

At the back of Cairns, which is now the second port in Queensland in the amount of its trade, there are wonderful tablelands, lying 2,000 to 3,000 feet above sea level, and embracing some 7,000,-000 acres of deep, rich volcanic soils. For a long time past there have been many settlers on this country which lies just below the 17th parallel of south latitude, but they have not found much that they can profitably cultivate. It is too cold at night-time to grow sugar cane, and the cultivation of maize, which at one time reached one million bushels, largely failed because of the intense moisture which prevented the drying of the grain and its preservation from the attacks of weevils. Estimates of the cost of kiln-drying placed this remedy out of the question. Lately the State Government of Queensland has come to the rescue and advanced some £70,000 to the farmers, who have let contracts for the building of three silos for storage purposes. At the same time a compulsory pool has been created which will handle the maize as common property, and see that it is not rushed on to the market to be sold for next door to nothing, while later on in the year South African maize will be imported to supply the people in the South. The capacity of the three silos will be 8,000 tons, and the number of farmers affected at first only 150, but this new development will naturally lead, if successful, to many new growers taking up this industry, to more silos, and to the restoration of the old time prosperity without the market risks

There is also talk of one of the big manufacturing firms putting up works for the manufacture of maize products on the spot. It is only fair to say that the State Labour Government is chiefly responsible for this new departure being made possible. The average Liberal Government, which worships private enterprise as a savage does his fetish, hesitates to lend money to farmers to commence a new venture, lest it be charged with conquetting with State Socialism, yet there is no question that our sugar industry, meat export works and butter factories largely owe their initiation and success not so much to private enterprise as to State determination to make them succeed, and helping them with advances at a low rate of interest, and easy terms of repayment Labour Governments have no qualms in such matters, and on the whole though they are charged with being socialistic do a great deal of good. The Babinda sugar mill was built by the Government at a cost of half a million sterling. It is in good running order, and pays its way. The Government has now handed it over to the farmers, and it becomes their property to do with as they like, provided they continue to pay off the Government loan with interest. In addition to maize growing on the Atherton tablelands there has been considerable increase in dairying of late, and the prospects are that this fine area, well in the tropics, will soon become a hive of white men's industry.

FILMING EVEREST

Colour-pictures and Tibetan Music

The "Times" publishes from its film correspondent the following account of the arrangements that have been made to take pictures of the Everest Expedition: -

Elaborate preparations have been made to take cinematograph pictures of the third expedition to climb Mount Everest, which is soon leaving this country, Captain J. B. L. Noel, F.R.G.S., who was responsible for the film of the second expedition shown last year, is again in charge. A number of pictures are to be taken by the new process of colour cinematography invented by Mr. Friese Green. Certain portions of the films are to be sent to this country as they are taken by arrangement with Messrs. Pathé Frères, and it is anticipated that it will be possible to show them in London a month after they have been taken. The complete film, however, will probably not appear till next October.

The films will not be developed during the journey as they were last time (sometimes with rather disastrous results), but as they are taken they will be sent back first by foot, then by mule transport, and then by Indian past to Darjeeling, where they will be developed at a specially constructed laboratory. When the complete film is shown it will be accompanied by Tibetan music recorded during the journey by Mr. T. H. Somervell (who did similar work last time), and orchestrated and fitted to its new environment by Mr. Eugene Goossens.

SPECIAL ARTICLES

OUR FACULTIES AND THE FACT OF RELIGION

The Old Inheritance and our Temptation: A Sermon

Preached by the Rev. A. S. Rowland on April 9, 1922, in Union Church, Shanghai

"There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." I Cor. x: 13.

Last Sunday we thought of [illegible] Revelation [illegible] these three, and that place in Revelation [illegible] present [illegible] Through the [illegible] is under test. This is the [illegible] confusion to man of which the Apostle speaks in the chapter.

THE MORAL STRUGGLE.

We know now that temptation has come from a far away past [illegible] gathered momentum from [illegible] processes. To [illegible] conflict with the [illegible] to come in [illegible] that we [illegible] of the [illegible] life is a [illegible] that we [illegible] in the [illegible] Him. He is [illegible] to be tempted to be [illegible] to be [illegible]

So in moral questions. There can be no victory for the man who already counts himself a [illegible] renders at the first summons. The Apostle Peter had experience of this in the courtyard of the high priest when temptation searched [illegible]

This chapter of Corinthians is a great contribution to the subject. First the apostle turns to the over confident and says "Remember how our fathers lost what they set out for by yielding to temptation. Take warning from their downfall." Then he [illegible] the truth [illegible] temptation; [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] where it happened. They der whether it is quite safe on the Blue Express. it over and joke. A Chinese, a banker, rides

d class. He says the first is too far beyond the or-ary standard of living of an st man in China. Luncheng ssed. We have our dinner. train moves quickly. The tall tors of the road look feros and efficient. The search-t is turned on. Nothing on ur sides but the bare country
the Yellow River Valley.

CLASS PREJUDICES.

inese and foreigners alike in ing wonder at the millionaires
Shanghai, who inhabit the ds and whose wives buy furs.
e people might know how to e money, but they can't possiknow anything else. It is this judice in Peking against the tality of the Shanghailander ch makes for much of the misderstanding in the situation.
nghai is supposed to be as ren as the spindle-room of a on mill. Yet, one can look d in Peking and find neither Paci's concerts nor Mr.
erby's and Dr. Chatley's meet-Culture usually accom-ies economic independence—
there is no money in Peking.

THE HOUSE OF CHING.

here is much talk in Peking of boy Emperor. There is much of his use of the telephone the automobile, of his British or and his wife's missionary or. But there is little talk of calling into his palace younger inese scholars and philosophers instruct him in the history of s country and the present con-ions of its people. The Boy peror is taking a keener in-est in China than perhaps its sident—although that is not explicable. For blood will out.

LESSONS IN GOLF

—Some Points About Putting

(Harry Vardon—Six Times Open Champion)

Putting has given me infinitely ore trouble than any other dertment of the game, and, for at reason, I have devoted an alculable measure of attention
it. If the results have been riable, the experiments have en at least interesting.
After 30 years of ups and wns on the putting green, I convinced that there are two preme constituents of success this small area with its crowd-possibilities.
The first is to keep the head,
d therefore the body, absolute-still throughout the swing, and til after the ball has been uck. Only the arms should ve in the playing of the oke.
The second is to see that the ub-head is not pushed in even e slightest degree outwards—at is, away from the body—durg the back swing. It should taken back, so far as possible, a straight line behind the ball.
owing to the length of the ft and the consequent necessity
r a comparatively long swing, e club-face must turn slightly om a right-angle setting to the rection of play, its tendency ould be to travel inside an ex-nded line of the putt behind e ball—not to go outside that e, which is a common fault.

THINGS THAT DON'T MATTER.

As a rule, the person who is tting well is observing these o principles. For the rest, it es not matter much how he is ing about the business. Whe-er he is standing straddlegged or with the heels close gether, whether he is stooping er the ball or adopting an most erect posture, and how he [illegible] the club are matters
[illegible] choice on which it ould be absurd to lay down
[illegible] where putting is concerned.
[illegible]ping the head still and not [illegible]ing the club out are the [illegible] to remember, and perhaps e best advice one can offer is at the player should not think o much about anything else hen he is within holing disnce. Putting can become like [illegible]mare if, when you are [illegible] well, you begin to analyse r methods in order to discover actly how you are prospering greatly.

A FAMOUS PLAYER'S GRIP.

There is a human story of a man who had failed at nothing on the greens for six or seven holes until his opponent remarked: "You are a wonderful putter. I must watch how you do it." The wonderful one, conscious of the fact that he was now being watched, began himself to wonder how he was doing it, with the result that the smooth working of the system gave way to an endeavour to demonstrate all the principles that he felt were correct. And so he missed the putts.

A great many people—including first-class players—grip the putter differently from any of the other clubs. Ever since I saw Mr. W. J. Travis, of New York, win the British amateur championship at Sandwich in 1904, I have thought that—theoretically, at any rate—his grip was the best for this department of the game.

It was the overlapping grip reversed—that is, the left hand did the overlapping. If memory serves, the forefinger and second fingers of that hand rested on the third and little fingers of the right hand.

I have tried this method and done well with it, although the ordinary overlapping grip is now too strongly ingrained in me for any other to take its place permanently, even for putting only. Still Mr. Travis's way strikes me as being sound in conception, because it helps to keep the right hand under control. And it is usually the right hand that becomes wayward, especially in the matter of pushing the putter out at the start of the back swing.

AN UNNOTICED FAULT.

This latter fault often creeps into the system without being noticed, and generally results in the club-face cutting across the ball, which is, therefore, invested with a tendency to wobble gingerly along the line and slip past the right-hand side of the tin.

I was once suffering from such a condition on the eve of an open championship. Happening to be in the professional's shop with nothing particular to do, I started to swing my putter. The boarded floor had no covering, and there were the usual thin lines where the planks joined. I chanced to start my putter back on one of these lines, and noticed that it went outside the line. That was the key to my trouble. I began at once to practise the principle of taking the club back straight along the line, and, as a result, putted so well in that championship as to win.

HEADS AND ELBOWS.

But when all is said and done, the preservation of a perfectly still head and body is the main essential in the accomplishment of a successful putt.

Obviously there is nothing wonderful in making a ball run two or three or more yards in a straight line on a green specially prepared for the purpose, and in the great majority of cases the influence which causes it to go wrong is a sway of the body, beginning at the head.

Different players have different methods for maintaining the stability of the body. Mr. Francis Ouimet, that distinguished American amateur who beat Edward Ray and me in the re-play for the United States Open Championship of 1913, and who is certainly one of the finest putters in the world, has both his elbows pointing well outwards so that his arms form a kind of triangle with the apex at his neck, and the club swinging pendulum-fashion from his hands in the middle of the base of the triangle.

It is a putting style that arrests attention, because it looks as if the club-head must move in a straight line—the line of the putt—from beginning to end, and this is an invaluable feature of the putting swing.

J. H. Taylor adopted the principle many years ago of sticking out his left elbow so that it pointed almost directly in the line of play, and it struck me that he became a more certain holer-out—if that were possible—from the moment he put this system into operation.

Some players like to pause momentarily at the end of the back swing, as if to steady themselves and take aim for the putt. Macdonald Smith, of Mexico, who finished third in last year's British Open Championship, does this in a pronounced degree, and the trait is almost as noticeable in the putting methods of James Braid. I have observed, too, that the longer he pauses at the end of his back swing, the better he putts.

We may not do well deliberately to cultivate a break of this kind, but certainly it is better than rushing the club forward.

Keep your head absolutely rigid and take the club back in a straight line behind the ball. Bring it forward smoothly and follow through. Those seem to be the essentials of effective putting.

VI.—Long Shots Up to Hole

It happens very often that we want to play a long and well-controlled shot up to the hole—a shot of greater distance than we can accomplish with a mid-iron, but calling for just as much accuracy in the placing of the ball.

It is not typical stroke with the brassie. In ordinary circumstances we use the brassie as we do the driver. We adopt the same full swing in the endeavour to obtain length, and, if we are just within reach of the green, we hope that the ball will finish on it. Among the rank and file of golfers, the brassie shot is viewed as a speculation. Not many players have a real fancy for it.

They have long since come to the conclusion that the art of taking the ball clearly from the turf an almost straightfaced wooden club is one of the most difficult features of the game. "I never could hit a brassie shot and never shall," is a common remark as the frustrated individual puts the club back in the bag after one more failure. At any rate, it is essentially a club for a good lie, unless the player happens to be one of unusual skill.

SPOON, CLEEK AND DRIVING IRON.

Let us try something easier. Three clubs may be said to stand jointly next in power to the brassie. They are the spoon, the cleek and the driven iron. The golfer has to decide which of them he is going to make his stand-by for shots up to the pin which are beyond the range of the mid-iron. Where the average player is concerned—the person who does not hope to become a champion, although he is keen to improve to the limit of his capacity—I have no hesitation in recommending the spoon.

The cleek may be the best club of all for the purpose if the golfer concerned possesses the gift of being able to strike the ball absolutely accurately. Its narrow blade fits into a bad lie where no wooden club would be equal to the occasion. Moreover, the man who is master of the cleek can control the flight and run of the ball better with it than he can with a spoon.

It always seems to me, however, that the cleek is the club for an individual who has been pursuing the game from childhood and who has been brought up with this instrument as one of his playthings. It calls for confidence, flexibility of the golfing muscles, and accuracy of striking in a greater degree, I think, than any other club.

A DISTINCTION.

For the late beginner or anybody whose muscles are fairly well set, the spoon is an easier club to use. It should be distinctly shorter than the brassie and possessed of a fairly stiff shaft. Every follower of the game knows that its face must have an appreciable loft. Assuming that it is a spoon of the strictly thoroughbred type, it will have a long face.

There are "spoons" with stumpy heads and small faces—rather more generously lofted than the thoroughbred type. At least, the people who own them often call them spoons. Distinctions in the nomenclature of clubs are sometimes only matters of fancy, but these squat, more or less square-headed wooden clubs—with a loft between that of a mid-iron and mashie—I would prefer to know as baffies, although the term "spoon" and "baffy" are frequently regarded as being synonymous.

The true spoon, I would say, has—in addition to its long face—the loft of a mid-iron. Being shorter in the shaft than the brassie, it will naturally necessitate the player standing nearer to the ball if he is to accomplish the shot successfully. He can tell with every club whether he is standing in the position for striking, and making sure that the full extent of the sole, from heel to toe, is resting on the turf.

If the heel is raised from the ground, he is standing too near. If the toe is cocked up, he is too far away. The shaft being shorter and the stance nearer, the swing with the spoon will be more upright than that with the brassie. It can, however, be a fairly full swing. The spoon is the easiest club in the bag with which to vary the swing. One may make the effort as full as for a driver shot, or reduce it to a half or three-quarter swing.

The broad sole of the club, combined with its lofted face, allow for some margin of error, and often a tolerably satisfactory shot is achieved where—with any other club in use—the result would be a bungle, since slight mistiming would result in an iron sticking into the ground, and would cause a straighter faced wooden club to smother the ball.

I have already referred to the baffy. Having a loft approaching that of the mashie, it obviously will not obtain the same distance as a spoon or a cleek, but it is a very valuable club to the person who is never at all sure of hitting the ball cleanly.

Its well set-back face inspires confidence. It makes the player feel that he really can hit the ball up with this club. It is probably useful when the lie is unfavourable, and the head of the club has to fit into a depression at the impact.

Frankly, it is not a sheet-anchor for a good player or one who is improving so steadily as to lead him take a cleek when the lie is not too good, or a spoon where he prefers it to a cleek. Still, the baffy is a help to the player who is content to get well on the way to the hole—if not quite there.

I have already referred to the driving iron—or, as it is somesometimes called, the driving mashie—as an alternative to the cleek or the spoon. It has come into a good deal of favour because a lot of people like its comparatively broad face, which is considerably deeper than that of the cleek.

It is important to see that the driving iron has a little loft—not much, but sufficient to be definite. The longest iron shot of all is to be obtained with a straight-faced driving iron, and, as a result, one sees this kind of club fairly often on the links. But it is certainly the most difficult shot of all, and is hardly worth trying except in the case of a first class player.

A slightly-lofted driving iron, however, is probably easier to use than a cleek, and, in some circumstances, can be employed more profitably than a spoon. If you have these two, you do not need a cleek at all.

WHAT IS A CHINA PONY?

I.

Strange Eohippus, parent of the race
Of equine friends that twice a year amuse us,
Would that thou had'st possessed the saving grace
To brand thy Chinese foals, that now confuse us,
With some unique, imperishable mark,
Permitting recognition in the dark.
Had they but been endowed with gift of speech,
Eftsoon might we classification reach:
By purity of accent, firm decreed,
Know them from interloping, strange cross-breed.

II.

Think of the mischief wrought of this neglect
To mark thine offspring plain from other breeds.
Behold Race Club Committees, quite select,
In mental agony. Soon must they needs
Locate some seer, some oracle of old,
By whom the vital difference shall be told.
Else have recourse to prayer. A litany
May soon assail our ears. It will be—
"Lord, save us from the griffin that is phony:
And send us but the pukka China pony!"

III.

.....Perissodactyl of the Eocene,—
With four anterior digits, three behind,— Bethink thee how much better 'twould have been Had'st thou, for benefit of racing kind,
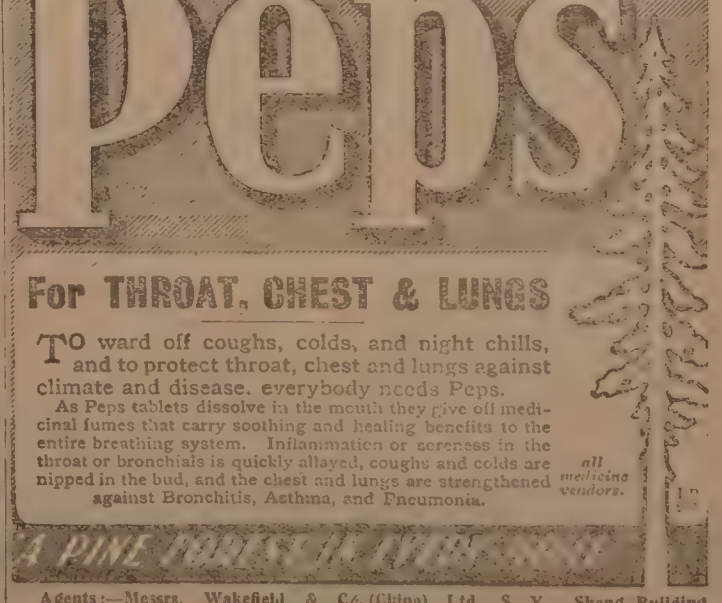
But marked thy China seed, throughout posterity,
With toes thus cunningly arranged. In verity,
Heads would ache less, along the China coast,
Especially in Race Clubs. None could boast
That they, who shall select, must each turn sinner
And bar, as cross-bred, ev'ry likely winner!

R. R. L. F. in the "Peking & Tientsin Times."



THE BOOK PAGE

BOOK NOTES AND NEWS

What book title could be more attractive to English readers than [illegible] Hon. George Lambton to a volume which he has appearing with Thornton Butterworth. Mr. Lambton is a gentleman rider of considerable fame, a well-known trainer, and a familiar figure in the hunting field. This enables him to recall great thoroughbreds, thrilling finishes, and tight corners in the hunting field. His social position as a member of the House of Durham has also brought him into contact with many celebrities.

∴

With the centenary of the death of Byron, which occurs this month, interest in his life and works steadily increases. Appropriately, there is appearing a book from the pen of Professor S. C. Chew, already well-known for his studies of the poet, entitled "Byron In England"—His Fame and After-Fame. The author shows how the fluctuations in Byron's renown have gone hand in hand with changes in current thought, and casts some light upon shifting ethical standards, religious tenets, political opinions and literary tastes. The Bibliography appended to the book, which is published by Mr. Murray, is far fuller than any other yet issued, and covers a vast field of research.

∴

"Murder and Its Motives" is the title of a book which that clever novelist, Miss Tennyson Jesse, has written for Heinemann. She divides the world into two classes, those who consider murder to be the most curious phenomenon of human nature, and admit a vivid interest in it, and those who, while secretly thrilled, disclaim any such interest and condemn it as morbid. Perhaps Miss Tennyson Jesse's book may appeal to both groups of readers, or she hopes so. She divides the motives for murder into six classes and illustrates each by discussing a famous crime.

∴

Mr. John Murray is publishing the "Adventures and Reminiscences of Major-General Sir Francis Howard, K.C.B." It is rather a long title, but then Sir Francis has had a full, varied, and adventurous carreer. He joined the Rifle Brigade in 1866 and saw service in the Jowaki campaign, of which younger people may never have heard. They have, however, heard of the Afghan war, the Soudan war, the South African war and the Great War, in all of which Sir Francis Howard took part. His job, a large one, in the Great War, was the supervision of the New Armies.

∴

At a time when much interest is centred in Russian affairs, Captain Francis McCullagh's book "The Bolshevik Persecution of Christianity," will be read with interest, for he not only presents the proofs of this persecution, but also gives a full account of the Cieplak trial at which he was present from the day it opened till it closed with four sentences of death. No such exhaustive account of this celebrated trial has so far been published in any language. The book, which Mr. Murray will publish, also deals with the general situation in Russia from a religious point of view.

∴

Sir George Greenwood, who has made a special study of the Turks, has a book about them appearing with Messrs. C. Palmer. He emphasizes the two important facts that the Turk has returned to Europe and that the meaning of this move in years to come concern not only the Balkans but Europe as a whole. Sir George thinks, in fact, that we are now face to face not with the Old Turk, but with the Young Turk, a much more dangerous person. The book has a preface by Sir [illegible] Edward Noble, who comments on [illegible] but not entirely as a friend and a warning for [illegible] the world at large.

IRELAND'S STORY

"The History of Ireland." By Stephen Gwynn. Macmillan. 12s. 6d.

[illegible] have been so busy making history that they might well be excused for not finding time to write it. Not the least hopeful sign of the new era is that the historians are almost as active as the politicians. Amid the alarms and excursions of civil war scholars like Mr. Eoin MacNeill, Mrs. Stopford Green, and Professor Curtis, have been patiently disentangling the ravelled threads of our early history unperturbed by the rattle of snipers' rifles that served as an accompaniment to their labours. Dublin Irregulars took it upon themselves 12 months ago to blow up Mr. Gwynn's house with a land mine on the ground that he was guilty of what they described as the crime of "non-sympathy." Mr. Gwynn returns good for evil by presenting his countrymen, including the Irregulars, with the first adequate review of the whole field of Irish history.

Though the book does not make pretensions to be a work of original research, it is a good deal more than "a summary outline," which is all the author claims for it in his preface. Hitherto the difficulty with all popular Irish histories has been that it was impossible to see the wood for the trees. These authors were cobblers rather than artists, and the principle upon which they acted was to stitch together the largest possible number of facts, with scant regard for nice questions of proportion, or for their relative value as illustrating the play of political and social forces. Even Mr. Gwynn, practised hand as he is, finds it no easy matter to cram a quart into a pint pot, and his book would have lost nothing had he refused to crowd his canvas with so much detail. But he does get as none of his predecessors did, the impression of continuity and development, and though the tale is necessarily long and involved, we carry away from these pages a new sense of its dramatic unity.

Another good service rendered by Mr. Gwynn is his refusal to set up a standard of values based on existing political controversies, and his insistence that in passing judgment upon men and events it is neither good history nor even good politics to ignore the point of view of another age. He has no illusions about Elizabethan statecraft, Cromwellian exploitation, or the monstrous injustice of the Penal Laws, but in dealing with these factors he relates them to the special circumstances of their time, a departure which if it outrages violent partisans on both sides has been received by the mass of Irish readers in a fashion that shows they recognize the time has come when the first duty of a popular historian is not to natter patriotic prejudices, but to face facts boldly however unpleasant they may be.

The handling of contemporary events is no bad test of the power of a writer to interpret the past, and Mr. Gwynn's narrative of the last 30 years, from the Home Rule campaign to the setting up of the Free State, is admirable in its precision, balance, and detachment. To have written a book of this kind at the present juncture is not only a service to scholarship, but to the State.

"THE FLYING DRAPER"

"The Flying Draper." By Ronald Fraser. (Fisher Unwin. 7s. 6d.)

Mr. Fisher Unwin has never [illegible] I mean a more original [illegible] Novel than this one. Whether [illegible] of complete clearness of [illegible], or simply lack of practice in story-writing, is hard to say, the fact remains vaguer mysticism, a little more obscure than the author probably intended. He seems undecided whether to make a Beresford-cum-Wells imaginary flight, of ingenuity rather than seriousness, or to follow that forlornest hope, the expression of the inexpressible. The work is enormously suggestive in some parts, highly entertaining in others, and a most interesting attempt all through. When the author (who has a mature style and rich vocabulary) shall have given more attention to the homogeneous quality which should fuse his vision with his story, he will write a novel which should be remarkable indeed.

LAST OF HER RACE

The Great Career of the Cutty Sark

[By H. M. Tomlinson.]

"The Log of the Cutty Sark." By Basil Lubbock. (Glasgow: Brown and Son. 16s.

The last, and the best. As Mr. Lubbock tells us, "next to the Victory, the most interesting survivor of the days of sail is undoubtedly the famous tea and wool clipper, Cutty Sark." In fact, perhaps those sailing ships are the only two whose names are at all familiar to the public. The Suez Canal was opened when the Cutty Sark was launched, in 1869, and the clippers were doomed. That masterpiece, built at Dumbarton—undoubtedly she was the fortunate creation of genius—was too late to get a chance to break records in the race home from China. Her first masters, excellent seamen, never discovered that they had under them anything more than an exceptionally fine ship. But she was much more than that. It was not until Captain Woodget, after showing his quality in one voyage in the little Coldstream, was appointed to the Cutty Sark by John Willis ("Old White Hat"), with instructions to "drive her," that it was discovered she was—well, let us say, of the same nature as an ode of Keats. There were numbers of fast steamers working in 1890, but so late as that year—which shows how recently at sea the Elizabethan era closed—the fastest ship on the seas was the Cutty Sark. She has left the P. & O. mail steamer astern, and, with her 17 knots and more when she was enjoying the wind, of course that was not so very difficult.

Woodget seems to have divined her remarkable nature at once. To see what that was, inspect the illustration in Mr. Lubbock's book, where the Cutty Sark is shown passing the Cimba, another fast clipper. The Cimba has reefed her top-gallant sails, but Tam O'Shanter's witch is close-hauled with her royals set, and appears to be skimming away in weather which would make the timid give one glance seaward and then crawl below. Woodget was happily married to the witch which gave Tam the fright of his life. During the 10 years when she was in his command she was never hove-to. When she was running, with wind and seas astern which daunted even her crew, it was Woodget's way, knowing his ship, to hang on with just so much canvas that she would slip out of the grasp of the following combers. She seemed, in fact, to exult in heavy weather, though she could also ghost along with the best, but only a man with a heart of bronze would have dared to invoke the magic of a witch in the southern ocean. Here is a delightful picture of Woodget at work, quoted by Mr. Lubbock from a letter by an officer of the Cutty Sark:—

> It was a pleasure to see the "old man" in dirty weather. He fairly revelled in it. With one side of his moustache jammed into his mouth, and hanging on to the weather rigging, I can see him now, his sturdy figure in yellow oilskins and long leather sea-boots, watching aloft and hanging on till the last moment. He gave all his crew complete confidence in him, and I never remember seeing him anything but calm in dirty weather.

Mr. Lubbock tells us that most of the tea clippers were very ticklish ships to handle in a big following sea, but that, properly canvassed, the Cutty Sark would run before the heaviest of the westerlies with very small helm, would keep her poop dry, and would bear driving as no other ship which ever crossed royal yards.

I am one of the fortunate who knew the Cutty Sark in Woodget's day, and it would be ridiculous of me to suppose that any living editor would give me the space to run loose on that precious intimacy. Besides, Mr. Lubbock has done it. He has written with gusto, and as length, and with astonishing patience and a pertinacity which has left unransacked any likely corner. He has preserved in this eulogy all the evidence which exists of the most remarkable merchant sailer created in a British shipyard. The general public may not know it, but we are deeply indebted to Mr. Lubbock, the historian of an era of British shipping which has passed. Mr. Conrad, in his narrative of the voyage of the Narcissus, has added to the body of our literature a vision of a time at sea which else would have been forgotten; and of that same period Mr. Lubbock has patiently sought and preserved all the intimate things, going fast now, of a sea-time of which this generation knows less than it knows of Tutankhamen.—The "Observer."

BERTHA

"Lummox." By Fannie Hurst. (Cape. 7s. 6d.)

This is not only the best novel we have had from America for at least a decade; it is one of the best novels in English we have read for years, and may easily, in the future, mark an epoch in our fiction as distinctly as did "Esthers Waters." Miss Hurst has taken the modern method, invented by Miss Richardson and developed since by many writers, some of far greater talent than the originator, and has made of it beauty and wonder. Her great advantages over such authors as Mr. Lawrence or Mr. James Joyce is that she has an affection, a zest for life; and that we never suspect her of dramatising herself.

Lummox—a clumsy woman—is Bertha, born in America from unknown parents. She is a domestic servant when the book opens, and she is that when it ends; but her adventures, both in range and intensity, could not be more vivid had she followed a hundred occupations. We do not only get Bertha's story — we get the story of the families she has served—the Farleys, the Muslin-ers, the Fallensteins, the Oessetrichs, and finally the genial, homely, happy Meyerbogens. There are dreadful interludes when Bertha goes back to the horrible sailors' doss-house where she was brought up; and one almost too dreadful when she lives with Silly Willy, because he is the manservant at the Bixby's, who adopted her illegitimate baby when he was 17 days old. The larger part of the book, however, is concerned with Bertha in service, and with the lives of the families as they appear to her and to her friend Helga, who is with her at the Farleys' and the Oessetrichs'. Miss Hurst is not unfair to the mistresses: she has no object but to make pictures, and to leave the reader to draw the contrast between Bertha, real, human, natural, and her employers, who have too much money or too much leisure or too little imagination.

Bertha is one of those happy (or miserable—it depends how you look at it) people who have music and laughter and poetry in the soul and have no means of expression, not even words. Yet this is untrue; she can express herself in life, and she does so by patient, unrewarded heroism, by tenacious fidelity, by keeping true always to the sane and lovely things of life. Miss Hurst makes her quite credible; and in no situation does she behave other than naturally. "Lummox" is full of incident—sometimes tragic and horrible; but the book itself, in spite of some evil things, is calm and beautiful. Occasionally Miss Hurst overwrites a little—it is the great danger of her methods, but at the important moments of her story, whether in dialogue or description, she is always magnificently equal to her task. Helga's death-scene, the quarrels between Mrs Wallenstein and her mother-in-law, the night-club chapter (alone containing more "stuff" than a dozen popular novels, the amazing picnic of the Musliners, when Bertha dances—are a few of the more memorable episodes that cling to the memory.—The "Observer."

THE GREATNESS OF OLIVE SCHREINER

A Beautiful and Moving Story

By Wilson K. Midgley

"The Life of Olive Schreiner." By S. C. Cronwright Schreiner. Fisher Unwin. 21s.

The son of a German shoemaker, passing through London on the way to his mission field in South Africa, met a young girl whose face he had seen in a dream before he left home. The brilliant little drawing-room lady bore him 12 children in bullock carts or mud houses before she sought refuge from life in a convent. Her husband failed at everything, even at being a missionary, but their children because a great force for righteousness in the days when Rhodes and his crew were soaking South Africa in materialism. Their daughter Olive put into one novel more of South Africa than has ever been written elsewhere.

No wonder she put the Brontës among the greatest women of history, for her history was strangely similar to theirs. She was driven to living as an underpaid and ill-qualified governess in Boer families. From 16 to 65 she was tortured by asthma, and before she was 20 she had written her masterpiece, largely by moonlight. Candles were too dear, and she wrote at the window of a little room with a mud floor, in which she had made a channel to carry off the rain which came through the roof.

WRITING FOR 24 HOURS.

Orthodoxy beat upon her soul as asthma attacked her body. She fought them both with a virility which paralysed beholders. Her husband tells how in her wrath against some wrong she would shake her hands till her fingers clicked against each other, and would finally beat her head upon a table or a wall. This dreamer of the veldt saw visions only to be recalled in an intensity of mood which led her to write for 24 hours without food or to write page after page without knowing that there was no ink on her pen.

In her struggles for freedom of thought the passion which could electrify audiences with a sentence or address Cecil Rhodes in terms no other human being even ventured on was marvellously checked. To this child, drenched with emotion and agonised by perplexities, former friends sent letters like this:—

> Richard and I have told the children that you are God's enemy, and that, though they have much to be grateful to you for, they cannot love God and you at the same time.

Her mother and other members of the family persecuted her (the word is her husband's) in the same way. Her answers are as firm as they are tender. The reality of her mystical experiences, her letter to a friend that since she was 14 "religion has been to me the one unending joy" show how needless is the torture human beings inflict on each other. The native question, the Boer War, and the Great War revealed the same cruel capacity of human beings on larger fields, and Olive Schreiner always turned up on the side of the tortured. It is easy to understand how the passion of revolt led her to feel the same joy in a young woman she had persuaded to leave off corsets as the evangelical feels in a brand plucked from the burning. But it tore her genius to pieces. She could not live in solitude, and she could not devote herself to her work among crowds, so after years of writing, rewriting and revising other work, her first book still stands alone in length and quality.—"Daily News."

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

SHANGAAI MOTHER GOOSE

By Elizabeth Pepys.

MUNICIPAL MUSIC.

Hi diddle, diddle, Foa and his fiddle,
The notes rise high as the moon.
The Audience claps to hear such skill
And terms it an excellent tune.

EFFICIENCY.

Jack Sprat could eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean.
And so they finished up each dish;
The servants thought it mean.

HOLIDAY PRAYERS.

Rain, rain, stay away,
All Shanghai wants to play.
If you'll leave our Easter gay,
You may come some other day.

THEY SAY.

Cross Patch, draw the latch,
Gossiping scandals spin.
Take a cup and fill it up
And call the neighbours in.
Tell them all, what a fall
From grace the pious had;
Hint so sly and tell a lie
Of every lass and lad.
Thus you will always fill
Your drawing room each day,
For we try here in Shanghai
To find mean things to say.

PERILS OF SHANGHAI

By Elizabeth Pepys.

Breathless, panting, her strength ebbing fast, she clung desperately to the frail support. Bodies humped against her, borne onward by the resistless tide. Again and again she was all but torn away from her one hope of safety; yet with aching arms and numbed fingers she nerved herself to endure, not to allow herself to be swept away in the pitiless maelstrom.

"I must hold on, I must," she repeated again and again. "It must come soon." But no help came. With hat gone and clothing dishevelled, faint and exhausted, still she held on. At times it seemed as if deliverance was near but the hope was vain and the seething tide, bearing strong men, frail women and little children on its bosom, swept relentlessly on.

"I can't stand this much longer," she whispered faintly, her grip relaxing, her arms yielding to the cruel strain. Then, when the limit of endurance seemed at hand, there came a slight lessening of the buffeting tide. Summoning all her strength for the final, supreme effort, she loosed her hold of the pillar of the Safety Island to which she had been clinging, and forced her way on board a Number One Tram, at the Wing On corner.

THE WILLOW PATTERN

First Appearance in England

Chinese porcelain plates painted in pale and deep blue were imported into our country in large quantities during the latter half of the 18th century by our Eastern merchants. These plates aroused the admiration and also the jealousy of our potters, who at once began to use them extensively as patterns in decorating our earliest china wares. It is generally conceded by collectors that a man named Thomas Minton engraved our earliest willow pattern about the year 1780 for a master potter at Caughley, in Salop. Wedgwood, Spode, and Adams produced a similar design with modifications very soon after, so that there are now an endless variety of willow plates, all having the pronounced characteristics of the original, but with marked differences in detail. A curious feature about willow ware is that it is nearly always printed in underglaze blue, although, strange to relate, our Turkish sisters prefer it in funereal black. And certainly nothing else has conveyed such a charming and ever-interesting tale. Young and old are intrigued with the figures and design on the plates. So far as research has been able to prove, there exists no Chinese design with the bridge or the doves floating in the air, from which it may be concluded that the story of the wicked Mandarin and his daughter Koonyshee is entirely mythical.

THE STORY THE PICTURE TELLS.

The palace in the right hand of the picture in the centre of the plate is where the Mandarin and his only daughter lived after his wife had died. He took with him his secretary Chang; and therein lay the whole trouble and the foundation of this immortal story, for the motive is a love far above ordinary human affection. At sunset Koonyshee used to linger in the garden to see Chang. Their clandestine meetings were unfortunately discovered. Chang was dismissed and the daughter shut up in a room overlooking the sea. One day while feeling very desolate, her attention was aroused by a half cocoanut shell with a miniature sail floating gently past. By the aid of her parasol she was able to recover it, and in it she found a bead she had given to her lover. This was ample evidence that he had launched the vessel. There was also a piece of bamboo paper inside inscribed, "Cast your thoughts upon the waters as I have done and I shall hear your words."

A WIDE CHOICE IN WRAPS

ORIGIN OF THE BRIDGE.

Meanwhile her father had selected for her what he thought was a more suitable husband. The feast of the betrothal was about to be celebrated, and Koonyshee felt like a netted bird. During the feast Chang gained entrance to her chamber and rescued her, after which we see them crossing the bridge. First comes Koonyshee, next Chang, and then the irate father with a whip in his hand to show his parental authority. They make good their escape in the small boat we see in the centre, meaning to reach Chang's island home in the upper part of the platter. But the wrath of the Mandarin was uncontrollable. He raised the whole country against them so that their lives were imperilled.

WHEN THE GODS TOOK PITY.

The gods, however, took pity on their distress and transformed their two bodies into the two immortal doves floating in the air, fit emblems of the loving constancy of their affections which had rendered them so remarkable in life that now they were to be undivided in death. W. R. Fleming, in Glasgow Herald.

MY HUSBAND SAYS

That ladies should always eat breakfast with their husbands, even if there's nothing about eggs to inspire brilliant conversation. I sometimes wish myself that they came in a greater variety of colours.

I really dislike rising so early, but he likes to have me pour his coffee. But he says he wishes I could remember the number of lumps he takes. He thinks that if I should commit that to memory at home it might sometime save embarrassment at hotels. He says it makes him nervous to see a waiter looking at us interrogatively. It makes him awfully cross, too, when the clerk rings up his room and says he can't read his signature and also the management likes to know the home address of guests.

My husband's aunt Julia says his signature looks like a worm in a fit, but I just love it on the checks he gives me. He says his aunt Julia will never see it on anything more important than Birthday Greetings.

Mrs. Swift says that personally she is much too humane to allow her husband to see her before seven in the evening or later, day light saving time, and she says she would cheerfully divorce any man who dared to appear at home for lunch. But I love to eat lunch with my husband and besides I always need him to do several errands for me in the afternoon. I think errands are so uninteresting and trying.—"Life."

EACH HIS OWN STORY

When spring begins to bloom in hat shop windows and the souls of the romantic, the question of life's possibilities seems to present itself more warmly than ever for discussion. Unrest, divine or simply natural, fills the breasts of many mortals, and some of them write rather touchingly to others, whom they imagine to be more powerful or, perhaps, just a little cleverer than themselves, and say how deadly dull their surroundings are, how they long for change, and how much obliged they would be if they were put in the way of accomplishing those higher destinies to which they are sure they were born. Generally, the person who writes is a woman—although men have been known to set forth their discontent in this fashion—and she catalogues her charms, and lists her qualities, and suggests where they could be employed most advantageously to the end that the world may enjoy a fuller and richer contact with her and she with the world, for the betterment of both.

What we have inside our own foolish heads and hearts is what decides our stories, chapter by chapter. Of what use is romance to the woman who does not know it when it is before her? Where is the tang of adventure to the man whose perceptions are dull or commonplace? Even the "bright face of danger"—and no face is brightef to the high-mettled—may not kindle an answering fire in the veins of the sluggish. Only the seeing mind will find the reflexion of the whole sky in a dewdrop and every good and evil fortune flesh is heir to behind the vague eyes of the newly born. Yet, there they are, and very merry we should be with that old joke-lover, Fate, about it, for anything under the sun may be going to happen to any one of us in any place at any moment.

DRAMA AND ROMANCE EVERYWHERE.

Dowsabella need not leave the farm in search of her particular sip from destiny's swift current It is quite as likely to be found in the ripples of the brook as drawn from the taps of the city's water-system. Colin, in a torn blue shirt, is really more pleasing than George in a high, shiny collar and the latest thing in orange leather Oxford ties, both swains being otherwise clothed as decency dictates. But, unless she has some vision, she will not see it so. She will go panting after the unattainable and leave her story behind her. And when the unattainable has been unattained (for George likes "some class" in his ladies, and city jobs have a way of slipping from under one), she may feel that life has played her a scurvy trick. In reality, it is she who has played a scurvy trick on life. To marry Colin, to bring up a happy country family, to help to keep fine beasts in condition and good crops growing—that was well worth the bountiful nature of Ceres herself. But Dowsabella, unable to "perceive the outward and the inward," turned her back upon it and went out to seek her fortune elsewhere.

TRAGEDY AND COMEDY IN EVERYBODY'S WALLET.

What is fortune? Can anybody get more out of life than he is prepared to put into it? To all of us come two, and to most of us three, of the great facts of existence—birth, love, and death—quite without respect to our dwelling-places. Ambition, jealousy, hatred, and malice, generosity, self-sacrifice, sincerity, and fair dealing—all the ingredients of the characters out of which plots are made—are in us and our neighbours. Can any story in the world strike variations from other chords? It's all in the way we look at things. We can find the most exquisite romance, the most poignant drama, the most arduous adventures wherever we are. We have only to be the sort of person who knows them for such. The every-day business of life can be as noble as we please, as adventurous, as interesting. Tragedy and comedy are to be got out of everybody's wallets, and we should not have to wait till an outsider whispers their names in our ears before we recognize them for what they are and for what they may mean to us.

There are sometimes uncommonly long waits between the acts of our lives, but if we get up and go out we may find our places taken, or that the play we left is beginning again without us. There are often exceedingly dull chapters in our stories. But so there are in all human histories—and who knows what may be coming on the next page? Jack, abandoning his light-ship post for a pirate's career may succumb to a late attack of measles, while his partner, Jeb, patiently doing his duty single-handed, may be swept into the public eye and honours by his gallant conduct to storm-wrecked mariners. One never can tell! But to each of us is given the possibility of hero or heroineship—not always offered to us as we have imagined it would be, but as we learn it of life, often in performing the commonplace task.

"Vogue."

MAHJONGG PARTIES IN THE SURF

The craze for Mahjongg so dominates Palm Beach that bathers carry the game out to sea with them on a raft, as the illustration shows.

THE RETURN OF THE TAILORED MODE

The Coat and Skirt Obligatory

The modistes of Shanghai have been assuring their patrons for some time that the severely tailored suit was on its way back to popularity, but it has been difficult to believe this with the large number of long coats, coatees and capes worn over the frock or coat dress. Now that spring is with us, however, the truth of the dictum seems unquestioned and although the rigidity of this costume was rebelled against at one time, there is no gainsaying the fact that it is appropriate for every daytime function and with various blouses and accessories is capable of infinite variation and very hard wear.

Reps, or covert cloth or for sports and country wear tweeds and cheviots, says the style expert. For the former cire ribbon or braids may be used but the latter materials demands the simplest possible cut, single or double breasted, with pockets the only trimming. To reduce the black tailored suit white pique collars or revers may be worn.

The silk kerchief comes right to the front here with a pocket hanky to match. The kerchief for the country suit may be extra sized, drawn round the neck cravat fashion, or folded round the collars and down each side. Scarves tied in a dashing stock knot finish the neck very well too, and the ubiquitous white gardenia appears in the lapel.

The plainer the suit, the plainer its companion blouse, and a model always in good taste is very simple with a convertible collar which will button up if desired for a mannish tie. Thinner and fancier blouses tucked and trimmed with monograms or buttons become the lightef weight suit. Beige, brown, grey or even yellow suede gloves suit this mode and white gloves are permitted to the black. Rosy beige or tortoise is still good form for stockings and patent leather or calf-skin pumps with straps and medium heel. The cloche with the turn-down brim naturally finishes the picture and this should be felt, Milan or picot straw. The present ideal spring weather should bring out these suits at once, for their season is brief.

VOGUE'S EYE VIEW OF THE MODE

The long lace veil has been revived by Marthe Collot, truly an innovation, for the only veil worn recently has been an inch of cautious tulle to shade the eye.

Sets of hat and scarf, often with a parasol to match, are good in soft plaid silks for the country and in knitted wool frosted with gold or silver thread for the beach. The simple black satin frock, often combining both dull and shinny sides, has taken Paris by storm and, in New York, is second only to the tailored mode in smartness. Both have in them the essence of chic restraint.

We keep accentuating the brilliant silk handkerchief which is almost universally worn with tailored suits: sometimes placed snugly to outline the faultless lapels; sometimes knotted about the neck; sometimes hanging from the pocket.

The scarf, because of its greater flexibility in material and function, seems to have a long story ahead of it. At Palm Beach, brilliant scarfs accompanied white dresses; in Paris, it is all things to all women.

Stockings in coloured thread are now worn in Paris with the simple tailored costume. There is a whole series of them, varying in shade, all of them of English type.

MAIL NOTICES

INWARD

P. & O. S. S. Arabia Maru ... Apr 15
Per A.O.L.S. President Grant „ 19
Per P.M.S. Pres. Cleveland ... „ 22
Per P. & O. S. Plassy ... „ 22
Per R.D.S. President Polk ... „ 23

OUTWARD

For Marseilles, London, etc.—

Per H.S.L.S. Carl Legien ...Apr. 18
Per H.A.L.S. Oldenburg ... „ 19
Per B.F.S. Machaon ... ... „ 22
Per N.Y.K.S. Kamo Maru ... „ 23

For Japan, Canada, U.S.A. & Europe:

Per R.M.S. Emp. of Australia Apr. 21
Per A.O.L.S. Pres. Jefferson ... 24
Per T.K.K.S. Shinyo Maru... „ 26
Per O.S.K.S. Arizona Maru May 2
Per A.O.L.S. President Grant „ 7

For Manila, Australia and New Zealand via Hongkong:—

Per A.O.L.S. President Grant Apr. 20
Per B.F.S. Machaon ... ... „ 22
Per N.Y.K.S. Kamo Maru... „ 23
Per M.M.S. Angkor ... ... „ 24

PASSENGERS

INWARD.

Per str. Hsin Peking, April 11. From Ningpo. Mr. J. Farmer.

Per str. Kaiping, April 11. From Chinwangtao. Mr. and Mrs. C. Loyd and family, Mr. and Mrs. Watteson, Mr. and Mrs. G. Ross and child.

Per str. Whangpu, April 12. From River Ports. Mr. Garnet.

Per str. Luchow, April 12. From Tsingtao. Mr. Stuart K. Lupton.

Per str. Kiangan, April 12. From River Ports. Mrs. Woodey and child.

Per str. Sinkiang, April 12. From Hongkong. Mrs. Rowarth, Mrs. Davis.

Per str. Hsin Kiangteen, April 12. From Ningpo. Mr. F. R. Millican, Misses F. Honen, E. Palmer, E. Yanes and Rev. F. Buck.

Per str. Kingsing, April 12. From Tientsin. Mr. and Mrs. K. F. C. Watson, Mrs. Ferd. From Chefoo. Mr. Corbett Miss M. Severen.

Per str Tatung, April 12. From River Ports. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Loureiro, Misses Loureiro.

Per str. Kutwo, April 12. From River Ports. Mr. and Mrs. Benson and child, Miss [illegible], Messrs. Cameron, Turner, Messrs. Curzon, Melsin, Allen, Power, Salisbury, C. L. Connedy and Goe Italian Naval Rating.

Per M.M.S. Chambord, April 12. From Marseilles. Miss L. Linson, Mrs. Coublitsky, Messrs. Leymat, Guilly, Mr. and Mrs. Barrean and child, Messrs. Garstin, Fent, Marcone, Mrs. Aroud, Mrs. Cerry, Mrs. Hoefnagels, Mr. Mack, Mr. and Mrs. H. Galvin, Mrs. Rogernikoff and child, Mr. Negreni. From Colombo. Sister Maria, Mr. and Mrs. Shevaldisheffer, Mr. and Mrs. Mitnikoff. From Singapore. Mr. Tye, Mr. and Mrs. L. Nantz and Mr. Albert. From Saigon. Messrs. Marquier, Villimagne, Bataille, A. H. Atkins, Legat, Thouvarin, Schwich, M. M. Colonnes, Le Bris, Desmaisons, Jestris. From Hongkong. Mr. and Mrs. Mefaul and child, Rev. Pères Souvey, Salleu, Miss L. Fzeyawa.

Per str. Hsinchang, April 13. From Hongkong. Mrs. Bok.

Per str. Loongwo. April 13. From River Ports. Messrs. G. W. Sheppard, Zindel, Mr. and Mrs. Clair and child, Mr. H. F. Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Mills, Mr. E. R. Palmer, Lieut.-Comdr. C. Adam, Mr. M. S. Block.

Per str. Ngankin, April 14. From River Ports. Mr. A. L. Dawson.

Per str. Shuntien, April 14. From Tientsin. Mrs. McEachran. From Chefoo. Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm, Master Malcolm, Miss Ruscuf.

Per str. Hsin Kiangteen, April 15. From Ningpo. Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Rickards, Mrs. A. Zakrison, Messrs. Z. Zakrison, E. Becker, Diemdrindes Shoemaker, Dr. A. C. Price.

Per str. Woosung. April 15. From River Ports. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bass and child, Mr. Nieuwenhuys, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Bowdoin, Mr. A. Macmillian, Mrs. F. Kasputsheva, Mr. Mackay, Miss L. E. Harris.

Per str. Kiangshun. April 15. From River Ports. Mr. Storey, Three Sisters of Charity.

Per str. Luenho, April 16. From River Ports. Mr. Goforth, Mr. and Mrs. Glover, Miss Barton.

Per str. Hsin Ninghao, April 16. From Ningpo. Mrs. D. Zimmerman, Mrs. H. K. Wright, Messrs. H. K. Wright, H. M. Bruce, C. W. Gay, F. C. Wilcox and R. Wilcox.

OUTWARD.

Per str. Hsin Peking, April 11. For Ningpo. Messrs. Wright, J. Frost, D. A. C. Price.

Per str. Luenyi April 11 For River Ports. Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Marshall.

Per str. Fenghtien, April 12. For Tientsin. Messrs. W. R. Dennell, A. R. Bennett, T. Jamieson, W. Dewar, J. Irvine, Miss Hicks. For Chefoo. Miss Lespinasse.

Per str. Soochow, April 12. For Tsingtao. Miss A. L. Anderson, Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Miss Carmichael and child, Mr. A. B. Peck, Miss Gardner.

Per str. Luchow, April 13.—For Hongkong. Mr. J. C. Fearn. For Swatow. Messrs. E. T. Backus, G. Gressour.

Per P. & O. S. Nellore, April 13.—For London.—Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Carr and child, Miss C. and Master W. Carr, Mrs. M. Waddell and child, Master J. Waddell, Misses L. and W. Waddell. For Marseilles. Mr. D. D. Burns, Miss L. Douglas. For Colombo.—Mr. A. Bazario. For Hongkong.—Messrs. F. A. Hooley, E. W. Hazzard, R. E. Ost.

Per str. Sinkiang, April 13.—For Amoy.—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thatcher, Mrs. Buss, Messrs. Orloff, Mlashco. For Canton.—Mrs. W. C. A. Phahl and child, Mr. P. C. A. Prahl.

Per str. Tatung, April 14.—For River Ports.—Mr. and Mrs. A. P. C. Hicks and two children.

Per str. Chengtu, April 15.—For Newchwang.—Mrs. C. Partridge and child.

Per str. Kashing, April 15. For Canton. Mr. and Mrs. Paterson and child.

Per str. Ngankin, April 15.—For River Ports.—Lt. Pont, Seven French Sailors, Mr. and Mrs. de Cartier.

Per P. & O. S. China, April 15.—For London.—Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Adams, Lt.-Comdr. C. K. Adam, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Boyde and child, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Bolitho, Master R. Bolitho, Mr. W. Donald, Miss H. Dunshy, Mr. F. Dunsom, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Fisher and child, Captain D. Fraser, Mr. T. [illegible], Mrs. J. and Miss D. A. Graham, Mr. J. W. F. Gerbarz, Mr. and Mrs. N. Harrison and child, Master Harrison, Engr.-Comdr. H. L. Harvey, Messrs. J. Munro, A. McNay, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Millward, Master W. Millward, Misses K. and M. Millward, Miss K. Norman, Mrs. B. de B. Newcomb and two children, Captain and Mrs. F. G. W. Newbery, Miss Newbery, Mrs. K. H. Pennell, Mrs. L. R. Rees, Misses N. and B. Rees, Master D. Rees, Mrs. A. S. Russell and child, Mr. J. Sanders, Lt.-Commissioner and Mrs. W. Stevens, Master and Miss Stevens, Surg.-Lt.-Comdr. L. F. Strugnell, Mr. and Mrs. W. Turner, Mr. H. W. Tyndale, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Utting, Mr. T. P. Ratti. For Marseilles.—Messrs. W. J. Brownhall, A. H. Evans, K. F. Jeffreys, E. Krogseth, Miss A. C. Leggin, Mr. A. G. Nugent, Rev. and Mrs. A. T. Pothill, Misses V. and H. Pothill, Messrs. N. Smith, W. Standing. For Colombo.—Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Bryson, Master Bryson. For Singapore.—Messrs. T. Gnanamal, M. Gell, Mrs. E. Knipschildt, Misses I. and T. Knipschildt, Bandali, Lainal Abidin, Mr. L. Moose, Piahbinto Mowoen. For Hongkong.—Rev. H. A. C. Allen, Messrs. B. D. F. Britto, W. E. Costain, J. N. G. Gibbons, Mrs. M. Marques, Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Malcolm, Master Malcolm, Mr. A. W. Van Der Star.

Per str. Shuntien, April 16.—For Tientsin.—Mr. and Mrs. T. Yamazoe and two children, Mr. F. C. Henley. For Chefoo.—Mr. J. McMullan. For Weihaiwei.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Oswald and child, Miss Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ryde, Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Hughes, Three Naval Ratings.

BIRTHS

ANDERSON.—On April 15, 1924, at 13 Kungping Road, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Anderson, a daughter (stillborn).

NIEUWENHUYS.—On April 11, 1924, at 393A Avenue Joffre, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. J. Nieuwenhuys—Christensen, a son. Hongkong and Kobe papers please copy.

PASSIKIDES.—On April 11, 1924, at the Victoria Nursing Home, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Passikides, a son.

SONT-DE-BOER.—On April 13, 1924, at the Victoria Nursing Home, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Sont-de-Boer, a daughter.

WHITTAKER.—On April 10, 1924, at the Victoria Nursing Home, Shanghai, to Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Whittaker, a son, Robert Edward.

MARRIAGE

JENSEN—ZVIAGIN.—On April 15, 1924, at the Union Church, Shanghai, by the Rev. A. N. Rowland, Gustav Schoyen Jensen to Sophie Zviagin.

DEATH

HUTCHISON.—On April 12, 1924, at Holmbury, England, Katherin Mary, third daughter of the late John D. Hutchison, of Shanghai, of heart failure.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA

SOUTHERN Rhodesia which was inaugurated as the youngest self governing Colony of the British Empire on October 1, 1923, and which had previously for 33 years been ably administered by the British South Africa Company possesses one of the finest climates in the world with long hours of sunshine, breezy temperate days and cool nights. For those who wish to take up farming or ranching in order to make the most they can of their capital, energy and technical knowledge, or for those who wish to retire from strenuous business or professional life and make a home, Rhodesia offers many advantages unequalled elsewhere. The business, social, sporting, educational and medical facilities bear favourable comparison with those of other countries. Native labour is plentiful and when properly managed is cheap and efficient. Taxation is light. Good land in healthy surroundings and amidst fine scenery is plentiful and not expensive.

Full information is obtainable on application to The Secretary, Southern Rhodesia Settlers' Board (attached to the Government of Southern Rhodesia), P. O. Box 372, Salisbury S., Rhodesia.

The giving of advice to prospective settlers will be facilitated if applicants will advise the Board in detail of their circumstances and the amount of capital they would be prepared to invest in a suitable venture.

FURLOUGH

Attention of intending travellers is drawn to the New Route Across Canada now available. Through most picturesque parts of the famous Rockies. New comfortable trains—specially constructed observation cars.

The Canadian National Railways operate from Coast to Coast in Canada—touch every principal city in the Dominion and many in the U.S.A.

SPECIAL FARES FOR MISSIONARIES

Through bookings—Any Steamship Line

Literature and full information furnished

The National Way

Canadian National Railways

GLEN LINE BUILDING

Shanghai Tel. C. 6973

SICCAWEI METEOROLOGICAL REPORT

Day of Month	Barometer 9 A.M.	Wind Att'ed Therm	Wind Direction 9 a.m.	Wind Force (1-12)	Hygrometer 9 a.m. Dry	Hygrometer 9 a.m. Wet	Thermometer in Shade Max.	Thermometer in Shade Min.	Weather conditions
Apr. 11	30.06	59.4	E	1	63.1	61.4	71.8	54.1	O.
„ 12	29.96	61.1	S S W	1	68.9	64.6	74.5	58.6	O.
„ 13	29.92	62.1	Calm	0	63.5	62.6	82.2	57.9	O. M.
„ 14	29.90	63.3	S E	1	70.0	66.2	87.3	55.8	O. M.
„ 15	29.78	64.8	E	1	70.0	66.4	87.8	55.8	B. O.
„ 16	29.84	66.0	N	2	59.9	58.8	60.8	58.3	O. D.
„ 17	30.27	61.7	N	2	51.8	43.5	55.8	49.6	O.

Explanation

B—blue sky D—drizzle H—hail M—misty (hazy) R—rain T—thunder C—clouds F—fog L—lightning O—overcast (dull) S—snow Z—calm

SHANGHAI THERMOMETER READINGS FOR THE WEEK

In the open air in a shaded situation in the Foreign Settlement

Date	Thermometer (Fahr.) Minimum 1924	Minimum 1923	Maximum 1924	Maximum 1923	Rainfall Inches 1924	Inches 1923
Apr. 10	54.6	58.2	74.4	63.8	Nil.	0.57
„ 11	55.0	57.2	69.0	68.6	Nil.	0.07
„ 12	61.0	46.5	73.4	62.0	Nil.	Nil.
„ 13	60.4	41.0	78.0	55.0	Nil.	Nil.
„ 14	56.6	45.0	82.6	56.2	Nil.	Trace
„ 15	59.8	52.4	83.6	58.6	Nil.	0.43
„ 16	53.0	51.4	71.0	61.8	Nil.	0.72

Dr J. Collis Browne's CHLORODYNE

The ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE

Acts like a charm in DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY AND CHOLERA

The Best Remedy known for COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

The Most Valuable Remedy ever discovered.

Effectually cuts short all attacks of SPASMS. Checks and arrests these too often fatal diseases:—

FEVER, CROUP, AGUE.

The only Palliative in NEURALGIA, GOUT, RHEUMATISM, TOOTHACHE.

Convincing Medical Testimony with each Bottle.

Sold in bottles by all Chemists

Prices in England 1/3 and 3/-

Always ask for a "Dr. COLLIS BROWNE"

Sole Manufacturers:

J. T. DAVENPORT, Ltd., LONDON, S. E.

THE SMALL INVESTORS, LTD.

41 SZECHUEN ROAD, Shanghai

Phone: C. 977 and 761

NOTE

CAPITAL INVESTED, with dividends or Interest payable every six months.

At 7 per cent. Doubles itself in 10 years
At 8 pr cent. Doubles itself in 9 years
At 9 per cent. Doubles itself in 8 years
At 10 per cent. Doubles itself in 7 years

START TO-DAY TO DOUBLE YOUR CAPITAL

We are holders of large stocks of sound companies whose shares will yield

7 per cent. to 14 per cent. per annum

THE SMALL INVESTORS, LIMITED

Telegraphic Address: "Safeinvest"

DOUGLAS FLEMING, Managing Director.

Printed and Published for the Proprietors of the North-China Daily News & Herald, Limited, at the office of the Company, 17 The Bund, Shanghai, China.

The North-China Herald

AND SUPREME COURT AND CONSULAR GAZETTE

WEEKLY EDITION OF THE NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS

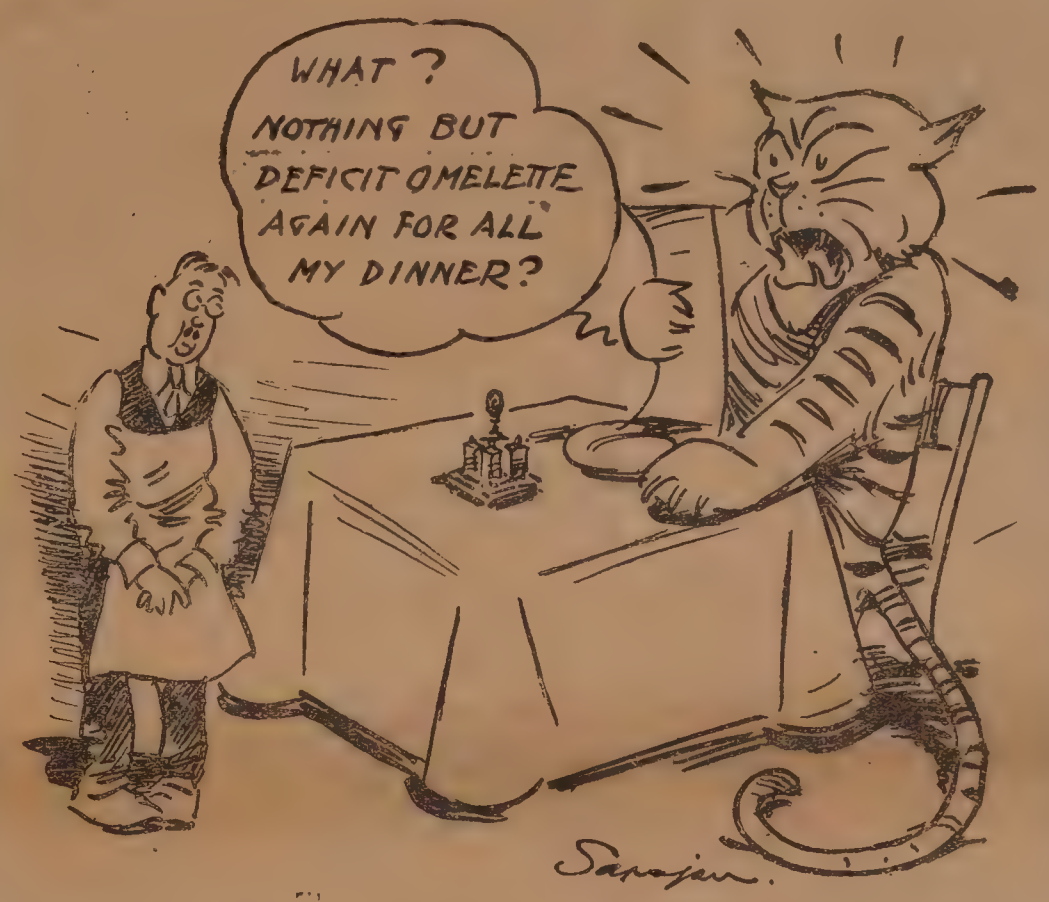
Registered at the Chinese P. O. for transmission as mail matter under Class B.

(Tsz-king-sing-chi-chow-kan 字林西報每週增刊)

VOL. CLI. No. 2959. SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1924 TAELS 12 PER ANNUM.

CONTENTS

CHINESE POLITICS—
Chinese Bankers' Conference ... 121
Rendition of Weihaiwei ... 121
China and the Soviet 121
Trademarks Bureau 121
Russian Bank and C.E.R. ... 121
Northern Success at Amoy ... 121
Peking's Statement of its Debts and Lack of Revenue ... 122
Peking and Tibetan Problem... 122
Wu Pei-fu Getting a Grip on Hunan 122
War Peril in China 122
LEADING ARTICLES—
Bankruptcy of Peking 123
World Scramble for Oil ... 123
Our Visitors 123
Co-operative Sales of Rubber ... 123
Mr. MacDonald's Socialism ... 124
British Chamber of Commerce 124
Two Exhibitions: 1851-1924 ... 124
NOTES AND COMMENTS 125
NEWS FROM THE OUTPORTS—
Assault on Mr. Campbell ... 126
Anti-Poison Bureau in Kiangsi 126
"General Post" in Szechuan ... 126
Improved Finance in Kiaochou 126
Gen. Yang Sen Employing Bandits? 126
Captive Japanese Officers ... 126
Education in China on Foreign Lines 126
Tientsin Hands Out to the Sea 127
New British Consulate at Tientsin 172
China's Judicial Atrocities ... 127
New Organization in Szechuan 127
Big New Hospital in Shansi... 128
Honan Magistrates' Improvements 128
Tagore at Hangchow 128
Wusih Church Work 128
Murderer's Fearful Punishment 128
15,000 More Troops for Marshal Wu 128
Two Market Towns Looted ... 128
Difficulties of the Upper River 129
Volcanic Eruption in the Filippines 129
Motor-Cars to Smuggle Contraband 129
Boycotters Busy in the Yangtze 129
Mr. Takahashi's Supporters Arrested 129
Collision near Hongkong ... 129
Siberian Agricultural Corporation 129
Opium Cultivation in Jehol ... 129
Japanese Exclusion Act ... 130
America's Affront to Japan ... 131
"Assessment on Everything"... 131
Accident on Lunghai Railway... 131
Tientsin Municipal Finances ... 131
Bean Oil Mills of N. Kiangsu 131
New Race Club of Tsingtao ... 132
Internal Strife in Kuangtung 132
Anhui's Anti-Smallpox Campaign 132
Naval Wedding at Weihaiwei 132
New Education Enterprise in Hunan 132
Peace Restored in West China 133
Ex-President of China 133
Killing the Golden Goose of Fuchien 133
SHANGHAI NEWS—
World Fair for Shanghai, A ... 134
Empress of Canada in Port ... 134
American Dinner to Judge Purdy 134
Suspected Arms Runners ... 134
Judge Lobingier's Record ... 134
Bowling Club's Alley Sold ... 134
Liners Collide in Huangpu ... 134
Revenue Cruiser Hai Heng ... 135
Armed Villains at Work ... 135
New Church in Shantung Road 135
Celebration of St. George's Day 136
Y.W.C.A. Building Enterprise 136
Wedding 136
CORRESPONDENCE ... ... 137—138
COMMERCE AND FINANCE 139
MEETINGS ... ... 142—144
SPORTS AND PASTIMES 144
MUNICIPAL GAZETTE NEWS... ... 145
LAW REPORTS—
H. M. Supreme Court—
Complicated Counter-Claims... 146
Disobedient Seamen 146
H. M. Police Court—
Disorderly Indians 146
Mrs. Rowarth and Mrs. M. Davis 147
Stately Homes of Shanghai... 147
U. S. Court for China—
Liner's Captain Exonerated... 148
Mr. Husar's Accident at Sea 148
Claim for Wrongful Dismissal 148
Marine Court—
Gunrunners on the Huangpu 148
Mixed Court—
H. & S. Bank Burglary ... 148
FOREIGN TELEGRAMS ... 150—153
FROM THE FOUR WINDS ... 153—155
SPECIAL ARTICLES—
Man with Two Talents ... 156
Lessons in Golf 156
Poultry Raising in China ... 157
PEARL PAGE 158
WOMAN'S PAGE 159



Dr. W. W. Yen's Commission on Peking's finances reports an annual deficit of $121,000, 000 not counting unsecured loan charges

CHINESE BANKERS' CONFERENCE

Measures Adopted to Prevent Further Transportation of Inferior Coins: Loan For Completion of Shanghai Mint

Peking, Apr. 17.

Thirty delegates are attending the fifth annual conference of national bankers at Peking. The conference will last for a week.

Among the questions discussed yesterday were (1) an appeal to the various bankers' associations to co-operate in matters concerning unification of the currency system and simultaneous adoption of dollars and taels as monetary units in financial circles (2) practical means to hasten the establishment of the proposed Shanghai Mint, and (3), a petition to the Government requesting measures to prevent various Government mints from breaking the regulations governing the minting of coins, particularly as regards fineness.

The Shanghai delegates brought up the third question, in connexion with which attention was drawn to the Anhui Mint, which, it was alleged, was producing inferior coins and distributing them in the Lower Yangtze region. The Shanghai delegates produced a copy of an assay of three coins which the Hongkong & Shanghai Bank had submitted to the assayer, Mr. Franklin, the test of which was 796.5, whereas the lowest standard was 887.33.

As regards the Shanghai Mint, the delegates expressed the opinion, that its establishment was very important, not only because it would mean a great deal to financial markets, but further delay might ruin the machinery already purchased and which was stored at Shanghai.

The delegates saw the close relationship between proper minting and the Shanghai Mint on the one hand and simultaneous adoption of dollars and taels on the other.

Other discussions included establishment of credit and clearing houses, unification of accounting terms and compilation of a national bankers' directory.

As many subjects were referred to special committees no definite decisions were reached.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

Peking, Apr. 21.

The Bankers' Conference, which terminates to-morrow, has resolved to ask the Government to instruct the Customs to stop further transportation of inferior coins from places where they are minted. Several other preventive measures have also been passed, such as requesting banks not to buy bullion and not to sell the coins for guilty mints.

A decision was reached on Saturday that the Bankers' Association, co-operating with native bankers' guilds, should underwrite a further loan of $3,000,000 for completion of the Shanghai Mint. The Conference asserts that the banking group taking up this loan would be given full power to manage everything in connexion with the Mint, including appointment of the Director.

The Conference also passed a resolution to organize a Chinese National Bondholders' Association, consisting of representatives of bankers' associations, banking guilds, Chambers of Commerce and stock exchanges. The communiqué, however, does not state the purpose of this association.

Chinese accounting terms having been standardized, the Conference suggests that they should be put into use beginning from next July.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

LINCHENG CLAIMS: ANOTHER DELAY?

Peking, Apr. 23.

In connexion with the Lincheng claims, the Waichiaopu has asked the Diplomatic Body to confer with it on that question.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

THE RENDITION OF WEIHAIWEI

Conditions of Draft Agreement: The Loan of Land and Buildings

London, Apr. 16.

Replying to Mr. W. A. Chapple, Liberal Member for Dumfries, in the House of Commons to-day with regard to the Anglo-Chinese Draft Agreement last year in respect of Weihaiwei, Mr. Arthur Ponsonby, the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said that objection to the clause giving Britain the option to renew free of charge the loan of land and buildings for the purpose of a sanatorium was one of the pretexts advanced last October by the Chinese Government in justification of their desire fundamentally to change the agreement, reached after protracted discussion with their representatives.

Further replying to Mr. Chapple, Mr. Ponsonby stated that the Treasury and the Board of Trade were considering representations by the Chinese Legation with regard to the prejudicial effect on Anglo-Chinese trade of the differential duty against China tea.—Reuter.

CHINA AND THE SOVIET

No Enthusiasm for Proposed Trade Treaty

Peking Apr. 24.

With regard to reports in the Chinese press, the Government has received from Sinkiang the draft of the proposed commercial treaty with the Soviet. The draft was recently circulated among the Cabinet Ministers with a request to each to study and make his own comments on it. It was expected that the Cabinet would take up the matter to-day, but the meeting was poorly attended and no serious questions were discussed.

Many foreign pressmen attended yesterday's meeting of the Senate for which Mr. Huang Pei-lan's motion calling on the Government to negotiate with the Soviet with a view to the recall of M. Karakhan appeared on the agenda, but there was no quorum.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

TRADEMARKS BUREAU

Applications for Establishment of Agencies: Britain's Point of View

CHINA'S SELF-INJURY

Peking, Apr. 14.

To-day's Government Gazette contains a notification from the Ministry of Commerce, issued in response to a petition from the Trademarks Bureau, stating that many applications have been received for the establishment of agencies for the registration of trademarks, but that agencies will not be permitted in any circumstances.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

London, Apr. 17.

At a meeting of the Far Eastern section of the London Chamber of Commerce to-day, the Chairman, Mr. Frederick Andereon, referring to the controversy in regard to the new China Trademarks Law, said that up to the present the Chinese had been deaf to representations made to them not in the interests of foreigners alone but in the best interests of China herself. The case was so simple that it was astonishing that any difficulties should have arisen. Nobody in the least desired to do anything prejudicial to Chinese interests.—Reuter.

RUSSIAN BANK AND C. E. RAILWAY

Further French Note: France's Refusal to Recognize Soviet Agreement

Peking, Apr. 23.

The French Minister, in a Note to the Waichiaopu on April 16, maintains the attitude put forward in the last French Note with regard to the Russo-Asiatic Bank and the Chinese Eastern Railway. The Note reviews academically and at length Dr. Wellington Koo's Note and quotes several points in it, contending that they might be taken to support the French view. Reference is made to France not having recognized the Soviet, and it is argued that the agreement with the Soviet regarding the Bank and the Railway should be classed as dealing with a third party, which Dr. Koo's Note stated was not permissible.—Reuter's Pacific Service

NORTHERN SUCCESS AT AMOY

City Surrendered to Admiral Yang: Further Gains

Peking, Apr. 17.

A foreign telegram from Amoy of to-day's date states that Amoy has surrendered to Admiral Yang Hsu-tsun. Gen. Li Chang-yin, whom Admiral Tsang Chi-ping recently dismissed, commands Amoy City.

The Foochow troops heavily defeated Admiral Tsang at Tungan on Tuesday. He is now supposed to be at Kuankow with the remains of his army.

Gen. Hung Chow-lin is expected to capture Changchow to-day.

Gens. Hung and Li recently rejoined the Northern cause. These developments, therefore represent Northern successes.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

PEKING'S STATEMENT OF ITS DEBTS AND LACK OF REVENUE

About $7,000,000 Coming in Against Charges of $123,000,000 and Unsecured Loans Not Less than $723,000,000: Report of Dr. W. W. Yen's Commission

From Rodney Gilbert.

Peking, Apr. 16.

Dr. W. W. Yen's Commission for the readjustment of China's finances some weeks ago submitted to the foreign bankers an elaborate summary of the results of six months' study of China's financial difficulties. This was accompanied by tabulated statements which are not yet available for publication. It is no secret, however, that the bankers were not greatly impressed. It is not that the commission [illegible] data, straightening out horrible tangles and making sound recommendations. The foreign attitude is not so much critical of the work of the Commission as critical of conditions in China which make the work of the best possible commission appear futile. While the provinces withhold revenues and Peking cannot collect, the wisest commission in the world can do not more than audit and revise the Government's book-keeping so as to show more clearly how deep in the hole the Peking Government really is.

Dr. Yen's commission has frankly eschewed the task of trying to find out what the provinces collect and how they spend it and has concentrated on determining what actually comes into Peking and how it goes out—an auditor's job pure and simple.

The Commission is not abolished, as the vernacular press would have it, but is going on with its work, which is by no means complete, chiefly because of the inexplicable diffidence of foreign creditors to supply precise figures in their claims. Out of 70 odd major credit claims, detailed figures are available for no more than 40. So the auditing job is by no means finished.

To return to the recent confidential statement submitted to the bankers: a translation of a Chinese summary of the fuller report is now available which ought to be of interest.

THE COMMISSION'S REPORT.

A very comprehensive, although as yet only a preliminary survey, of the general financial conditions of China, with important recommendations as to how the present unsatisfactory situation could be improved was clearly set forth in a lengthy report drawn up by the Commission for the Readjustment of Finance and submitted to the President by Dr. W. W. Yen, Chairman of the Commission. Appended to this report was a set of carefully prepared tables, compiled from official records, and giving complete data on the revenues and expenditures of the Central Government, in many cases not only for the present but also for the last five years. Summary statements of the domestic and foreign loan obligations of the Ministry of Finance as well as of the Ministry of Communications were also given in the report of which the following is the gist:

Since the organization of the Commission last September its work has been energetically pushed forward in the order prescribed in the promulgated regulations. Steps were immediately taken first to collect all pertinent data, then to verify the results so obtained with the object of using these facts as the basis for the construction of a practicable plan for the consolidation of the loan obligations and the general financial readjustment of China. Owing to the intensely complicated nature of the subject and the time required for securing complete statements from the parties concerned, some of whom are in distant foreign lands without any local representative either here in Peking or in China, it has not been found possible to complete the work in six months as it was originally intended. However, substantial results have been achieved in the way of checking up the accounts and clarifying what confusion there is in them, thus bringing to light the actual conditions of China's finance.

The third phase of its work, upon which the Commission is now just entering, i.e. the working out of a scheme for consolidation and financial readjustment, is a most perplexing and difficult proposition. It is felt that the financial problem of China cannot be solved unless, on the one hand, a sinking fund can be found adequate and reliable enough to guarantee the uninterrupted operation of the consolidated loan services, and, on the other hand, sufficient revenue can be secured to meet the necessary administrative requirements of the Government. A candid examination of the subject reveals the fact that the situation is extremely precarious and that unless speedy reforms are adopted and enforced, we can hardly see any bright prospect for the financial future of the country.

THE AVAILABLE REVENUE.

Taking up first the question of revenue, it is a well known fact that the income is far from being sufficient to meet the expenditures, owing to the fact that not only have the provinces ceased to remit funds for the support of the Central Government as was done in the past, but they have even gone to the extent of appropriating for local use revenues which belong to the Central Government. At present the Government derives its revenue principally from five sources, namely:

1. The Maritime Customs and Native Customs within the 50 li limit $94,400,000 (latest),

2. Native Customs outside the 50 li limit and along the land frontiers $6,700,000 (latest),

3. The Salt Gabelle $89,800,000 (latest),

4. The Wine and Tobacco Taxes $15,000,000 (latest),

5. The Stamp Duty $3,200,000 (latest).

From the five sources enumerated above, the amount of revenue collectable each year is about $209,000,000 per year. The net amount remitted to the Government, however, falls far short of the sum mentioned above. For among these only the Customs Revenue has remained intact. Of the revenue from the Native Customs outside of the 50 li limit, besides the two million and odd dollars from the Peking Octroi, not more than $700,000 has reached the Central Government.

As for the Salt Revenue, about $30,200,000 was retained by the provinces and about $10,300,000 was required for the cost of collection, so that the actual amount realized by the Central Government was only about $49,300,000. With reference to the Wine and Tobacco Taxes and the Stamp Duty, the actual amounts remitted to the Central Government were only about one-tenth of the amounts collected, or about $1,400,000 in the first case and about $300,000 in the second case.

AT LEAST $120,000,000 SHORT.

It can thus be seen that out of a nominal total of $209,000,000 the actual sum realized by the Central Government is only about $148,000,000, out of which has again to be deducted a sum of $88,000,000 for the service of the domestic and foreign loans secured upon the Customs and Salt Revenues and about $43,000,000 for military subsidies and the redemption of the different kinds of treasury notes secured upon the salt surplus: thus leaving only about $7,000,000 unappropriated which can be made use of by the Central Government for military and administrative expenses.

Now according to the latest available figures the annual requirements for administrative expenses are about $58,000,000 and those for military expenses are about $70,000,000, making a total of $128,000,000. While this does not exceed the amount authorized by the budget of the 8th (1919) year of the Republic, which was adopted by the Mandate of November 29 last year as the standard for the retrenchment policy, yet the desperateness of the situation is easily apparent when we bear in mind that these sums have to be met out of the meagre amount of only $7,000,000 which is at the free disposal of the Government. In other words, the actual amount remitted to the Government is not more than seven-tenths of the amounts collected, while the unappropriated portion available to the Government is only five per cent. of that amount.

UNSECURED LOANS.

A situation created by the fact that the expenditure of the Government exceeds the amount at its disposal by 17 times is serious enough. But worse still is the fact that there is also a large amount of unsecured or inadequately secured loans which call for immediate readjustment. Calculating on the basis of the figures given in its official statement of September 1922, the outstanding principal and interest of the loans of the Ministry of Finance amount to $536,000,000, and the portion of the loans of the Ministry of Communications which it cannot itself take care of, according to a memorandum it has recently prepared and sent to this Commission, amounts to $187,000,000, making up a grand total of $723,000,000. If consolidation bonds were issued, bearing interest only at the rate of 5 per cent. or 6 per cent. per annum the sum required for the payment of interest alone would amount to 40 or 50 million dollars a year. Under the present financial stress, when the Government is already facing a deficit of about $121,000,000 per year, the difficulty of providing an adequate sinking fund for the loan service can be readily appreciated.

PROVINCES MUST HELP.

It is therefore apparent that if national finance is to be put upon a solid foundation, comprehensive measures for fundamental readjustments must be undertaken at once, both in the way of radically curtailing the expenses and also in effectively increasing the receipts of the Government.

In the first place, the provinces must be made to have a full and clear understanding of the supreme importance of supporting the Central Government as well as of their proper relation to it, and must desist from the practice of retaining Central Government revenues for provincial uses.

In the second place, national expenditures must be reduced by cutting off every unnecessary item of administrative expenditure, and especially by reducing the military expenses, which now take up seven-tenths of the entire expenditure of the national Government.

In the third place, a temporary national budget, based upon the principle of adjusting the expenditures to the amount of available revenue of the Central Government, should be worked out and followed.

SURTAX.

In the fourth place, steps must be taken to expedite the meeting of the Special Customs Tariff Conference to authorize the levying of the 2½ per cent. surtax, which may bring in an additional revenue of about $25,000,000 per year, and which may, assuming that provisions can be found for the necessary administrative and military expenses, be used as a sinking fund for the readjustment of the unsecured loans.

In the fifth and last place, the receipts from the administration of railways, telegraphs, posts and navigation should be kept intact, and be freed from any improper charges upon them. With this and other improvements and reforms introduced into these systems of communication, not only can the loans secured upon them be adequately taken care of, but a surplus may be hoped for which can be used to make up some of the general deficit.

PEKING AND TIBETAN PROBLEM

A Parliamentary Conference: Britain's "Advantages" Under Former Treaty

Peking, Apr. 21.

The Chinese papers report that Members of Parliament headed by Mr. Liu Wen-tung and Mr. Hsiao Pi-teh (representing Tibet), Mr. Cha Mu-su (Kokonor), and Messrs. Chang Huei-ching and Chin Shih-chang (Szechuan), have organized an association to encourage settlement of the Tibetan problem. A meeting was held at Central Park yesterday, when Mr. Chien Shou-chao was elected Chairman. Mr. Chien made a short speech in which he referred to the advantages to Britain of the old treaty and advocated that it should be replaced by a new agreement. Mr. Hsiao Pi-teh strongly supported the Chairman and urged that the Government should begin negotiations with the British authorities for a new treaty "in accordance with the Washington Treaty." (sic).

Mr. Hsu Tseng was in favour of more direct action. He advocated that a Chinese Amban should be sent to Lhasa without delay.

After some discussion Mr. Liu Yung-kuang and 20 others were appointed Commissioners to prepare for a regular meeting next Sunday.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

WU PEI-FU GETTING A GRIP ON HUNAN

Present Tuchun Expected Shortly to Capitulate

Peking, Apr. 17.

Despatches from Changsha indicate that, contrary to reports published in the local press, there has been no serious fighting in that district up to last Tuesday. While the situation has been increasingly tense of late, the general impression locally seems to be that Gen. Wu's position has become so strong that Gen. Chao Heng-ti, Commander-in-Chief of the province, may be expected to capitulate without a struggle.

The strength of Gen. Wu's troops, under the command of Gen. Chen Chia-mou, has recently been brought up to that of a mixed brigade at Changsha, while other detachments hold Yochow, Siangsiang and Milo. Gen. Chen himself is expected at Changsha within a few days.

Gen. Chao's forces in Changsha are, on the other hand, short of arms and ammunition, and their commander, Gen. Yeh Kai-hsin, is said to be wavering in his loyalty. The prediction has been made that the local government will be turned over to Gen. Wu Pei-fu's lieutenant without any serious fighting, in which case, Gen. Chen Chia-mou will probably be the new Tuli.—Reuter's Pacific Service.

TSINGTAO'S LATEST

Bank Started by New Administration: $3,000,000 Capital

From Our Own Correspondent.

Tsingtao, Apr. 16.

An official bank has been formed by the Administration with a capital of $3,000,000.

The bank will start business on May 1, issuing its own notes. It will provide an important medium for the administration of the municipal finances.

The establishment of the International Recreation Club has been sanctioned, the promoters being Chinese and foreigners, among the latter being Messrs. Zimmerman, Stansfield, Herlihy, Siebold, Kitsatu, Russell and Masters (patrons), and the U.S. Consul, Vice-Consul and other prominent residents. The Administration is to get 20 per cent. of the earning of the concern.

WAR PERIL IN CHINA

Importation of Arms: Rival Parties Preparing

By Percival Landon in the "Daily Telegraph."

China is moving uneasily in the coma in which she has been sunk for many months. It is slowly becoming clear even to those who have interest in maintaining present divisions that a last attempt must soon be made to restore some form of unity at the Council board of this distracted republic. All are at sixes and sevens within the Ministry; continual friction between the Prime Minister, Sun Pao-chi, and Wang Keh-ming (his Finance Minister) is causing the machinery of State to misfire, and long-standing differences between Dr. Wellington Koo and two or three foreign representatives here seem to have paralysed the Waichiaopu. The suggestions that are weakly put forward for paving a way for the several conferences that are urgently needed by China betray an increasing inability to realize the importance of immediate action. Yet it is upon the successful issue of those meetings that China's sole hope of weathering the storm is based.

Time is being lost, every day of which ensures that the struggle when it comes will be bloodier and more exhausting than any previous hostilities. Wu Pei-fu has openly abandoned all hope of the unification of China except by armed compulsion, and is now intent upon preparations. The story of the importation of vast quantities of Italian arms and ammunition is no mere report. I have myself seen for over an hour the transfer of war material from train to ammunition dump at San Chia-tien. At Mukden, Chang Tso-lin's accumulation of military stores and the rapid completion of a new arsenal tells the same tale. It is believed by those best qualified to form an opinion that the bulk of the weapons and ammunition originally sent to Vladivostok at the close of the Siberian campaign is now in his hands, and his collection of aeroplanes is now being reinforced by the organization of a defensive squadron, with its base at Newchwang. Perhaps more menacing than anything else is the sudden action of his publicity agents in attributing to Chang Tso-lin entirely pacific intentions. The same phenomenon was observed immediately before the outbreak of hostilities in 1922.

His great opponent, Wu Pei-fu, the official leader of the military strength of the unhappy Government in Pekin, seems to be taking every precaution and moving steadily though slowly towards the achievement of his strategy. A week ago he regarded the campaign in Szechuan as practically over with the fall of Chêngtu; but recent exhibitions of activity from his Yunnanese opponents have perhaps modified the situation. In any case, however, he has already done enough to dissuade Yunnam from sending any more help to Canton. But in the South and Southeast the position becomes daily more complicated. Wu Pei-fu finds it far more difficult to act in these regions, and in any case is compelled to retain his veteran troops under him either near Loyang or in the province of Chihli. Relations between him and Feng Yu-hsiang, the Christian general, are said to be improved, but he needs a better understanding with the leaders of the Chêkiang, Fukien, and Kiangsu parties before it is safe for him to undertake his avowed policy of crushing Sun Yat-sen by force. Some time ago I referred to the unostentatious influence exerted by Marshal Tuan Chi-jui at every military centre in China, and as time passes he increases it. He represents in a moderate and chastened form the old pro-Japanese movement in South China, and his growing authority seems to depend upon his keeping in touch with those parties who have least repudiated Japanese sympathies. This does not prevent the exchange of civilities and pourparlers between him and Wu Pei-fu.

Five inches of snow fell in Harbin on Monday, according to the Chinese press.

LEADING ARTICLES

The North-China Herald
Published every Saturday evening.
PREPAID SUBSCRIPTION
(INCLUDING DELIVERY):
Shanghai ... . Tls. 12 per annum
Other parts of China „ 13 „

All communications should be addressed to the Secretary, NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS & HERALD LD., to whom all remittances should be made payable.

THE BANKRUPTCY OF PEKING

Apr. 21.

No one would undervalue the labours of Dr. W. W. Yen's Commission, the report of which Mr. Rodney Gilbert sends us to-day. We have repeatedly urged that want of ready money, overgrown armies and unsecured debts are not the real malady of China but only the symptoms thereof: and this fact needs to be kept in mind with special care now that Peking is clearly preparing to send out new, heart-rending appeals for the Powers' assistance. But it is none the less useful to know the precise violence of any particular symptom and Dr. Yen's investigations are therefore welcome. They show, against certain annual charges of 128 million dollars, an effective revenue of a beggarly seven millions and unsecured debts of over 700 millions. In respect of the latter, it is curious that some of the foreign creditors appear reluctant to send in a precise account of their claims. This is a very old money-lenders' trick, which by no means disposes one to think better of the said creditors than there was reason to think before. There is not the slightest doubt that many of these unsecured loans were a mere speculation and we have not the slightest sympathy with the people who gambled on getting a fat return out of Peking and have burnt their fingers. It is highly improper and mischievous for the interest of foreigners in China generally that the diplomatic weight of the Powers should be brought to bear on behalf of these gentlemen and we hope that the closest scrutiny will be used in deciding which loans deserve to be supported.

But loans apart, and confining ourselves only to the question of Peking's annual revenue and expenditure, the most cursory reading of the Commission's report shows that so far from making out any case for the Powers giving Peking any further assistance, it has done precisely the opposite. Let it be remembered that when the Consortium was established, the four Powers expressly stated that they would countenance no loan for political purposes, no money was to be supplied but for reproductive ends. And in recalling this fact, which there is a certain disposition in many quarters conveniently to ignore, let us be quite clear that the Customs surtax, if granted, would be tantamount to a loan, and a loan for political purposes. There is not space to repeat the arguments supporting this statement. It is a fact which no juggling with words can affect. Now if the Powers had good reason for deciding that they would not let Peking have money to play politics with before Dr. Yen's report was issued, they have ten times more reason now. In the first place, the report is not really a sincere investigation of China's finances. Even in respect of Peking's money it is superficial. No reference appears, so far as we know, to the notorious fact that every Ministry in the capital is grossly crowded with supernumeraries, to the number of three or four times what was allowed in Manchu days. But the point to dwell on is that the Commission have not dared to investigate provincial revenues. There is unquestionably more than enough money coming into official coffers all over China for all her requirements. Why do we get no estimate, even an approximate one, of that? The answer is that the Commission dared not try to find out. It contents itself with the complaint that the provinces have stopped sending money to Peking—a most significant and damning confession.

From the provincial point of view there really appears no reason, under present conditions, why they should send money to the capital. Since the death of Yuan Shih-kai they have seen Peking become a mere prize to be scrambled for by political adventurers, the value of the prize consisting in a certain amount of money and the "face" to be got from recognition by the Powers. With the treasury empty, it is hardly surprising that the provinces see no advantage to themselves in supplying the capital the wherewithal to buy more "face." For even the provincial friends of the party in power in Peking get little enough from it; and provincial opponents bitterly complain that the Powers enable Peking to extract money from their domains in order to make war on them. The plain truth of the situation is that Peking is politically dead and nothing but the recognition accorded by the Powers preserves in it a semblance of life. Until provinces and political parties have decided that they wish Peking to continue as the representative capital of all China, and are ready to back it with money, assistance lent by the foreigner is worse than useless. It is merely so much more squandered to relieve China of the necessity of living on her own ample revenues as she could and ought to do. As for the expected $25,000,000 from the desired surtax, there are just two things to be said. It could only serve to buy an extension of life for one particular party in Peking at the expense of strong opposition in the provinces, which would inevitably react injuriously on all foreign trade; and even that extension would be brief. For when a man needs a hundred odd millions annually, of what earthly use to him is twenty-five?

WORLD SCRAMBLE FOR OIL

Apr. 22.

UNLESS one is actually engaged in some industry in which oil fuel or petrol is used it is almost impossible to grasp the tremendous importance which oil plays in our modern life and to realize what immense problems are presented to the world in connexion with the future of the industry. While according to Lord Curzon "The Allies rode to victory on a flood of oil," it rather seems, if the situation is not handled very carefully, that the same commodity may cause disastrous quarrel even among those who recently fought side by side. It was only during the war that British statesmen began to realize the vital necessity for controlling large oil-producing areas, and in these post-war days oil has become one of the main factors in shaping the policy of both the British and other nations. Britain's readiness to shoulder the burden of Mesopotamia is partly explained by the occurrence of rich oil-fields in Mosul and Bagdad. France obtained the mandate over Syria in exchange for an exploitation concession granted to the Royal Dutch Shell concern (in which British interests hold a 40 per cent. share) in the French market.

Of the three great corporations which supply the British market, there is only one (the Anglo-Persian Co.) in which the British Government holds a controlling interest. America possesses the largest exploited oil-fields, but even the States are short of the commodity, and American Ministers are becoming harrassed by the situation, for the country has had to import well over a million barrels per annum for the past two years from Mexico. The world situation may possibly be relieved by the opening up of the Russian fields, where a great potential supply lies. Although the inefficiency and wastefulness of the Soviet government has reduced the supply by two-thirds, there is yet hope that by improved management and machinery the fields may be brought to yield their maximum supply and thus help to solve for the time being at any rate the world's oil problem. Then again Australia is waking up to the fact that she may possibly possess big oil-bearing areas and experts are now prospecting for deposits in the Northern Territory and in the northern portion of West Australia. In fact oil is likely to figure very prominently in the Pacific problem, for it is indispensable in any operation of war that may be carried out on that ocean. All the nations interested in the Pacific are doing their utmost to discover oil deposits.

We have to-day to reconstruct our ideas of geographical values. Formerly it was the scramble for gold-bearing regions that produced irritation among the nations and even on occasion led to war. Now, the scramble for oil is one of the most potent causes of international suspicion. As conditions are at present, were the world to run short of oil the whole of economic and industrial machinery would have to be reconstructed. Meanwhile the world is more or less in the hands of an oil ring which it will tax all the resources of Governments to break through and before whose arbitrary dictates in respect of prices the consuming public is helpless. It is something to be thankful for that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's Government resisted all the pressure that was put upon it to sell out Great Britain's holding in the Anglo-Persian wells.

DR. SUN YAT-SEN who a few days ago was reported to have vanquished Gen. Chen Chiung-ming's army, is stated to have made a generous offer to the latter's soldiery. If they will "repent" and forswear allegiance to Chen, Dr. Sun will enrol them in the "national" army.

OUR VISITORS

Apr. 22.

AMONG the disadvantages of being poor, one of the least tolerable must surely be that of being "visited." Not for worlds would we appear to speak unkindly of the devoted ladies who spend their afternoons in hunting up the wives and families of bricklayers and dustmen, presenting them with improving literature and inquiring after their mental, corporeal and spiritual health. But from the viewpoint of the visited, it must be thought that such investigations call for special aptitude and great tact.

What connexion, if any, there may be between the bad times and consequent poverty (little apparent though it may be) of Shanghai and the hundreds of millionaire visitors who now descend upon us almost weekly from mammoth liners, we do not pretend to know. But, for a new phase in its ever-changing existence, it is clear that Shanghai has now to accustom itself to being visited. In one respect, however, we are better off than the dustmen and bricklayers. Our visitors do not offer us tracts and they do, quite innocently, provide us with a great deal of harmless amusement. The fact that we do not live in wattle huts nor subsist entirely upon tinned foods (when the breadfruit and bananas give out) appears to be the least part of their surprise. Some of them, one cannot but suspect, are secretly disappointed because Shanghai does not clothe itself in skins and woad. One gentleman penetrating to this office and finding the present writer using a pen, expressed surprise, quite seriously, that typewriters had apparently not reached the Far East. The obvious fact that the building in which he stood pointed to far more elaborate mechanical devices in common use than any typewriter did not apparently suggest to him that the pen might be a matter of choice. Yesterday we are credibly informed that one lady traveller tried to take rooms at the Shanghai Club. This is really almost too much. They will be asking next for cinema films at the ....

We are all in divers ways and at different times travellers and sightseers and it may be well to ask ourselves whether we are always successful in avoiding questions which must seem as inane to strangers among whom we pass as some that are asked by the globetrotters who scour Shanghai and help to put up prices. The great art of travelling is surely to avoid the appearance of doing so, just as people on a honeymoon wear old clothes in a fruitless attempt to appear long-married. And for that reason it seems curious that persons with the money to spare should deliberately tie themselves up with three or four hundred other totally unknown quantities to moon round the world on a personally conducted tour. But however carefully we try to conceal our globe-trotting quality it is bound to come out. The ricsha-coolie and gharri-driver, the dealer in Brummagem curios and the guide to Western-trained native dancers and musicians pierce our disguise with the utmost ease and are not to be shaken off. If it is annoying to residents to feel themselves regarded rather as specimens in a glass case, it is far more annoying to visitors to realize that they carry about with them a signboard inscribed in some universal language, "I am a tourist; fair game for all." As with everything else, there are two sides also to this question of visiting and being visited, and a deal of give and take is necessary to get the world along. Even the bricklayer's wife, left speechless with indignation and a tract in her hand, might be less irritated if she realized how hard it had been for the visitor to screw her courage to the visiting-point.

CO-OPERATIVE SALES OF RUBBER

Apr. 23.

SINCE the introduction of restriction nothing so important has happened in connexion with the rubber industry as the proposal of the Rubber Growers' Association for the co-operative marketing of the raw material produced in Malaya and Ceylon. It receives a further importance because of the desire of rubber consumers in the United States to form a co-operative buying association, and it may be taken for granted that shareholders in plantation companies will in almost every instance welcome the Rubber Growers' Association's proposal. Restriction has succeeded in pulling a great many companies out of very serious difficulties, as may well be seen in the case of a number of Shanghai concerns. A couple of years ago, when rubber prices had fallen to a very low figure, many of these were faced with bankruptcy, while even the strongest could hardly hope for more than to keep their heads above water, and prospects of dividends became steadily more remote. To-day this is changed, and bank overdrafts are being steadily reduced in many cases and in others moderate dividends are being paid out to shareholders. These, however, are not large enough to compensate the investor for the lean years through which he has had to pass, and it is obvious that still further measures are required, especially in view of the fact that the Dutch Indies have not seen their way to come into line with the policy of restriction. Until they do so the full advantage of restriction will not be seen, but in the meantime a certain amount may be achieved in the way of bettering prices by the co-operative marketing of rubber.

At present the market is all in favour of the consumers. These consist for the greater part of a comparatively few large firms in Great Britain, the United States and Japan, whereas the sellers number several hundred, each estate virtually marketing its produce individually, although done through agencies. This means that the different producers are practically in competition with each other, and so the buyer is in a position to persuade the different companies to undersell one another. Especially as production has in recent years outrun consumption, it will readily be seen that competition among the buyers is actually non-existent, whereas competition to secure purchasers is keen. The market has accordingly become a very one-sided affair, and it will become still more so if the rubber manufacturers of America are enabled to form a consumers' buying association. There is only one way to counteract this state of affairs and that is by the formation of a co-operative marketing association. All rubber would then be placed on the market through the medium of this corporation, and on sales taking place the corporation would pro rata with the proceeds. It would mean that London would [illegible] central rubber market of the [illegible] tically all her rubber in [illegible] would no doubt be brought into [illegible] However the details are worked [illegible] the present unprofitable practice [illegible] every reason to think that prices would be stabilized on a higher level than is the case to-day.

While the Dutch East Indies have so far declined to participate in restriction, there may be a hope that they will see their way to join in a cooper- [illegible] They have benefited very greatly [illegible] striction, and stand to benefit still more if the proposed corporation brings about higher prices. If, however, they put themselves into competition with the association, its full measure of utility will not be realized. [illegible] the general policy of growers in Java and Sumatra to do so, for [illegible] operative selling associations [illegible] their great sugar and coffee [illegible] have been brought to a flourishing condition. Having seen the advantage of the principle in these cases, they ought to have no hesitation in coming into the one proposed by the Rubber Growers' Association. If they do, the association may have far-reaching consequence in putting a stop to the amount of smuggling now going on between Malaya and the Dutch Indies. A great deal is made of the steady increase in native-grown rubber in Java and [illegible] certain that a good deal of this is not made up of native-grown rubber smuggled out of Malaya to Dutch territory for export free from restriction. Were all foreign companies in a selling combine it would be possible to find out more about this practice, for by a refusal to handle any [illegible] being smuggled, there would very quickly emerge information regarding actual native production. Furthermore the association would probably put an end [illegible] practice which does not assist the spot market, and taking everything into consideration the proposal is one which should strongly commend itself to all plantation companies.

MR. MACDONALD'S SOCIALISM

Apr. 24.

MR. Ramsay MacDonald has [illegible] Assembly of the National Council of the Evangelical Free Churches at Brighton, choosing as his subject "The Social Implications of Christianity." [illegible] speech is of the greatest [illegible] light it throws [illegible] It breathes [illegible] were [illegible] Mr. [illegible] but it also suggests that that pledge is by no [illegible] for ordinary men to realize it, and indeed Mr. MacDonald voiced thoughts which are now stirring in many minds and, one would say, must presently bear fruit. The pity, he said, which human poverty excited "should issue in a great conception of social reconstruction by way of evolutionary socialism." He went on to say that "socialism was a thing of two values, one as an electioneering cry and the other as [illegible] that socialism was based on the Gospels and would ultimately destroy class distinctions, he strongly denied that this would be achieved by any sort of "hugger mugger equality."

The secret of life, according to Mr. MacDonald, is bound up [illegible] values:

> This age, with all its tremendous conquests of the power of [illegible] the human being over the laws of [illegible] nature to man was subduing man [illegible] ture. This was a material [illegible] and there was no use talking any humbug about it. It was an age where material possession was in power, where mere knowledge dominated. While that was true, this was also an age when the small still voice of spirituality was challenging it all.

The Prime Minister spoke with regret of the gradual disappearance of the old Scottish Sabbath and of the prevailing demand for amusement:

> Whether there was a Tory, Liberal or Labour Government in office they could not do very much for people who could be nothing but amused, nothing but entertained by somebody else, people who had not in themselves the capacity to spend time profitably with themselves.

And after a passing flick of the whip at the importance attached to "gold braid and things hanging on the lapel of one's coat," Mr. MacDonald went on: The essence of Christianity was that the human quality alone mattered. They were not out for quantities or for equality, but for quality. It was easy to apply Christianity to trifles, to be Christians in small deeds, but tremendously difficult to be Christians from a general point of view of life. What this and all the generations of the world were suffering from was that they had not the courage to go down to the sources of all these evils, and instead of spending time patching here, there, and elsewhere, to go out and say that the trouble was in man's general conception of what was good and what was bad.

All this led on naturally to Mr. MacDonald's definition of socialism as a working creed, "a material embodiment of the spiritual conception of unity in community." And this applied both nationally and internationally. Belief in "the big club" would never bring that security and peace which was the universal craving, whether between state and state or class and class. "The only security we can have is the security of cherishing the moral categories, justice, fair play, honesty, and uprightness."

All this, of course, is in no way new. "Cain's heresy" is the oldest deception against which human nature instinctively revolts and the beginning of every bit of philanthropic work that was ever started. It is the application of Christian doctrines to political life which seems novel, though, to go no further afield than England, it was practised by the Puritans two and a half centuries ago and has been experimented with in many other countries. And if Mr MacDonald does not convince us all, it is because the majority of British people at any rate have an ingrained aversion of allowing the State to do too much. We were revolted by the Prussian doctrine that a State is superior to all laws, may practise any perfidy and treachery and, so far from being blameworthy, actually claim credit therefor. To our way of thinking the State should be at least as moral as individuals, indeed more so. But we do not like its doing things, from running a railway to disbursing relief, which we feel are better left to private enterprise, State management having invariably proved wasteful and inefficient. Very possibly these convictions, or prejudices, are altogether wrong. In recent years a great many things have proved possible which at one time were deemed impossible—a war continued for four years at a daily expense of five millions, women in Parliament and a Labour Government that has not yet wrecked the country's credit. And in this connexion, our Labour correspondent gives an interesting account to-day of the widespread approval which this Government has already won. No doubt our correspondent's enthusiasms carry him rather far, but he quotes effectively from Conservative writers in support of what he says and it is only the poor Liberals who feel out in the cold and indignant, the more so, if it be true as our Labour correspondent suggests, that their assistance is not really necessary to maintain Mr. MacDonald in power. Which brings us round to a long-cherished conviction that not Labour and Liberalism but Labour and Conservatism are the natural allies. It is all, as Mr. MacDonald says, a question of human values. In former days employer and employed knew each other personally and lived by a sense of mutual responsibility. Now the one has become a syndicate and the other a number on a pay-roll. That the old idea of a common interest is still possible, even in these days of mammoth organization, has been proved in such industries as soap, cocoa and mustard, in none of which do we ever hear of strikes. Of course the principle of profit-sharing, which Lord Leverhulme and others practise so successfully, is but a part of the whole problem which Mr. MacDonald is contemplating. But it has its foundation in that recognition of the individual, of the State's duty to him and of his duty towards the State, which, when really practised, will make it immaterial by what particular name a government may be labelled.

BRITISH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Apr. 25.

THE interest of the British Chamber of Commerce meeting has slightly had the cream taken off it by the recent conference of Associated Chambers and by the amount of publicity given to the trademarks and one or two other questions. But, focussing as it does in a small space the Chamber's achievements during the past year, the Chairman's speech presents a really remarkable record, much deserving of compliment. Success is reported in the important matter of the desired Custom House at Pukow; it appears also to be in a fair way of being attained in respect of the Huangpu River Police; some important points have been gained in connexion with freights and mails; most conspicuous of all, the inroad on ex- [illegible] and the [illegible] threatening foreign property of vast value under the Trademark Law has been effectively countered. For this it is certainly not too much to say that the British Chamber of Commerce is primarily responsible. Other organizations and newspapers have helped, but the Chamber inaugurated and has always been in the van of the attack and it is accordingly to be congratulated. In this as in many affairs, we are sure we voice the feeling of all members of the Chamber in offering a special tribute of thanks to the secretary, Mr. E. M. Gull. His zealous and untiring energy is well known by all who have any dealings with the Chamber, and while the ordinary routine of the day might well fill up all his working hours, he has still found time to build up a fine monthly Journal, on the success of which the Chairman justly commented yesterday with pride.

To return for a moment to the Trademark Law, while we must all rejoice at the stand taken by the Diplomatic Body, because under present conditions in China no such Bureau as that contemplated could safely be entrusted with the great interests involved in trademarks, it cannot but be regretted that the fight was necessary. There was, of course, no novelty in it. The history of foreign and Chinese relationships is one long series of resistance by the foreigner to encroachment on his treaty rights, and the falsely-named Opium War was due to nothing else than the Chinese officials' violation of their clear undertakings. But must it always be so? The opinion appears to prevail in foreign quarters in Peking that the Trademark Law was sincerely meant as a solution of a very old problem. If that opinion is correct, the obvious inference is that the relationships between the Waichiaopu and the Legations are not what they might be, or the question would have been referred to the Diplomatic Body before the law was drafted, in order to ascertain that it was mutually satisfactory. But there appears to be no advance on the old wearisome way of protests and then more protests and every success must be purchased at the expense of bitter feeling and angry words. After all, both sides surely have identical interests. The foreigner is just as anxious as any Chinese can be that China should be prosperous and his desire to do business with her, under the terms of the treaties, is not unreasonable and involves no menace to her sovereign rights. What is needed to-day is a new spirit in the handling of Sino-foreign affairs, a fair recognition of rights and susceptibilities on either side, readiness to give and take, plain speaking to promote mutual understanding and eliminate mistrust. The average Chinese and the average foreigner can usually agree without difficulty in their private bargains with each other Why might it not be so as between Government and Government?

STRICT orders have been issued by the Canton authorities, says the "Canton Gazette," prohibiting miscellaneous (unlicensed?) gambling stands along the Bund The penalty for violating this order is capital punishment. Dr. Sun Yat-sen recently protested that he had no intention at present of introducing Bolshevism within his domains. When the Red Terror does arrive his people will certainly not be unprepared!

TWO EXHIBITIONS: 1851-1924

Apr. 26.

IN opening the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, it was almost inevitable that the King should refer to the exhibition opened in Hyde Park in 1851, the purpose of which, in the words of Prince Albert, was to "give to the world a true test, a living picture, of the point of industrial development at which the whole of mankind has arrived, and a new starting point from which all nations will be able to direct their further progress." To many thoughtful people the Exhibition of 1851 meant far more; they believed it indicated that a new era had dawned of general prosperity, peace and goodwill among the nations of the world. The hope was not realized. "From that year, 1851," writes one historian, "it may be said fairly enough that the world has hardly known a week of peace." Instead of deriding the Victorians for not being able to discern the signs of the times, it may be worth while to consider for a moment why their expectations failed.

In the first half of the last century England was passing through a great industrial revolution. Wonderful mechanical inventions gave man an entirely new control over the forces of Nature and a new knowledge of its laws. In England new industries and enterprises were everywhere successively started, the conditions being peculiarly favourable to their development. The population increased rapidly; a new social order was built up; education became more common; personal and political liberties were won; the corn laws were repealed and free trade established; exports and imports increased by leaps and bounds; taxation was extraordinarily light compared with what it is to-day, and the dominions beyond the seas were being peopled and consolidated. Further, it was confidently expected by the commercial and manufacturing classes, which had now become very powerful, that all other civilized nations would adopt free trade, and that free trade, in and by itself, would gradually break down the hostile barriers between nation and nation and bring in the reign of international peace and friendship. England's own army had been reduced to almost nothing, and it was hoped that militarism was a thing of the past. Altogether, it was a time of astonishing progress and there was unbounded faith that it would always continue. So, as Dean Inge says, "we decided to invite the world and his wife to London, to envy and admire us in Sir Joseph Paxton's great glass house. . . that mausoleum of generous hopes."

Wherein lay the error of the mid-Victorians? They underestimated the strength and vitality of the spirit of nationality, and vastly overestimated commerce and trade as a basis of national goodwill. As the Great War showed, when national and racial passions are aroused, trade, commerce and money count for very little. And in times of peace, so far, every nation continues to follow the policy it deems best for its own strength and unity, irrespective of the interests of other nations. When international unity comes it will rest on a more ethical basis than self-interest; there will be a fuller recognition of the claims of human brotherhood. This ideal is now more clearly discerned by mankind and toward it we believe the nations are slowly moving. Most hopeful is the development of the political ideals of Anglo-Saxon civilization. In the United States an immense population of diverse origin is being welded into a homogeneous people loyal to a particular form of democratic government. The British Empire is accomplishing an even greater task, for it is forming various races, nations and peoples into one great commonwealth, not by forcible absorption, but by free consent and without national loss. It is to further this great purpose that the Wembley Exhibition has been opened, and surely all in Shanghai, whatever their nationality may be, will join in the hopes and aspirations expressed by the King when he opened the Exhibition: "We hope further that success of the Exhibition may bring lasting benefits not to the Empire only but to mankind in general. No nation or group of nations can isolate itself from the main stream of modern commerce, and if this Exhibition leads to greater development of the material resources of the Empire and to expansion of its trade, it will at the same time be raising the economic life of the world from the disorganization caused by the war. I declare the British Empire Exhibition open and I pray that by the blessing of God it may conduce to the unity and prosperity of all my peoples and to the peace and well-being of the world." Expectations may be more modest than in 1851, but in 1924 we are perceptibly nearer the goal.

A SILVER LANTERN

O silver lantern
I made of my desire,
A cloudy vessel
That dreamed of fire.

I digged my silver
In a dark mine,
I crushed it and wrought it
And hammered it fine;

With graven blossoms
I made it bright,
And buds of darkness
Dreaming of light,

Till—burnished and finished
And marked with my name—
God blew upon it
And gave the flame.

I carry my lantern
Though the gusty rain:
Shielded with silver
The light streams plain.

I carry my lantern
Through the fierce, bald noon,
I carry my lantern
Under the moon,

Through dark and dazzle
Threading the ray
That picks out the climbing
Hidden Way.

—Karle Wilson Baker, in "Casements."

THERE is considerable discussion in Leningrad on the proposal to preserve the heart of Lenin. This picturesque custom is much less popular than it was years ago, but before the 20th Century opened there was a veritable fashion in heart preserving. The heart of King Louis XVI was preserved in London until the middle of last century. The hearts of Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth were also preserved in Westminster Hall in a jar into which an inquisitive schoolboy intruded his hand eighty years later, discovering "a substance sticky, and somewhat like jam." The casket containing the heart of Voltaire was taken from its resting place only a few weeks ago, but it was not opened.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Trademark Law

Very considerable satisfaction will be felt in Shanghai at the news cabled by Reuter to the effect that the Manchester Chamber of Commerce have decided to continue to support the British Chamber of Commerce in its opposition to registration under the proposed Chinese Trademark Law. This decision has been taken after consideration of a long cable sent by the Chamber on March 28 to the Associated Chambers in London, the text of which can be referred to on page 104 of the current issue of the British Chamber of Commerce Journal. The Diplomatic Body have since decided not to recognize the law and in the Note communicating their decision to the Chinese Government they state clearly that should there be in future any cases in which their nationals, whether they register their trademarks or not, have any complaints in connexion with their trademark rights such cases will have to be dealt with strictly in accordance with the existing treaty stipulations concerning the settlement of disputes between Chinese and the nationals of Treaty Powers. While all danger of a breach in our extraterritorial rights has thus been removed, registration remains inadvisable for two reasons, one that the registration fees are very heavy while the advantage of being on the register seems small; the other that the Chinese are much more likely ultimately to produce a law acceptable to the Powers if the Bureau which they have recently established fails to pay expenses.

Scientific Cribbing

Schoolboy morality on the subject of cribbing is quite clearly defined: it is low to crib in a competitive exam; it is permissible to crib in order to save yourself trouble but not to gain marks; it is virtuous to crib when, as may happen, it is to save the class from being kept in. One may speculate whether the morality is as old as the practice, which is very old indeed as witness the following from "John o' London." The writer who lives at Kalgan says:—

As your publication is wholly literary you might be interested in a literary curiosity from the oldest (and fast decaying) civilization.

I have a piece of silk 10in. by 10in. which I picked up at a small wayside stall in Shangtung Province some years ago which has over three thousand Chinese characters written on both sides, the writing being little short of marvellous if you have seen samples of Chinese characters.

For a long time I was unable to discover what this "artistic and literary handkerchief" was used for and then after inquiries amongst my Chinese scholar acquaintances I discovered that the writing must have been done by a celebrated penman many years ago, and its use consisted in its being carried up the sleeve of a Hanlin scholar and drawn out little by little for reference when he was sitting for his "doctorate." The passages inscribed on the silk are all selections from the Chinese classics upon which the scholar would probably be examined.

The original cost of such a "crib" must have been very great, though I paid no more for it than the average schoolboy at home would have given for a "crib" for Livy or Cæsar.

In this case clearly the crib was used for personal advantage. It would seem that as with many things which we learn to do first and make laws about afterwards, the schoolboy code was invented later.

The Akali Sikhs

The British authorities in India seem to have acted with vigour and promptitude in dealing with the Akali Sikhs who were bent upon an invasion of a neighbouring province, but there can be no hope that anything more than a temporary stoppage of the strife between the Akalis and their co-religionists has been effected by the arrest of whole battalions of these fanatics. The fact, however, will be apparent when the cause of the trouble is mentioned that but for the Pax Britannica India would to-day be a battlefield probably infinitely worse than Flanders. The followers of Nanak, founder of the Sikh religion, split into two sects generations ago, and the sect which held the sacred places is alleged to have become corrupt and incapable in the eyes of other Sikhs of holding office. To restore the custody of the shrines to their original purity the Akalis were brought into being, and a few years ago they began to wrest from the priests the sacred places, as often as not at the point of the sword. Matters came to a head when they entered the Temple of Nankana, welcomed there by the officiating priest, and were then the victims of a massacre of a dreadful nature, presided over by the priest in question. Troops had to be called in to restore order, which they did without reference to sect or creed, but the Akalis got together the story that the British Government had favoured the allegedly corrupt guardians of the temple who had brought about the tragedy. More than once since then they have been on the warpath, but not for two years has so great a manifestation taken place as on the present occasion. There is no doubt that but for the prompt and energetic action taken by the British authorities on this occasion something approaching another Nankana would have occurred, and it is more than interesting to see how the different bands have on the whole quietly acquiesced in the dictates of the government representatives.

Mr. Sparks

Not so long ago the name of Mr. Ira Sparks probably excited a smile all along Pacific coasts from San Francisco to Hongkong, but what he has now done calls for admiration. According to a San Francisco paper he had a vision while working in a Californian lumber mill, and this vision directed him to sail to the Holy Land across the Pacific. He then proceeded to get himself freighted in a packing case across the seas, his friends conspiring with him towards this end, and he reached Honolulu. On arrival at this point his original proposal was to build a boat for himself on which to sail to Palestine. Whether he did so or not we do not know: he certainly had no money, for it was lack of cash which originally set him on to the idea of journeying to Honolulu in a packing case, probably the most uncomfortable of voyages one could make. What a voyage in a 23-ft. boat is the majority of us can only surmise. The late Sir Ernest Shackleton, when his penultimate Antarctic expedition came to an untimely end, did some such enterprise with two companions, traversing 800 miles of sea amid constant storms, and it is one of the most thrilling narratives possible to read. Shackleton, moreover, was a navigator, and it required all his courage and skill to bring it to a successful conclusion. So we may well have a very considerable admiration for a man, not a born sailor, who could do 73 days at sea.

Exhibitions in Shanghai

A very great many people will sympathize with Mr. G. A. Bena in his scheme for a world exhibition in Shanghai. His point is that trade is bad here, but it will not always be so; and if we now prepare for the time that the clouds lift we may strike the psychological moment. Then, if we have succeeded in securing co-operation between Chinese as well as the different foreign nations here, it might be the biggest stroke of business ever done through Shanghai. There is the great fair at Wembley, near London, this year, and there have been minor affairs at such places as Birmingham and Glasgow, all apparently productive of good results. Riga, the business centre of Latvia, a State not so long ago carved out of Russia, has held no fewer than three fairs or exhibitions since peace was restored, and the fact that it is holding a fourth during the coming summer is surely proof positive that they are paying ventures. At times Shanghai is inclined to be hide-bound, but we cannot blame the foreign merchants for that, for they have been let down too often to possess a very great deal of confidence in Chinese protestations of support. Nevertheless this appears to be an especially attractive venture, where a bold financial policy will succeed.

Sikhs and Sedition

With the sentence passed on Harbak Singh in the British Police Court on Tuesday for the publication and distribution of seditious literature, and the subsequent disgraceful scenes in the courtroom and in the compound of H. B. M. Consulate-General (all described elsewhere in our columns) there opens a fresh chapter in the history of the Sikh community in Shanghai. We say "opens" advisably, for we cannot but believe that unless the steadier and more respectable element of the Sikh community in this Settlement steps in and uses its influence to calm down the more heady of its brethren this will not be the last of such cases. It is a significant fact that of the crowd of Indians both in the courtroom and outside, a large proportion of the faces were those of men appearing before the Bench time after time on charges of drunkenness, assault and petty thefts, in other words the "bad-hats" and lower classes of the Sikhs. Of educated men, with the exception of the prisoner in the dock there were none. We say this, certainly not to disparage the Sikhs as a community, but to support our contention that it is the worst of them only who support these fanatics. In the history of India we find much to feed our pride, great deeds of endurance and feats of courage and in nearly all we find the Sikhs fighting side by side with our soldiers, sharing in our victories, bearing with us the burden of our defeats. In the Great War the story is repeated, the Sikhs have always been our genuine friends and His Majesty's loyal subjects. In the Indian Mutiny the Sikhs stood by us to a man, and it was largely due to their aid that we turned so soon the dreadful tide which threatened to engulf us. That that feeling of mutual admiration and friendship has suddenly ceased to exist we refuse to believe, for it was a friendship born of something deeper than mere liking. There are less essential differences between the Englishman and the Sikh than might appear at first sight. There is a similarity of features, our ideals are similar and even the God we worship is the same, though the mode in which that worship is carried out differs vastly. At the present time, paid agitators are at work, assisted by fanatics such as the man who was sent to gaol yesterday—men who drink in the teachings of the communists and adhere by that teaching to the letter. That Harbak Singh's protestations were sincere we cannot doubt. That he believed the extravagant stories of "British barbarism" would appear to be true. But however we may admire his convictions as they relate to the brotherhood of Man, we are relieved to feel that he will be out of harm's way for another two months at least. In the meantime we can but reiterate the hope that the saner and more educated Sikhs will have done something to calm their brethren down and show them the foolishness of their ways.

The Need in Manchuria

